Farmer: See that pig? I call him ink.

Bob: Why, is he black?

Farmer: No, but he keeps running out of the pen.

If you try to kiss me, I'll call mother.

What's the matter with your father?

Oh, he isn't as deaf as mother is.

So your father is a southern planter?

Yes, he is an undertaker in Memphis.

Bill: Are you the man who cut my hair last time?

Barber: I don't think so, sir. I've only been here six months.

Bill: A girl could do no worse than to go around with me.

Doris: Oh, yes. She could marry you.

Miss: Give me a sentence with a direct object.

Shirley: You are very attractive.

Miss: What is the direct object?

Shirley: A good grade.

"I am not one of those thin-skinned persons. I am the first to laugh at my own foolishness."

"What a merry life you must lead."

Pierre: If you keep looking at me like that much longer, I'm going to kiss you.

Alice: Well, I can't hold this expression much longer.

Bud: I think that Marilyn is spoiled.

Roy: No, it's just the perfume she's using.

Leverett: What would we do without Edison?

Cora: What wouldn't be done—in the dark.

The policeman got out his book and poised his stubby pencil, "What's your name?" he demanded.

"John Smith."

"I want yer real name," he howled. (He had been tricked the day before.)

"Put me down as William Shakespeare," the guilty one replied.

"That's better," said the officer. "That Smith stuff doesn't go with me. I'm too smart to let anyone put anything over on me."

"An ironical remark?"

"Yes, suh, she says, 'If you don't get some work, I'll hit you in de face wid this flatiron!'"

Woman to office girl: Is the Secretary of Agriculture in?

Office girl: Yes'm, but he is very busy. What did you want to see him about?

Woman: About a geranium of mine that isn't doing very well.

A lady was entertaining the small son of her friend. "Are you sure you can cut your meat, Willie?" she asked, watching him a moment.

"Oh, yessum!" he replied proudly, without looking up. "We often have it as tough as this at home."

Waiter, said the fussy diner, "I want some oysters. But they mustn't be too large or too small, too old or too tough, and they mustn't be too salty. I want them cold and I want them at once."

"Yes, sir," bowed the waiter. "With or without pearls?"

The First Day of School
Pupils hurrying here and there; The bell rings and then they tear. Can't you tell just which they are? You really won't be wrong by far. The sophomores look from left to right.

'Tis really a pathetic sight. The second day they know it well, And which they are you cannot tell. Personified sophistication; That's the junior's consolation, They've been here all one year, you see.

They feel so grand, and big, and free. The seniors do not look that way, They are more frivolous and gay And oh, so bad their situation, One more year 'til graduation! So, each class has its own trade mark, To watch them really is a lark.

Another thing that most men wouldn't trust around the corner is a woman driver.

One cold winter night a fire broke in a tenement house in the East Fifties. Everybody had been rescued except Abie Muller, a man on the twelfth floor. The firemen erected a ladder for his benefit and Abie proceeded to descend. He had reached the fifth floor when he saw the scowling face of his wife at the bottom. Abie suddenly remembered that he had not wiped his feet. His wife would be furious. So he climbed up again.

Pancake Breakfast Given By Mr. Null

Honor Society Members In His English Classes Are Guests; Louis Bonsib Is Toastmaster.

In honor of the eleven members of his English class to make the National Honor Society, Mr. Benjamin Null gave a sausage-pancake breakfast in the cafeteria on the Friday before Christmas vacation. Mr. and Mrs. Merle J. Abbott, Mr. and Mrs. R. Nelson Snider, and Miss Martha M. Pittenger were the honor guests at this occasion. Louis Bonsib acted as toastmaster for the affair, and promptly produced a song when the speakers went over the two-minute limit. Mr. Abbott and Mr. Snider both commented on the honor society and Mr. Null read a poem just so he could say that his class had had recitation. Mildred Foellinger gave a humorous talk and Bryce Minier and Bob Shookman illustrated sayings from Shakespeare in their own "funny" way. Besides pancakes and sausages, grapefruit and coffee were on the menu. Ruth Garrison, Forrestine Valentine, and Louise Closs voluntarily served as waitresses. The members of this class who received National Honor pins were: Jo-Anne Smith, Jim Sweet, Bryce Minier, Maxine Mariotte, Betty Rayl, Bernadette Dygert, Ann Abbott, Dorothy Crabbill, Louis Bonsib, Margaret Crankshaw, and Ruth Adler.

German Group Sings Carols During Party

German Club began its annual Christmas party Wednesday, December 18, with the singing of two German carols, "O Tannenbaum" and "O Frohliche." After the singing, Du Vetter played a combination of two German Christmas carols on the piano.

The amusing game of musical chair was directed by Don Sparkman and John Jackson, the prize being won by Frieda Schubert. Loretta Rinearson placed a very close second. Christmas presents were then exchanged. Santa Claus, in the form of Walter Prange, presented each person with one. A draw for the attendance prize, which was a cookie-and-candy house, was held; Jim Phelps was the lucky boy to receive this prize. He is the fourth boy to receive this prize during the four years in which it has been offered.

Refreshments, consisting of German Christmas cookies, candy canes, and ice cream bars, were served by Katherine Simminger, Marjorie Meyer, and June Haeger. The program was concluded with the singing of two more carols, "Herbei O Ihn Glaubigen" and "Stille Nacht."

The committee in charge of this party was Katherine Simminger, Don Vetter, and Don Sparkman. They worked with the officers who are Verna Holtman, Betty Muntzing, Lorraine Meyer, and Eric Byer.

Teachers Visit Many Garden Spots Of America In Vacation

Some of our teachers had a very jolly time over their vacations in spite of the cold. However, a few trips were postponed due to the severe cold and the ice-covered highways.

Mr. Flint went on several fishing trips. It was, as he says, "too cold to go on many." Not wish to be guilty of telling a fish story, he admitted that the largest fish he caught was nine inches long and that he never caught more than two at a time. Part of his vacation he spent in reading and in teaching his small son how to run his electric train. He also spent some time in reading interesting books on mathematics. Of course, he attended the basketball game with North Side.

Miss Perkins, who went to Cleveland, visited the library and stores where she says she did not spend much money. She attended several parties. In spite of numerous invitations to go sleigh riding, she did not venture into the snow.

Miss DeLancey went to North Manchester, but it was too cold to do much but read. However, she did attend a party or two.

Mr. Rothert had planned to make numerous motor trips, but because of the ice, the farthest he went was the C. C. camp at Lagro. He read one of the newest books on Roman Life.

Mr. Davis visited at Grand Rapids. As there were two or three snow storms, it was too cold to do much besides read, eat, and play bridge or rum. He made it a point to come back for the North Side game.

Miss Harvey spent a most delightful vacation in Florida and Cuba. The first three days it was so warm that she could go sun bathing at Miami Beach. The cold wave seems to have invaded every state, for even in Florida Miss Harvey said that it became cold. She visited that lovely home of cigars, Havana, Cuba. Other places of interest which she visited were Lake Wales, Tampa, and St. Petersburg. Then she went up into the northern part of Florida, and very reluctantly left that wonderful land of sunshine. She believes, as most of us do, that Florida is one of the most delightful and interesting states in the Union.

Meterites Headed By Phyllis Geller

Lois Rea, Anna Lou Kowalski, Helen Banks, Dorothy Hall Are The Other Club Officers.

An election of officers was the outstanding feature of the last Meterite Club meeting, which was held in the Greeley Room on January 7.

Nominees for the various offices were as follows: President, Phyllis Geller 9A, Ruth Baade 9A, Dorothy Hall 9A; vice-president, Peggy Bacon 9B, Lois Rea 9B, Margaret Null 9B; secretary, Betty Daniels 9B, Gwendolyn DeWees 9B, Anna Lou Kowalski 9B; treasurer, Helen Faux 9B, Helen Banks 9B, June Holzworth 9B.

Phyllis Geller was elected the president for next term. Lois Rea was chosen vice-president; Anna Lou Kowalski, secretary; and Helen Banks, treasurer. Dorothy Hall was elected Inter-Club Congress representative. The girls were nominated for office because of their outstanding ability in the bettering of the Meterite Club. All of the girls attend meetings regularly, have appeared on several Meterite programs, and also have served on various committees throughout the time of their membership.

During the meeting, June Holzworth gave a very interesting biography of Hans Sach.

Intramurals Halted Temporarily Due to the untimely death of the father of Mr. Louis Briner, intramural sports activities have ceased for this week. Mr. Briner, director of minor sports, has been at the bedside of his ailing father at intervals during the past month. It is with deep regret that we extend our sympathy to Mr. Briner at this time.

Mr. Gould To Winter Anyone's Prize Plant

As a result of Mr. Gould's generous offer to harbor anyone's plant for the winter, only two responded. Mr. Sterner and Miss Schmidt put ferns, begonias, geraniums, palm, and oxalis plants in the care of the botany instructor.

Of much interest is the beautiful poinsettia plant which is also in the possession of Mr. Gould. This plant which is approximately fifteen years old was first in the possession of Mr. Murphy. When eight years old, this plant was given to Mr. Gould by Mr. Murphy. The poinsettia which is originally from Mexico is approximately nine feet high.

"Chu Chin Chow" Will Be Title Of Play; Practice Rehearsal Scheduled For This Evening.

Marionette Club's regular meeting, which will be featured by rehearsals for "Chu Chin Chow," annual production, will be held this evening at 3:30 in the workshop.

Besides the practice session for the puppet play, work on bodies and heads of the marionettes and also their costumes will be continued. Members of the creative writing class of Harding High School, St. Paul, Minnesota, are making plans to edit a new magazine. The contents will include poems, short stories, and humorous articles written by the members of the class.

Congratulations go to the final winner and other victors in the Extemporaneous Contest!

Rose, Rothberg Tie For First Extemp Places

Rosemary Chappell, Second; Dalton McAlister, Third Place Winners In Contest.

Tie For First Place Upsets Precedents

G. Horn, H. Flaig, S. Knudson, M. Michaels, L. Menze Also Participate In Finals.

In one of the most hotly contested discussions ever held in South Side, Manuel Rothberg and Ruth Rose were declared to be tied for first place in the first extemporaneous contest of the present school year. This tie for first place upset all precedent in the history of extemporaneous contests in the school. Rosemary Chappell was awarded second place, third position going to Dalton McAlister.

Issues Are Given

Rothberg's constructive speech centered upon the issue that all of England's action in the present world-peace crisis have been undertaken in her efforts to perpetuate her own imperialistic interests. Miss Rose was of the opinion that it will be for the best interests of the United States if this nation adopts a definite policy of isolation before proceeding with any further action in the present crisis. Both winners were very strong in their rebuttals.

Rothberg is one of South Side's most active speakers, having been the representative from this school at the Woman's Club Oratorical Contest for the past two years. He has also been in extemporaneous contests on two previous occasions.

Miss Rose's victory in this contest marks her first attempt in competitive discussion. She is now completing her second semester in the study of public speaking at South Side.

First Contest For Some

Rosemary Chappell also made her debut in the field of competitive public speaking. Dalton McAlister has had considerable experience in public speaking, having captured first place in the freshman discussion last year. He is now in the finals of the sophomore contest.

The contest was conducted by Miss Benner, head of the public speaking department at South Side. Judges for the contest were Rev. Charles Houser, Herbert Riecke, and R. Nelson Snider. Louis Bonsib worked as chairman of the contest.

Other finalist contestants were Helen Flaig, Sybil Knudson, Mary Michaels, Leona Menze, and Gwendolyn Horn.

Medical Schools Offer Opportunity

Frances E. Willard And Saint Joseph Hospitals Present Good Chance For Nursing.

Very excellent opportunities are being offered high school girls graduates by the Frances E. Willard Hospital, Chicago, and the St. Joseph's Hospital School of Nursing, Fort Wayne, to enter one of the highest professions possible for women. This is a welcome opportunity for girls of superior character and education, in the upper half of the graduating class. To receive this type of work which holds the higher ideals to youth.

The local hospital requires one year of High School Chemistry of all prospective students. They are also urged to take such subjects as chemistry, physics, bacteriology, biology, sociology, psychology, and public speaking, because they will be highly beneficial to the student in her work.

The present course is about three years in length. The preliminary term is extended over a period of four to six months, the freshman year, six to eight months, and the junior and senior years, each a year.

Any further information or application blanks can be obtained from Vivian W. Johnson, superintendent of nurses, concerning the Frances E. Willard Hospital, and Sister M. Confrma, director of the school, concerning the local hospital.

Seniors Should Order Graduation Equipment

All seniors are asked to order their caps, gowns, and invitations immediately. When ordering caps and gowns, the pupil should give his entire height, not just from the shoulders down, chest measurement, and head size, either hat size or in inches. All January graduates must have their orders in by the end of the first semester. The invitations which will be seven cents each, will have the school's crest in gold on them. The caps and gowns will be gray.

Approximately 415 pupils are expected to graduate in June.

Hurrah For Us

Distribution of Christmas baskets under the direction of the Inter-Club Congress is a sign of great promise for the group's future. We commend that body for waking to its possibilities as our representatives. At long last, it is doing something other than exterminate weeds.

To The End!

Christmas holidays are times past, so we can once more resume our distractions with no fear of an excuse to loaf. Some might think they had over-indulged, on viewing the colored lights of the Esplanade district and the numerous Santa Clauses, but we no longer question things in that season. Some doubt us, but we aver we're not so innocent. But what no one will class an illusion is the end of the term a scant two weeks hence. There ain't no Santy Claus!

We Are Sarcastic

We had the unpleasant experience of coming upon two young fellows in the east hall showing their love for each other with their fists recently. Why didn't they fight in the gym? More people could watch there. And everyone could cheer on their side with all the pride of school spirit. Yeah—we said school spirit.

If He Talks In His Sleep—He's In A Speaking Meet!

The Extemporaneous Contest is one of the most interesting of South Side's extra-curricular activities. It is also the most difficult of the speech department's many and varied contests.

Extemporaneous means offhand, or without previous study. As you have guessed, though, there is plenty of study, though extemporaneous enough to make pupils jittery over which subject they will speak on.

After nerve-racking study for three speeches, the victim is informed which one he will give the day before the contest. To make it more interesting, he must also give three minutes of rebuttal against other speeches. Whew!

One Year More Is One Year Less

We're breaking precedents this year by not urging our big, happy Times family to resolve resolves for '36. It seems such a shame to deprive other great and mighty periodicals of that privilege, and we don't want to seem selfish.

Seriously speaking, another year has passed through our hands forever. Short ages ago, as innocent freshies, we confusedly contemplated the grown-up seniors. Now, one more New Year's day will see several hundred of us scattered to the four winds. One more year will be one year less for all the rest.

Omar Khayyam must have something to say. Ah, yes:

The Moving Finger writes; and, having writ,
Moves on; nor all thy Piety nor Wit
Shall lure it back to cancel half a Line,
Nor all thy Tears wash out a Word of it.

Sherlock Holmes Had No Use For The Solar System

"What can I do for you, sir?"
"I want to apply for an office job."
"What are your qualifications?"
"I was very active in school. I belonged to ten clubs, was the idol of sports fans, and made the honor roll regularly."
"Whew! You must have done things in redundancy. But what are your strong points?"
"I speak four languages fluently, understand complex chemistry, and gee—you ought to see my swell stamp collection! Also, I can locate any country in the world. These are only hobbies, though."

"I must commend you for your wide knowledge. Can you type? File? Do you do shorthand? Know accounting? How's your business English?"

"I type pretty well—two fingers, of course. I suppose I could learn to file. I never cared for shorthand, and accounting wasn't in my course. You see I didn't study any of these things. I took other subjects to be with my friends. What's business English?"

Carrying On

With Ann Abbott

What with dancing being practically the only thing people were doing during the vacation (?) there's very little else to remark about. And speaking of cute combinations, how's about Jane Bash and Bud Mahurin? Some other couples at Christmas formal were Catherine Haise and Bob Storm, Helen Anderson and Bud Jones, Harriett Storm and Jim Sweet, Jane Loomis and Louis Jonsib, Joan Bonsib and Bob Locke, and Harriett Yapp and Wayne Bart. And—George was home from Purdue—with Beanie some, but who was the other fellow who took her to dances during the holidays? There were some near-fatalities, too. Lane Breidenstein lost his hat twice, and Charles Hart is still looking everywhere for his wallet. He says it isn't the money, but—yes, it's the principle of the thing. Bob Blomker, Louis Didier, and Wayne Bart don't have to think about taxes—they look right smart in formal academy attire—or whatever it's called. But 'tis said Bart wore civilian clothes to church the other week. Then he does go to church! That is, when he can't walk in a park.

There were some keen kids home from school—the only consolation we have is that they have to go back to studying, too. Which reminds me—the term ends soon—but who's sorry? Of course, there'll be regrets—that we haven't studied enough to pass finals. Oh, me! And some people say, why worry?

Imagine this way to spend an evening—it seems Virginia Vesey, Janet Fisher, and Rosemary Chappell decided to drive out to the end of Harrison Street and find what it looks like. They drove into the sticks, and ended up of all places—in Shantytown! Vesey backed up and turned around, and then couldn't remember which way she had come in—I guess Chappell finally came to the rescue with a good suggestion, so they returned safely (?). At least that's what they say! By the way, does anyone know whether Chappell and Johnson are really through? She claims they are, and yet dated him New Year's Eve. Oh, yes—she was terribly thrilled over a supper date with Ray Bixby at Elaine Gregg's pre-North-Side-South-Side-game potluck (hyphens right, Mr. Null?). And, Rosie, did you have as good a time as you hoped? Just as long as you still think you should be loyal to North Side—What happened to J. D. Sharp and Vesey? Something, surely. And so Rex Knorr came home—Betty happy, and that's something, but what?

Why—Doesn't Wayne Getz come over here anymore? Won't someone make a law against hypocrites? Doesn't someone exterminate Warren Zelt? Are people too curious? Can't someone stop this? Is Hazel Kuttler trying to better her score of two? Did Myron Jones come to the North Side-South Side game? Does Dick Helm go to Decatur? Are column writers allowed to live? All I want to know is—why!

CITRUS CENTER

Along El Camino Real To Famed "L.A.": Rare Vitality Of Los Angeles

This week we're taking you to one of the biggest, booming, bustling of American cities on the West Coast, totally surrounded by Paradise. Yes,—you have guessed it! It's none other than Los Angeles. So once more we're off in our car.

As we approach this earthly metropolis in its heavenly setting, we pass over mountains of melting snow into green valleys of enchantment that seem to fascinate us. 'Ve pass through the great California desert into the El Cameno Real, Mission Trail. On this famous trail we drive through the golden glory of the orange kingdom with the snow-capped peaks of the Coast Range in distant view. And it is here we reach the end of our journey, and find ourselves in Los Angeles.

Let's pack our duds in a convenient hotel in downtown Los Angeles and go sight-seeing. After a wee bit of this we are a little disappointed; as we realize that "L. A." is not so beautiful as its setting. No city could be. Aside from occasional burglaries, assaults, hold-ups, and murders committed there, we find that Los Angeles is an ideal place to live. The natives call the city The Palace of the Gods, and we'll let it go at that!

The rarefied atmosphere of this town of palm trees, seems to be quite the thing for the get-rich-quick crooks. They like it and would rather be crooks in "Angeles" than honest men in any other city. So don't mind if you find yourself minus your watch, manicure set, jeweled compact, or even your dental plates,—but don't blame the Times—we're not responsible for stolen articles. It's the glorious climate of California in the people's blood.

The first thing that strikes us is the extraordinary vitality of the city. Detroit has it,—but grimly. The citizens aren't as gay as you would think. Of course they have the bright night spots that movie stars and tourists demand. When a townsman shakes his finger, he gets something. And brings it back with him. But he takes his good old time doing it! Life in Los Angeles isn't grim; even solemn. It's great!

From a little adobe pueblo of 1849 it has become a magnificent splendor of nearly two million people.

Here we are back at our hotel. Tonight we can really dream of paradise.—Dean Brahm.

Did you hear of the lawyer who turned down the case of the rich man whom he knew was guilty? Neither did we.

Our Gift From Rome

Since it is January it is a good time to find out just what the word January means. January is derived from the Latin word Janus. Janus was the Roman God of Beginnings.

The Romans, like us, began new things on the first day of January in honor of Janus. He also watched over the doors of the houses so the Romans called the door of a house janua in his honor.

From the word janua the Romans got their word janitor who acted as a modern butler. The word janitor later acquired the meaning which we use today.

The New Year is come. Bells are ringing. People singing. We have rung out the old year and rung in the new. For the last few days all have rejoiced the arrival of the New Year. Even now all are happy. Did we say all? Well, that's not quite right.

We hear a voice moaning in sad tone. Perhaps it is our conscience chiding us. Nevertheless the voice still continues:

"Woe is me! I am a New Year's resolution. My life! So short! Short days ago I lived, felt sunsets glow... but now I am pining away and slowly dying."

"I and my brothers came into existence with hope and fiery determination. We would be different this year. We would show all those cynics. We would change the lives of all mankind. We would reform the world!... but alas, alack—our determination is gone and our hopes have fled."

"But a week ago, I was in the full fervor of life. People believed in me! Hundreds praised me! Thousands had faith in me! Millions supported me! Now I have but few surviving followers. I am scorned and laughed at. My followers are persecuted and called freaks."

"Among school scholars my brothers are having even poorer luck. I-Resolve-To-Study-Harder is losing his grip already. The future of I-Resolve-To-Make-An-A-In-Latin looks very bad."

"Woe is me! I am, I-Resolve-To-Pay-Better-Attention-At-School. I am doomed. I go to meet the fate of my brothers. Ah me! Is there no one to shed a tear for a poor New Year's resolution?"

The Latin teacher was just completing the story of Mucius, a brave Roman. He (Mucius) walked into the enemy camp and was caught. He was to be tortured.

Mucius went over to that fire and stretched his hand over it till it was crippled so as to show the Etruscan king the kind of men he was fighting.

At this point, the teacher said, "Now you can see what kind of stuff these Romans were made of."

A small whisper ran through the room: "Asbestos."

HAVE YOU heard the new hit, "Music Goes 'Round and 'Round, Ooooooo" (accent on the Ooooooo)? If you haven't, ask Bud Jones all about it. He even claims that this song has struck New York just the way "Yes, We Have No Bananas" did.

A FAVORITE remark of all the teachers after a vacation, "The pupils merely came back to school after a vacation to rest up."

QUESTIONS—How can pupils sleep in class? Also, how do they always manage to wake up at the right time? Wouldn't it be funny if one of them slept overtime in a seventh period class?

AN IDEA—The downtown library should have a special room for South Side students while they are getting their material for the Extemp contest. If you don't think so, you should have been there last Thursday. Our public speaking department was well represented.

UNIFORMS—Now we understand why boys want to go to military schools. Uniforms evidently do attract the feminine eyes, because Bob Blomker, Louis Didier, and Wayne Bart were seen sporting their uniforms and were causing favorable comment among the opposite sex.

A HAIR-PULLER—At a skating party held recently at Bells' Rink, Ina Chappell was having a fine time in the grand march when she discovered that she had lost a very important part of her make-up—the braid for her hair. Well, she even managed to stop the whole grand march, because all the boys deserted their partners and dashed to her assistance. At least, that was a novel way to get a lot of attention!

BILFOLD LOST—Charles Hart enjoyed himself on New Year's Eve until he realized that he had lost his bilfold. And, somehow or other, he can't seem to find it. Soooo, all you amateur detectives, get to work!

Confidence In One's Self Encouraged By Public Speaking Course

Commonest Error Is Poor Grammar

This week's featured teacher is Miss Dorothy Benner, instructor of English and public speaking. She is quoted on her opinions on the latter subject:

"Has public speaking any relation to self-confidence? Public speaking aids considerably in developing self-confidence. It teaches one to speak freely and easily before groups of all sizes. Being able to think of something appropriate to say and knowing that you can express yourself well are almost necessary for self-confidence."

"What does the public speaking course cover? South Side's course consists of experiences which develop certain qualities of delivery and of almost every type of speech that a person would ever be called upon to give. We start with a simple speech of introduction and close with the most difficult form of public speaking—debating."

"The average person is not a good public speaker. A really good public speaker is one who has something worthwhile to say in keeping with the occasion and the audience, presents it in a clear, logical way, and delivers the speech so that the audience is conscious only of the message being presented. A good public speaker requires a happy combination of qualities: a pleasant voice, good posture, good material, a pleasing personality and good grammar."

Instead of tying flags to his feet which were hanging out of the window every night, Mr. and Mrs. Miller decided to procure for their oversized son, a special bed, big enough to hold all of him. Now John Miller slumbers peacefully in a bed made big just for him.

"Oh Heavens! You can't sit there! That's a rare piece which Queen So-and-So threw at her beloved husband, King Somebody-or-Other." This and many other exclamations come direct from our dignified and esteemed sage English professor, Mr. Null. You see, he collects rare furniture, not only the more popular antiques, but unusual pieces which strike his fancy. His home is a veritable store-house of beautiful and interesting furniture which he has finished and fixed himself.

Stiff in white starch and dignified with the years of experience, a tall nurse waved us aside like we were mere nothings, and told us that we would have to wait like the other hundreds if we wanted to see Sonia Velkoff. Resting peacefully after an appendectomy at the St. Joseph Hospital, she had so many visitors that the hospital considered taking in the welcome mat on the steps of the place.

Promising to love, honor, and obey, Effie Roberts, a graduate of last year, married Dr. O. K. Behrens recently. They will live in Washington and we hope (if you will excuse the pun) that everything is O. K.

Robin Hood's Barn

Why I don't join a fast crowd of girls (quote):
I don't dance.
I don't wish to be bothered by men that persist in asking for dates.
I don't want to miss the good radio programs that are on every night.
I don't like to neck.
I think popularity is a thing to be abhorred.
I am a male.

To Maxine Howard goes the medal for having the hardest luck of the year. This fair lass had dates for all the Christmas dances, but a few days before they started, her brother became sick with a contagious disease. Consequently, she was quarantined, and that is why no one saw her at any of those popular affairs. We hope no one saw her, at least.

A lesson to those who believe in having too good times: A gallant young man was sitting on the mezzanine railing at the Anthony Hotel on New Year's Eve and rocking back and forth to the tune of "The Music Goes 'Round an' 'Round." Suddenly he lost his balance (if he had it in the first place), turned a complete flip and caught the ledge with his finger tips. A kind gentleman lifted him back to safety.

"Xtra!" A new girl has very recently come to our fair city from Oak Park. From all reports from her home town, she was one of the most popular girls at her school, an institution of 5,000 pupils. He who gets a date with this most beautiful girl certainly deserves the compliments. She may start to school next semester as a senior. This person promises to be the most popular girl in the city in a short time, and she certainly will give everyone a run for his money. And her name? Well, she requested that her name not be mentioned, but probably we can tell you next week. She is staying at the present time at one of the hotels.

Ed Kruse had a date to one of the dances with Peppy Wermuth. All went well for the first hour or so, but for some reason his girl disappeared. Eddie, an excellent example of fidelity, hunted for his date for a couple of hours, but finally had to take home another girl. (And whose date was she, Ed?)

Getting a little more serious now, this is the best time to make a new start in whatever you wish. Another year has passed, and most people will say that they are not entirely satisfied with what they have done in the recent year. Time passes so rapidly, for about one-fifth of your life passes in the brief space of one year, that one does well to get started immediately toward some object. Bud Mahurin has already started toward his goal. He wants to be the most efficient window-washer in the city.

Sherlock Holmes II
"Where is that new paring knife?" my mother called, a bit irritated. "I told you when I bought it that you should always put it back in the drawer, so it wouldn't disappear as the other one did."

I looked at her with a dignified air and replied, "You certainly told this to the right person, because Jim and I have just organized the Never Fail Detective Agency. We will start working on this peculiar knife vanishing case right away."

I called Jim, and we got our our magnifying glasses with which to look around for clues. Presently, with many deductions and snoops, we found tell-tale clues leading to the basement. The clues were small pieces of pink or reddish matter of varying shapes, about two or three feet apart. These pieces of reddish matter soon became larger as we went along, and led us right down the basement steps to a closed door, which led into the furnace room.

We could hear peculiar movements inside, and as Jim was a bit frightened, we armed ourselves with heavy clubs. Quietly, I grasped the door knob and quickly thrust the door wide open. There was my brother, Bob, sitting on a box peeling an apple with the paring knife.

—Jack Horn.

Secrets to Seventeens

HOLD THAT LINE—We don't mean in a football game, we mean waistline, hip line, and spine line. A pretty face doesn't mean much if the posture is noticeably bad. School is an ideal place to spoil good postures. We bend over desks all day; and if we are not careful our shoulders will become rounded and our head forward.

When you bend over a desk for close work, lean forward from your hips, keep your spine straight and your head in line with your spine. Keep your abdomen muscles firm and pulled in and up. When you stand still, don't make yourself taller or shorter by throwing one hip out of place. Besides looking very awkward, this practice causes big hips and a bulgy tummy.

By this time you are probably convinced that we are aping a gym teacher or that we have been talking to your mothers. But just take time out and think of the thousands of men and women who go through life with almost hideous physical defects, just because they neglected their posture.

Archers To Meet Kendallville, Decatur Over Week-End

Green To Meet Comets Friday At Kendallville

Shooting Stars Are Holders Of Weak Record; Green Victory Is Anticipated.

Jackets To Face Bowmen Saturday

Southern Gym To Be Scene Of Second Of Week End Tilts; Battle Promised.

After breaking even in their six encounters played over the Christmas vacation, South Side's Archers are putting in plenty of practice this week in order that they may chalk up two more wins at the expense of the two teams, Kendallville and Decatur, which they are scheduled to oppose over this week end. On Friday night the Green Wave will travel north to meet the Kendallville Comets on the home floor of the crimson and gold. On the bath night South Side fans will be given an opportunity to see their quintet in action against the Yellow Jackets of Decatur.

Comets Lack Power
The game with the Adams County quintet will start at 8:30 o'clock with the toss-up for the preliminary game scheduled for 7:15. Officials for these tilts will be the Williams brothers.

The Kendallville Comets have shown little power during the present season and are not expected to offer the Green a great deal of opposition. The Comets have been rather unsuccessful this season because of the fact that Coach Ivey has had little or no experienced material with which to build a formidable five. The main job of the evening for the South Side five will be to hold Brunson and Rupp in check. Brunson has been holding down his position very well this season and is carrying most of the scoring burden for the Iveymen this season. Rupp, the Comet center, also has been doing his share of the scoring this season. In their last start the Kendallville outfit had a very difficult evening before the Comets finally managed to nose out a one-point victory over the Columbia City Eagles.

Yellow Jackets Powerful
On Saturday night the Archers are in for a real battle when they match their skill with that of the Decatur Yellow Jackets. The annual battle between these fives has developed into a feud of no little intensity. During the past several seasons when Coach Curtis was at the helm of the Adams County five, a victory over the Archer quintet was about all that was needed to make the worst season a success. Whether or not this feud will continue with Coach Andrews leading the Decaturites against the Archers for the first time remains to be seen. The Decatur aggregation started out rather slow this season and did not look especially impressive to the majority of the fans. However, they have begun to show much more strength of late and will give the Green all the opposition they want. Huffman, Peterson, and Barker form a very formidable trio of scorers for any team. Their work in the last few games marks

Freshman Net Prodigy

Ray Speaker

Ray Speaker, 9A student at South Side, has done the unusual in making the Archer varsity net squad in his first year in high school. Barely over five feet five inches in height, his speed and his basket eye have been the reason for his presence in the squad. Speaker has seen action in most of the games so far this fall.

them as the men South Side must stop. Myers has been showing improvement at the center post. Workman, a guard, rounds out the squad. The Yellow Jackets showed plenty of strength before the strong Bluffton Tigers by a one-point margin last Friday night.

Archers Show Improvement
Coach Friddle has been sending his charges through an intensive practice schedule during the Christmas vacation and this week and they are showing plenty of improvement. A revision in the starting lineup against the North Side brought to light a five which seems superior to any Coach Friddle has found yet. With the addition of Close to that five, it should be even more improved. Joe's ankle, which was injured in the tournament play, seems to be healing fine and he may get into action in these two games over the coming week end.

Central Wins S.S. Four-Team Court Tourney

Defeats Berne 39-29 In Final Game Dec. 28; North Side Drops South Side, 29-25.

Central's Tigers annexed the four-team blind tournament held at South Side's gym Saturday, December 28. They defeated the previously undefeated Berne Bears in the final game 39-29 after downing the South Side Archers 27-19 in the afternoon.

It was Berne's first defeat since being downed by Shelbyville in the State Tournament last season. This defeat broke a 9-game winning streak of which the ninth game was won in the afternoon when they defeated North Side by a 36-17 score.

Real Player Discovered
The final game was a hard-fought, close scoring game during the first half. The teams were tied five times in the first half and were tied when the session ended, but in the third quarter the Tigers came back strong to pile up an 8-point lead which the Bears was never able to overcome.

In the final period, Central ran the score to 31-20 before the Bears scored again. Berne gave the Tiger fans a few anxious moments when they pulled within four points of the Tigers with the score 31-27, but Central put on the pressure to make the net drip and cinch the game. Sitko was high scorer for Central with 15 points and Dro was high for the Bears with 12.

In this game Coach Murray Mendenhall uncovered a real ball player in Brown, who before was not even on the varsity. Brown gave Dro a real battle for the tip-off and scored ten points.

The North Side Redskins played a much-improved brand of ball in giving South Side a 29-25 beating after they lost to Berne that afternoon. The Archers were without the services of Joe Close, whose ankle was twisted in the afternoon and failed to respond to playing requirements.

Central Advanced To Finals
The Archers were not able to get underway and at the end of the first quarter were trailing 15-8. Although never able to overcome this 9 point lead, the Archers threw a scare into the Northerners in the final quarter when they pulled within 4 points of the Redskins. They outscored the Redskins in the final quarter by holding the Northerners scoreless and

Archer-Tiger Game To Be January 21

Mr. Ora Davis, South Side's faculty athletic manager, announced that the South Side-Central basketball game, originally scheduled for January 15, has been changed to January 21. This change was made necessary due to the fact that the end of the term was moved up to January 22, having formerly been January 15.

making seven points for themselves. Shollenberger was high point man for North Side with 10 points while Hines was high for the Archers with 9.

Central advanced to the finals by defeating South Side by a score of 27-18. The first three quarters were evenly fought but the unbeatable Tigers pulled away in the final session to put the game on ice. The Archers lead at the end of the first quarter 4-2 but were behind at the half by a 8-6 score after Sitko dumped a long shot immediately before the gun. The third quarter ended with the Tigers out in front 14-12 and the winner still in doubt. Schaefer was high scorer for Central with 8 points, and Hall led the Archers with nine.

Bears Have Good Appearance
The Berne Bears looked plenty good as they beat North Side in the second afternoon game 36-17 to gain the right to participate in the finals. Led by Steiner and Felber, the Bears swarmed all over the Redskins after trailing at the start 5-2. When they had a 34-10 advantage the Berne regulars were taken out and the Northern first five bowed out in favor of the second teams of each school. The Red then had the better of the argument in the remaining minutes of play.

Felber and Steiner led the Bears with nine points each. Shollenberger was high for the Redskins with five.

Redskins Nose Out Archer's Netters 11-10 In Fight Game

Playing most of the game without the services of Joe Close, varsity center, South Side's band of Archers played a great game before finally bowing to the Nulfmen from North Side by a score of 11 to 10. This defeat gave the Green an even break in its holiday activities with three wins and three losses being chalked up on the Archer record.

The game probably was the most exciting tilt witnessed by followers of the scholastic sport in some time. With both teams throwing up stone-wall defenses and shooting often with little accuracy, the clash had the audience off their seats the majority of the time. The "race-horse" brand of ball made the game a very low-scoring affair.

Hall put the Green out in the lead with a short set-shot from outside the foul circle. He then blew an opportunity to increase the Archer lead when he missed a foul shot. Shollenberger then hit from well out to knot the score. The Redskins failed to go into the front, missing both of the foul shots they attempted.

Opening the second period, Hall failed on two foul shots while North Side missed one before Jim Ellenwood broke through the Nulf defense to score on a beautiful play. Shollenberger and Bojinnoff both missed from the charity stripe before Don Reichert sank a foul shot. Bojinnoff came back with a charity toss. Don kept up the feud by coming right back with another free throw to give his team a 6-to-3 lead at the halfway marker.

Opening the second half "Corky" Ryan and Shollenberger both counted from the foul circle to reduce the lead of the Friddlemen to one point. Ellenwood then blew an opportunity to give the Green an increased lead when he missed from the foul line twice. Coach Friddle gave his five the information on how they could go through the Red and White zone defense. However, the Archers failed to take advantage of the information as they fumbled on several opportunities when they had the Redskin defense off balance.

Still clinging to their one-point lead the Green opened the fourth period. Lee soon was removed from action on personals, and Bojinnoff put his teammates in the lead with a short shot. Hall then put the Green back into an 8 to 7 lead with an under-the-basket shot. Shollenberger countered with a foul shot to tie the score at 8-all with two minutes to go.

Hines put the Green into the lead with a foul shot, but Boedeker fed a quick pass to Shollenberger, who scored to put the Redskins out in front by a 10 to 9 lead. Bojinnoff then increased the lead with a charity toss. Hall had an opportunity to tie the score with seconds to go. However, he missed his second shot just before the gun cracked.

School Chorus And Orchestra Carol Uptown

Music Department Presents Music In Tour Of Stores, Firms Before Christmas.

Many of Fort Wayne's prominent business houses and their clients were entertained by South Side's chorus and orchestra on Friday, December 20, when they made a tour of the downtown district and caroled in the stores, publishing companies, and banks of the city.

Fine Program Presented

J. W. Wainwright, director of the musical organizations, and R. Nelson Snider, principal, both received several compliments from managers and heads of the business places after the programs were presented. Irving G. Latz, head of Wolf and Dessauer's department store, was one of the persons who praised the work of the carolers highly. Mr. Latz said, in part, "The program you presented was one of the finest in the line of caroling I have ever heard. On behalf of my employees and the customers I extend to you my hearty thanks and a cordial invitation to visit next year." Miss Hester Williams, one of the heads of the Grand Leader department store, was another of the commentators; she said, too, that the program was very fine and that the carolers were to book that store as a visiting place for next year.

Stores Visited Are Listed

The entire girls' and boys' glee clubs, assisted by the school orchestra, presented the "Hallelujah Chorus" from Handel's "Messiah," as one of the numbers. This marked the first time in the composition's history that it was used by a group of carolers. "Silent Night," "Hark, the Herald Angels Sing," and "Joy to the World," were some of the other songs used.

The stores and other business places visited by the organizations included Patterson and Fletcher's clothing store, Wolf and Dessauer's department store, the Lincoln National Bank, the Journal-Gazette Publishing Company, the News-Sentinel building, Groth's department store, The Grand Leader, and the Fort Wayne National Bank. A program was also presented over radio station WOWO on the same day at 11:30 a. m. After the caroling programs in the downtown district, the groups presented another program at the assembly at school.

French Club Has Christmas Party

Elephant Exchange Main Feature Of Program; Customs, Stories Discussed By Members

Everyone present thoroughly enjoyed the annual Christmas party of the French Club, which took place in the Voorhees Room on Thursday, December 19. Each member was allowed to bring as his or her guest an eligible student from one of the French classes.

The main feature of the program was the white elephant exchange, which was given an entirely new presentation by the entertainment committee. The members and their guests sat in a large circle and passed the gifts to their left until an alarm clock stopped ringing, at which time they kept the package they then held.

The remainder of the program dealt with the Christmas customs and legends of France, French games, and several French stories. Mildred Rudig told a story entitled "The Old Clock," which had as its heroine a bad little French girl, who in order to see Father Noel, hid in an old grandfather clock and by peculiar happenings discovered a fortune which had been put in the clock that an aunt had willed her father.

Vivian Hickman gave the main Christmas customs and legends connected with the holiday in France. Among other things she told, was the fact that in some parts of France Christmas is celebrated on February 6, and in other parts on December 6. The French children set their wooden shoes in front of the fireplace of their homes in order that Father Noel will find them. Father Noel has his pack of toys for the good children on a donkey and is accompanied by a Father Spanker for the bad boys and girls.

Theo Schurenberg told a short story about a little boy named Pierre who got a lost diamond ring in his shoe because he wanted it the most. A French cross word puzzle and a questionnaire concerning the stories and the customs and legends told were worked out and prizes were won by Anna Bremer and Marion McAttee.

At various times during the program, Christmas carols were sung in French. At the conclusion of the program, refreshments consisting of ice cream, candy, and cookies were served.

Student Wins Prize

Reginald Gerig, a junior at South Side, won one dollar in the News-Sentinel Essay Contest which was announced on December 20, 1935. The subject on which he wrote was, "How does the newspaper feature, 'America Speaks,' help to advance the cause of a more representative government in the United States?"

Editor Of Yearbook Urges Underclassmen To Make Payment To Room Agents

"All underclassmen in South Side are urged to have their Totem pictures taken immediately," so stated Louis Bonsib, editor of the school's yearbook on Tuesday of this week, after arrangements for speeches in the study hall to encourage students to have them taken, have been made.

The pictures, payments for which may be made now to home room agents for the Totem, will be started this week by Mr. S. A. Beach, manager of the Jefferson Studios, who is taking the pictures.

Pupils Seen To Be Forgetful Following Period Of Vacation

Forgetfulness, which isn't exactly a virtue, seems to be very prevalent among South Side's horde of students, especially on the day after vacation. Lock combinations, books, gym clothes, assignments, pens, pencils, everything and anything were lost last Monday. It was a hectic day for teachers as well as students. Although they didn't forget many things themselves, still, with the students' troubles and noisiness throughout the day, life was rather miserable for them.

The most trouble occurred in the library. Forty-seven books which were due January 6, were not returned. But this large number is not even the sum total of books not returned, for there were about a dozen due the last few days before vacation, which were not brought back by students. With other library material, however, students did much better; only one picture was not returned, and all thirty-six magazines loaned out were in on time.

Considerable trouble was also experienced in dealing with lockers. No one knows how many students spent from fifteen to twenty minutes Monday morning trying to get their locks open; fifteen, however, came to the office as a last resort to find what their combinations really were.

Joke Issue Is Compiled By Journalism Groups

Jokes, jokes, and more jokes featured the issue of the Times which was sent to all students during the Christmas vacation. The jokes, which were cut out from different newspapers and magazines, were brought in by the students of the journalism classes. Jokes of all types, poems of a comical nature, and other wise cracks were among the wide selections.

Talking Moving Pictures Will Be Demonstrated At Meeting Of Clubs By Representative.

Mr. R. J. Didier, of the Melmo Company, will demonstrate the film-sound or talking moving pictures before the Social Science and Math-Science Clubs at a meeting to be held Friday evening, January 10, at 8 o'clock in the Greeley Room. Mr. Didier will show several films of interesting pictures and will demonstrate the use of the machine in work of this kind. These films will be of governmental and social science interest. This type of sound machine is the kind which is used in many high schools over the country, and it is hoped that one may be secured for use in the science and social science departments in South Side.

The joint meeting of the Social Science and Math-Science Clubs was possible due to the generosity of the Social Science Club. Each club will hold their own business meeting separately and then meet together in the Greeley Room for the program, which was arranged by the Social Science Club.

The business meeting of the Math-Science Club will be held in the Voorhees Room at 7:30 sharp. The main business of the evening will be the election of officers to serve for the next term. The candidates have already been selected by the nominating committee which was appointed at the last meeting. The candidates for president are Richard Rastetter and Robert Harruff; for vice-president, Ruth Garrison and Ruth Berning; Ruth Roadcap and Evelyn Kruse are the candidates for secretary, and Richard Bridges and Richard Gerbert are the candidates for secretary; and Richard Ness will consist of a report from the Inter-Club Congress representative.

Many Seem To Have Broken New Year Resolutions Already

About this time of the year, as another new one rolls around, people begin talking of the New Year's resolutions they didn't make. This far after January 1 has passed, it would seem, the subject would be sufficiently discussed; but such is not the case.

Now is just the time when everyone is becoming conscious of the broken resolutions lying helplessly in the waste-basket and of the better habits they haven't succeeded in cultivating. Here are a few of the masterpieces the South Siders have concocted:

Anna Bremer—I resolved to read all the front pages of the newspapers so that I get at least a satisfactory grade in civics.

Lillian Hitzeman—I vowed to try to get along better with people.

Marjorie Meyer—I'm going to try to study harder.

Roland Dettmer—I'll stamp out my bad habits except when I'm alone—or with someone.

Helen Doenges—My ambition is to make more resolutions.

Rowena Bevington—I'm going to gain weight, I hope.

Bob Locke—I'll try to stay in every other Saturday night; the only reason I make resolutions, though, is because it's so much fun to break them.

Lois Arnold—Mine is to get up at 7 o'clock every morning and get my room cleaned up then. I've broken it only once so far.

Violet Garton—I resolved to get to school earlier but I broke the resolution the first morning.

Marjorie Hower—I'm going to quit using so much slang.

Mary Louise Lankenau—The idea, I don't have to make resolutions!

Ruth Goeglien—I resolved to go to church regularly and to always be on time.

Lillian Bergman—My resolution is never to take another flop in ice-skating.

Ruth Henline—I'm going to eat no more candy so I can get a little thinner.

Geraldine Dush—I'm going to get to bed earlier and get my typing assignments in on time.

Times Begins Largest Drive In Its History

Campaign To Be In Charge Of L. Menze, John Bex; Many Assistants To Help.

New Plan Started For Coming Term

To Visit City Grade Schools And Give Many Speeches To Incoming Students.

The greatest circulation drive in the history of The South Side Times is about to get under way. The combined efforts of Lenze Menze, new circulation manager, John Bex, business manager and the assistants to the circulation manager, Ruth Henline, Helen Anderson, Julia Crabb, Ina Claire Chappell, and Eleanor Veseley, will make this possible.

New Plans Made

A new plan is being innovated this year. Three speakers will go to the three grade schools having eighth grade graduates this semester, and will give twenty-minute speeches to the graduates at each of these schools. They will speak on the benefits of the school paper to a new freshman, its necessity in his school life, and its make-up. They will also tell of the new offer being made to these freshmen, namely, that they pay twenty-five cents of the total, seventy-five, while they are yet in grade school, and then pay the remaining fifty cents when they come to South Side. The three speakers, who will go to these schools in the very near future, are Ruth Rose, Janice Cross, and Janet Hartman; all are well-known in public speaking circles.

Will Bring Results

This new plan of introducing freshmen to The Times is being started in the hope of getting various results. If the plan works with any success, it will eliminate the so-called "chiselers" and "spongers" by forming the habit of taking the Times early in a freshman's high school career, and then he will continue his subscriptions throughout his time in South Side. Thus, in the future only those who really cannot afford the paper will not receive his weekly Times; and plans are now being determined so that even these unfortunate may receive their copies.

Conservation Club Topic Is Astronomy

Franklin Bly, Richard Buirley Are In Charge Of Meeting To Be Held This Evening.

Astronomy will be the subject of the meeting of the newly organized Conservation Club to be held this evening in the room of Mr. Whelan, the club advisor. The meeting will begin promptly at 3:30 o'clock.

General nature study and conservation will be the subjects of all the meetings of this group. Building around all the various things which this subject includes, the programs for the semester will carry a very great variety throughout their meetings.

The meeting this evening will be under the direction of Franklin Bly and Richard Buirley. They will speak upon the subject "The Planets, Venus and Saturn" and also on "The January Sky." Upon the latter, "The January Sky," they will point out the different constellations and tell about the trip to the pole.

In addition to these two speakers, Arline Krick will tell about the Pokagon State Park.

The Conservation Club was originally known as the Pebble Pups, but in order to cover a larger field than just what this name specifies, they organized and formed a new constitution calling themselves the Conservation Club.

Hazel Noll Made Sunshine Leader

Dorothy Zoegel, Eileen Fuelling, Jean Hildebrand, Mary Ellen Kilpatrick Are Also Elected.

Officers for the term were elected at the last regular meeting of the Sunshine Club. The new officers are as follows: president, Hazel Noll; vice-president, Jean Hildebrand; secretary, Dorothy Zoegel; treasurer, Eileen Fuelling; sergeant-at-arms, Mary Ellen Kilpatrick; and Inter-Club Congress representative, Francie Shepherd.

Plans for the skating party which is to be held February 14 and of which Betty Beyrau is chairman were discussed. The members were divided into two groups with captains at the head of each. These captains are Geraldine Valiton and Marjorie Gould. The girl who sells the most tickets will receive a prize. Installation of officers and a short program will be held at the next meeting on February 14.

Dance Planned By Wranglers For February 8

St. Valentine Day Is Motif; Clifford Schrom Chairman Of After-Game Affair.

Preliminary arrangements are now being made for the annual Wranglers dance to be held on February 8 immediately following the basketball tilt here between North Side and South Side. As has been the custom for the past several years, the theme for this affair will deal with St. Valentine's Day. Decorations will follow the Valentine motif. Dancing in the Greeley Room will continue from the conclusion of the game until 11:30 o'clock.

Committees for the dance have been appointed with Clifford Schrom, president of Wranglers, being the general chairman. Committee heads are: publicity, Dick Helm; orchestra, Tom Janicke; decorations, Ann Winters; tickets, Wade Theye; and prizes, George Ann Martin.

An amendment to the constitution of Wranglers Club was made at the last meeting of the organization. The new amendment makes it necessary for a person to be enrolled in a public speaking course or to be active in a school speaking contest in order to become eligible to membership in the club. The Totem pictures of the club were taken, and committees for the dance were announced. This meeting was very ably presided over by Gwen Horn, vice-president, in the absence of Dave Steger, retiring president.

Forty-One Families Are Sent Baskets

Club Congress Are Distributors Of Donations Contributed By Many South Side Students.

Forty-one families were benefitted by the donations of food and money made by South Side students before Christmas. Collection and distribution was under the supervision of Inter-Club Congress.

During the week before the Christmas vacation most students were responsive to the request for material which was to be made up into baskets. The amount of goods put into each basket depended on the number in the family.

$44.14 was the total amount of money turned in, of which $30 was spent for 150 pounds of meat. The remainder was used to buy oranges, butter, etc. Candy, which was put in each basket, was left over from that given to unfortunate children entertained at one of the local theatres. Some teachers had Christmas trees in their rooms; these, too, were put into the baskets. Unclaimed clothing from Miss Pittenger's office was given out with the food.

Tuesday morning some students with cars distributed these baskets to the forty-one families.

Officers For Term Elected By Travel

Catherine Allendorph Is Head; Mrs. J. W. Langford Speaks; Will Hold Skate In Future.

At its last meeting, Wednesday, January 8, 1936, Travel Club elected its new officers to serve during the second school term. The new officers are: Catherine Allendorph, president; Walter Frange, vice-president; Virginia Greiner, secretary; Lorraine Meyer, treasurer; Martha Franz, foreign secretary; Donald Hickman, sergeant-at-arms; and Marjorie Ruhl, Inter-Club Congress representative.

The program also included a visit to Key West, Florida. This was carried out by a speech by Mrs. J. W. Langford, who recently has spent several years in Florida. She also passed out some interesting pamphlets and pictures. To carry out the theme of the meeting, bananas were served as the refreshment at the close of the program.

The meeting then ended with everyone getting tickets for the Travel Club Skate from Rowena Bevington. Each member was asked to take two at least. This next Travel Club meeting will not be held on January 22 as that is mid-semester, but it will be carried over until February 5.

The newly-elected officers will plan the next semester's program during this lapse of time, and then the new term will start in with both new officers and theme. The first program of each semester is usually occupied with the new business, signing program cards, and devoting the social part of the meeting to Red Cross work.

The officers which served last term are: Virginia Baumgartner, president; Georgetta McIntire, secretary; Geneva Shearer, treasurer; Rowena Bevington, vice-president; Beatrice Schieber, foreign secretary; Charles Thorne, sergeant-at-arms; and Margaret Crankshaw, representative to Inter-Club Congress.

Rink Not Available

Two of South Side's clubs have asked to rent Bell's Rink for the evening of February 29. Mr. Bell regrets to announce that the rink is taken for that night. The Elmhurst Freshman Club has arranged a skating party for that evening. Mr. Bell asks that the clubs which asked for that night get in touch with him.

Special Times Issue To Be January 27

There will not be an issue of the Times published next Thursday. There will be a special edition on the first day of the new term, January 27, and another issue on January 31.

Safety Contest Stops At Finish Of This Term

Final Judgment To Be Given On Each Three Divisions Of School-Wide Contest.

Final judging on each of the three divisions of South Side's safety contest is expected to be completed by the end of the current semester by the various judges who have been appointed by R. Nelson Snider, principal and head of the scrapbook division; and Mr. Benjamin Null, English department supervisor and head of the essay division.

On Tuesday of this week, winners were selected from each of the four classes by an outside judge, a scholarly woman not directly connected with any of the Fort Wayne public schools. This judging pertained to the essay contest alone. By the end of the week, a school-wide winner will be chosen by another impartial judge.

Judges Are Listed

Miss Dorothy A. Magley, Miss Alda Jane Woodward, Miss Adelaide Fiedler, Mr. J. H. Chappell, and Mr. E. S. Gould have been chosen as judges for the poster contest. These judges will select twelve winners, and their decision will be followed by the picking of a grand prize by a prominent city artist.

Several entries in the scrapbook division of the contest are expected to be received soon at the office.

Juanita Wolford, Robert Morton, Joe Bex, Eddie Reeves, Jack Junghans, Richard Burtley, Mervyn Bohn, and Wilma Crandall are the winners in the English II division.

Upperclassman Winner Given

X,Y,Z's To Review Work Gone Over

John Will, Ruth Adler, Helen Anderson Are Made Club Officers At Last Meeting.

Today's meeting of the X, Y, Z's will feature a review of all the work covered so far. This will be a review of radicals, factor theorem, arithmetic progressions and the binomial theorem. It is particularly desired that all members come promptly at 3:20 o'clock to this meeting which will be held as usual in Miss Fiedler's room.

Last week, an election of officers was held at the business meeting which followed the drill practice. John Will, who has shown his ability as an excellent math student, and an equally good leader, was elected president to serve until June. Ruth Adler was elected vice-president, and Helen Anderson, secretary. The three captains, Mildred Foellinger, Norman Buck, and Richard Meyer, who were elected by the group at an earlier period, will continue to serve during the following term.

Arithmetic and geometric progressions were the subject of last week's drill practice. The team having the highest number of points in the evening's drill was Team Z. Members of this team are Richard Meyer, captain, John Will, Herman Ruthkowski, David Sherman, John Staley, and Dalton McAllister. Team Y was second highest.

The highest individual scores were made by Marion Bailey and John Will. Marion Bailey's score was 12, and John Will's score was 10.

As adviser of the Travel Club, Miss Mabel Thorne is assisting with plans for the skating party to be sponsored by the Travel Club Friday night during mid-term vacation.

Dick Rastetter To Preside At Math-Science

R. Garrison Vice-President, E. Kruse, R. Gebert Are Selected For Other Offices.

Officers for the new term were elected at the meeting of the Math-Science Club which was held Friday evening, January 10, at 7:30 in the Voorhees Room. Following the business meeting of the Math-Science Club they joined the Social Science Club in the Greeley Room for the evening's program.

The officers who will serve for the next term in the Math-Science Club are: Richard Rastetter, president; Ruth Garrison, vice-president; Evelyn Kruse, secretary; and Richard Gebert, treasurer.

The evening's program which was arranged by the Social Science Club, featured the showing of three films: Mr. R. J. Didier of the Melmoxy Company, demonstrated the filmsound or talking moving pictures.

The first of the pictures of the evening was of Hawaii. It showed an Hawaiian family of four landing and establishing a home on a new island. There was the rude hut in which they lived and the crude uncivilized way in which they had to get their daily needs. In the gathering of food which was in particular the coconut, it showed their means of obtaining these from the trees. Practically their only tool was a large knife, more like a scythe.

The Faroe Islands was the scene of the third picture. Here it was shown how the people obtain their food by the catching of birds and also in robbing their nests for eggs. To rob the nests it is necessary that the natives climb high and dangerous cliffs.

The last film was by the Goodrich Rubber Company, and it showed the balloon race of 1929. In addition it demonstrated the means of protecting these balloons from lightning.

All of these films were talking pictures except the last one. There was a very excellent dialogue throughout the entire picture.

At the conclusion of the showing of these pictures, the Math-Science Club again returned to the Voorhees Room where games were played and refreshments were served.

Marionette Group To Finish Puppets

Club Will Also Nominate Next Semester's Officers Tonight At Annual Meeting In Shop.

The finishing of the puppet bodies which are to be used in the Marionette Club's annual production, "Chin Chow," was the feature of the organization's regular meeting which was held on Thursday evening in the workshop.

The committee members who worked on the various stages of the finishing are: art, Kenny Scott, Laverne Boyce, Ruth Eysenberg, and Tom Sellers; bodies, Lorraine Meyer, Eliza Bess Lucas, Violet Garton, Mary Anne Park, and Norman Budd; stringing, Doreen Russell and Helen Faux.

A called meeting of the club will be held this evening for the purpose of furthering the work on rehearsal for the play and finishing the puppets. Officers for next semester will also be nominated. The meeting will be held in the club's workshop, and all members are requested to be present. Everyone is asked to pay his dues for the present and the next semester, so that work on the production may be furthered.

Officers Of Wo-Ho-Ma Will Continue Service

During the regular business meeting of the Wo-Ho-Ma, the club decided to continue with the old officers next semester, as there has been very few meetings for the officers to officiate. The officers are as follows: President, Faith Clark; vice-president, Dorothea Tobinski; secretary-treasurer, Audrey Jeffries; and Inter-Club Congress, Ruth Reitz.

After the rest of the business meeting which consisted of the report from Inter-Club Congress, plans for the skating party to be held March 20, and plans for earning money, a very interesting program was held. Ruth Morris gave a talk on Dr. Rene Sabin, and Mary Zimmerman, who was in charge of the program, started a game that put pep into all the members. The club picture for the Totem was also taken.

Travelers' Skate Party Date Set For January 24

Executive Board Members On Committee; Virginia Baumgartner Is Chairman

Price Of Tickets Set At 25c Each

Individual Favors Promised; Valuable Attendance Gifts To Be Awarded At Affair.

Travel Club will give its annual skating party Friday evening, January 24, at Bell's Rink. Following the usual custom, the skate is dated for the between semester days. Transportation to Bell's Rink can be obtained by the skaters Bus, which will leave the Rialto Theatre at 7:30 o'clock Friday evening.

The price of tickets is 25 cents, and they can be secured from any member of Travel Club, or the executive board. At the January 8 Travel Club meeting, the members each took a certain number of tickets after the program was concluded. At this time, there are approximately 150 tickets in circulation.

Committees Appointed

All the arrangements are being taken care of by the first semester executive board members, which includes Virginia Baumgartner, president; Rowena Bevington, vice-president; Georgetta McIntire, secretary; Geneva Shearer, treasurer; Beatrice Schieber, foreign secretary; Charles Thorne, sergeant-at-arms.

Tickets are in charge of Rowena Bevington, and general plans are headed by Virginia Baumgartner with the aid of Miss Mabel Thorne, the club advisor. The tickets were made by the combined efforts of Rowena and Virginia. Chaperones for the skate have not yet been selected, with the exception of Miss Thorne, who customarily, as a club adviser, accompanies the party.

Favors To Be Given

Individual favors will be given to everyone at the rink and two attendance prizes are the main attraction. The Modern Beauty Shop, operating at 2822 South Calhoun Street, has donated a $5 permanent wave for the attendance prize for the ladies, and Springer's Jewelry Store on West Berry Street, has given a tie clasp and buckle set for the men's attendance prize.

Travel Club skates, in the past, have been attended by large crowds, and the committee in charge, expects a large attendance this time. A mid-semester date has been selected in order to not interfere with school studies, and provide a place to celebrate as well.

Letterman Skate On February 3rd

Morgan Harrison Is In Charge Of Party; Club To Stage Skit On Safety At Assembly Soon.

Plans for a Safety Assembly to be staged soon by the Lettermen's Club were begun at the last meeting, which was held on Friday, January 10. The assembly will be the third of a series held in competition for a $10 prize by individual clubs, and will be the safety campaign which is being conducted; the other two being the Travel Club and So-Si-Y. A skit will probably be offered, although arrangements are still in the process of completion. The date, which has not yet been set, will be some time in the near future. The committee in charge is as follows: Jim Dern, Ed Leitz, and Dick Dochter.

Arrangements for the Lettermen's Skating party were discussed at the meeting, and February 3 was set as the date. Morgan Harrison is chairman in charge of arrangements for the party.

The subject of the presentation of a moving picture show some noon during the fifth period was discussed and approved. Those in charge of this are: Herman Mailey, Fred Meyers, and Bud Feichter.

It was decided at the meeting that the picture of the Lettermen's Club would appear in the Totem.

Manuel Rothberg Social Science Head

William Schaefer, Bob Adams, Bob Storm Are Also Elected To Officers' Positions In Club.

Manuel Rothberg was elected president of Social Science Club at the meeting held last Friday evening. Nominations for the officers were held from the floor. Other officers elected are: vice-president, William Schaefer; secretary, Bob Adams; and sergeant-at-arms, Bob Storm.

It was decided that the money must be paid as soon as possible, because it will aid in paying for the club's picture in the Totem. The club picture will be taken sometime this week.

Math Science Club members were guests of Social Science Club at this meeting. Both, however, held separate business meetings.

Mr. R. J. Didier demonstrated the filmsound. Several interesting films were shown. One was entitled "Zane Grey's Island." This film showed the way in which a family lived in the South Seas, the manner in which they made their homes, the way they obtained their food, and the method by which the father made simple toys for the children. The second film portrayed the life of the simple people who lived on an island in the Pacific Ocean.

We Are Ashamed

We are pained and find it somewhat hard to believe, but we have heard that one of our thoughtful scholars saw fit to break deliberately the glass on a door to get in recently.

Even if it could be justified, it shows a fine sense of responsibility. We have not heard that anyone has paid for it.

We can only feel ashamed of such an action. It certainly demonstrates what respect some people have for public property. And, it certainly gives us a bad name.

Congratulations, Officers

Along about now all the clubs in school are electing new officers, with an eye to the new semester. You who are about to be selected to run our activities are representative of our school's enterprise. If you do your jobs well, members will take an active interest in club activities. If you think a presidency is an honor and not a job, you are about to be rudely undeceived.

We congratulate the new officers of Philo, Mediteries, the X. Y. Z.'s, Social Science, Math-Science, Philatelic, and others; and we hope they have a good semester.

Chasing Bubbles Is Fun While It Lasts

They tell us we have illusions, that we chase bursting bubbles in our youth.

If they had their way, we wouldn't yell when our team won; we'd calculate our errors and expect better next time. We wouldn't enjoy hoping about to frightful jazz; what does it get us? Our ideas would be conservative as the Victorian age; we'd never reform the world anyway.

They tell us we'll have a rude awakening. They should know.

Anyway, we innocents think it's better to chase them than grimly wait for them to burst.

The Valley Of Doubt And The Peak Of Success

The thousand and one lights of the Los Angeles area can be seen on Mount Wilson at night. Stars shine brightly there; they seem nearer the mountain than the lights of the cities. During the day half-tame deer may be fed by hand; night brings the silence of the wilderness—a wilderness massed above a metropolis.

It is like looking down from another world; one sees without being seen. Lights move slowly below. One sees the bright side of the valley; the rest is shrouded in abysmal gloom. Gaudy people down there move in gaudy restricted paths; on the summit life is simple.

Life is simple; it is humans who make it complex. The place for sophisticates is in the valley. The place for happy people is on the summit.

The Pretty Little Girl Who Scared All The Little Boys Away

One upon a time there was a very pretty little girl. She was the envy of all the other little girls, for all the little boys ogled at her. They followed her about in droves. They stumbled over each other to talk to her.

"Stupid boys!" said the other little girls. "Can't they see she's only leading them on?"

You would think the pretty little girl was very satisfied, but she wasn't. All the little boys were scared to death of her!

Every one of them wanted to walk home with her alone. But they were so afraid of her they wouldn't go near her unless some other little boy would go along.

The pretty little girl never went to May pole dances with any of the little boys, for they all went with the other little girls. They weren't afraid of them. At least not as much as of the pretty little girl.

So the pretty little girl had to go to May pole dances with little boys from somewhere else. You see, the little boys from somewhere else were so good looking that the little girls from somewhere else followed them everywhere, and the handsome little boys wanted to conquer new worlds. And so did the pretty girls.

So the moral is: All is not gold that glitters, but is probably a horse of a different color.

CITRUS CENTER

Round About The Los Angeles Area; Hop In With Us--It's Free

Many a city calls itself the "Garden Spot of America." But none has better right than Los Angeles. The town spreads everywhere, into the foothills, out to sea, and over the valleys. Its miles of broad palm-shaded avenues and its endless rows of neat homes are unequalled by any other city. "L. A." not only speaks—but shouts!

Well, the gang is all here, so let's hop in our rented bus and drive out to Pasadena. Here in this little garden town lie the most magnificent homes, smooth silken lawns, suave little hotels, beautiful wide curving drives—and everywhere are spacious gardens of flowers and shadowy arbors of roses. Pasadena in all of its suavity is more gorgeous than any other dwelling on the rolling hills between the San Gabriel Valley and Sierra Mountains.

And so to Hollywood. As we drive along the wide boulevards of endless rows of small bungalows, we find only the studios distinguish the film capital from other residential sections the world over. The famous Cocoanut Grove of the Ambassador, the picturesque cafes, like the Petroushka and the Brown Derby, the stately dining rooms of the Biltmore and Roosevelt, although quite outside of Hollywood section—offer suitable entertainment for the movie stars as well as the tourists. Now we come to the Chinese Theatre, which was built after an ancient Chinese temple. Here the hand and footprints of the great stars are preserved in the cement. There are other fine theaters of course, but none as beautiful as the Chinese Theatre.

Out to the rolling hills of Beverly, the home of the film folk. The streets are lined with flowering eucalyptus and palms; we pass the Garden of Allah. Such stars as Elizabeth Allen, Frances Drake and Ian Keith live here. Our pilot takes us on to the Riviera Polo Club where Will Rogers played. Now the driver drives up the Santa Monica Canyon where we have a perfect view of Rogers' hushed, quiet ranch. We travel on to the Palisades in Santa Monica, overlooking the blue Pacific. And here are the beach houses of the stars, which the tourist might mistake for summer resorts.

Coming back, we are piloted through Bel Air, the home of Jean Harlow, Marlene Dietrich and others. Bel Air is an exclusive residential park of nearly 5,000 acres. So we find that Hollywood isn't naughty,—but really nice.—Dean Brahm.

Carrying On With Sally Rea

Well, here it is two weeks after that nice long restful (?) vacation, and most of you still need a little bit of the well-known shut-eye. But don't worry, kiddies—You'll be asleep before you know it if you try to wade through the following bit of—should we say—literature. Sports? Ah, what is a more fascinating subject? Just think of the big, strong, brawny athletes—but one of South Side's lettermen, Wayne Bennett, doesn't go in for brawn when he skates at Lakeside. If I were you, Wayne, I'd ask Vivian her last name before asking her for a date. Flash! John Woodring ought to be a star on the cinders, judging by the way he runs after Elsie. Now, before closing our sports discussion, could some one please tell me what kind of skating Doris Bennett does? It must be pretty hot, 'cause every time I see her, she's cooling off by sitting on the ice.

Hey, Bollman, why get tough at Benny just because he writes notes in code to another girl in the study hall? And still the "music goes round and round." In fact, Helen Wright's reported to have sung it in her sleep. You can sure tell Kay Green is a freshman—that's what I'm told anyway—he runs around like a chicken with his head off. Some one told me he was looking for a penny, too. Imagine it! Then there's always A. Van Warner, a North Sider, who dropped the ring he was going to give Dorothy Folds, a South Sider, in some acid in chemistry. By the way, the gold plating is reported as coming off.

Forrestine Valentine goes swimming at the Y. M. C. A. Must be a new fad. Then there's always Miss Patterson who can't even hide her treasures under the G. A. A. office's radiator without Heather, her dog, snooping after them. Headlines! Peppy Wermuth kidnapped and taken to Bluffton. Blair didn't even get any ransom for her. Too bad! Did anyone see Bud Leininger's beautiful flop outside the art room?

I know you're asleep now, but don't snore.

When a dog bites a man, that's not news. When a man bites a dog, he certainly must be hungry.

Confidence: Twenty million fond mothers training twenty million Johnnies to be presidents of the United States.

Dumb Dora would like to know why basketball players try to get the ball into the basket, when anyone can see that there's no bottom to it.

If a nation is weak, we warn them, as we did Spain, and then go to war. If one is strong, we warn them.

The U. S. A. gives the Philippines their freedom. It's pretty nice to give them away. It looked as if we were going to have to pay to get rid of them.

Pity the poor war correspondent, who goes miles through jungle into a plumbless life land to write features on the quiet Ethiopian life.

The war reminds us of a sandlot football game. Each side claims victory, but no one really seems to know.

Our Gift From Rome

To trace the origin of the word librarian, one must turn back to the Latin word for bark (not the bark of a dog, the bark of a tree.)

A librarian is one who has charge of a library, which, as you know, is a place where books are kept. Library comes from the Latin word liber meaning book. But liber also means bark. In ancient times the inner bark of certain trees was used to write on.—Erwin Lassen.

Robin Hood's Barn

It's really interesting to see all the boys try to get dates with Port Wayne's newest addition, Jeanne Hartman. It seems that no one has had much success as yet, but she is sure to give somebody a break pretty soon. South Side males! Don't let the Northern boys get the upper hand on this affair as it seems they might be doing.

Who has been sending certain threatening notes to that group of boys on Wildwood Avenue? Are they some disturbed neighbors? Here is a parody on some of their activities in free verse: (Free verse is a term that anyone can use to call his trash poetry.)

"At a midnight show they had spent their cash,
 And they had no more to get even hash.
 Their car they found was oh, so cold,
 That get it started they could not.

The villains came (there were three).
 In one terrible squad car black.
 'Whose car are you boys trying to take away?
 We know it is none of yours.'

"To this replied quick Chuck Worden,
 'It belongs to my friend here, Virg Duncan!
 'Prove it,' cried the cops, 'and you can go.'
 Home those six did go.

"They got Virg's driving license and other stuff.
 Once more to police headquarters did they go.
 And how, cause it was three o'clock.
 But the cops they could not find.

Toward home they did speed on streets icy and wet.
 They soon began to skid and Virg applied the brakes.
 They wrapped the car around a tree, and the moral is Don't let cops try to tell you you're stealing your own car.

Now we know why the teachers like the old A. A. A. They think it will spread to other industries, namely, teaching. Think of it! Wouldn't it be wonderful to get paid for not teaching? Maybe the students would like it pretty well, too, if their teachers spent their working days vacationing.

Ear-Burners

This week's sick list includes two little girls who are very ill. They are Marjorie Paetz, who is confined with pneumonia, and Mary Frances Longnecker (the editor positively forbade any puns on that name) who is doing nicely after an appendicitis operation.

In order that they may have other than their own satisfaction in having done a good job, we mention here the names of those who work at various places about the school and devote their time to tasks which give them little credit. Among these are those who work in the library, dishing out books to this dear school body and worrying whether they will ever bring them back. There are some who never bring a book back on time and the following call these people nice names: Phyllis Barrows, Ruth Berning, Maxine Borchert, La Von Cook, Vera Ellinger, Martha Franz, Bill Fries, Ruth Fritz, Bob Gargett, Richard Gebert, James Geiger, Arlin Greiser, Bill Hebermehl, Evelyn Kruse, Hazel Kuttler, Rosemary Lehman, Selma Liff, Maxine Mariotte, George Ann Martin, Helen Potter, Don Sinish, JoAnne Smith, Geraldine Valiton, and Sonia Velkoff.

Because his grandpappy once owned a farm out thata way, Korte Lane now bears the old gentleman's name, and so the present Bill Korte has something to live up to.

Sam Rea, who desires to attend the University of Pennsylvania, and Sam Schaff, who now is a freshman at the University of California, spent their Christmas vacation at a ranch in Arizona, where they amused themselves by plucking oranges from the spreading orange trees.

The U. S. Navy overlooked a very good sailor when they refused Robert Shookman entrance into the Navy because his eyesight was defective. Maybe the U. S. Navy is myopic.

In spite of his tender years and more tender feet, poor, unhappy little Myron Jones bravely shouldered the furniture and stuff and moved from 121 McKinnie Ave. to 305 North Cornell Circle.

FLEAS

I think that I shall never see
 A bug as jumpy as a flea;
 A flea that hops around all day,
 And jumps on me to my dismay;
 A flea that may in summer bite,
 And which I cannot put to flight.
 Flies are caught by fools like me,
 But who on earth can catch a flea?

Last Year Graduate Is Given Secretarial Position With Firm

By Leona Menze

Employment in secretarial work is the reward of two years of commercial study in South Side for Esther Frymier, graduate of 1935. Esther has obtained a general secretarial position with G. R. Zimmerman, West Washington Street, with hours from 8-5 o'clock and a one-hour lunch period. She reports that she is very well satisfied with her work and derives quite an enjoyment from it.

Credits South Side Training
 Her training in South Side included a good deal of practice in shorthand, to which she paid ample heed. Now she reports that she finds it quite simple to easily follow any dictation.

For this careful instruction she is most grateful. However, while in South Side, she did not give filing the proper attention that it needed and deserved; consequently, she must watch herself very closely and educate herself as she goes along.

A warning to up-and-coming commercial students is to practice a great deal with the numbers and other signs on the typewriter, but numbers mostly. Hesitation in striking these keys greatly slows up your speed in actual business writing, and a great deal of practice on these keys is desirable for both speed and accuracy. The dictaphone, also, should not be overlooked.

Commercial Subjects Favorites
 Esther's favorite subject, however, was typing, and she gets along very well in this phase. Shorthand, also, held a high place in her list of favored subjects. She considered her easiest subject business English, and her hardest, English. Her opinion as a whole of the South Side commercial department is very high.

She considers her careful training and her own willingness to stick it through as the factors in getting her the present position and also getting her a job in the field of work that she likes. Her ambitions are not too great, as she wishes to remain as private secretary to any concern. Continuation in learning, more of secretarial work and becoming more efficient in actual practice are desirable.

Extra-curricular activities in which she participated were Art and Travel clubs. She is remembered as a willing worker and always ready to cooperate. She was well-liked and should continue successfully in business. Her closing statement was, "I am enjoying my present work very much and I am not at all sorry that I decided to take up commercial work. I guess the main thing is a firm determination to stick to it; then things seem to turn out all right, finally."

The moments are big when he's in Thelma Ervin's presence. Latest sea news is that Mary Kay Connell and a few others go out with everything but the tide. Maybe they're jealous. Or is there anything over which to be jealous? Joe Faulkner is the new pastime for the Berne yell leaders. Things really do go round and round when Lois Keen and Barton Turley step in. Harry Taylor and Bonna Bell have found that spring atmosphere rather early. Yet there's nothing like starting the year out right with co-operation on both sides. Eddie Reeves says his heart beats for only one. Finally, he's stopped beating about the bush. What are those many secrets that Richard Weaver tells Lillias Patton? Norman Clouser has been christened Harry by the boys in the study hall second period. Try the library.

Bernie Scherrer is another unfaithful South Sider who has wandered to Central to find his "lady fair." Myron Jones surely likes his butter. You should see him lick it up from the desk in the Times room. Added sights: John Bex operating on a little innocent dog's toenail. He always wanted to be a doctor. It was suggested that he take up pedicuring. Tish. Tish. Also, Betty Wolf and Ruth Garrison trying to pop corn for Math-Science. (I mean burning).

MOOSE YOU do that Virginia? (We admit the pun is bad). Virginia Vesey has just disclosed a most unusual fact about herself. When she was small (smaller than she is now), the object of her affections was a moose head which was in her father's office. We're really surprised at you, Virginia! Now, if the moose which is hanging in our front hall suddenly disappears, we'll know what has happened to it.

PLAYING PIRATE—When Ward O. Gilbert was a very small boy (three years of age, to be exact) he decided to play pirate. Well, his mother happened to have as one of her prized possessions, a gold bracelet. Little Ward O. decided to be very mean; so he took this bracelet, together with his mother's engagement ring and several other pieces of jewelry, and buried them. Result: they have never yet been found. But, he claims that he can remember burying them by the gate. Consequently, he spent most of his spare time in later years digging up the ground around the gate. Moral—Don't play pirate, 'cause you might forget where you buried the treasure, and what good would that do?

DID YOU know that—Mr. Wilson weighed ninety-eight pounds when he graduated from high school?... Sybil Knudson goes to Chicago every vacation?... Bob Harroff once won a Latin contest?... Janet Fisher's ambition is to be an illustrator for magazines?... Leona Menze once dived from a twenty-foot diving board?... Harriett Yapp spends her summers camping at the state park at Lake James?... Ray Ballweg wants everyone to call him Junior?... Warren Zelt sat under some mistletoe for a whole evening?... Millie Hoff is a bold public speaker?

SPEECH MAKER—When informed that her darling daughter had been winner of her first speech contest, what do you think Mrs. Benner said? She merely replied that she hadn't thought Dorothy would win. Surprise!!

BRAIN TEASER—Everyone was certainly enjoying listening to Joe Bex tell stories in the Times room the other night. He seemed to enjoy telling them, too. If you ever want to get fooled, ask him to tell you the one about the man who got a letter written in French, which he couldn't read.

BAD LUCK—Our sympathy goes to Betty Jo Wilkenson who was injured in an auto accident Monday. She hurt her wrist and ankle and had a deep gash in her neck. But, the part that she bewails the most is the fact that during the accident she lost her braid for her hair and never was able to find it.

A PARTY—Why did everyone have such a good time at a recent party given by Harriett and Bob Storm? A little birdie told us that there was a lot of mistletoe hanging in obscure places.

DO YOU remember when—Wayne Bender and John Bremer haunted room 18?... Ninth periods were stopped and eighth periods were started?... John Bex was a timid freshman wearing knee pants?... Harriett Yapp was one of the tallest girls in her class?... Bud Mahurin had to sleep on the front porch all night?... Jim Sweet was one of those big, bad boys who chased little girls home from school?... Rex Knott turned flipflops while leading yell?... Louis Bonisb played his violin?... Beanie Dygert didn't write letters to Purdue?... Christmas vacation started?

Columbia City To Play N. E. I. C. Battle Friday Night; Birds Have Lost Four.

Green Take On Central Tuesday

Archers Hope To Avenge 27-18 Defeat In Tourney; Downtowners Going Good

Eagles and Tigers are haunting the thoughts of South Side's Archers as they prepare to go into battle against the Columbia City squad this Friday evening and the Central Tigers on next Tuesday evening. Both tilts will be played on the southern hardwood. The Green are especially desirous of capturing their tilt with the Eagles tomorrow night in order that they may conclude their present losing streak, which has reached a total of five games. This clash will be an N. E. I. C. tilt, and the Archers hope to improve their standing in the conference over the week-end.

Tigers Rated High
The Eagles are tutored by Coach Abe De Vol, who has turned out several strong aggregations for the Columbia City fans during the past few years, although the present edition of the Eagles have been having a rather unsuccessful season. So far they have failed to mark up a triumph in the N. E. I. C. standings, having dropped tilts to Bluffton, Central, Hartford City, and Kendallville in conference games. Last Saturday the Eagles vanquished the New Haven Cubs by a 41 to 32 score.

The Eagles' squad is built around Stamm and Shinbeckler, the cogs of the Eagles scoring power. Stamm plays one of the guard positions while Shinbeckler utilizes his height in the center position. Walters is a very good defense man and does considerable scoring in his guard position. Overdeer and A. Walters fill the forward posts very capably.

The varsity tilt will get under way at 8:15 o'clock, with the toss-up for the reserve clash coming at 7 o'clock. Next Tuesday evening the Green will resume their traditional rivalry with Central's Tigers, with hopes of avenging the loss in the tournament. Coach Mendenhall's quintet is now rated among the ten best fives in the state.

Scoring Ability Good
Their victory over Berne's Silver Flashes definitely established the Bengals as the outstanding five of this region. At present the Central squad has averaged forty points per game during their last five clashes. Their winning streak has now reached a total of nine including two city series tilts and four conference games. They also hold victories over South Side and Berne in the South Side four team blind tourney. The Tigers do not have a strong defense but rely upon their especially powerful scoring ability to mow down their opponents.

The Blue varsity squad is composed of Lloyd Altkruse, Motter, Schaefer, Red Braden, Curly Armstrong, Steve Sisko, Jack Paul, Virgil Riddle, Fred Kabisch, and Bob Brown, each almost equal in ability to his teammates. The Archers' hopes for victory are dependent upon their ability to stem this scoring barrage.

The big game starts at 8:30 o'clock, while the reserves will go into action at 7:15 o'clock.

Johnny Hines Is Cornerstone For Future Basketball Teams

Editor's Note: This is one of a series of articles about members of the South Side varsity basketball team.

John Hines, stellar sophomore guard on the Archer quintet, came into this world sixteen years ago on what must have been a cold, bleak day, (John says he doesn't remember), the 12th of November to be exact. Henry, as he is known by most of his friends, is very modest, so modest, in fact, that he would say nothing about his life. This story therefore may be inconsistent in some parts but we have tried to make it as true as possible.

Nothing of very much importance happened in John's life until he enrolled in Harrison Hill grade school, where he opened his basketball career, and soon distinguished himself in that sport with his natural ability coupled with sound judgment. It was here that Pop Tudor saw this ability in Hines and began teaching him fundamentals. Tudor, who is now the athletic equipment manager and teacher at South Side, built Hines into a stellar player who turned out to be one of Harrison Hill's most consistent players.

Makes Reserve Team
He then entered South Side High School, and immediately went out for football, where he made a very good showing and shows prospects of turning into a very good halfback. When the basketball season moved around Hines turned out and made the reserve team, where his knowledge of basketball was greatly widened under the tutelage of Coach Jake McClure. The Archer reserves enjoyed a very successful season with Hines playing a steady brand of ball at guard.

This year Hines again turned out for football and showed great promise with his sensational running and blocking, but bad luck caught up with him as he caught a severe cold which kept him out of action the first half of the season. As he was recovering his bad luck was again his downfall. While at practice one day, he slipped on a muddy field, severely straining his shoulder, which kept him out of action for the rest of the season.

Now On Varsity
Burl Friddle, who this year became the Archer basketball mentor, then called John out for practice, and soon saw the steady play and skillful marksmanship in him, which soon won a berth for him on the first five. Hines is only a sophomore and is one of the cornerstones around which Burl Friddle is building his future teams. John "Henry" Hines is also a very studious pupil and has high hopes of going to some college when he graduates to carry on his studies and sports. He is also president of the sophomore class.

Wavelets Win Over Decatur Reserves, 15-12

Bolyard High For Archers As First Quarter Shooting Spree Brings Victory.

Due to a first quarter scoring spree in which the Wavelets ran up a nine-point lead, the South Siders were able to coast into a 15-12 victory over the Decatur reserves last Saturday night. South Side started out like world-beaters; but after the first quarter, the advantage went wholly to Decatur, who, especially during the second half, displayed a much better brand of ball, both offensively and defensively, than during the first period.

The Archers counted 6 of their points in the initial quarter, while holding Decatur scoreless, as two field goals by Bolyard were sandwiched between a two-pointer by Budde and Miller and a charity toss by Bolyard, who scored all his points in the first quarter. The Wavelets' attack worked good and efficiently in the opening period, but thereafter South Side was unable to penetrate the Yellow Jackets defense.

The South Side scoring in the second quarter consisted of a foul conversion by Budde, while Decatur broke into the scoring column on a field goal and a foul toss by Heller.

Decatur seemed to gain a new lease on life during the rest period at the half, and they stepped out to ring up eight points while holding the Wavelets to three in the third quarter. For Decatur, Heller, Beery, and Freidt connected on field goals, while McConnell and Heller dropped in fouls. Frazell scored from the field for South Side while Squires successfully converted a charity toss, as the third period ended in favor of the Wavelets 13-11.

The final quarter saw South Side clinging tenaciously to their lead, the Wavelets eking out a victory on a pair of foul tosses, Squires and Stewart each connecting on one. The Decatur scoring in the final quarter consisted of a foul toss by Heller.

Bolyard of South Side and Heller of the Yellow Jackets shared high point honors with five apiece.

Low Scoring Archers Lose Close Game To Decatur, 25-22

With their inability to hit the rim continuing to haunt them, South Side's Archers dropped a hard-fought tilt to the Decatur Yellow Jackets Saturday by a 25-22 count. This defeat was merely a repetition of the same thing that has caused the Friddlemen to drop their last five clashes, the inconsistency at dropping the leather through the net.

The Green cut loose at the basket fifty-eight times Saturday evening and lost their own game by connecting on only nine occasions. Meanwhile Decatur's husky quintet sifted through the Archer defense for ten out of fifty attempts. The Archers had little trouble driving through the defense of the Adams County five. Decatur likewise sifted through the Green defense, employing their block plays to a good advantage.

Battle Against Defense
Close opened the scoring with a field goal from underneath. Peterson then tied the score with a short shot. Carl Hall, Green sniper, then drove under to give the Archers a two-point lead, but Barker tied it up with a long one. Close once again put the Green into the lead with a foul shot. Peterson then completed the scoring for the period with a basket and a foul shot to give his quintet a 7-5 lead.

In the second period Jim Ellenwood drove under the basket to score after receiving a beautiful pass from Hines. After considerable action of the "race-horse type" Peterson hit from well out. Coach Friddle then sent in Reichert with information on how to get through the Yellow Jacket defense. Hall tied the score at 9-all with a one-handed heave from the foul circle.

Jellow Jackets Lead

Reichert opened the second half with a foul shot only to have the Green lead swept away with baskets by Hoffman and Barker. Hall then dropped the leather in from the side to bring the Green within one point of the Andrewmen. Hoffman and Peterson then dropped in two field goals and a charity shot to give the Decaturites at 18-12 advantage. Hines then hit from the side on a set shot and Lee cut the Yellow Jacket lead to two points with a spectacular shot from the foul circle as the period ended with the score standing 18-16 in favor of the Decatur quintet.

In the final period the Green made numerous rallies in attempting to overtake the Decatur five, but their efforts were in vain. The Yellow Jackets went into a 22-16 lead on a basket and a charity toss by Peterson and a foul shot by Barker. Hall then cut the lead with a long shot. Both Lee and Barker scored on their attempts on a double foul. Barker then concluded the Decatur scoring with a drive under the basket after he received a long pass. Close scored a technical foul for the Green and then hit from close in to end the Archer scoring. The Green spent the remainder of the period attempting to break through the Decatur defense.

"Snowballing Is Out!" Advises Mr. Snider

"Snowballing is out!" states Mr. Snider. "It is not only contrary to city ordinances, but also a school violation," he went on to say.

If you must snowball, go out in some vacant lot or field and have a regular battle, but don't insist upon throwing them at girls, adults, and teachers as they are going to and from their various duties. Boys, when throwing snowballs, don't realize that they throw hard and fast. This might result in a very serious injury to some person. Stay on the safe side. Don't throw snowballs!

Three Schools Again To Offer Usual Awards

University Of Chicago, Mills College, And Depauw Will Give Senior Scholarships.

The following schools are offering scholarships, many of which are competitive and available for South Side seniors: The University of Chicago, Mills College, and the Depauw University.

The University of Chicago, which of course is in Chicago, Illinois, is offering tuition scholarships. There are three conditions under which a person may gain one of these scholarships. There is a two-year honor entrance for men. The only requirements for this are leadership and scholarship in school and community activities. Another is a one-year honor entrance scholarship. This is awarded to men and women alike with no special examination, only outstanding scholarship. The third and last is a prize scholarship. This again is offered to men and women; however this one requires competitive examination in any of the following eleven studies: English, math, Latin, German, French, Spanish, physics, chemistry, zoology, botany, and history. Students here may take their examinations at Indianapolis, Indiana. If any are interested, they may write to The Committee on Scholarships, Cobb Hall 203, University of Chicago, Chicago, Illinois, for further information.

The Mills College is located in California and is offering freshman scholarships for women. These scholarships pay a year's tuition of $400. There are several rules which must be observed when applying.

1. Applicants must submit evidence of:

(a) Eligibility for entrance to Mills College (for information see 1934-35 catalogue, pages 33-35)

(b) Rank in the upper five percent of the graduating class.

(c) Successful examination on College Entrance Examinations.

2. Application blanks must be filed with Dean of Undergraduate Students not later than March 1, 1936.

3. Application blanks should be accompanied by:

(a) A personal letter from applicant, giving any information other than that contained in the records, which would be helpful to the Scholarship Committee in making awards.

(b) A record of a college aptitude test taken by applicant.

Additional information may be gained by writing to The Dean of Undergraduate Students, Mills College, California.

The Depauw University at Greencastle, Indiana is also offering the Edward Rector Scholarship to young men. These scholarships of $1,000 in four years cover the tuition in the College of Liberal Arts at Depauw University. The only requirements mentioned are good character, very high scholarship, personality and leadership. Only one name may be submitted from a school.

John Jackson was elected president; Dorothy Aldrich, vice-president; Mary Ellen Kilpatrick, secretary; Emily Lepper, treasurer; and Rosemary Shea, sergeant-at-arms; at the election of officers held by Philatelic Society in the Voorhes Room, Friday. They held a discussion about their plans for the new term. They decided to reorganize the club and to change it entirely from their former meetings.

Also, they are carrying on a membership campaign, and each member is to participate in it. Each one who brings a new member will get five cents taken off of his dues. He will not get the five cents taken off if the new member does not have his dues paid.

Leonard Shure Interviewers Find Him Cordial, Interesting

By Reginald Gerig
Interviewing an artist is an interesting experience. This statement was verified when your reporters went backstage to interview Leonard Shure, young American pianist, following his concert on Thursday evening, January 9. Would he be willing to grant us an interview? Our fear was partially allayed when we saw Mr. Shure autographing a large number of programs. After the last person's program had been signed, we asked him if an interview might be gained. To our pleasant surprise, he kindly consented. During the whole interview we found him to be very cordial and interesting.

After telling him we had enjoyed his program, we asked him at what age he had begun to study. He replied that he had started to play the piano when he was four and a half years old. Since that time he has never been forced to the piano and always has enjoyed playing. Mr. Shure is living in Boston. He now is conducting a fifteen-piece string orchestra of his own which he started several months ago.

At the present time Mr. Shure is teaching in a school of music in Boston. He is not studying with any teacher; but rather, he said, with himself. He hopes to make his visits to Fort Wayne as frequent as possible. When we asked him whether he liked classical music or the music by contemporaries, with a smile he answered, "Well, it would take an hour to answer that question."

Leonard Shure's life has been one filled with interest. He was born in Los Angeles in 1910. When he was five years old, he was placed under Karl Reckzeh in Chicago. By means of a scholarship, he went to Europe for further study at the age of fifteen. While there he studied with Arthur Schnabel. After working three years in his concert repertoire, he made his debut in Berlin. Later following this, he appeared widely as a concert pianist in Europe. Upon returning to the United States, he made his American debut with the Boston Symphony Orchestra on December 18, 1933.

Mr. Shure, after we had asked our questions, closed the interview with a cordial handshake.

Teachers Explain Grading Method

Ratings Are Issued Every Ten Weeks; Values Of U, S, And A, B, C, D, F Are Printed Here

Since some pupils, especially freshmen, do not know our method of grading, a little explanation regarding grades and their value is probably needed.

The grades are issued two times a semester, once at the end of ten weeks, and again at the end of the semester. Pupils get their cards in their home rooms, and then carry them to all of their teachers for grades. Cards are to be signed by parents and turned in to the home room teachers the next day. At the end of the semester when grades are issued, the pupils return to their respective home rooms to record the grades and are able to keep them without having their parents sign them or returning them to their home room the following day.

The value of the grades are as follows: A+, value 97-100, grading value 98; A, value 94-96, grading value 95; A-, value 90-93, grading value 92; B+, value 87-89, grading value 88; B, value 84-86, grading value 85; B-, value 80-83, grading value 82; C+, value 77-79, grading value 78; C, value 74-76, grading value 75; C-, value 70-73, grading value 72; D value and grading value is conditional; F means failure.

A D is given only in mid-semester. It sometimes indicates that the pupil has failed to hand in some important work or to take a certain test, and that he may advance into the next class if this work is made up.

At the end of the first two six-week periods during the semester, pupils carry a card to each class on which the instructor places either a "U" or an "S". The "U" denotes unsatisfactory work while the "S" denotes satisfactory results in that particular course. These "grades" are merely issued as a "warning notice" to the pupils and parents.

Upperclassmen Essay Contest To Be Staged

1500 Words To Be The Limit Of Essays; Deadline Is Midnight Of April 15, 1936

The International Business Machine Corporation is offering an excellent opportunity to every high school junior and senior in all the forty-eight states. These upperclassmen are to write a theme entitled "How Education Develops the Power to Think." This essay must contain about 1500 words. It must be typewritten or, if it is impossible to typewrite it, it must be very legibly written in ink. Only one side of the paper should be used. The size of the paper should be 8 1/2 by 11 inches. No one is to sign his name to his essay or even to give the name of his school. Each pupil entering the contest will be given a number. This is necessary in order to make the contest as fair as is humanly possible. The very best way in which to write this essay is to confine it to one's own personal experience. For instance, state specific examples of some subject which you have taken. The essays must come in no later than midnight, April 15, 1936.

Judges Are Impartial
This essay in this contest, you can rest assured, will not act from any personal motives. These judges will undoubtedly decide the winner after much deliberation. If one will follow several very vital suggestions which have been graciously given, he may have and will have a good chance to win a prize. The judges will not necessarily confine their decision to the hints which are to follow, but they will be greatly influenced by them. Perhaps the most outstanding factors will be: How well the students express their own abilities and powers to think. These will be revealed by originality, skill in handling and developing the subject, coherence, neatness, and the observance of fundamental rules which govern all good writing.

Prizes To Be Given
Every upperclassman in South Side stands a good chance of winning a very lovely prize. The first prize is a national award. This award will be a four-year tuition in any school which the winner chooses. There will also be forty-eight state awards. The state winners will receive that long-coveted wrist watch. Besides this the schools will get a beautiful prize. This we are assured will be quite suitable for commemorating such an outstanding event. Perhaps it will be a bronze plate.

Juniors and seniors of South Side, if you have not already entered this contest, do not fail to do so soon. Perhaps the Fates may favor you, who knows? At least it will do no harm to try, and you may be able to gain a high national essay writing position for your school.

Girls Take Up Study Of A Comedy Ballet

A very interesting meeting of the Dancing Club was held last Thursday as the girls began work on a new dance. It is a musical comedy ballet which Miss Smith had the fortune to see in the movie picture, "I Dream Too Much." This is a very original and captivating dance which offers the girls much excellent work.

Doctor John E. Bex Performs Unusual Operation On Dog

"An apple a day keeps the doctor away," but as wire-haired terriers do not usually have free access to that miracle fruit; it is no wonder that "Doctor" John Bex had a new patient on his list. The innocent, groaning animal found its way into Room 18 and wandered helplessly among the industrious journalism students there.

The poor soulful-looking creature limped with every step he took, but not a person except "Doctor" Bex dared to look into the matter. In fact, the feminine shrieks cast in the terrier's direction quite confused him and made him feel very much "not wanted." The hero, Doctor John, then appeared on the scene and diagnosed the case as one of "in-grown nails of the pedal facilities." He stretched the patient out on the operating table (analogous to Dick Helm's desk); and amid many protests, suggestions, and "Oh, John, don'ts," Dr. Bex proceeded to perform the major operation needed. Big scissors, little scissors, medium-sized scissors, and even razor blades supplied from the desk of Rowena Harvey were tried to no avail. "We must not give up the ship," the patient doctor cried, so he removed the struggling patient to the manual training class. It really had been an altogether too confusing task to use scissors, for the animal's tail persisted in finding its way between the blades of that instrument. However, with the correct instruments and endearing words from Dr. Bex, the operation was successfully completed.

Sonia Velkoff Takes First In Essay Contest

Other Class Winners Given Prizes Are Jane Miller, Soph; Helen Faux, Frosh.

Dick Ake, Junior, Comes In Second

Complete Judging In Poster Contest Today; Few Enter In Scrapbook Competition.

Sonia Velkoff, outstanding member of the January graduating class, has been announced as the winner of the school-wide essay contest which was sponsored by the South Side Safety Council under the direction of Mr. Benjamin Null, head of the school's English department. Sonia's winning essay was selected from a field of sixty-five entries from the various English classes of the school; and was judged, along with the others, in the four-class division. The winner of second prize is Dick Ake, junior; Betty Jane Miller, sophomore, and Helen Faux, freshman, are the other class winners.

Judging, both preliminary and final, was done by several prominent Fort Wayne persons not directly connected with the school system. The teachers whose students wrote the four winning essays are freshman and senior, Miss Emma E. Kiefer; sophomore, Miss Mary McCloskey; and junior, Miss Beulah Rinehart.

Judging for the many safety poster entries which were submitted will be completed by today and the winners will be announced next week. The committee of judges, all members of the faculty, are Miss Dorothy A. Magley, Miss Alda Jane Woodward, Miss Adelaide Fiedler, Mr. J. H. Chappell, and Mr. E. S. Gould.

Only about four or five scrapbooks are being made by students; these will be judged by Mr. R. Nelson Snider, principal, and Miss Dorothy Alderdice.

Irene Byron Children Express Appreciation For Clay Animals

Three dozen of the funny little clay animals with nodding heads, floppy wings, wiggly tails, and shaky legs were sent to the little kiddies at Irene Byron Sanatorium by Miss Dochtermann's sixth period art class. The animals were beautifully wrapped and boxed and were received just in time for Christmas.

Many interesting letters were received from the small children, expressing their joy and thanks at receiving the colorful animals. These are a few of the letters:

Dear Boys and Girls,
I want to thank you for the little clay animals you gave us. They were very nice. I went home for Christmas and I had lots of fun. I played on the sleds; I hope you had as nice a Christmas as I did. Everyone was so nice to us.

Dear Friends,
How are you today? I am feeling fine. Thank you for those clay animals you sent us for Christmas. We go outdoors in the snow. We have lots of fun.

We go down in our playrooms after rest hour. I went home on a pass for Christmas, and I had lots of fun. I hope you had as happy a Christmas as we did.

Dear Friends,
How are you? I am fine. I like the clay animals you sent us. They are very cute. I went home for Christmas and had a good time.

I have a sister, and we played and had fun.

Yours truly,
Jean Earhart.

Dear Girls and Boys,
I am writing to thank you for the clay animals that you sent us. They were very nice and we all enjoyed them. We tried making some out of clay and painting them but there were not many made.

I had a nice time this Christmas and got many nice things. Most of the children of the Luecke building went home on passes for Christmas. There were about six of seven children here. I did not get to go home, but had a nice time anyway. I hope you had as nice a Christmas as we did.

The Sanatorium looked very nice this Christmas with all the trees outside decorated with colored lights. The older children of the school decorated the school room with many beautiful things.

We had two nice trees decorated very beautifully. One was in the dining room and the other downstairs in our playroom.

Lately we have been having a lot of fun playing outside in the snow.

Yours truly,
Martha O'Brien.

The annual Art Club dance is one of the most important of these. This dance is held every spring and is always a big success. An Art Club ten will be planned. Programs for the semester's meetings will be discussed.

For the benefit of those students who wish to purchase new textbooks for the current semester's subjects, a list of the texts, rooms in which they will be sold, and the teachers who will sell them has been issued by the office staff. 9. Pupils who live outside the city limits, or whose parents live outside, must bring transfers. These should be in the office by Friday of this week.

10. Pupils who do not have Glee Club, Orchestra, or Band on their cards, and who want to take one or all of these subjects should see Mr. Wainwright in Room 40. Periods for these subjects can be arranged only if the pupil has a vacant period at the proper time.

11. Attention of all pupils is called to the method of handling absence excuses. For absence excuses, pupils will report to the Study Hall. A written excuse, giving the date or dates of absence, and the reasons, and signed by a parent or guardian, must be brought by a pupil after an absence. Admit slips will be issued on presentation of the excuses.

12. Arrangements can readily be made to secure books for those pupils who cannot buy their own at the present time. Students who want help in securing their texts should take their lists to Miss Pittenger between 1 and 3 o'clock today.

13. Consult the lists in the halls for information as to place of sale of books.

Students Who Drive Must Have Permits

All students who drive to school or ride with another student are requested to secure a driving permit from the office. This is to be filled out and returned to the office. The students should do this immediately.

Virginia Woods Is French Club Head

Maria Haven Is Vice-President; Mildred Rudig Is Secretary; Theo Schurenberg Gives Talk.

New officers to serve for the coming term were elected at the regular meeting of the French Club held last Thursday evening, January 16, at 3:30 o'clock in Room 90. The students who were elected and will take their offices at the next meeting are President, Virginia Woods; vice-president, Maria Haven; secretary, Mildred Rudig; and point recorder, Vivian Hickman. A representative to Inter-Club Congress will be elected at the next meeting.

Officers Made Speeches

Each newly elected officer made a short speech in French of his appreciation and thanks for the office and promised to fulfill the duties to the best of his ability.

Theo Schurenberg, retiring president, gave a farewell speech in behalf of himself and her co-workers, expressing great thanks for the co-operation of the club members during the past term. Other past officers of the club are vice-president, Lillian Gable; secretary, Anna Bremer; point recorder, Violet Garton; and Inter-Club Congress representative, Vivian Hickman.

As this was the last meeting of the term, no definite program was planned. Several French games were played, among them one in which the player spells a word and the next spells a word beginning with the last letter of the other player's word. Another game similar to "Buzz" was also played.

Bring New Members

Each member was asked to bring an eligible French student as a new member to the next meeting of the club. The two new members present at this meeting were Mary Schaffer and Polly Barton. All students who have taken at least one semester's work in French and have received a grade of B or above are eligible for membership in the club.

New Plan Adopted
The new plan, which was inaugurated recently, to have speakers tell incoming freshmen about the Times while they are yet in grade school, has proven a great success. The drive netted 43 subscribers. Janet Hartman spoke at James Smart School, while Janice Cross spoke at both Harrison Hill and Hosland.

In speaking of the new plan, Miss Harvey, faculty adviser of the Times, said that it was a good idea, and should have been started sooner. Those who contemplate becoming freshmen at South Side should get at least five issues of the Times before they enter, she said. She also stated that those (Continued on page 6)

"The one thing we've got more of than the rest of the world is future."—Henry Ford.

Music In Khaki

A fellow togged in khaki breeches and armed with just a violin played on Fort Wayne streets once. Doors opened and people gave him money, which surely showed they liked it. He was really good-looking, too. Yet some of us think good music is outdated and sissy!

More Freshmen

We welcome the new freshmen and trust all is satisfactory. We hope they will have a fruitful and pleasant four years, that they will make good players at basketball and football, and that they will carry on our clubs and the Times and Totem in the best possible traditions. We also hope none of them are reading this just to keep from looking at nearby shoe throwers.

Grades Rise With The Sun, As Mr. Wilson Says

What is it that makes some high school students think that it is smart to be dishonest? (Why is a small dishonest action often accompanied by an acknowledging laugh? Why is the boy or girl who insists on living up to ideals called a "mamma's boy"? What makes some of us cynical toward ethics?)

Some people really believe a good many high school pupils are a bit dishonest. As Mr. Wilson says, grades rise with the sun, referring to the old and accepted custom of afternoon pupils getting the contents of tests from morning pupils. And then, why should we have to look our belongings up if we were all strictly honest?

There are answers to these questions, as there are generally answers to all questions. The main answer, however, is not locks and editorials, but character.

Fable In Red Banana Oil, With Notes On Swooning And Washing One's Face

Once upon a time there was a wee bitty freshman girl, just bubbling over with happiness and joy—for didn't kith and kin agree she'd grown from a wee bitty tot to a whopping big lady?

So this wee bitty girl bought ten lipsticks, five rouges, one mascara and a gallon of red banana oil. She did apply same mightily to lips, face, eyelashes, and finger nails; and, well—results were so striking they nearly knocked her over.

Well, she went to school like that for a year and no one seemed to mind. And then one day when she had used up all ten lipsticks, all five rouges, the mascara, and the whopping big gallon of red banana oil, she had to go to school with just a clean face and hands.

She was devastating. Ten boys, two teachers, and a janitor fainted from shock. Girls agreed she didn't look quite right. Boys gazed in wonder at a girl who didn't look exactly like the next one. And her teachers mentally approved—and commended.

So she took great care never to run out again.

The Stamps Which Moved A Canal 350 Miles By Remote Control

Much fire and brimstone brews in the United States Senate, but how many know that a belching volcano once killed an important measure—aided by postage stamps?

Here's how: 'Twas when the Senate pondered putting the present Panama Canal in Nicaragua. Now, it seems that canals are not thought safe when built near volcanoes, and Nicaragua had a whooper which must have matched all the ruddy red and belching black swelters in Pittsburgh. But we doubt that the Senators knew much of Nicaragua—except it made a dandy campaign issue.

Theirs must have been a barren, boring land; for Nicaraguan postage stamps bore symbolic figures mostly, except for this whopping big snorter and its whopping big smoke rings.

Some of these stamps were gleaned from Washington stamp fiends, and Senatorial squints convinced our lords and masters that Panama was a dandy place for a canal.

The Philatelic Society might have one, if you're interested.

Carrying On

With Max Roth

Speaking of snowballs knocking you into the middle of next week, I was hit by one that knocked me into 1946! There were many strange and interesting things happening while I was there; but, of course, you can't remain ten years in the future forever.

Among the first people to greet my eyes was Louis Bonis Jr. wearing spats, and a mustache. He told me he was on his way to see Clifford Schrom, the inimitable wrestling champion.

I decided against going with him, because I caught a glimpse of a poor disreputable looking fellow who looked rather familiar. I hurried up to him, gave him a dime, and exclaimed to myself: for who should it be but Edward Kruse!

I got the shock of my life to find Bill Epmeier studying too dancing. Joe Bex was in the class and he confided to me that he was learning to knit in his spare time. Maxine Greiner was his knitting teacher, and she also had as her pupils Dave Stoner, Ray Speaker, and Johnny Jines.

As I ambled on down town, I came across the Riff Raff Club rooms. The latest fads of the club seemed to be the use of safety pins instead of buttons and having their hair completely shaved off. Dorothy Golden was the most outstanding tot finger of the country. Her accompanist was Dick (Casanova) Busch, whose manly form and wavy hair made a picture on any stage.

Dorothy Crabill seemed to be married and settled down for life. She even had a governess (Ruth Adler) for her children. Sally Rea was known throughout the country as the girl with the most beautiful hands. Ruth Stoner was just as well known for her beautiful eyes, while Vera Crise still posed for toothpaste ads. Janet Fisher and Sybil Knudson beamed out from a billboard. They were playing in the "Collegiate Girls," with "Dick Chicago" playing opposite Sybil.

Back in 1936 there had been a famous advertisement, "Where's George?" Jean Creighton and Beanie Dygert were no longer worrying, because they both had their georgies right beside them. Ah—such is life.

In a graduating exercise, Phillip Green was graduating (at last). He was terribly upset about leaving the dear old portals after so many years. Betty Anne Schaff had spent many years studying to be a nurse, and she thought it was much fun to hold people's hands and count their pulses—especially if they were handsome young men.

Among the eligible bachelors I found Warren Zelt, Bob Gieg, Norman Buck, Dick Helm, Charles Hart, Morgan Harrison (though he was seen occasionally with Governor Adler), and Bob Augsburg.

Now that I have told what might happen to many of our little friends in the very near future, I think I shall confess that we can be supremely glad that these things really won't come to pass after all.

SUN AND SEA

Away To The Sunny Southland And The Soft Zephyrs Of Tampa, Florida

In just a few seconds folks, we're taking you to the far South. When we say far South, we really mean it—So take it away, Florida!

How do you do, ladies and gentlemen. Here we are in Tampa on top of the Bay Hotel. Relax in your easy chairs, while we take you through the gateway of health. There is a cool tropical breeze coming from the Gulf of Mexico. Above us are blue skies. Waving palms silhouetted against the azure of a dancing sunlit sea, an uproar of restless, sparkling color ranging from pale jade to deep-est sapphire greet our eyes.

The soft south wind whispers of music of spheres, while directly below us scurry throngs of tourists from the North, who came to seek their places in this Florida sun. They have always taken vacations; they need a nice quiet, warm spot to rest their weak stomachs and weak hearts. And this is the place in which they find an ideal unexciting winter resort.

Tampa is a glorious place in which to do nothing. The beauty of the Tampa regions cast a magic spell on us as we uphold the sublimity of its scenery. And to the east are hundreds of lakes; the bluest on the continent. All of them are shining like deep-toned sapphires in settings of Spanish moss-green jade. In the distant view we see white swans flapping their wings in the bright sunlight as they fly from lake to lake. Anyone could spend a delightful season in this sapphire lake region, surrounded by nearby orange groves.

Do you go in for dancing, ice cream festivals, picnics, fish-frys, and barbecues? Davis Islands are just the place for you. Out on Davis Islands in Tampa Bay are solid grass-covered areas which boast of seven million dollars worth of night clubs, ballrooms, hotels, residences, apartments and playgrounds. Not so long ago every inch of these islands was under water. A man by the name of Davis pumped and pumped until he created these Isles of June that bear his name. Truly a miracle of the twentieth century.

Ladies and gentlemen we're sorry, but our time is up. We hope that you have enjoyed this jaunt in tourists' paradise as much as we had the pleasure in bringing it to you. Your sponsor is: The South Side Times.

—Dean Brahm.

The unemployment situation will be very bad next year. Just think of all the people who won't be elected President.

Perhaps it would be a good idea for menaces like Italy and Japan to exterminate each other in their own little war. We have no doubt both nations could find a cause.

Dean Gives Wishes To New Freshmen

I am happy to extend greetings to the new members of South Side High School. I believe that you will be happy in the new school. I hope that you will take advantage of your opportunities, and that your four years at South Side High School prove to be both profitable and pleasurable. It is an admirable thing to learn to work and play with new associates and new conditions. You will be happy if you learn the rules and play the game fairly.

(Signed),
MARTHA M. PITTENGER.

Robin Hood's Barn

As a special service to those of us who must give current events in their classes and can't read the papers, we have consulted an astrologist. She forecasts:

Joe Louis says he'll knock-out... Joe Louis knocks-out... An expert in Ypsilanti says Hauptmann did... An expert in Honolulu says Hauptmann didn't... Governor Hoffman and Winchell disagree... Hauptmann says nothing... Lindy says nothing... Vice-President Garner says nothing... Borah, Landon, and Vandenberg also say nothing... Editorials approve... Little Orphan Annie and Dan Dunn, the Dauntless Detective, come out on top.

What could be better? We are pleased and heartily approve.

Vera Ellinger always gets hungry about the fourth period. Generally her eating makes everyone else hungry, too, so she feeds the other students. Once she split up a few tangerines. Another time she tried to give away a pound of limburger cheese, but she found no one else could eat it. What is this strange quality that Veanie's limburger has that keeps all others away from it?

The chemistry class gets a big kick out of Mr. Gilbert's analogy of atoms to Wimp's otails. And then didn't we hear Mr. Wilson's pet saying, "Jumping around like a flea on a hot piepan," quoted over the radio?

During a recognition day test given in room 16, suddenly came the joyful sound of "The Music Goes 'Round and Around." It seems to queerly affect people, for Dick Strasser, Millie Foellinger, and Norman Buck started singing it so lustily that one of the teachers had to shut off the source of the music. Talking about singing, we think that Jean Creighton should go on the radio since she really has talent. It's funny, but nobody appreciates a great star when she starts on her career. (Somebody gave that as a reason why not very many can tolerate it.)

Shoes and Ships

A WELCOME—This column wishes to extend a welcome to all new 9B's. We're always glad to see some new faces around school. But, we warn you, especially the boys, to beware of those big nasty boys whose chief delight is to torment little freshmen. We can recall the day when some of the worst of them sat John Grandy in a drinking fountain. (When he was a freshman.) So, we hope nothing like that happens to you. Another thing, always remember that even the most dignified senior was once a freshe like you. (Don't fall for the elevator gag, either.)

A SOLUTION—Someone has recently suggested that all persons who are annoying other persons by continually making puns, should be confined in a "punitiveary."

SOME JUDGE—While acting as chairman of a debate, Tom Jaenicke took it upon himself to help the judge, without being asked to put his finger in this pie. The judge had spent quite some time enumerating a certain bad point in one of the team arguments, when Tom decided that the judge was wrong, and even went to the extent of telling him so!

A SECRET—Somehow or other, a rumor has been started that among the new freshmen may be found: Jane Bowen, Doris Carmen, Mary Virginia Fisher, William Blass, Jean Fortriede, Nila Jean Greck, Donald Hire, Joan Korte, George Moses, and James Lohman. We remember them way back when.

SUNBURNS—We can't quite comprehend how Betty Ann Schaff gets such nice sunburns. Won't you tell us your secret Betty Ann? Then, we won't have to spend our winters in Florida.

DOG-DRAWER—Some people draw flies, some people draw other things, but Bob Brazy draws dogs. At least, he thinks so. He wastes paper on this so-called talent every day in public-speaking class.

FOOTBALL—One of the members of the Columbia City basketball team remembers the South Side-Columbia City football game, too. He claims that a tall blond (Wayne Bennett, to be exact) kicked him. Thus, if you see Wayne Bennett going around school kicking people, you'll know that he is just keeping in practice.

Peek-A-Boo-Hoo

Oh, get your caps and gowns, lads; Let's hope we graduate. We entered here in short knee pants And leave in gown-robbed state.

Oh, watch the wee small frosh, lads, Retrace our steps anew; While we sedately walk the halls, They play at peek-a-boo.
—Dumb D. Doe.

Ear-Burners

Dearest freshies: This column is here for the purpose of telling not-so-well-known-facts about yourselves and your fellow inmates at this institution of elevated knowledge. We don't know all of you—yet, but we cannot escape the fact that there are scuds of you running hither and yon, doing nothing constructive like the rest of us (we're only kidding, really) and so if you know something unusual—we might say odd, but we know you would not like that, write us and tell us of the idiosyncrasies (see what education does?) of those you know. We'd appreciate it. (There, ed., isn't that tender and sweet?)

He may not be an angel, but Bob Hodel is infamous or famous as you prefer for his model airplanes. He is the sole owner and proprietor of a regular model airplane shop, where he gives plane shows for those aspiring to wings.

Although she is not Swedish, Ann Abbott will doubtless someday be a match queen, for she collects match holders of every size and description, and guards them jealously. Even our esteemed Mr. Gilbert saves and hands over those match holders he thinks she will like to have in her collection.

Speaking of collections, we hate to dust all of Morgan Harrison's odd pieces. He has salt shakers, menus, spoons, and various other articles from nearly everywhere in the state. Quite an assortment, and quite a collector is this athletic senior.

In the good old summer time, we find George Caw and some others impersonating Neptune at the bottom of the various lakes near here, exploring in their home made diving outfits. However, they won't tell whether there are mermaids in our lakes or not. We rather doubt it, or they would have brought a specimen back with them.

Tip-Top Topics

Fur-Bearing Women

Today woman's greed for furs is fast depriving America of its fur-bearing animals. It is very hard to think what tiding would travel farther geographically or affect more diverse kind of fur-bearing animals, when some trapper gets an order for 5,000 furs to be delivered in twelve months. Don't blame the trapper; who wouldn't spend a year or two at trapping sales, when a fellow gets $100,000 for his trouble! The finest fur coats ever sold in America were two sable coats sold to two women for $75,000 each. When it runs into that kind of money, it's always the ladies, believe it or not.

Uncle Sam had to put a stop in 1911 to 1915 to sealing, when the destruction of the herds was so great that the seal faced extinction. The agreement made by the United States, Russia, and Great Britain, was not to kill more than fifteen percent of each country's herds each year. Now seal is once more in high fashion and even at this low rate the mammal faces extinction.

The destruction of the fur-bearing animals is so great that Uncle Sam has invested $500,000 annually in fox, martin, muskrat, chinchilla, ermine, skunk, mink, sable, otter, and fisher farms to save them from disappearing forever and entirely. In spite of this they all have succumbed to the same arguments which are now being justified by the government. What will the women of 2000 wear in place of furs?

Lo, the poor fur-bearing animals!
—Dean Brahm.

Secrets to Seventeens

DEAR FRESHMEN—Since this issue is dedicated to the freshmen, this column will contain advice which we hope will be interesting and helpful to you.

Today, of course, you will feel insignificant and embarrassed. So has every other freshman on his first day at South Side. Upperclassmen may criticize and make fun of you, but they can remember their first days; and unless they are too hard-hearted, they will be sympathetic.

Embarrassment is really self-consciousness in its worst stage. To get over it, forget yourself. Become interested in other people and things. If this does not come natural, practice it until you have mastered the art. Make yourself concentrate on something and before long you will be poised and at ease.

Above all, forget yourself—and remember that everyone had to go through the miseries of being a freshman.

Get Acquainted—In grade school you traveled around your own group of friends, walked to and from school, and attended parties with the same few pals. In fact, you were quite "cliquish."

"There is no friend like an old friend", but "variety is the spice of life." Now, if you youngsters can see through all of that, it means, in common everyday talk, make some new friends.

With so many people out here that it is almost impossible to move gracefully, there is no excuse for not knowing many of your fellow students. Speak to everyone with whom you come in contact, and all the members of your classes, and you'll get along all right.
Well, good luck!

Business Education Has A Personal As Well As A Vocational Value

Good Character Aids Success, Says Murch

Let's quote Mr. E. H. Murch, head of South Side's commercial department:

"Business education in South Side has broadened out into a combination of vocational and general business education which is both social and economic in character."

"In addition to the vocational aim, emphasis is placed upon the essentials of business education because of their personal-use and practical values. Take typewriting for example. No longer are we limiting our facilities to training only typists and stenographers for office positions. We realize the great personal value of a practical skill in typewriting to the average person—the teacher, the university student, the professional man, the housewife. This same personal-use value is developed in the fundamentals of book-keeping, with their application made to personal records, family budgets, income tax returns, returns of social, fraternal, and religious organizations, and the small type of individually owned business."

"Success in business and social life is due quite as much to personal traits as it is to other types of training. Business education is doing its share, which is large because of the nature of its instruction material, in the development and strengthening of the character traits that are essential to any worthwhile accomplishment in civic and economic life.

"Since business men wish to employ only competent, ambitious, productive workers for purely vocational jobs, we make an effort through our guidance program to direct only those who have the necessary natural abilities, interests, and aptitudes into the vocational branches."

"It seems to me that the boys and girls who go through South Side completely ignoring what business education has to offer are passing up a very essential part of their general high school education."

Thru The Wringer

Freshmen: Make this column interesting by submitting all "dirt" about your classmates in the mailbox on the bulletin board in the hall leading directly to the west end of the study hall.

If there was a song "Behind the prison walls," it would probably be Marjorie Stratton's theme song. She'd have Chuck Worden under lock and key... At a recent dance someone mistook Betty Broderick for a curtain... Georgianna Jacobs likes Dick Helm's broad manly shoulders. Tish, tish!

Does Ruth Turner go steady? Sure looks like it... Bernadette Shearer gets in Marion Bell's hair. Some hair, we'd say!... Betty Winniker takes her out of high school—Art Maxham... Someone wants to know what makes Geraldine Kelly's heart beat faster when seeing Joe Jones. (You should hear her pant when she runs, though.) Warning: Don't let George Glenn's wavy hair curl up around his finger. His secret is in using combs. Try it yourself sometime... Did Beverly Martin and Bob Forbing thrash it out yet? Make good farmers maybe... Why are Bob Hall and Juanita Wolford? And are they?

Virginia Griener finally got her date with Lloyd Dolan, but what about Close?... Mary Smith and Bud Baker seem to shun others' company. Draw your own conclusion... Carl Hall sits with Eleanor Monesmith in the gym during the fifth period. Isn't that proof of his choice of girl friends?... More power to Feichter and Glass... Well, Menze and Hickman gave their respective rings back. It must be the smash-up... We're glad Lois Wyneken's foot is better. We only hope she doesn't try to kick planks again... All these girls with their knitting... How's going steady Mr. Norris?... So Wade Theye got so mixed up he took a street car going the wrong way.

Bob Lee has a picture of his girl friend which he treasures very highly... We wonder why Joe Close is down in the dumps... Earl Stauffer is going to try to get a date with either BonSilene Craig or Vera Crise. He'll probably get it, too... Who was calling up his girl on the Times phone before the Columbia City game?... Ralph Spade surely can exercise authority when he has it.

Club Activities Have Increased In Our School

Financial Problems Handled By Main Treasurer; Club Treasurers Also Assist.

Parties Approved By Miss Pittenger

Students In Charge Of Care In Clubrooms; Committee Appointed To Handle This

Extra-curricular activities have increased and developed rapidly in South Side High School. Club programs are planned with a definite objective in view. The following general regulations apply to all extra-curricular groups and activities, and should be followed exactly.

1. The money of all clubs, activities, etc., of the school will be handled by the school treasurer. Five percent of the gross receipts of all money-making groups will be put in a general fund, to defray general school expenses.
2. Receipts will be given for all money turned in, and these should be kept by the treasurer of the organization. The school treasurer will instruct organization treasurers in the best method of keeping records, and these records should be kept carefully.
3. All money collected is to be turned in, and all payments are to be made by order on the school treasurer. If it is necessary to pay cash for something, do so, and then have the account reimburse you. In no other way can an accurate record be kept.
4. Requests for checks are to be made on forms secured from Miss Alderdice form E. C. C. R. When a check is wanted, get a numbered form from Miss Alderdice, have it properly filled in ink, adding the date, and turn it back to Miss Alderdice. Checks requested one day will usually be ready the next morning, although sometimes they may be issued the same day. PLEASE OBSERVE THIS SYSTEM.
5. Requests for small amounts of money which you can pay in cash should be made on the petty cash request forms, which can be secured from Miss Pittenger.
6. A complete roll of the members of the clubs is to be kept on file with Miss Pittenger. Cards for this, and instructions for handling the roll, may be secured from Miss Pittenger.
7. Plans for parties, dances, etc., are to be approved by Miss Pittenger, and a regular form is to be filled in advance. This form may be secured from Miss Pittenger. When custodial service is required—such as moving chairs, tables, piano, furnishing heat, etc.—secure a Service Authorization blank in the office.
8. All meetings with other schools must be approved by the principal.
9. All officials, judges, etc. are to be approved by the principal.
10. All candidates for club officers must be approved by Miss Pittenger before they are put in nomination.
11. All plans for money-making enterprises must have the approval of the principal, as to time, kind, and place.
12. Material ordered from any firm must be charged specifically, and not to South Side High School. Charge to club or organization.
13. A. No club, group, or department is to enter any contest, exhibit, etc., until arrangements have been approved by the principal.
14. A. No club, group, or department is to arrange for appearance of students before outside organizations until plans have been approved by the principal.
15. A special Financial Report blank is to be filled for each money-making affair held. Secure these forms in the office.
16. An excess of care should be taken in supervising the sale of tickets, or the handling of any money by students. Careless supervision of such activities may easily lead to dishonesty on the part of some students, and all opportunities for such a happening should be carefully excluded from plans. Before starting the sale of any tickets, please check your plans with the principal.
17. A list of complimentary tickets issued for each event must be kept, and made a part of the Financial Report.
18. A date book for all organization meetings will be kept in Miss Alderdice's office. In this will be listed the regular meetings of all groups. Any special meetings—committees, the groups not listed, etc., must be entered in this book after consultation with Miss Pittenger or Mr. Snider. No meetings are to be called without this approval.
19. Care of the club rooms should be a part of the duty of each club. Each group should have a committee charged with the responsibility of leaving the room in as good shape as it was found. The driving of nails, or posting of paper, in or on the walls or woodwork should not be permitted.
20. There is often too much noise around the office just before club meeting time. The office is the central part of the organization, the place where parents and visitors come, and a noisy, disorderly hall leading to it leaves a bad impression upon all.

Writes For Magazine

The School Press Review for December, 1935, contains a feature story, "What To Do Till The Doctor Comes," by Louis Bonis, editor of The Totem. In his article, Louis discusses what to do and what not to do in editing a yearbook. He advises that a book should be planned ahead of time, not after all the stories and pictures have been turned in.

Sunshine Skate Arrangements Near A Finish

Coming Semester's Officers Are To Be Installed At Meeting On February 14.

Final arrangements for the Sunshine Club's third annual skating party which will be held on Friday evening, February 14, at Bell's rink, will be made at the club's next meeting, tomorrow evening in the Voorhees Room.

Betty Beyrau, assisted by the club's officers, is in charge of all arrangements for the party. Ticket sales are in charge of Gerry Valton and Marjorie Gould, who are captains of teams organized for selling the tickets. The winning team will be entertained by the losers during the first regular meeting after the party. The individual who sells the most tickets will also be given a prize.

The feature of the meeting will be the installation of the club's new officers, who are Hazel Noll, president; Jean Hildebrand, vice-president; Dorothy Zaegel, secretary; Eileen Fueling, treasurer; Mary Ellen Kilpatrick, sergeant-at-arms; and Francine Sheplair, Inter-Club Congress representative.

Addresses by two former presidents of the club, Caroline Diermeyer, who served during the spring semester last year; and Iona Shuler, the outgoing head, will also be features of the program.

Sorority Sponsors Literature Contest

Psi Iota Xi Will Give Girls Of Senior Classes Chances To Win Prizes Totalling $75.

The Psi Iota Xi Sorority, which stands for charity, literature, and social activities, is sponsoring a statewide short story-writing contest for senior girls. The winning senior girl from South Side will have the opportunity of winning a total of $75. Fifty dollars has been offered to the senior girl who submits the winning story in the state. In addition to this, another prize of $15 has been offered to the senior girl who submits the winning story to the Province. The local prizes will be $5, $3, and $2.

The story must be original and should not exceed 5,000 words. It must be in the hands of a local committee, headed by Mrs. Burl Friddle, not later than February 1. The winning story from the local contest will be submitted to the northern province committee. In this contest there will be approximately twenty stories with which to compete. The province prize for the winning story will be $25.

The organization has been divided into three divisions, so there will be three stories to be submitted to the state committee. The story which this committee selects as the best will earn a fifty dollar prize for its author.

Last year the sorority presented a plaque to South Side for the freshman-sophomore speech contest. This contest has been approved by Mr. Snider and Mr. Null.

The South Side entries have been placed in charge of Miss Woodward. If any senior girl is interested in this contest, she may interview Miss Woodward in room 36.

Ah, Wilderness!

Crooner's 'Ho-ohing' Has Everyone Going 'Round And Around'

Have you ever had a song haunt you? Well, I have! The first time I heard it "Ho-oh-oh-oh" being chanted by a fellow-pedestrian, although he was quite unknown to me, I felt suddenly sorry that I was feeling so badly. Nevertheless, I am not one of those to take on the world's cares and carry them with me forever, so by dinner time that night I had forgotten the poor soul.

The worst was yet to come, however. As usual, we turned on the radio to our favorite dinner-music program; then I choked, for over our pet station the crooner was "Ho-oh-oh-ohing."

What was this, anyhow? The folks were not at all impressed, but I was struggling with my first impression of it and the effect it was having on me. I decided to spend the rest of the evening by the radio. Sure, enough! I had no trouble finding many persons to "push the first valve down." I resolved not to let such foolishness get the best of my better judgment; therefore, it was most disconcerting when I discovered myself humming some "Ho-oh-oh-oh's" of my own.

Song Is Contagious

I felt entitled to a blush or two when Dad inquired as to what I was mumbling under my breath. The only answer which I could find was, "Ho-oh, nothing." Then I laughed, for in keeping with the dignity of a senior in high school I "Ho-oh-oh-ohed" there that "nothing" just about described the new musical arrangement. Oh well, at least school, with its chemistry experiments, its term themes, and economic notebooks staring me in the face, would take away all thoughts on the silly thing.

Sleep that night pictured a jumbled mixture of black and white going around and around, horns blasting, crooners' faces blaring. "And it comes out here—below, below, below." In my endeavor to look "below" to see it coming out, I was soon lost in the blackness of sleep, after which the next morning looked bright and sunny and free from music going in circles.

Everyone Sings It

It seemed almost unbelievable that our car-radio should broadcast that song so early in the morning, but that is exactly what it did! Everybody seemed to be doing it. Although the girl whose locker is next to mine had always impressed me as being one of those high school co-eds who simply walks from class to class and has few interests outside of school, she, too, was singing it!

Miss Pittenger Talks To Philo On Refinement

Newly Elected Officers Are Installed; Prizes Given For Perfect Attendance.

Miss Pittenger spoke at the meeting of the Philaetian Literary Society held Monday, January 20, at 3:30 o'clock in the Greeley Room. Her subject was "Culture." "Culture is the improvement of mind, moral and tastes," stated Miss Pittenger. Around these three points she directed her speech which was indeed very interesting.

A business meeting preceded the program, which was in charge of Mary Martha Hobrock.

New Officers Installed

The business meeting was marked by the installation of the newly elected officers. They are: vice-president, Mary Martha Hobrock; secretary, Ruth Roadcap; treasurer, Joan Kennedy; Inter-Club Congress, Peggy Kilpatrick; program chairman, Selma Liff; publicity chairman, Verna Holtman; and sergeant-at-arms, Helen Anderson. The president is elected for a term of one year, and, therefore, she was not re-installed. Rosemary Chappell, the present sergeant-at-arms installed the new sergeant-at-arms and she in turn installed the other officers. Initiation of the newly elected officers will be at the next meeting which will be on Monday, February 3. This meeting will be in charge of the vice-president and the sergeant-at-arms.

Also at the business meeting there was a report from the Inter-Club Congress representative, Verna Holtman. She stated that those who desired a Philaetian Year Book could get one if they saw either her or some member of her committee.

Gifts Are Presented

Following the installation of the newly elected officers, the president, Ruth Adler had a surprise for all the members who had attended every one of the meetings last semester. To each of these girls who had not missed a single meeting throughout the semester, she presented a rose made of a handkerchief. These were very attractive and were of many various colors. The girls receiving these were: Marjorie Scheuman, Ruth Roadcap, Maxine Marriotte, Selma Liff, Betty Rose Lehman, Peggy Kilpatrick, Joan Kennedy, Mary Martha Hobrock, Constance Hoag, Bernadette Dygert, Dorothy Crabill, Rosemary Chappell, Maxine Borchert, Helen Anderson, and Marjorie Meyer. A very special rose handkerchief was presented to Miss Demaree, the faculty adviser.

Announcement was made that Philo will have their annual St. Patrick's Day Banquet again this year. Committee for this will be appointed a little later. The banquet last year was held at the Fort Wayne Woman's Club. The place for this year's banquet has not yet been decided upon.

Helen Flaig, the music chairman for the club led in the singing of several songs. They were "Me and My Philo," "White and Gold," and "What's the Matter With Philo?"

Mary Michaels has been appointed to serve the membership chairman for the following term. She will be assisted by Margie Cartwright, Constance Hoag, Margie Turner, Virginia Griener, and Marjorie Scheuman.

Mrs. Bex Is Kept Very Busy

Meeting Needs Of Her Family

The general task of being a home maker, the wife of a busy teacher, and trying to feed and clothe two boys is declared by Mrs. C. A. Bex, wife of C. A. Bex, one of South Side's manual training teachers, to be an exhausting job. Mrs. Bex is the mother of two of South Side's more prominent boys, John, a junior, and Joe, a freshman.

Mrs. Bex was educated for some time at Marion Normal College, and then graduated from Indiana University. Before taking up her present duties as a home maker, she was a teacher in a high school. Her ambitions at that time were to some day become a college professor. Her ambitions, of course, were never realized; but she declares herself quite contented just as she is now.

Content With Teaching

Mr. Bex had early desired to be something in politics, but he now is content with teaching manual training and furthering his education in his field of work. As an unusual feature, Mr. Bex came from a family of 10 children. His pet peeve and the thing that perturbs him the most is to have to wait on somebody. In fact, everything must be on time with him—meals, appointments, and yes, even classes.

Mrs. Bex has a positive dislike for certain radio programs, and that evidently was the cause of short orations at the Bex household recently. She likes most of the Sunday afternoon ones, but would rather have the radio turned off than listen to some of the popular weekly ones.

Interested In Furniture

Although she knows very little about how to drive a nail or screw together some pieces of wood, she does read some of her husband's reading matter on manual training and rather likes it. Her particular interest, however, is in furniture, its design and build. Too frequently though, she cannot satisfy a persistent clamor within her to buy some such piece of beautiful furniture.

"And just that," says Mrs. Bex, "is my hardest job." Trying to make a salary reach over her own needs and particularly those of three active men is an able task and couldn't be shirked even if she cared to. Telephone calls are received in large amounts, even if John and Joe do get the majority of the calls.

Family Likes To Read

Meals are served at the regular time and the men of the family eat when they get there, so supper sometimes stretches out over a long period of time. Discussion at the table seems to be rather limited, however, as Mrs. Bex replies that her family eats so heartily and then jumps up to rush off to some important calling that really nothing much can be said.

Reading matter includes the Reader's Digest and all other sorts of reading. The family as a whole is very much interested in reading, and the house is frequently mused up by a trail of newspapers, magazines, or books. Mrs. Bex, herself, rather likes fiction, but does not have time to read very much of it. Her husband devotes his spare time to books and articles dealing with his line of interest, manual training.

This is the life of a woman having as her source of income, the education of her family, and the interests of her husband, South Side High School.

I. U. Extension To Offer Credit Work

Many South Side Graduates Will Enter In Indiana University Extension Classes Mid-Term.

Many of South Side High School graduates will enroll in the Indiana University Extension classes this year, as last year, and by doing so, they will earn a part of a freshman course between January and June of this year. The various students carry either one course, two, or three, and some carry a full course of fifteen credit points.

Indiana University, our state university, established an Extension Center in Fort Wayne over seventeen years ago. This makes it possible for boys and girls who cannot go away to college to take some of their Junior College work right here in Fort Wayne.

At the present time, over one hundred former students of South Side, North Side, and Central are enrolled in the Extension Junior College work and will have their College Freshman course completed by next June. Next year some of the students with a year's advanced standing and others will continue their work. As much as two years' work may be done through the Fort Wayne Extension Center of Indiana University.

Any of the January graduates who would be interested in earning some college credits between now and June should go to the Indiana University Extension office at 206 Dime Bank Building and inquire about the work. All classes meet at Central High School on late afternoons and evenings.

Rules Will Still Hold For Any Lost Article

As usual, the rules which have been made regarding the lost and found department of South Side are definite. Any article which is found in or around the building should be taken to Miss Pittenger's office. Any student who loses an article should see Miss Pittenger about it. Provided he can prove his ownership, he can recover the lost object. The restoration of many valuables to their owners has established the efficiency of this department.

Columbia City 36-25 Winner Over Archers

First Period Scoring Spree Puts Game On Ice For Eagles; S. S. Rally Fails.

Falling before a barrage of well-aimed shots, South Side's Archers went down to defeat before the Columbia City Eagles by a 36-25 count. The Eagles won the game in the first period when they caught the Archer defense flat-footed and scored sixteen markers before the Green could break into the scoring column. From then on South Side tried in vain to get a sustained rally underway. The Green never decreased the Eagle margin to less than nine points.

Eagles Miss Two

In the opening period the Ivey-men missed only two out of ten shots. Shinbeckler scored five buckets, Overdeer two, and Stamm one before Ellenwood finally gave the Green a score.

The second period was featured by an Archer rally which seemed likely to sweep away the Columbia City lead. Ellenwood scored a foul which was followed by two fast buckets by Stamm. Lee then tossed in a charity shot. Close, Hall, and Ellenwood all hit in quick succession to cut the Eagle lead to a 20 to 9 count. After considerable passing the Archers reduced the Eagle lead to nine points when Hall cut under and scored.

Second Half Close

Stamm opened the second half with a two-pointer followed by Shinbeckler and Hall counting from the foul line. Close then hit on a pivot shot only to have Overdeer increase the Eagle lead with a basket. Ellenwood scored a foul shot and Shinbeckler tossed two in from the foul stripe. Hall hit one from the corner to reduce the Eagle lead to ten points before Overdeer scored a long arching shot. Hines then scored both of his shots when he was fouled by Overdeer. Overdeer then scored another high arch shot. Ellenwood scored a foul shot to reduce the Eagle lead to a 31 to 20 score as the period ended. Stamm scored a technical to open the final quarter. Overdeer then scored a foul followed by Hall's long shot. Stamm scored a basket to give the Eagles 34 to 22 lead with six minutes to go. South Side fouled several times in an effort to break up the Columbia City stall. Lee completed the scoring with a foul and a basket.

But Archers Win

South Side's Archers flashed their best form last Tuesday when they beat Central to break a six-game losing streak. Earlier in the season the Green was better, as is testified by the 44-25 victory over Auburn as pictured above.

Looking At Sports

Invite Frosh Entry In Intramural Sports

"We cordially invite all incoming freshmen to take part in intramural athletic activities. Wrestling, boxing, and basketball are the three sports which will occupy the first part of the coming semester. If freshmen will start earning points now, it will not take very long for them to earn the 125 points needed to become an intramural letterman. Our athletic activities lead the way to health and happiness during the recesses between studies."

(Signed),

Louis Briner, Intramural Director.

Major Bowles—The number of "bowl" games seem to be mounting each year. Two years ago the Rose Bowl at Pasadena, California, stood alone; last year the Sugar Bowl at New Orleans was annexed and this year one more bowl, the Orange Bowl at Miami, made its appearance. The country, especially the south seems to have become greatly addicted to post-season football games. A capacity crowd was on hand to see each one of the bowl games as well as the annual East-West clash at San Francisco.

Pennant Bound—Baseball held the spotlight for a few days as a somewhat meager supply of sales and trades were announced at the annual Major League baseball meeting, held this year in Chicago. Connie Mack provided the most startling deals as the aged Philadelphia manager got rid of the few stars that were still left from his World Championship ball club of 1931 and 1932. Tom Yawkey, young Boston millionaire and owner of the Red Sox, dug even deeper into his capacious pocket in his desperate attempt to bring a pennant to Boston. Yawkey parted with almost a half million dollars and not a few players as he obtained Jimmy Foxx, Johnny Marcum, Eric McNair, and Doc Cramer from the Athletics. The Red Sox are now blessed with such a wealth of infield material that if some infielders are not sold or traded, Manager Joe Cronin will be faced with the problem of who to use. Although Marcum, who won sixteen games with a last-place ball club in 1935, has been annexed to the pitching staff, the Red Sox are still pitifully weak in that department. In a deal with the Washington Senators the Red Sox also obtained Heine Manush on a straight trade for outfielders Roy Johnson and Earl Reynolds.

The Price—Manager Joe McCarthy of the New York Yankees finds himself in the unusual position of being boycotted by his fellow managers, in player deals. A few years ago the Yanks had a great wealth of material which they obstinately refused to sell or trade to any other clubs. The other clubs vowed vengeance and they are now getting it in full measure. While the Tigers and the Red Sox, the two main contenders for the flag outside of the Yankees, are strengthening themselves the Yanks are forced to stand by helplessly. The Yanks wanted Al Simmons of the White Sox very much but they were unable to pay the exorbitant price put on his head by Jimmy Dykes. Simmons was later sold to Detroit for a much smaller sum than that named by Dykes to the Yankees. In many other cases the Yanks have been unable to barter players, and they are paying dearly for their actions of the past.

Hot Shots—The University of Chicago's football and basketball teams seem to be alike in one respect; that is they are both one-man teams. In football it was the spectacular Jay Berwanger who stole the whole show, in basketball most of the responsibility falls on the slim shoulders of Bill Haarlow, last year All-Conference forward and leading scorer, who has one of the sharpest basket eyes in the country. In the Big Ten there are three standout players, all three of them high scorers and one an All-American last year. The three players in question are Bob Kessler of Purdue, Warren Whittingler of Ohio State, and the aforementioned Bill Haarlow of Chicago.

Underdog Victory—The Big Ten basketball season opened with a real upset when a small underdog Iowa quintet did the impossible and knocked off a rangy veteran Illinois five by the score of 27-26. The Hawkeyes, who had been knocked around in pre-conference competition by almost every small school they had met, ran up an early score against the Illini and hung tenaciously to the lead for the rest of the game. The loss to Iowa proved a severe blow to the title hopes of the Illini. On the same evening, the hitherto almost untied Ohio State team showed their real strength as they whipped Wisconsin to the tune of 44-23. The Buckeyes have fine reserve strength and they gave notice as one of the leading contenders.

Coaches Favor Central Tigers To Capture Sectional Crown

Central's fast-breaking Tigers, who kept their winning streak intact last week-end when they easily defeated the highly touted Bluffton and Decatur fives, seem to be the early favorites for the forthcoming Sectional meet which will be held in Fort Wayne in previous years.

Coaches from Central, North Side, South Side, and Decatur place the Tigers at the top of their list, while their other choices follow in various positions. Coach Murray Mendenhall, who will lead the Tigers in their race for the sectional crown, stated that his charges would be out to revenge the defeat handed them by the Archers from South Side last year in the sectional finals. Mendenhall's second choice for the coveted championship was Decatur's Yellow Jackets who have been playing a steady brand of ball for the entire season, and are a threat to any basketball team placed against them. Mendy also said that third place would be a toss-up between North Side and South Side, who should both improve greatly before the sectionals roll around.

Bob Nulf, Redskin mentor, was then asked to give his opinion as to the outcome of the forthcoming sectional. He placed the Tigers as his favorite without hesitation, and added that his own Redskins would run a close second, with Decatur a sure third. Bob then stated that the Archers could be called upon to pull their share of the surprises.

Other Coaches Advise

McAndrews of the Decatur Yellow Jackets, was next. He also said that he thought Central was in, but also announced that Decatur would be in perfect shape by the time the tournament rolled around, and an upset would be highly probable. He then installed the Leo Lions as his pick for third place.

Burl Friddle, Archer coach, then gave his version of how he thinks the sectional teams stack up. He also placed Central as the standout. The Yellow Jackets again received second position on account of their steady brand of ball, coupled with a good fast break, and remarkable marksmanship. The Archers are bound to begin hitting the hoop pretty soon and will soon be in the win column and therefore may be placed on an even basis with North Side and Leo, Friddle's other chances for third place.

Name Champs In Intramural Foul Throwing

John Allen, Clyde Nussbaum Win Heavy, Lightweight Crowns, Respectively.

South Side's intramural department has two new champions in the foul throwing contest for this year. In the heavyweight league, John Allen captured the honors for first place by making fifty-eight baskets out of a possible eighty.

To reach the top, the winner must go through three rounds. The first is called the qualifying round, in which the contestants are given twenty free throws, with the fifteen best scorers being advanced to the second round. In the second round, the participants are given thirty tosses at the charity line with the ten highest being advanced to the final round. The first round scores are included. As in the second round, the finalists are given thirty free throws. The winner is then decided by adding the totals of the three rounds.

Closely following Allen was Elmer Tielker who scored fifty-seven. Robert Feichter came in third with the score of fifty-six, and Gaylord Stalter and Bob Klotz were tied for fourth place. John Melchi came in second in the lightweight league with the score of fifty-four. The other contestants were farther behind than Nussbaum or Melchi. Charles Durbin had forty-five, George DuWald had forty-seven, Allen Garrison had forty-three, and Gene Cassaday had the least, as he scored forty-two.

When the final round started, neither winner held an advantage. Allen was four points behind the leader of the second round, and Nussbaum was two points behind the leader in his group.

Nussbaum will have a chance to repeat next year as he will not graduate, but Johnny Allen is in his last year.

Archers Practicing Hard For Huntington Game Friday

Southern Floor Will Be Scene Of Viking Game

With The Season Half Over, Coach Bears Down On Green; Seven Games Left.

Norsemen Have In-And-Out Season

First Game Will Start At 7, Varsity An Hour Later At 8; Not Conference Tilt.

Coach Burl Friddle has been giving his charges plenty of hard practice as they prepare for their tilt with the Huntington Vikings Friday night on the southern hardwood. Coach Friddle is now bearing down on his charges as they go into the final stretch before tourney time. With seven games left before them including three city series tilts and four N. E. I. C. contests, the Archers wish to stay in the best condition possible during the next month.

The reserve tilt with the Huntington Seydlings will start at 7 o'clock with the varsity toss-up being one hour later.

Huntington, a member of the North Central conference, has been experiencing an in-and-out season.

The Vikings have a rather strong offense which has failed to click very consistently this season. Petrie and Meckstroth are the mainstays of the Viking scoring combination. Petrie, a forward, has hit fairly consistently throughout the present season. Meckstroth, playing in the guard post, is leading the Huntington offense. O'Dier, his running mate, is also quite consistent from the field. Beerbower at guard and Winters at center complete the Huntington lineup.

Officials for this tilt will be Hughes and Coolman.

Star In Archer Victory

Jim Ellenwood

Bud Lee

Jim Ellenwood and Bud Lee played important parts in South Side's upset over Central last Tuesday. But scored the basket that put the Archers into the lead with two and one-half minutes to go before the final gun. A moment later Jim sank another basket, sewing up the game for the Green. Ellenwood and Lee shared high scoring honors for the Archers, with Johnny Hines, all three scoring seven points.

Complete Details Of Annual State Net Tourney Announced

The eagerly awaited announcement of the plans for conducting the annual state basketball tourneys for the purpose of determining the outstanding quintet of Hoosierdom has been made from the headquarters of the Indiana High School Athletic Association.

An unusual amount of interest was aroused this year with the rearrangement of plans for conducting the tourneys. The elimination proceedings will be extended to four tourney sessions instead of three as in former years. Arrangements for the tourney centers and manner of elimination were made by the Board of Control. Selections of centers for the various tourneys were based on geographic location of schools, transportation facilities available, general conditions such as the attitude of the local authorities, floors, and entertaining facilities, and the success and satisfactory management of previous tournaments. The general plan followed was to determine the teams competing in a tourney according to counties.

The general scheme for the tourneys is to have no less than eight and no more than sixteen squads to a center. Anderson, Columbia City, and Marion are the centers having only eight teams entered at the present time. Kendallville and New Albany now are scheduled to have fifteen competing squads, but the number of contestants in both centers may be cut by sending teams to Columbia City and Paoli. Winchester and Gary will have sixteen competing schools in their tournaments.

To compete in a tournament the school must be a member of the I. H. S. A. A. with all dues paid in full. The principal of the school sending a team must certify the eligibility of twelve members on his squad. These entries must be in the mail by February 20, 1936. Failure to get entries in on time will mean that the entries will not be accepted. Last year this ruling was rigidly enforced with the result that a few teams were not permitted to enter tournament play. In accordance with rulings made several seasons ago no prizes of any kind are permitted to be awarded at the tourneys to any school or an individual.

The admission fees to the tourneys are based on the number of sessions of the tourneys. The season tickets for four session tourneys will cost $1. for five-sessions the cost will be $1.25, and for six sessions a season ticket will cost $1.50. Separate session tickets will sell at thirty-five cents each.

Maxine Morrison is one of the wiser sophomores who took advantage of the cold weather and made about 30 points skating at the reservoir.

Marjorie Hower has been quite an attraction at the "rez". No wonder, she received a black, red, and white mitten and sock set from an out-of-town relative.

Marjorie Meyer is one of our bolder Amazons, and gets on the tail end of many a whip. After which (as usual), she flies through the air with the greatest of ease.

Who was the girl who, while warming her shoes over an open register one day after ice skating, dropped one of them in it?

We wonder if those green riding pants that Ada Schueleke has been wearing while skating could not possibly at one time have been her sister's?

Most comments from upperclassmen concerning the center throw are quite favorable. It gives equality to the tall and short girls at the beginning of play, and also gives each team an equal number of times to play the ball.

It surely was good to see some of the former members at the G. A. A. services. Alice Mae Siebold gave a short talk, and Eleanor Cupp, Ida Mae Frazell, and Audrey Fels also came back to witness the ceremony again.

Tiger Seconds Lose To Green By 25-15 Score

Wavelets Emerge Victorious After Leading Most Of Game; Hold Off Blue.

After trailing throughout the latter portion of the first quarter, South Side's Reserves recovered their scoring eyes and forged into a lead they never relinquished until they had handed the Central Cubs a 25 to 15 setback.

The Wavelets opened the scoring when Ed Miller chalked up two points, in the initial period of the game. However, Central forged into the lead shortly afterward and held it for the remainder of the period, leading by a score of 5 to 4 at the first gun.

In the second quarter, the Archers exhibited the superior brand of ball which put them into the lead in an early stage of that period. The continual driving of the Archers weakened the Tiger defense and the Archers scored most of their points during under the basket. At the mid-point of the tilt the Archers had a five-point margin, the score standing 13 to 8.

Throughout the third period the Tigers fought persistently to overcome the Archers' lead; however, the Archers' strong defense and offense kept the Tigers from passing their score. The entire quarter was a scrappy and slightly rough clash, many fouls being committed by both sides. The Archers finished in the lead at the end of this period with the score standing 18 to 15.

In the final period the Archers forged farther into the lead, and continued to score without much opposition. At the same time they enforced such an air-tight defense that the Tigers were unable to score during the entire final period. The Archers ended their final spree by scoring seven points to chalk up a victory over Central's reserve five by the score of 25 to 15.

Tigers, Bears Are Hailed As Best Net Quints In Region

The 1935-36 basketball season has produced a few outstanding teams in this area, many medium teams, and of course, there are the poor teams. By virtue of their 39-29 victory over Berne, the Central Tigers are perhaps the most outstanding team in this section of the state. Berne closely follows the Bengals, but many fans rate the Bears ahead of the Tigers.

Another team that could give a good battle to any team around here, or for that matter, any team in the state, is the Bluffton Tigers. They defeated their old rivals, the Decatur Yellow Jackets, 33-32. They played this game, and will play the following games on their schedule, without the services of their star, McCray. Another up and coming team is the Decatur five. They have been improving with every game and will prove to be a formidable opponent when the sectionals roll around.

Hartford City, whose ranks were riddled by graduation, have been playing a good brand of basketball. The team that is looming as the possible county champs are the Leo Lions. They have won all their games this season and with big scores. One of their stars, Dick Bucher, would have attended South Side if he had not moved to Leo. Two mediocre teams are the Redskins and the Archers. But supporters of both teams can be assured of their team not letting down on them.

Archers Win Amazing 29-25 Upset Over Central Tigers

Holding a fighting band of Tigers to eight points in the second half while they scored nineteen markers, South Side's Archers defeated the Central Bengals by a 29 to 25 count in one of the most thrilling encounters in the history of city series competition.

Trailing 17 to 10 at the halfway mark, the Friddlemen threw up a defense which the Central aggregation had great difficulty in penetrating. While their defensive work checked the high powered Central offense, the Green finally got their shooting eyes set and they directed a barrage of shots at the hoop with great success.

Central, as usual, possessed a fairly effective defense. The Tigers' fast-breaking offense also worked quite smoothly during the first half. South Side had difficulty in finding a method of sifting through the Blue defense, but the Green took full advantage of the opportunity to crack the Tiger defense when they discovered a way to do it.

Bourne broke the ice for Central as he connected on a foul shot. Schaeffer increased this lead as he drove under for a shot. Ellenwood then broke into the scoring column for the Green with a foul pitch. Braden increased the Bengal lead with a pivot shot. Speaker cut this lead with a foul only to have Riddle regain the lead with another chancy toss. Lee then cut the Central lead to a 6 to 4 count as the first quarter ended.

Opening the second period Schaeffer cut straight in for a bucket and Hines connected on a long shot. He then tied up the score with a basket after taking a short pass from Hall. At this point Coach Mendenhall revised his lineup with Armstrong, Sitko, and Motter entering the contest. Armstrong broke into the scoring column immediately as he scored two free throws. Lee then cut the Central lead to one point with a charity toss. Armstrong came right back with a long angle shot and a charity shot to give the Bengals a 13 to 9 margin. Braden hit from the foul stripe and Sitko hit from well out to increase the Central margin to six points. Ellenwood counted on his foul shot only to have Motter retaliate from the foul line to give Central a 17 to 10 margin at the half.

Opening the second half Braden dribbled under to score before Hines, Hall and Lee let loose a barrage of shots which brought the Green within six points of the Bengals. Armstrong relieved the pressure on his team as he scored on a short one only to have Ellenwood hit on a short one. Armstrong continued the battle with a set-shot from the corner to give his teammates a 23 to 18 lead as the quarter ended.

Hall started the South Side rally with a foul toss but Brown increased the Central lead with a dribble-in shot. Ellenwood then added one and the Green trailed by a 25 to 20 count with five minutes to play. Hall put a beautiful arching shot through the hoop and Close put the leather through the net twice from the foul stripe to reduce the Central margin to a 25 to 24 count. Lee then hit from mid-floor to put the Green in the lead for the first time. With two minutes to go Ellenwood cut under and scored and Hines counted on his foul attempt to give the Green a four-point lead. The Green then stalled away the remainder of the game.

Colleges Offer New Chances For All Pupils

Award Prizes On Ability Or Need Of Person Unable To Meet School Expense.

Honors Are Object Of Various Pupils

Candidates To Get Admission Are Selected Primarily On Quality Of Work.

With the coming end of the school term, various colleges are offering scholarships to those pupils who have been fortunate enough to be able to apply for them. Some of the various colleges are as follows: Bard College, located at Annandale-On-Hudson, New York; Black Mountain College, Black Mountain, North Carolina; Armour Institute of Technology, Chicago, Illinois; and University of Michigan, Ann Arbor, Michigan.

Students Are Limited
Bard College offers, under the new program, the inclusive fees for the year, which amount to twelve hundred dollars, allowing seven hundred dollars for tuition and five hundred dollars for room and board. Scholarship funds are awarded in varying amounts up to five hundred dollars on the basis of ability and need to students who are unable to meet the regular charges. Application for scholarship adjustment should be made to the Committee on Scholarships.

Candidates for admission are selected primarily on the basis of quality of their preparatory school record and the recommendation of the principal. Preference is given to those applicants, otherwise qualified, who present evidence of marked ability in some broad field of study, such as the natural sciences and mathematics, languages and literature, or social studies and history. The entering class is limited to seventy-five students. Bard College is designed for young men who are prepared to undertake responsible work along the lines of their own abilities in the field of liberal arts and sciences.

Circumstances Are Considered
Black Mountain, located in North Carolina, offers an attractive scholarship for any qualified student, man or woman, who has not yet been to college.

The value of the scholarship will range from $200 to $1200, according to the individual circumstances of the successful candidate.

The final date for receiving applications will be April 15, 1936.

A number of exceedingly attractive scholarships is being offered by Armour Institute. This college will award five one-year scholarships to the male graduates of February, 1936, from accredited public or private high school. These scholarships provide free tuition for second semester of the academic year of 1936-37 and the first semester of 1937-38 (three hundred dollars). The examinations consist of (1) personal interview, (2) written examinations in following subjects: Mathematics, physics or chemistry, and English.

Another scholarship is being offered by the University of Michigan. The students who wish to enter must send in applications to the college in order to arrange for personal interview. All students interested in applying for these various scholarships can read additional information in the front hall bulletin boards.

Campaign For Subscriptions

students read their papers carefully and are, therefore, better prepared when they come to South Side than if they know nothing of its life before entering.

Signs and posters will be placed at points of vantage throughout the school in the near future to remind students to subscribe to the Times this semester. This and the results of the plan in regard to other important business were the topics discussed in a meeting of the circulation staff of the Times held last Friday. The meeting was in charge of John Bex, business manager, and Leona Menze, circulation manager.

It was announced that a reward of $100 would be given to agent who secured the most subscriptions the first day, providing this number is over 42, the number set by last year's winner. Also a theatre party will be given to those agents who have reached 75 percent of their home room at the end of the three-week campaign period. It was also announced that a new circulation assistant had been appointed in addition to the five other ones; she is June Heger.

Last semester the Times had the greatest number of subscriptions in the history of the paper; this semester the goal has been set even higher, and it is hoped that every student in South Side will do his bit to help the staff reach this goal.

Doctor Krauss Is To Deliver Baccalaureate

Graduating Seniors Choose Trinity English Pastor To Talk At June Services.

This year's graduates, several weeks ago in a class-wide poll, chose as their baccalaureate speaker, Dr. Paul H. Krauss, D.D., pastor of the Trinity English Lutheran Church. Dr. Krauss, who came to Fort Wayne fourteen years ago, has come into prominence as a speaker at various occasions, religious, civic, and scholastic. This year's baccalaureate service will be held on Sunday evening, June 7, probably at the Trinity English Lutheran church.

Ever since taking over his charge in this city, Dr. Krauss has delivered baccalaureate sermons for the three high schools. Beginning with 1922, the year of his arrival, he spoke to the graduating class at Central High School. Soon after that year, South Side High School graduated its first class; and Dr. Krauss began speaking at its services. North Side, the newest of the high schools, has also claimed the distinction of hearing Dr. Krauss speak to its graduates. Dr. Krauss has spoken before South Side's graduates four or five times; before Central's, three or four times; and before North Side's, three or four times. South Side's services are the only ones at which he will speak this year.

In speaking of his being chosen for this year's class service, Dr. Krauss said, "I consider it a great privilege indeed to be able to talk to a group of three or four hundred young people. I enjoy it immensely because, first of all, I like young persons; and because I enjoy talking."

Ballot For Driving Open To Students

Held By News-Sentinel In Order To Help Decrease Death Rate In Allen County. Accidents.

Because Allen County contributed thirty-seven lives to swell the national automobile statistics in 1935 and another 768 persons to the list of permanently or temporarily injured, and because in Fort Wayne alone 406 automobile accidents caused the deaths of fourteen persons and painfully injuring 471 others, the News-Sentinel is using the same ballot used by the American Institute of Public Opinion to determine what method the citizens of Allen County would employ to reduce the local annual slaughter. These ballots were passed out to all students at South Side on Wednesday morning.

The ballot of six questions, each of which is to be answered "yes" or "no," follows:

- ☐ Yes ☐ No
- ☐ Strict drivers' tests, including regular physical and mental examinations?
- ☐ Installation of "governors" on cars preventing speeds greater than fifty miles an hour?
- ☐ More severe penalties for violations of traffic laws?
- ☐ Special markings of cars whose drivers have been at fault in accidents?
- ☐ Compulsory automobile liability insurance in every state?
- ☐ Uniform traffic laws and regulations for all states?

Those blanks passed out to the students were to be deposited by the teachers in the ballot box in the office. The results of the poll instituted by the News-Sentinel will be published in the News-Sentinel on Monday, January 27.

Junior Injures Foot

Lois Wyneken, a junior, has three smashed toes as a result of an accident while the Totem picture for Math-Science was being taken. A board fell from the platform on her foot. At first it was believed that the toe was broken, but an X-ray picture proved that it was only smashed. Lois has been attending school on crutches.

Amazing Experiments Shown At House Of Magic Display

Did you ever hear a tube see a ray of light? This and many other amazing deeds were performed last Monday and Tuesday evenings in the General Electric club house. The House of Magic, which was one of the popular features at the Chicago World's Fair in 1933 and 1934, was presented by Mr. Ellis Manning, a research worker in the General Electric laboratories at Schenectady, New York.

Rays Heat Blood Stream

Among the things which Mr. Manning demonstrated was a ray which he said physicians were finding very valuable for producing artificial fever in patients. The ray produces no heat, but is capable of heating the blood streams of human beings. Mr. Manning explained that this use of the ray was discovered accidentally, and, because the experimenters had no idea whether or not it was harmful to people, they shielded the workers very carefully. After experimenting upon small animals, extending the length of the exposure daily, they found that it had absolutely no bad effect upon them. With the help of physicians, they found that it was useful in the capacity stated above. Mr. Manning then performed an amazing experiment by means of the machine dispersing this heatless ray. Putting some popcorn in a glass, he set it on an aluminum plate over the machine. To show that there was no heat around it, he put glasses of cold water around it. In these he dropped ice cubes. Pretty soon the corn began to pop. Mr. Manning explained that this happened in a certain disturbed area around the machine.

Another of the other startling sights was a photo-electric cell which showed the increase and decrease of the amount of light sent out by a light bulb.

One performance was put on Monday evening for employees of the General Electric Company and their families, and another on Tuesday afternoon at 2:30 o'clock.

Plan Amateur Show

Students of Sault Ste. Marie, Michigan, High School are making plans for an amateur show using school talent. If the show is a success it will become an annual fete.

Hold Breakfast Dance

The Dramatic Club in the Illinois State High School held a Breakfast Dance, December 21. Breakfast was served at 9 o'clock. After that Santa Claus came and brought Christmas novelties.

The characters were as follows:

The 9A play, which was in charge of Dorothy Hall, was entitled "Dot Entertains." The characters were: Dot, Dorothy Hall; Thomas Jefferson Cole, Mildred Brett.

The characters were the following: Teacher, Florence Oransky; Aunt Jane, Betty Daniels; Pupils, Betty Neeb, Betty Showalter, Margery Rapp, Peggy Bacon, Lois Rea, Lorraine Iba.

Two members of the club and the sponsor, Miss Peck, gave speeches during the program. Joan Bonsib gave a farewell talk to the 9B's and 9A's in behalf of the 10B girls, who are leaving Meterites. Margery Rapp gave a response to Joan's speech in behalf of the 9B's and 9A's.

Miss Peck gave a talk to the club also. She talked to the 10B's about the requirements for membership in Philo. Awards were given to those 10B girls having earned at least 21 points in Meterites during their membership. The girls receiving these awards were: Helen Cox, Lillian Gunzenhauser, Betty Lee Wilson, Joan Bonsib, Betty Pugh, Ann Peters, and Phyllis Culver.

After the program, the meeting was in charge of Gwendolyn DeWeese, who directed several games.

Noted Teacher Writes Essay About English

Mr. Herman Makey, Instructor Of English Departments, Gives Article.

School Magazine Prints His Article

"The English Teacher Builds Character," Was Subject;
Was In December Issue.

An article by Mr. Herman O. Makey, instructor of English, appeared in the December issue of "The Hoosier School Journal." The content of the article "The English Teacher Builds Character" appears below.

Character

Without doubt, those who claim that one of the major functions of education is the building of good character are correct. There are, however, two widely different views of the way in which this shall be done:
Shall the teacher of English teach English and character? Or shall she teach character by her teaching of English? Is there something inherently character-building in the process of studying English? Or is this an extraneous activity to which should be attached something which will be conducive to the growth of a desirable character? Now, I believe that all true learning of whatever subject is fundamentally a development of the learner's character.

"Since he was worn out and unable to play longer in the field, Cochran was called in to coach the team from the bench," said one of my students in a theme.

"Does this sentence," I asked him,
"develop your topic idea that Cochran had great physical endurance?"

"Although he was still fresh and vigorous at the end of the seventh inning, Cochran was called in to coach the team from the bench," said when the minutes returned the theme a few minutes later.

"Is this true?" I asked the student.
"Well," he replied, evading my question, "it fits the topic sentence now."

Effective Expression Others

This incident reminds me of the remark made by a student preacher in my college. I was tutoring him in English composition and found him, not only uninterested, but violently opposed to the work.

"I don't like to tell lies," he muttered sullenly when I tried to get him to put some life in his themes. Something, I submit, is radically wrong when students get the idea that there need be any divorce between truth and good composition.
Certainly, the teacher of composition who would permit the student to make a misrepresentation of fact in order to make a point in a theme is developing neither good composition nor good character. The prime problem in composition is the effective expression of thought, and nothing so weakens effectiveness as detected falsehood.

I have found that a great many, perhaps most students, when they wish to write an illustration, find it easier to manufacture an illustration than to search their experience for one which they know to be true. I do not claim to catch all such instances, but I do detect most of them. There is something about them which betrays their artificiality, and the student must be made to realize this.
Still more, he must be made to realize that an illustration not based upon reality illustrates, not the idea, but merely the imaginative power of the writer. The purpose of the illustration is to make clearer or to prove the point illustrated; the made-up illustration deceives in both cases. Of course, if the illustration is frankly given as a probability or an imagined case, that is often effective. Here, certainly, is an opportunity for the teacher to build character.

Real Writing Needed

Does this deprive the student of the values of creative writing? No, not at all. Even creative writing should be true—to reality. One of the greatest values of creative writing lies at this very point. Through proper training in creative writing, the student learns to discern truth and falsehood in what he reads. He learns that fiction must be true to human nature, to the facts of life, to the ultimate reality behind appearances. He learns that things seen may be presented in such a way as to be untrue, while things not seen may be so presented as to give real truth.

A second character value to come from proper training in composition is respect for careful work. How many of the faults of student themes come from laziness, indifference, carelessness? When the student can get by with shoddy work, when he does get by with shoddy work, is this of no effect upon his character? Certainly it is effective character training to learn that the right word, the right turn of a phrase, the right organization are more effective than the hasty unreviewed first choice of slipshod work.

Rules Have Place

There is a place, of course, for rules, for definite routines; but desirable character can never be built upon anything but opportunities to use or-ginality. This means that the teacher of composition must teach fundamental principles and then give the student opportunities to use them.

Practically all composition exercises should be original in the sense that they call for the student to use general instructions in concrete situations. The student must feel that he mere fact that his view does not coincide with the teacher's will not lower his grade. He must not be penalized because he is imaginative and the teacher literal-minded, or matter-of-fact and the teacher fanciful, or interested in science and the teacher enthusiastic only over questions of style.

He must not be given models for any purpose other than establishing directional and exploratory lines of thought. Stevenson and Franklin both used models, but they did not allow the models to stifle their personalities. Comprehension may be gained through the use of models with much advantage to the student, but the teacher must beware of making them straight-jackets. The student must be led to express his thoughts in his way. Where the expression is ineffective, he should be guided in improving it. Grammar, rhetoric, punctuation function here, but with purpose.

Promptness, neatness, consideration for others (in the preparation of manuscript, choice of subject, point of view, choice of detail), and other elements which go to make up good character will suggest themselves to the teacher.

Literature Develops Character

In literature, also, the English teacher has infinite opportunity to develop character. One day, when we were studying "A Tale of Two Cities," quite a discussion arose as to whether Madame Le Farge was vengeful. I insisted that Dickens, who had created the character, knew more about her than anyone else and that whatever view we took should be based upon what he had told us about her.
Since the students' ideas seemed to be based more upon their own conceptions of Madame Le Farge than upon a knowledge of Dickens' characterization, I suggested that we postpone the argument till the next day, when each student was to present evidence from the book to support his view.
After the class, one of the leaders in the argument stopped a moment.

"Do you mean that we are to prove our side by reference to the story?"
he asked.

"Yes."

"Then I think I'll lose out," he said
shamefacedly.

Another Example Given

Another class was studying "Silas Marner." When Godfrey's conduct was being considered, some one remarked that poor people were good and rich people were bad.

"Do you believe that?" I asked.

The class agreed.

"Well," I suggested, "let's see. Over here, we'll put down the names of really poor people you know; and, over here in this column, we'll put the names of rich people you know."

When Rockefeller and Ford were suggested for rich people, I refused to include them, as the students knew these men only by hearsay. After we had several people in each list, I asked for the students' judgement of each. When we had finished, the class had convinced itself without any argument from the teacher that some poor people are bad and that some rich people are good. Was there no training in character here? Yet it was wholly within the range of the teaching of "Silas Marner."

Sayings, Circumstances Related

The student who takes a word or phrase from its context and builds an idea from that without considering the context is a potential gos-siper of the worst sort. While studying "Lancelot and Elaine," I asked a student what change had come over

Supervised Study Taken Up In 1933

Plan Varies In Many Subjects;
Purpose Was To Make Pupils'
Work Easier, More Effective.

In the fall of 1933, supervised study was first introduced in South Side. Its fundamental purpose is not to make the work of the pupil easier, but to make the work more effective. Since we have had supervised study, it has been proved that there is no less studying to be done, but that the results obtained from this form of study are greater. This plan was not chosen to make the receiving of an education any easier; because an education is received only as a result of untiring effort.

The plan varies in the use of different subjects studied. The same is not used at the beginning of a unit of work as that used when reviewing the unit.

The pupil should not expect the time to be evenly divided between study and recitation all of the time, but generally it will be over a semester of work.
Usually the recitation will come at the first part of the period, and the studying can be done while the subject is fresh in the pupil's mind. During the study period, the pupil may discuss any part of his work that he does not understand. The teacher offen gives work sheets to find out how much one has received from the lesson.

Much of the value of supervised study comes from the opportunity afforded by the teacher to give more detailed and explicit assignments. The work that must be done will be more definite; the main parts of the lesson will be pointed out; and the lesson will be made easier.

Generally, all pupils do not have the same knowledge on the same subject. Because of this, each pupil will not have to put the same amount of study on each subject; but more on some and less on others.

The supervised study period furnishes an opportunity for the teacher to discover what information the pupil possesses on the subject. This will enable the teacher to help the pupils on their weakest subjects.

Lancelot's appearance since he had pledged friendship with Arthur. The student replied that his face had been marred by wounds received in battle.
"It says, 'in battle . . . had marred his face,'" he urged in support of his answer.

The passage he was considering read,

"The great and guilty love he bare the queen,
In battle with the love he bare his lord.
Had marr'd his face, and mark'd it ere his time."

This, I find, is one of the most common of all errors in reading—taking a part of a passage and ignoring the remainder. Surely, it is a step in the development of a desirable character to learn that what people say and write must be interpreted in connection with the circumstances of its utterance.

Character Training Is Inevitable

Of course, the greatest source of character development from the study of literature is the result of feeling the emotions of the characters and the author's comprehension and consideration of the ideas expressed, and the judgements the reader makes upon characters and situations. To comprehend others is the road to most of the Christian virtues.

All in all, no other subject offers so much opportunity for character development as does English. This is not to be secured by moralizing or by telling of right conduct; rather, it is to be gained by active vicarious experience, both in the reading of literature and in creative writing, and by the requirements of good reading, writing, and speaking. Character is neither developed nor displayed in a vacuum; it is the product of experience with life situations and is displayed in connection with life situations. If the teacher of English is properly concerned primarily with the subject matter of his course, true teaching will inevitably develop the character of his students in a desirable way.

are permitted to enter the building by the front door reason, the main entrance re-

So-Si-Y Presents Skit At Assembly

Shows Scene Of Accident, Trial;
Pep Session Is Held Later;
Try New Methods Of Yells.

An assembly in the form of a communion pep session and safety program was held in the gymnasium Friday morning, January 10. After a selection by the band, Dalton McAlister introduced the president of So-Si-Y, Anna Bremer, who explained the nature of the program the club was about to present.

The skit presented by So-Si-Y was in two acts. The first act was at the scene of the accident in which a tiny car operated by Helen Doenges went through the green light at 35 to 40 miles an hour and struck the pedestrian, who was crossing the street.
Witnesses helped the unfortunate pedestrian off the street, and then the second act occurred in the court room.

After the entrance of the judge,
Leona Menze; the clerk, Geneva Shear er swore in the twelve members of the jury. Martha Franz, the sheriff, brought in the defendant, who took the stand. The case proceeded with Ruth Berning, as defending attorney, and Betty Jean Bond as prosecuting attorney. Witnesses were called for the defense who were Ruth Goeglein and Eleanor Schremser.

The negro witness for the plaintiff then was called. This part was taken by Fay Bechtold. The jury then mentally retired and decided the case in favor of the plaintiff, the decision being that a person operating a car and driving at 35 to 40 miles per hour while going through the green light was more in the wrong than a person walking against the green.

The stage was then cleared while the band played another selection. The pep session started with the usual
"Gazella" and the school song. Warren
Zelt, the new cheer leader, surprised everyone by leading this yell with his feet. A new version of "fifteen rahs for the team" was then first yelled by the band and then by the whole school.

Also a different idea was used in putting across the locomotive. After cheers led by the rest of the crew of cheer leaders, the assembly was closed with the singing of the school song.

Library Valuable Asset To School

Miss Shoup, Who Has Now Been With School For Five Years,
Has Been Help To Students.

The library is one of the main parts in the school. All of the students are permitted to use it during the study periods.

Miss Shoup, who has been with the school for five years as a librarian, has been a great aid in helping students to pick out books pertaining to school work. Miss Shoup made the statement that out of the 6,000 books (approximately the amount of books in the library), the most called for are the English and social science books.
About 125 books in the library are owned by the school. Two-thirds of these books are fiction.

Some Rules Given

Some of the juniors who have helped this semester will continue their work next semester, also. Miss Shoup requested all of those who wished to work in the library to place their applications with her last spring. From this group, she selected the ones she wished to use.

From 7:45 in the morning until 4 o'clock in the afternoon, the library is open for use during the study periods or after school.

Miss Shoup has suggested that the following rules be enforced in connection with the library:

Anyone in school is permitted to borrow at one time as many books as are needed to help with the school work.
If a book is not returned before 8:05 o'clock on the day that it is stamped due, a fine of five cents for that day and every other day that it is over-due will be charged.

Books of fiction should be returned within two weeks without the privilege of renewal.

Most supplementary and reference books may be kept out only one night or one period.

Rules Are Given

When one comes to the library to study for the whole period, he should sign his name and his seat number on his permit slip and should then remain the entire period to do library work only, or return to the study hall when he has finished all reference work necessary.

Students are to remain in the library only one period unless they are carrying more than one subject that requires reference work, in which case permission for entering the library the second period may be obtained from the librarian.

Mathematics and shorthand may not be studied in the library since these subjects do not require library books, except in special cases.

Junior-Math Election To Be Held Tuesday

All freshman and sophomore students who are interested in becoming members of Junior-Math Club are cordially invited to attend the first meeting which will be held tomorrow,
January 28, at 3:20 o'clock in the Voorhees Room.

For the first time in the history of this club, 10A's will be eligible for membership, too.

An election of officers for the new semester will be held. This meeting will be mainly for organization.
A play, "The Eternal Triangle," will be given by members of the program committee. The director is Grace Collins, the players are Allen Garrison, Nora Mae Bradbury, and Clarence Helmsing.

Who Am I? What Am I? Puzzles Seniors Filling Questionnaires

Identification blanks were filled recently during the home room period by the seniors for their identification in the Totem. They gave their name, nickname, other high schools they had attended, other cities where they had attended school, clubs that they belong to, the positions they hold or have held in these clubs, honors they have won, and other activities, such as sports, debating, publication, and music.

They filled out another questionnaire for a special page in the Totem which will contain the results of the voting and also pictures of the winners. Opposite each characteristic listed, they wrote the name of the senior boy or girl whom they thought best known for that characteristic.
The results will be kept secret until the Totem is published. Their opinions were asked on the following, the most popular boy, the most popular girl, the most capable, the one most likely to succeed, the most versatile, the most original, the most perfect gentleman, the most perfect lady, the one with the biggest drag with the faculty, the one who needs a drag most, the biggest lady-fusser, the biggest woman-hater, the biggest bluffer, the best dressed, the funniest, the busiest, the vainest, the one who has done the most for the school, the best-looking boy, the best looking girl, the cutest, the most studious, the most bashful, the best boy athlete, the best girl athlete, the biggest talker, the best personality, the sport you like best to watch, the sport you like best to play, the thing you like most to do in high school, the school's greatest need, and your pleasantest year.

One Room School Rapidly Declining

Many Disadvantages Are Seen
In Maintenance of "Little Red School House" System.

The "little red schoolhouse" is rapidly and steadily disappearing in Indiana. Since 1900 the number has been decreasing a considerable amount each year. If this rate continues, one-teacher schools will be very rare
at the end of the next decade.

With improved roads and better means of transportation, it seems likely that the rate of decrease may be even greater during the next few years. However, it must be remembered that in some of the sparsely-settled sections a number of one-teacher schools may continue for many years. The average registration of these schools is around fifteen or twenty pupils per school.

Many towns have taken advantage of better roads and improved means of transportation to improve the one-teacher schools that have been retained.
This has been done by providing for only a limited number of grades in one school. For example, a town having two such schools may assign grades one to four to one school, and grades five to eight to the other.

The educational offerings of one-room rural schools are generally inferior to those of fully-graded schools.
The equipment is inadequate, the number of pupils in any grade is too small for competitive interest, social contacts are limited to a few neighboring families, and the services of special teachers can seldom be provided. With small enrollments one-room schools are costly to maintain.
The one-room rural school has a small place in any system of equalized education. The yearly reduction in this number is a sign of educational progress in Indiana.

Custodian Changed To Harrison Hill School

Mr. W. N. Mason, the custodian formerly in charge of South Side's gymnasium, has been changed to the Harrison Hill School where he will take over his new duties. His place is being filled by Mr. Dennis Gerlach.

The promotion given Mr. Mason was the reward for his outstanding efforts toward keeping the gym in excellent condition. He has been a member of South Side's custodian staff since the opening of the building in 1922. His appearance around school will be greatly missed by all students.

However, Dennis Gerlach, the newly appointed caretaker of the gym, finds this job very agreeable and promises to attempt to follow in his predecessor's footsteps. Although he is a Central graduate, he will try to be a booster for the Archers from now on. He is acquainted with several of South Side's faculty members because he had them as teachers when he attended James H. Smart School.

“Wimpys” Rate As Favorite Among Patrons Of Cafeteria

Food, food, everywhere. Where? Up the north incline at the cafe. And here are some answers to the question: “What is your favorite dish served at our cafeteria?”

Margaret Green, the first victim, replied: “Good old ham-burgers!”

Miss Eleanor Smeltzley, South Side's petite little pedagogue, said: “The salads are very nice, especially the dressing.”

Mr. Maurice Murphy, a patron of high standing, said in answer: “I am not particular. ‘Daddy’ always made us eat what was set before us.”

The honorable governor from North Carolina, James Smoak, Esq., told us that “Wimpys” rated high with him. He is disappointed, though, because they do not carry in stock his favorite brand of long, black cigars.

Question: “Mr. Bex, what dishes do you prefer in the cafe?”

John: “I don't know. I never eat dishes in the cafeteria.” (Where do you eat them, John?)

Lillian Warren (personal comment): “Fruit salad.”

Margaret Schuster: “Vegetable soup.”

Helen Parker (third of the trio): “Plenty of hamburgers, boy.”

Marjorie “Shorty” “Mush” Meyers: “I like my ‘Wimpys’ dressed fit to kill, onion, pickle, and lettuce, both.”

Lois Nessel seems to like Brown Giants pretty well, but then who doesn't?

Johnny Hines (we found out his name) and the unknown man both said: “We don't eat.” (They were so shy we couldn't find out their names.)

Ruth Kaiser: “Fruit salad.”

Rosemary Jones, the unusual girl, likes pineapple pie.

And then we asked that he-man of all he-men, Cliff Schrom, and guess what he said. “Make it milk.” (Notice his complexion.)

Russel Long, much to our surprise, replied: “Pie.”

Bicyclists Should Fill In Registration Cards

Registration cards must be filled out by all boys who intend to ride bicycles to school. Mr. Verne Flint in room 138 has these cards, and any boy wanting them must see him this week.

Special rules for all bicyclists are as follows:

1. Keep your bicycle locked while it is parked at school.

2. Remove all accessories that you do not need on your bicycle and especially those which are easily detached.

3. It would be advisable to put the number which is on your registration card on the frame of your bicycle. (This is not obligatory.)

4. You may enter the building by any door before 8 A. M. At any other time enter only by the east door on the south end of the building.

5. When you return to the bicycle yard during the day, be as quiet as possible, so teachers and classes will not be disturbed.

Miss Montgomery In Charge Of Absence Slips

As in other years, absence slips will be obtained from Miss Virginia Montgomery in the study hall. An excuse which states the reason for the pupil's absence should be brought from home to obtain these slips. If the excuse is unacceptable, the pupil will receive a pink slip which will not allow the pupil to make up his work which is missed. These slips, for filing purposes, should be signed by the pupil's teachers and returned to the study hall.

Pupils who are tardy should go to the office to receive their tardy slips from Miss Dorothy Alderice.

Hold Novel Sale

The Girls' Club of Missoula High School of Missoula, Montana, held a lost article sale which netted them $14.53. Those who could identify lost articles were charged five-cent redemption fee. The articles not identified were placed on sale at a nominal price.

Faculty And Students Receive Two Years Of Good Service

Two successful years of cafeteria service have been given the faculty and students of South Side under the direction of Miss Lucy Mellen who continues as cafeteria director this semester. Miss Mellen is also a home economics instructor here.

“This year, as heretofore, the South Side Cafeteria will be run with the one purpose in mind, namely, to serve clean, wholesome meals at the lowest possible prices, and co-operate with school organizations,” stated the cafeteria head.

Courteous Staff Works

The cafeteria staff is composed of the director, Miss Mellen, four cooks, and students who work in the cafeteria to earn their lunch. The helpers are picked on the basis of their health, knowledge, and ability. The student assistants are instructed to give the patrons courteous and efficient service. Workers besides receiving their meals, also get valuable experience from this line of activity.

Miss Mellen plans the menus for the meals which consist of soups, vegetables, meats, salads, and desserts. In addition to this a large variety of sandwiches and candy may be purchased at the candy stand.

Public Is Invited

“The public is invited to patronize South Side's cafeteria whenever they find it convenient to come,” stated Miss Mellen in answer to questions as to whether or not the cafeteria is open to general use.

As the cafeteria can not be run entirely by the staff alone, the co-operation of the student body and public is asked in order that it may be a clean, pleasant place to eat. Suggestions and complaints are welcome if they are brought directly to Miss Mellen.

Science Club Honored

The Catalyzers, a science club of Bowen High School, Chicago, were honored by having as their guests representatives of Squibbs and Sons, manufacturing chemists. A lecture was given and two films of the company's laboratories and processes employed were shown.

Clubs Must Have Permit For Use Of Cafeteria

Permission for the use of the cafeteria by any club must be secured from Miss Pittenger or Mr. Snider and then from Miss Mellen. A dollar must be deposited with Miss Mellen on the day preceding the affair. A club officer is responsible for the way the cafeteria is used and left. If help is desired, it may be had for thirty-five cents an hour; if not, the refreshment committee of the club is to take charge and see that it is left in perfect order. The club that uses the cafeteria must pay for any damage done, and the privilege of using the cafeteria may also be taken from them.

Dancers Plan Routine Of “I Dream Too Much”

Great plans were made at the last meeting of the Dancing Club. The girls have decided to perfect their dance, a comedy ballet from the moving picture “I Dream Too Much,” so that they will be able to give it for the G. A. A. vod-vil next month. The plans made so far promise us a very attractive dance as the girls are planning to be clad in formals and give plastic movements while one girl sings the song “I Dream Too Much.”

Moving Pictures Shown

Movies are shown during the noon hour of the South High School in Omaha, Nebraska. Some of the attractions are “Little Men,” “Jane Eyre,” and “This Band Age.”

Teachers Give Their Tribute To Noted Poet

Several Kipling Selections
Are Included In English
Curriculum At South Side

Personal Comments On Kipling Given Members Of English Faculty Comment On Excellence Of Rudyard Kipling Work

Although Rudyard Kipling, outstanding English author of poems, short stories, and novels, has passed from this earth, his vigorous writings will be with us forever. No doubt his residence in Bombay, India, had much to do with the source of inspiration for many of his writings pertaining to the people and animals of that country.

South Side English courses include a few of his writings such as: Doin' Stories, Stalky and Company, Bulladoes of East and West, and Barrack Room Ballads.

As a tribute to him, the English teachers have written a personal comment about him. Most teachers said that he ranked very high among their favorite authors. The following statements were the ones written in his honor by some of our teachers:

Kipling's prose and poetry have been the delight of a great number of people, both the old and the young, in many lands. He will live on and on for years to come in the hearts of his admirers.—Susan Peck.

We do not have very much of Kipling in our course of study, but that does not mean that we do not know his worth. There are so many good authors that each can be given only his little share.

Teachers Give Opinions

Personally, I have liked Kipling very much ever since I read The Light That Failed years ago when I was in high school. I expect my favorite prose is Plain Tales of the Hills.—Benjamin Null.

We, the English speaking people, are proud to pay tribute to Rudyard Kipling, a writer who represents in an admirable way the spirit of his age. He has caught the spirit of the British Empire yet he has been able to rise above imperialism, and it did not make him blind to worth-while qualities in men, wherever found.—Grace Welty.

It has been said of Kipling that he was perhaps the most-loved and the most-hated of the living writers. However, his bitterest foes will have to admit that he has a gift for telling stories charmingly and a seemingly magic ability to choose words that can not be surpassed. I first learned to know Kipling's writings from his fascinating Just So Stories which I still enjoy reading. Kipling's writing, I believe, appeals to many types of people; that is a secret of much of his popularity.—Rosemary DeLancey.

Kipling was and is one of my favorite poets. He has immortalized the English soldier. Who can not hear the march of the soldiers in "Boots! Boots! Boots! Boots!" Who does not admire Gunga Din, who was a "better man than I am?"

Boys Admire Kipling

As a writer of short stories, no writer is more admired by boys than Rudyard Kipling. He has revealed to the reader the animal life and life of a British soldier in India as no other writer has done.

It is to be regretted that he made some remark about Queen Mary, which I understand prevented his being made Poet Laureate of England. I have also heard that his dislike for

Philo Pep Meet Will Be Held On February 3

Musical Held January 16;
Cello, Harp, Organ, Voice,
Are Program Features.

Many Philalethians, alumni, and guests attended the Philo Musical which was held on Sunday, January 26, at the home of Miriam Lickert on Webster Street. Singing, violin, organ, harp and piano made up the program.

Helen Flaig, who is the music chairman for Philo, was in charge of the affair. The first number on the program, she announced, would be an organ and harp duet by Avanel Glass and Miriam Lickert.

This very impressive opening number, Voix Celeste by Bastiste, was followed by the singing of the Philo quartet. Members of the quartet are Ruth Fritz, Harriet Yapp, Sybil Knudsen, and Helen Flaig. They sang "Dark Eyes" and "Let Me Call You Sweetheart."

A violin solo by Mary Jo Allen was next on the program. She was accompanied at the piano by her sister, who was a former student at South Side High School.

Organ Solo Featured

One of the most impressive parts of the evening's program was the playing of the organ by Avanel Glass. She played "Song Without Words" by Deshayes and "The Storm" by Bastiste. During the playing of these two numbers the audience sat motionless, thoroughly enjoying the music sent out by the organ under the skillful hands of Avanel Glass.

A harp duet by Miriam Lickert and Helen Flaig followed the playing of the organ. They played "Believe Me" by Moor and "Trauerlied" by Schumann.

Ruth Ann Larimore, a very prominent South Side alumna, sang several selections. Miss Larimore, while at South Side, was very much interested in the activities of Philo and has continued to be since graduating from South Side. She sang "The Ships" by Poor and "All The World's In Love" by Woodman.

Refreshments Served

Concluding the evening's musical program there was the fine combination of the cello, harp and organ played by Betty Lickert, Avanel Glass, and Miriam Lickert.

Refreshments were served and a very happy social hour followed.

The next meeting of the Philalethians will be held on Monday, February 3. This will be the Philo pep meeting, and all who are interested in becoming a member are asked to come at this time. The president, Ruth Adler, will preside, and she will be assisted by the newly-elected officers. They are, vice-president, Mary Martha Hobrock; secretary, Ruth Girl Reserve Clubs' Council Meets At Y.W.

Held Conference On Jan. 23;
Reports, Program, Talks
Feature All-Day Session.

Approximately seventy-five new and old cabinet members of the six high school Girl Reserve chapters of the city attended the all-day conference of the Inter-Club Council on Thursday, January 23, at the Y. W. C. A. building.

The Wheatley Center Girl Reserves' quartet, composed of cabinet members of the Wheatley Center chapter, opened the morning session of the confab by singing "The Lord Is In His Holy Temple," "I Would Be True," and "I'm Gonna Shout All Over God's Heaven." Miss Margaret Jones, new girls' secretary of the Y. W. C. A., and Anna Bremer, former president of So-Si-Y, both presented short welcoming talks. After several introductory remarks by Marybelle Gallmeyer, outgoing council president, reports from the various chapters' activities were given by Fay Bechtold, So-Si-Y; Julia Crabbill, U. S. A.; Jane Holman, Wheatley Center; Margaret Johnston, Polar-Y; Lillian Hartman, Friendship; and Kathleen McKay, C. T. C.

Luncheon Is Served

Following the various chapter reports, Miss Zeah Hienbaugh, general secretary of Y. W. C. A. work, talked on program building for club work. Miss Hienbaugh gave as the objectives which a club should strive for, a job, friends, hobbies, church, and a purpose in life.

After the morning session, luncheon was served to the council members, executive board of the Y. W. C. A., and the chapter advisers in the "Stockade," dining room of the "Y." The menu consisted of city chicken, creamed potatoes, green beans, perfection salad, hot rolls, milk, coffee, and chocolate pudding.

Mrs. Snider Talks

The afternoon session was opened by an informal talk by Mrs. R. Nelson Snider, president of the Fort Wayne Y. W. C. A., on "How Girls Can Be Most Alive." Following Snider's address, election of the council's new officers was held. The new council cabinet members are: president, Virginia Greiner of So-Si-Y; vice-president, Jane Holman of Wheatley Center; secretary, Kathleen McKay of Central's Friendship Club; and treasurer, Vivian Walborn of North Side's Polar-Y.

Outgoing officers of the council are Marybelle Gallmeyer of North Side, president; Ann Tucker of Central, vice-president; Alice Coleman of Wheatley Center, secretary; and Verna Holtman of South Side, treasurer.

Following several announcements regarding the "Lollipop Hop" which was given on Thursday evening and the annual G. R. tournament dance to be held at North Side in March, the meetings were adjourned. Regular meetings of the council are to be held as usual on the first Thursday evening of each month at the Y.

School Lost, Found Department Useful To School Students

Many of the pupils seemed to be excited during the first day of the new semester. The lost and found department of South Side proved very valuable to many students who lost money or articles. About five pocketbooks containing money were found and returned to the owners. The most money which was found in these pocketbooks was seven dollars, the smallest amount being one dollar and seventy-five cents.

Miss Pittenger is sorry to report a loss of money which was tied in a handkerchief which was not recovered. For many the money is difficult to get. If the finders could witness the joy and relief that pupils manifest when they recover their lost property, they would be repaid for any trouble that the retrieval cost them.

Miss Pittenger appreciates the fine help the great majority of books, notebooks, pens, pencils, gloves, mittens, caps, galoshes, belts, and jewelry are lost. In many cases when a student loses something, he reports it and never returns to see if the article was found. Then, when the article is found it is reclaimed.

Plan Senior Dance

In order to keep the senior dance of Piedmont High School, Oakland, California, strictly a class affair, the names of the seniors are written on slips of paper and placed in a hat. Then each one draws his partner for the evening.

Dignified Seniors Give Advice To Benefit Bashful Freshmen

If it is true that one may profit by another's experience, freshmen, take some advice that those dignified seniors gave after they had gone through the trials which are offered at South Side. After all, seniors were once members of that cradle class who are now at our school and therefore they really know the feelings of the newcomers. General advice which we offer to you is to forget that you are freshmen and try to act like upperclassmen. If any of you 9B's run against some difficulty, ask some of the following who are just too anxious to help you through your high school days:

Bernadette Dygert—Don't join too many clubs, but join the ones in which you are most interested. There are a lot of good ones.

Maxine Roth—Always keep in mind which is the girls' locker room and which is the boys'; this saves some embarrassment.

Warren Zelt—Freshmen should be seen and not heard.

Virginia Greiner—Don't ever do anything that I wouldn't do.

Dick Helm—As you enter these massive portals of elementary education, make it your utmost endeavor to obtain from your high school career an exceedingly fertile store of that essential to future success.

Merle Norris—Stay away from seniors and elevators.

Wayne Bennett—Always act like ladies and gentlemen and follow your superiors.

Kenny Scott—When you see us cosmopolitan seniors floating through the hall don't lose hope—you will get there some time (too soon, in fact).

Ruth Rose—Can't be bothered with giving such valuable advice to those young freshmen.

Edith Ann Schaaf—Don't let seniors worry you, cause they don't know any more than you do.

Vernal Meyers—Keep cool and collected 'cause if you don't, everyone will know you're a freshman.

Morgan Harrison—Always laugh at Ward Oscar Gilbert's humorous (?) jokes.

Freddie Meyers—Keep off my feet in the locker room.

Campaign For Times Goal Of 1500 Started

Nearly Four Hundred Sign
For School Publication;
Expect To Gain Goal Soon

218 Subscriptions
Obtained First Day

Ruth Garrison Wins Dollar
For Most; Helen Kelsey
Wins Second Place, 50c.

The second semester subscription campaign was successfully started with a total number of 218 subscriptions pulled in Monday afternoon by 1 o'clock. Immediately after classes on Monday the various agents were sent throughout the halls to solicit subscriptions from any South Side student or teacher. The circulation assistants, Julia Crabbill, Jane Hager, Eleanor Vesey, Ruth Henline, Ina Claire Chappell, and Helen Anderson acted as stimulants for the home room agents and also took in money in the Times room.

Prize Is Offered

The prize of one dollar was offered to the agent who acquired the highest number of subscriptions over 25, and this was won by Ruth Garrison, who solicited 37 subscriptions. Helen Kelsey also brought in quite a number of subscriptions and took second place. She had 23 subscriptions. Others who brought in a high number of subscriptions were Ruth Goegelein, Florence Oranski, Julia Crabbill, and Ruth Henline. Money was taken in the Times room by Leona Menze, circulation manager.

By Wednesday afternoon, at 4 o'clock a sum total of 300 subscriptions for the Times was recorded out of the desired 1500, set as the campaign goal. Because of the stream of incoming freshmen, many upperclassmen were changed to different home rooms, and this necessitated changing some of the agents who previously were in some other home room. New freshmen home rooms were established in 78, 72, 8, 85, and 30. Agents for several home rooms, which are now freshmen will be added upon recommendation of the teacher. This is the present completed list of home agents.

Sonia Velkoff's "All In A Day's Work" Is First Prize Essay

"I am Recklessness. I lead people to destruction. I am very heartless and love to see these funny mortals killed and destroyed because of their own carelessness. My two closest friends and co-workers are Death and Speed. Often two or three of us go together on our gruesome trips. We have worked together for many, many years, but I think we have done most of our clever destruction in this modern era. Good old Drunkenness has been our faithful ally, too. You see, nowadays we can work much easier because there are so many high-powered cars, trucks, and trains. Death and I have set a high goal for victims this year. Our enemies, Safety and Sobriety, are trying to fight us, but their progress is very slow because most of the foolish mortals are playing right into our hands.

"Not so long ago, Speed, Death, and I were recalling some of our more interesting escapades. How well I remember the exciting New Year's Eve spent last year. Death and I were hovering around waiting for something interesting to happen when we spied that big car of rollicking, drunken boys careening up the icy street. Death looked up at me and waved his bony hand. That was the signal for action. Silently, we raced after them. I sat beside the youthful driver and helped him drive. Speed then joined us and helped the big car move forward at a more rapid pace. Death sat on the hood of the car and leered at them. We had a fine time. Drunkenness joined in and soon the visions and senses of those boys were very dulled. They laughed and joked and drank and drove faster and faster, while we four uninvited guests sat by and waited for the inevitable. I think the driver saw it first—a huge, white post of the bridge coming from out of the darkness right at the car. In the back of his mind, the vision of Safety must have held up a warning hand, for he tried to swerve, but it was too late. There was an awful crash; and, when we looked again, we saw six horribly mutilated bodies strewn in the road. None of them moved. Death and I shook hands. We had done a good job. Then there was the time when Death lost the race, but we won the game. Just the name! A beautiful girl with golden hair climbed into her high-powered roadster and started out on a pleasure jaunt with a handsome young friend. She did not seem the kind of person in whom I would be interested; but, as she drove at sixty miles an hour through the busiest part of town, I became interested and beckoned Death and Speed to follow me in the road. Her golden hair turned over her own blood. Death stood over her and waited to claim her. However, she lived, but her face is one great, gruesome scar which will always remind her of her carelessness. Oh, yes. We scored again. I played a clever trick on a conceited old man not so long ago. He said he did not care anything about traffic rules—that he could beat the law any time. Safety tried to show him his mistakes when she had one of his friends argue with him and try to tell him that he was wrong. But, of course, I was with the old fellow. He ran a red light one night, and his machine collided with another car. One of the occupants was killed, and now the old man is in jail facing a charge of manslaughter. Safety is slowly losing out. She will have to stage a very great comeback if she wishes to save more of her funny human beings.

Victims' Graves Are Endless

"The other night, my ever-present colleague, Death, and I witnessed a very heartening sight. We took a walk on a very dark and lonely country road. All of a sudden, we saw the entrance to a cemetery right before us. There on the hillside were thousands upon thousands of white crosses marking the graves of our victims! They were endless. What a harvest Death had reaped! We could have walked all night, and we would never have seen the end of those silent markers. Just like the crosses in the battlefields of France—row upon row they stood. Only our graveyard was almost three times as large as all those of France. If all my friends and I kept on working together, our total should be very much greater in the next few years. If all the people in the world could see our fine graveyard, maybe they would be more careful. Those fools of mortals, without realizing it, are their own destruction.

"I might go on telling you of our millions of experiences—in towns, cities and in the country all over the world, but very likely you would become very bored with my pleasurable accounts. Anyway, I must leave now because I see Death beckoning to me—a little boy has been hit by a car which did not stop behind a street car. That's another cross in our collection. Well, goodbye, friend. Maybe I will be riding with you someday."

Welcome, Junior Readers

Times circulation has been extended to the junior high schools by the energetic labors of Leona Menze, Ruth Rose, Janice Cross, and Janet Hartman, aided by John Bex, business manager. We still remember what fun it was to get the paper in grade school under a like plan four years ago. The Times has become an institution with Archers; we hope it will be so to our readers "out there."

Poor Kid Brothers

Pity the poor kid brothers and sisters among us, for the transgressions of their preceding relatives shall hang heavily upon them. And if it's not their transgressions, it's sure to be their superiorities.

And here's a tip to teachers: If any kid brother or sister starts acting up, just remind them of bigger relative's merits and demerits. It whets their appetite for railroad spikes.

War Didn't End In '28

We are told that high school pupils had to join the R. O. T. C. and drill after school during the war. Students studied a little book telling what we thought of Germans, President Wilson's war message, the declaration of war, and varied notes.

As the war was expected to last until 1928, everyone had to fill questionnaires asking what students would do if needed. Stuff like driving trains, etc.

"C'est la guerre."

Fine Work, Team

We made a fine comeback in the Central game. One can easily see why Mr. Friddle has a fine reputation among state basketball coaches. The victory was just payment for the bad luck streak before that game.

Few games have topped the excitement that night. We recall a double overtime with Central in the sectional semi-finals several years ago. Central athletes were very disappointed when they lost; one can imagine their feelings in the last game!

Are Taxes Or We Brilliant Scholars Exorbitant?

Charts usually bore us, but there is one in Mr. Wilson's room which interests us. It shows the sources and distribution of Indiana revenues. You have no doubt heard of the horrible gross income and intangibles taxes. Well, exactly 59.5 percent of the gross income tax, or $8,030,200, and 73 percent of the intangibles tax, or $194,569 went to state education the last fiscal year.

To complete the statement, $2,002,029 from local taxing units, $922,390 from investments and fines, and $1,802,681 from liquor taxes, with the $8,824,769 of intangibles and gross income, accumulated the $13,551,869 of state school costs for 1934-35. Education took 22.7 percent of state revenues and highways 22.6 percent, the two leading expenses.

So if parents rave over the exorbitant taxes, they really infer that their children are exorbitant.

The Georgian Period; Twenty-Six Years Around

A World-Wide Cycle

The old order changeth, giving place to the new, the saying says. The whole world right now is giving place to the new.

The recent death of King George V of England, may be called the turning point in history when we are adults. The Victorian and Elizabethan ages were mile posts in world history. The Georgian age may well be.

George's twenty-six years saw the English Empire more strongly unified as transportation and communication progressed. The United States became a world power. The English race mastered the world.

George began and ended with a cycle. Teddy Roosevelt's reforms in George's first years find their continuation today. The world of 1910 was preparing for war. The world prepares today.

We stand at the cross roads again today. Great and lasting changes are coming, the world will never again be the same. We are privileged to grow with them.

Carrying On

With Beanie Dygert

Wo-oh-oh-oh-oh is me, for in one of my very weakest of "week" moments, I consented to "carry on" this. Would it be fair if I told that Martha Zelt and Bill Bon-sib, Betty Rose Lehman and Bill McLeish, Peggy Kilpatrick and Bill Korte were among those having a gay time? Among other frolicking pairs were Betty Jaebek and Paul Geary, Maxine Howard and Art Scott, Juanita Wolford and Bud Mahurin, and Vera Mosel and Bob Robinette. Polly Borton, as the fans would have it, thinks a certain very active member of our school is quite all right. He "shoots" people; but let us take everything we hear with a grain of salt.

Bob Zeig's young brother was seen in front of his house salting the ice by means of a very very fancy glass salt shaker which would just about sift out a grain of salt with three or four shakes. Sometimes we wonder. By the way, "Happy Birthday, Bill Wilson." You were not forgotten, were you? Dorothy Crabill entertained with a party including a couple of old South Siders—remember Max Tritch and Pauline Crabill? Martie Hobrock and Wayne Bennett were also there. Wenny Boodhull, Whuck Chorden, and Kill Bruse are all rating Bean Jollman these days. Hmmm, something sounds queer, but then the sals say it's so. Kudy Jroeff, Virginia Vreiner, and Dloyd Lolan make a fine example of a triangle.

At present over the radio I am hearing, "You're gorgeous, you're gorgeous, you're gorgeous," and so far into the night. "Gorgeous" reminds me of several things: Robert Browning's poem, "My Star"; anybody's friendly smile; our news editor, Ruth Garrison's personality; the friendship between Ann Abett and Joanne Smith—Did you ever see an hour pass in four seconds? Well, I did. Of course, when one is having a gorgeous time, hours seem to pass that rapidly, but Jean Bollman possesses a watch whose hands actually make an hour fly by in four seconds—five cents a look, please. (Jean and I will put on a freak circus if we find it pays.) What did you think of the Betty Meigs-Bud Jones combination last week-end?

Some of our student's social lives are most baffling for us onlookers, Dick Busch with his fan letters, and four or five girls for dates, June Collins being one of the newest. Just a bit of the old spirit, "June in January." Bon Silene Craig and Vic Nussbaum have been becoming right smart friends of late. Soon Virginia Vesey will be bidding Irene Marshall "adieu," as Florida is claiming Irene for awhile.

Then there's the chemistry shark, Eddie Leitz, who chants very intelligent things in room 12, such as, "No trees, no bees, no flowers, no birds, November." Now we know what Ruth Henline will probably be listening to. Other people are clever, too, Ed. Perhaps you and Fred Meyers would agree, though, that the slogan adopted by the Booster Club, "Sweets to the sweet and cream puffs to the Lettermen," is not such a good one. Ignorance is bliss, but if Morgan only knew why certain people have been "Meowing" at him, I imagine that he would be very much embarrassed. You see, Morgan, Mrs. Harrison has been talking.

It is fun to hear a joke, but it is still more fun to see one in action as someone had the privilege of doing several mornings ago about five minutes of eight; for half a block apart Joe Bex, John Bex, and Mr. C. A. Bex were seen running to school. They seemed to be able runners according to their ages. We wonder whether the alarm did not work that morning or if Mrs. Bex burned the oast and they had to "try, try, again."

SUN AND SEA

Basking With Florida Mud Turtles In Comfort, Typically Southern

Again we're off for Florida, the great winter health resort. This time to Palm Beach. It is a five-hour ride from Tampa to Palm Beach; we cross the state through a wild primitive territory that is much the same as when Ponce de Leon first set his foot upon the Florida shores. Here in these dismal swamps one may hunt for big game. Such animals as puma, antelope, bear, lynx, ocelot and wapita roam the marsh as free as their ancestors did. Suddenly we emerge into a scene of magnificent beauty. Ah, it takes the breath away. In the middle distance is Palm Beach and Lake Worth among tossing palms and towering tourist hotels. On one side of a narrow strip of land is Lake Worth, and on the other side is the Atlantic. The beach resort crowds use the lake more than they do the ocean; however, they use little of either, but instead, lie in steamer chairs and on the beaches sunning themselves like mud turtles!

We won't stay long at Palm Beach, so southward ho to Miami Beach. The city of Miami isn't as popular as "P. B." is, but it has everything in the making to rival Palm Beach. Indeed, Miami is a majestic city. There are plenty of first-class hotels in the city and several good tourist inns are obtainable.

Shaded paths of persimmon trees invite beckoningly, Spanish moss-lawns adorn the hispanic-line boulevards, lined with night clubs, cafes, theatres, shops, apartments and homes. At night when the stars come out, we motor in the moonlight to dance pavilions and dance to the music of Southern jazz orchestras. When we hear the strains of "Moon Over Miami," little do we wonder why the composer wrote such a song.

Who cares whether it's Florida, Santa Catalina, Nassau, Tahiti, Bermuda, Cuba, Hawaii, or South California as long as we may loaf for our own purposes in the comfort and luxury of a king! No coal bills, getting up in the cold in the mornings or inferno summers to worry about in a tropical paradise atmosphere. The flowers bloom the year around in paradise and the weather is always balmy, but brisk. Who cares as long as it's paradise?

Robin Hood's Barn

Jim Dern makes a good father in the Student Players' initiation program, and Georgianna Jacobs isn't a bad mother. Dorothy Crabill won't officially give anyone dirt for a column but if one talks to her for a little while, he can learn anything he wants to know.

It's a good thing that there are people whose last names start with S's. Without them, the Totem would go in the red, for eighty-eight S's have subscribed. Common sights about the Totem office: Bill Bon-sib with his feet on the desk....Dot Crabill filing cards....Marty Hobrock talking to everybody about nothing....Bill Wilson twiddling his thumbs....Wayne Bennett getting in the way of people that are doing nothing....Jean Creighton singing, "I Saw Stars." It is no mystery why South Side always has such good yearbooks.

Why does Juanita Wolford get so excited when she skids around in a car on the ice? She acts like the life is coming to an end when she starts sliding. Take heed, men, and take someone else for a ride when it's slippery. Helen Anderson likes to go on toboggan parties when it is with Bryce Minier. Some other inmates of this institution that enjoy this popular winter sport are Morgan Harrison and Ruth Adler, and Bob Locke and Mary Louise Helms. By the way, somebody actually thinks that "Shoes and Ships" is the most interesting column in the school paper. We don't think so, but what do you think?

Freshmen: Make a good showing in your first years here at the Southern Institution of Higher Fundamentals of Learning. That is important, because it usually determines whether you will enjoy yourself in your stay out here. Bud Schrom, Fred Nye, Gwen Horn, Vera Ellinger, and Ed Kruse made good records as freshmen, and look at them now. Some of the freshest of the underlings were caught making a real start already. One of them was seen trying to hide from an upperclassman in the waste paper container in the front hall. Another one asked a signified senior if the moose head on display was from one that Mr. Snider caught in Africa. Of course, he was told that it was caught in Japan because there are no moose in Africa.

Who thought that John Bex, the timid freshman, would ever be an aggressive ad solicitor? Bob Zeig was always doing something in his younger days that got him into trouble, but he hasn't changed much. Any man can get a girl when he has a car, (Bill Empier); a fair man can get a girl without a car (Bruce Hunt and Marvel Maxwell); but—it takes a mighty good man to get a girl with only a bicycle (John Barnes and Helen Cox). Somebody kindly tell Gene Schwan to not attract so much attention when he goes to sleep in church. The last time Morpheus overtook him, he disturbed the sermon so much by his loud breathing, that the minister tried to wake him by preaching louder than usual. Why doesn't Tom Jaenicke give him instructions on "How To Make Up Lost Sleep in Church Without Ill Effects."

Shoes and Ships

We think that we have never seen some freshies who have been so green. Who walk around the halls all day, And get in everybody's way. Who seem to get a lot of laffs, By walking into the wrong class. Who for the elevators search, Much to the upperclassmen's mirth. Who are assigned eighth periods soon, From getting in wrong locker rooms. And so we say to freshies green, You shouldn't be heard, but only seen.

ORIGINALITY—Bud Jones has just made a good suggestion—that the moocher's song should be "My Times Is Your Times." Thanks Bud, we'll admit you're clever.

GREEN SOPH—Although we always joke and laugh at freshmen who get in the wrong class rooms, we have among us an esteemed soph who enjoys imitating freshmen. Thinking that she was walking into her history class one day, Marjorie Turner accidentally missed the room and made herself comfortable in one of the seats in Mr. Wilson's room. She didn't remain there long, because the part of the class which had arrived burst out laughing, much to her embarrassment.

A MYSTERY—Have you heard of those three famous brewers of magic, the Mesdames Bacon, Wilson, and Lampton who are bestowed with the art of hypnotism? They claim to have taken lessons in this art from one of the leaders at Girl Reserve camp last summer. But, they won't divulge their deep, dark secret, not even to us! One night they were experimenting on Martha Zelt, and even went to the extent of making her moo like a cow.

THE JOKER—We remember when John Bex was a little boy—shall we say, freshman. He always went to all the teachers' picnics with his mamma and papa. But, he was always a nice boy and spent his time telling the little girls jokes. His favorite is the one about the Scotchman who climbed ten flights of stairs in a hotel and then remembered that he had left the key to his room on the first floor. Could we stoop to it!

INGENUITY—During our recent spell of cold weather, everyone nearly froze except young Bobby Storm. He had one grand brainstorm (we think that's a cute pun) about keeping warm in cold weather. Ask him to explain it to you some time.

Our Gift From Rome

The next time you see the sign, Peerless Baking Company, you should remember that company means those who eat bread together. Although this meaning seems very appropriate for a baking concern, it doesn't seem to apply to the Magic Iron Company. Company is traced through the French to the Latin where we find its origin in com, meaning together, and panis meaning bread. A companion, therefore, is one with whom one eats bread and a company is a group of companions. In time, this came to mean a group associated for any purpose whatsoever.

Secrets to Seventeens

PLEASE BE QUIET—Bob, an aspiring youth, finally got a date with Jane. The occasion was the biggest dance of the season. During the first part of the evening, everything went smoothly; in fact, it looked as though they would be going steady very soon. Then Bob, because he was so very happy and naturally a noisy boy, began hollering. Yes, hollering at people on the dance floor and on the sidelines and crooning the songs at the top of his voice. He was, in short, the life of the dance.

Jane's visits to the dressing room became more frequent and longer, and she seemed to keep away from him as much as possible. Once when he yelled a wise-crack at the orchestra, she even seemed ashamed of him. Her evening was spoiled, and it is needless to say that this was their first and last date.

Now boys, the moral to this sad story is don't make yourself the most conspicuous person at a dance and embarrass your girl friend because of your loud remarks.

This applies not only to dances but also to movies. All girls hate to go to the show with someone who claps or makes remarks so loudly that the audience turns around to see this person who has never been to the movies before. One of the worst pests at a basketball game is a lad who over-exercises his vocal organs trying to talk to some friends across the gym. Girls like clever witty fellows, but not the kind who advertise this quality to everyone within hearing distance.

Ear-Burners

Proving again that one bookworm in the family has a definite influence on the rest, Miss Shoup, our excellent librarian, has a sister who works in a branch of our local Public Library. Page the Shoup sisters!

Leaving the credit managing of the Times with many tears and as many grey hairs, Bob Schweitzer has taken a position at the G. E.

In case you've wondered what all this education gets you, look well at the examples of shining lights who took South Side seriously, and now they are, an English teacher and an overseer in the study hall. Their names? Of course, they are Miss Pocock and Miss Montgomery.

Charles Worden (Chuck when he wants to swear mildly) is an amateur chemist of worthy intentions even if his outcomes are not what we would call swell.

If his teachers ever since the sixth grade have had a headache, it's not surprising; because Bud Jones has been pounding drums since he was just eleven, the sweet old thing.

First Margaret broke a tooth; then Marjorie broke a tooth; then Margaret got a scar on her hand; then Marjorie got a scar on her hand. Which brings us logically around to the beginning, and you can't tell Margaret from Marjorie, unless you know the secret.... send us a stamped, self-addressed envelope, and we will reveal it to you. Speaking of the Ruhl twins, of course.

Study Of Latin Enriches Student's Knowledge of English Words

Four Teachers Have Subject In South Side

Mr. Martin W. Rothert, head of the Latin department of South Side, is quoted this week:

"What are the values of Latin to a student in actual living? Besides giving him a cultural background, Latin helps the student to realize that he is an heir of previous civilization, aids in giving him a true perspective of the past, and puts him in direct touch with some of the masterpieces of the race. It also enriches his English vocabulary, is of assistance to him in spelling English words, helps him to appreciate classical allusions in English literature, and is of help to him in pursuing other languages.

"What does South Side's Latin course cover? Four years of work—including the fundamentals of the language, stories in Latin based on mythology and Roman life, selections from Caesar's Gallic war, orations and letters of Cicero, and a part of the Aeneid. In the place of some of the Vergil, Ovid may be substituted; and prose composition is included

Thru The Wringer

Don't be jealous girls, but Eleanor Warren has just had her fifth chance to go steady. This next bit of dirt smells of lavender and old lace it is so naive (oh dear), but here goes. "Remember the boy who was assigned ninth periods for a year for kissing a girl between classes?" Pauline Oetting and Bob Canning should be grateful to Mr. Bell for inventing the telephone, because how else could they hold such long gab fests.

E. Liby is taking advantage of leap year, 'cause she proposed to Melv Bates Saturday night (tattle tale).

Midget characterizations: Gwen Horn—Snip; Bess Lucas—cute; Tom Hern—egotist. South Side's newest and most beautiful discovery: Sophia Bojinoff.

Ronald Mommer is pining away because no one has fixed it up between he and Virginia Gross. We'll bet that Sybil Knudson will go places with her ability. Our nomination for South Side's funniest and best liked stude, Luther Proise.

Eugene Schwan seems to go for sermons so much that he accompanies the preacher by rhythmic snores. Speaking of music, Walter Voyt's theme song should be "Double Trouble." Some brilliant Archer contributors this pun, "Was Vera Jane Wells happy when Bolyard Bobbed up one night? Simile. As unimportant as Paul McConnell finding his heartbeat.

Questionnaire: Who's that tall, dark and handsome hero Dixie Lee Hanna raves about? Who is the little Nell that made Clyde Durbin so happy? Who is this "Wonder Girl" that Jack Eiser (of 113) goes for at Central? Bar would be more appropriate. What makes "Phyllis Hanner" so interested in that Ray S. who brings sunshine into her life? Why is it that O-18 gazes with a dreamy, dippy look on his face at L-10 in the seventh period study?

Red flannel devotee? Then listen: "A linen underwear manufacturer has invented a process to take the itch out of woollens." Mary Ann Park and Winters is a Japanese bridesmaid. "Yap on Jap." Mary Ann Park and her escort arrived at a recent hop to find out it had been postponed.

Martha Lyman might sport a beret and smock any day, because she looks down the hall daily for that esteemed artist, Bud Jones. Ask Donna Lyman why she likes egg omelets. Why pull that when we're almost finished?

Gone Highbrown: Virginia Tulip Vesey, Bob Furcoast Brazy, Bill Blon-dey Epmer, Delbert Extraction (adv.) Leininger, Dorothy Broadcast Durbin.

Nightmare's End

A small keen-eyed, excited inventor sat working studiously over a notebook of papers filled with figures and formulas. After a calculation, he would excitedly mix a solution by directions of his formula and pour it into a compact cylindrical machine grasped in his hand. He would then point the machine and operate it on one of the several boxes of grasshoppers nearby.

This time the grasshoppers died instantly without a sound. He leaped in the air with joy. At last he had succeeded. He had finally discovered the death ray.

Yes, it was a complete success. He was certain of that. Dr. Andrews had spent ten years of his life working on it. He had spent many hours in diligent study and experimentation. Many were the times that he believed he had found the secret, only to find the attempt a dismal failure. The greatest moment of his entire career had come.

In the midst of these joyous dreams the ghastly realities of the invention struck him. (It may seem strange that he didn't think of them before, but he had been so terribly busy every second of each day and night.) He suddenly realized the machine in all its horror. He saw men killing each other off by the power of his ray. He saw the lives of people blotted out instantly. He saw innocent women and children killed in the streets. He saw armies of men go into eternity by one lash of his terrible machine. He saw entire civilian populations wiped out by his creation. He saw the world filled with turmoil and strife. He saw civilization almost obliterated.

He turned pale with these probabilities of what would happen if he released this powerful death ray to the world. He shudderingly looked around and then, gathering up his apparatus, returned to the building. He snatched up his notebook and all his papers and with his machine piled them in a heap in the fireplace. Then he poured gas line over the pile, representing ten years of his hard toil, and unhesitatingly ignited it. He watched it till the last flicker of flame had died out and then with a heavy sigh of relief, he said, "Thank Heaven, that's finished!"

throughout the course." South Side's Latin department is the largest of any of the language departments in the school; it consists of three full-time teachers in addition to Mr. Rothert. They are Mrs. Roy Welty, Miss Alda Jane Woodward, and Miss Gertrude Oppelt.

The Unwilling Vestal Is Most Popular Book

Paul Wooly, Morris Boyce, Bryce Minier Read Most Books During Semester.

With the end of every old semester, a long list of Latin students who sought to better their grades in the classic subject is compiled by Mr. Martin Rothert, head of South Side's Latin department. This year, as usual, "The Unwilling Vestal" leads all other books offered for extra-credit reading in the number of pupils who read it. Approximately twenty-five students read and reported on that book to the various Latin instructors. Runners-up for popularity are "The Standard Bearer," "On Land and Sea With Caesar," and "The Perilous Seat." Next highest on the long list were "Singing Seamen," and "The Slave of Cataline."

Roman 56, under the instructorship of Miss Gertrude Oppelt, leads the Latin classroom readers with a total of approximately seventy pupils. Close behind Miss Oppelt's students are those of Mrs. Grace Welby of room 34. Her outside readers number about sixty. 1935 Records Show Decrease In Death Rate This Last Year

Records from eighty-six major American cities show that traffic fatalities were slightly lower in 1935 than in 1934. This was found to be true when the records from the cities were considered as a whole; for in a few cities, the fatalities in 1935 were higher.

For the fifty-two weeks ending December 21, 1935, the total deaths from traffic accidents were at a rate of 23.4 per 100,000 population; while at the end of the same period in 1934, the total deaths were at a rate of 24.2 per 100,000 population.
During the 1935 period, there were 8,751 killed in these cities, compared with 9,042 killed during 1934.

San Francisco Lowest
San Francisco had the lowest mortality rate of 9.5 during the 1935 period. San Francisco also led in 1934 with a rate of 8.2.
Camden, New Jersey, had the highest rate during both years. The rates were 74.7 for 1935 and 71.3 for 1934. All these figures include deaths from accidents occurring both inside the city limits and in the suburbs.
The lowest rate for deaths occurring within the city limits in 1935 was 2.8 in Lynn, Massachusetts. The lowest 1934 rate was 7.7 in San Francisco. Miami, Florida, has the highest 1935 rate of 43.6 for deaths occurring within the city limits.

Marjorie Hower Presides At Annual Services Of Girls' Athletic Association.

Girls Represent Various Activities

Sixteen Letters, Twenty-two Numerals Are Presented; Leona Menze Reads Ritual

Recognition services were held by the Girls' Athletic Association last Friday for the purpose of presenting awards to those who had earned them. Marjorie Hower, president of the association, was general chairman of the affair.

In her opening words, Marjorie stressed the importance of sportsmanship and its relation to the club. To further carry out this point, Ruth Berning read the Law of Sportsmanship, which, even though it does not appear in the constitution of the club is the unwritten code of every athletic organization.

Leona Menze, secretary of the organization, was honored by reading the ritual, during which high-point girls appeared, dressed according to the sport they represented. Twelve sports were represented by these girls.

Sports Are Represented
Anna Marie Baumgartner, with 1903 points, represented tumbling. She wore black satin shorts, and a blue and white wool sweater. Next was Margaret Ruhl, dressed in white shorts and shirt and carrying a racket, to show tennis. She has 1817 points. With 1741 points, Doris Rindchen was chosen to represent hockey. She wore a green gym suit and carried a hockey stick to show this sport. Being the fifth highest girl with 1685 points, Marjorie Cartwright personified baseball, and carried a ball and bat to signify this sport.

Basketball was shown by Margaret Ruhl, who has a total of 1662 points. Margaret wore a green gym suit and carried a basketball. Dressed in bright, warm, woolen clothing, skating was next represented by Vivian Hickman, who has a total of 1649 points. Having earned 1604 points, Enita Snively depicted swimming, dressed in a rubber bathing suit and bright red cover.

Teacher Awards Letters
The next sport shown, volleyball, was shown by Winnie Locker, who has a total of 1563 points. She carried a volleyball, and wore a bright striped play suit. The last girl was Barbara Scheele, who chose to represent speedball. Barbara, who carried a speedball and wore a green gym suit, has 1518 points. Ruth Dehaven, who was to have represented a sport, was absent.

Marjorie next introduced Miss Alice J. Patterson, who awarded the varsity letters "S", and the upperclassmen numerals. Those who earned letters are as follows: Ruth Adler, 1207 points; Virginia Busse, 1239; Martha Franz, 1267; Delores Miller, 1269; Edith Pawlisch, 1265; Dorothy Roudesh, 1285; Mary Shaffer, 1266; Mildred Close, 1339; Edna Disler, 1311; Ruth Eysenberg, 1209; Betty Hamish, 1208; Evelyn Ruse, 1356; Hazel Noll, 1225; Ada Schuelke, 1208; Betty Schultz, 1212; and Jeanette Braun, 1495 points.

As the last thing on the program, Alice Mae Siebold, a former member of the club, gave a short talk on the effects of G. A. A. participation in later life. She especially emphasized certain phases of girls, sportsmanship, and association, and their effects in later life. After her short talk, the meeting was adjourned.

Essay Contest Planned
To create public interest in the Texas Centennial Exposition to be held at Dallas this year, the State Department of Publicity for the Exposition is sponsoring a historical essay test. This contest is open to all high schools in Texas and features many valuable prizes.

Coaches Champs

Coach Whiteman

Hoagland's Wildcats swept to triumph in the Allen County High School Basketball Tournament Saturday and won the championship by defeating Elmhurst in the finals by a 26-23 score. Coach Whiteman, of Hoagland, pictured above, thus served notice that his Wildcats would be something to reckon with when sectional time comes around again.

INTRAMURAL INSIGHTS

Freshmen: If you hurry you can still enter the intramural basketball tournament. Just a few games have been played; therefore a few more leagues could be entered very easily. The leagues are composed of six teams who play each other once. The two best teams in each league enter the finals with each other; and an elimination contest decides the champion basketball team.

Other contests, such as wrestling and boxing, are coming soon, so if you freshmen want to earn an intramural letter within two years you had better start entering contests now. A total of 125 points are needed to get this minor letter, and if you will enter everything it will not take long to get the needed points.

In order to refresh the memories of the underclassmen, and to let the freshmen know just how many points they may get for each sport they enter—the points are listed along with the sport as follows:

Teams To Have Tough Road To State Basketball Tourney

(Note: This is the second in a series of articles dealing with the new method of deciding the championship quintet of basketball in the state of Indiana.)

In the past, regional tourneys have produced the quintets which met at the Butler Field House in Indianapolis for the purpose of deciding which quintet in Hoosierdom deserved to wear the crown symbolic of the outstanding five in Indiana. However, according to the present plans for the deciding of a championship five, the winners in the regional tourneys will have a much tougher road to travel before they can consider themselves in a position to cop the state title.

According to the present arrangements, there will be sixteen regional tournaments in which sixty-four teams will compete. These sixty-four teams will represent the schools which survived the eliminations in the sectional tourneys into which 750 odd quintets hopefully went into action, with the state title as their goal. Of the sixty-four teams advancing into the regional, only the sixteen winners in each of these tourneys will be permitted to advance to the super-regionals on the following week-end.

Tourney Centers Named
The regional tourney centers this season will be Anderson, Auburn, Fort Wayne, Evansville, Greencastle, Lafayette, Greensburg, Logansport, Marion, Martinsville, Mitchell, Muncie, Nappanee, Rushville, Valparaiso, and Washington. Each competing squad will have twelve men certified with two names being scratched prior to the opening game of the tourney. The host school is responsible for entertaining the competing quintets from 9 a. m. Saturday, March 14 to 3 a. m. Sunday, March 15, if such entertainment is necessary. After all legitimate expenses of a tourney have been paid the host school is to receive one hundred fifty dollars. Then, after transportation costs have been paid, the host school shall receive an additional one hundred dollars. Fifty percent of the remainder shall go to the I. H. S. A. and the remaining one-half shall be divided as follows: (a) one-half pro rata among the participating schools and (b) one-half on the basis of season tickets sold and reported by the participating schools in the local communities on or before 6 p. m. Friday, March 13.

Central Conducts Tourney

The regional tourney for this section will be conducted by Central High School and will undoubtedly be held in the North Side gymnasium. The admission fees for a single session will be fifty cents; and the remaining cents will be the cost of a season ticket for the tourney. Teams competing in the regional here will be the winners of the sectional tourneys at Bluffton, Huntington, Portland, and the sectional held here on the previous week-end.

The Fort Wayne regional promises to be a very hotly contested tourney. From the Portland sectional performances thus far this season seem to point to Hartford City's Airedeles as the probable entrant. However, Portland's Panthers cannot be counted out of the running. Berne net fans are already saving their ducats to see the Bears come to Fort Wayne and take home the bacon. Much of the optimistic spirit of the Berne fans was lost when Dro. Bear center, received a serious injury to his foot recently. Then, too, the Bears must eliminate the Bluffton Tigers and this is no small task for any man's ball club.

Huntington seems to be the outstanding bet to reach the regionals from the Huntington sectionals. To pick a winner of the Fort Wayne sectionals to enter the regional is a very hard task. One must take his pick from the quintets representing Leo, Elmhurst, Decatur, Hoagland, Central, North Side, and South Side. Throwing caution to the winds and eliminating the county teams and Decatur, your writer predicts a winner from the city squads with the right to represent the Fort Wayne regional lying between North Side and South Side unless the Central Tigers regain their old form before tourney time.

All Freshman Girls Should Join Sports

"All freshmen girls are urged to participate in sports, and to give their membership to the Girls' Athletic Association. This will aid in their gym activities as well as having them come in contact with a large number of people to promote friendliness and sportsmanship," states Miss Alice J. Patterson, physical education teacher.

Miss Gretchen Smith, also physical education teacher, expresses the same sentiments as Miss Patterson and goes on to say, "The freshmen should start working for their numerals immediately, so that they will not be disappointed later on when summing up points for their letters. Also, they should be thinking of the honor plaque, on which the name of the high point senior is put."

Hall, S. S. Star, Leads In City Scoring Race

Chalks Up 98 Points; Ellenwood Is Fourth With 80, Hines Is Ninth With 70.

Carl Hall, sharpshooting Archer forward, holds tenaciously to his lead in the city scoring race, closely pursued by Jim Shollenberger of North Side, and Curly Armstrong of Central. Hall has scored 98 points in fifteen games; Shollenberger has made 86 markers in eleven tilts; and Armstrong has marked up 84 in fifteen. Close on their heels is Jim Ellenwood of South Side, with 80 points. Jim in turn is hard pressed for fourth place in the race by Barile of Central Catholic, who has accounted for 79 points in twelve games.

Further down the list, tied with Red Braden of Central for ninth place is Johnny Hines, who, like Hall, is a sophomore at South Side, doing well in his first year on the varsity. Only in the last few weeks has Hines brought his scoring up, being high scorer against Central and Froebel of Gary, and among the highest against Berne.

The up-to-date list of the eleven highest follows:

Hall, South Side	98
Shollenberger, North Side	86
Armstrong, Central	84
Ellenwood, South Side	80
Barile, Central Catholic	79
Sitko, Central	77
Schaeffer, Central	76
Bail, Central Catholic	72
Hines, South Side	70
Braden, Central	70

Harrison Miller Gains Post On Major Paper

Harrison Miller, '29 of South Side, known as "Pepper" while enrolled here, a former sports editor and general manager of the Times, has been given a position on the sports writing staff of the Indianapolis Times. Harrison graduated from Butler University recently and was offered the position. While he was a student in South Side, Harrison was active in many organizations, including the City Press Club, of which he was president; the 1500 Club, an honorary journalistic club president; president of the Lettermen's Club, the Math-Science Club, varsity football, class basketball, honor roll, and the Totem. He spent two years at Central Catholic, where he was active in class basketball.

"To write sports for the New York Post."

Is what he wishes and longs for most.

This is what the '29 Totem says of his ambitions, partly realized with a sports-writing job on a major newspaper.

Big Ambition Of Carl Hall Is To Become Famous Net Coach

Perhaps in the future there will be a famous basketball coach by the name of Carl Hall. Then many people will remember a dark-haired, good looking youth, who starred in basketball while attending South Side.

This famous personage first saw light in the dear city of Fort Wayne, Indiana. He attended the James H. Smart School to acquire his grade school education; and while there, Carl was very prominent in athletics. He participated in basketball and baseball and because of his outstanding ability in baseball, was awarded a baseball with the signatures of famous major-leaguers. Carl once again showed his ability in baseball when he pitched for the Archer Trucking company baseball team. He won a good percentage of the games that he pitched.

Carl's ability can not be doubted on the basketball court, as he is a sophomore, and has been out for basketball the two years he has attended school. He is taking the General Course here at school, and while not on the honor roll, has come close to it. Carl plays forward on the varsity and has contributed much to the South Side scoring. He is also the leader in the city scoring race, leading Shollenberger of North Side.

Swarthmore College Is Offering Scholarships

Swarthmore College, as is its annual custom, is offering five scholarships to boys this year. In the 1934 graduating class of South Side, Mark Gross was one of those to receive this award. These annual competitive scholarships for men, valued at five hundred dollars a year, were established in 1922. They are awarded to those candidates who, in the opinion of the Selection Committee, rank highest in scholarship, character, and physical fitness. Application blanks containing full particulars may be obtained from the office.

Archers To Face Seven Top-Notch Teams During Month

Huntington Tilt Here Tonight, First Of Group

Vikings Win Over Central Tigers; Have In-And-Out Season; Strong Offensive.

Three City Series Games Scheduled

Three N. E. I. C. Battles To Make Month Strenuous, As Green Seek Victory.

Entering into their last month of scheduled competition, South Side's Archers will take an attempt to get back into the win column when they oppose the strong Huntington Vikings on the southern hardwood this evening. During the next month the Green face a very strenuous schedule of seven tilts against the top-notch teams of this vicinity. Included in the list of foes which the Green must engage in battle in the near future are North Side, Central, and Hartford City in N. E. I. C. tilts and Goshen, Central Catholic, and Central of South Bend. The clashes with the city teams will be counted in the city series competition.

In meeting the Huntington outfit the Green will be up against a very formidable squad of basketballers. The Red and Black squad, which has been an in-and-out club most of the present season, has plenty of offensive power in every position. Beerbower, Petrie, and Winters seem to delight in combining themselves in a trio and going on a scoring spree. If these three players are hitting, the Archer guards are in for a tough night of it. Meekstroth, in the center position, is not only quite consistent in obtaining the tip but also makes the evening quite a miserable one for the opposition, as he utilizes his height to the best advantage in dropping the leather through the hoop. D'Dier, Coolman, and Davidson take care of the defensive duties on the Viking quintet. These Lime City cagers gave evidence of their strength recently when they matched the offensive attack of the Central Tigers for three quarters of their encounter and then scored out a victory while staving off several frantic Central rallies.

Tish Tash's Win Over Juniors In Net Clash

In the initial game of this season's intramural basketball tournament, the Tish Tash's defeated the Juniors by a score of 11 to 6. The Juniors held the Tish Tash's in check during the first half of the game, but in the last half the Tish Tash's seemed to gradually pull away from the Juniors, and when the game ended the Tish Tash's were leading by five points. The Tish Tash's seemed to have a hard time getting started but in the last half they played a very good brand of ball. If they continue to play as good as they did in the last half of their initial game, they will probably finish a winner in this year's intramural basketball season. Rauck was high-point man for the Tish Tash's with five points. Pequinot was high-point man for the losing team with three points. The other game that was supposed to be played Tuesday the fifth period between the Hawks and the P. S. S. was forfeited because of the P. S. S.'s were not there. The officials for the games were Bopp, timekeeper; and Callway and Cassidy, referees.

To Teach Sports
In Santa Maria, California, individual sports as recreation in adult life will be taught to senior boys and girls together next semester in the first period. The individual sports such as archery, tennis, and dancing will be offered in a mixed class.

Jumps For Archers

Joe Close

Much of the Archers' success in controlling the tip as often as they have this season is due to the jumping of Joe Close, varsity center. Joe has seen less action lately than usual because of an ankle injury, but although capably replaced at times by John Hines, it is hoped that the condition of his ankle will improve enough to warrant lengthier appearances on the hardwood during the coming big games.

Sportlights

It is to be hoped that any of those fans who feel that they aid their team by booing the decisions of the officials will profit by the incident in the final quarter of the tilt with Froebel in which the unsportsmanlike action of the spectators probably cost the fellows representing South Side a tilt which they had fought very hard to win. The officials for all South Side tilts are chosen by the athletic department of our school and are declared suitable by the opposing team. These men are chosen because they have indicated their ability as referees during several years of previous officiating. Hence, the spectators can best do their part by taking the "breaks" as they come and taking them in a sportsmanlike manner.

Hoagland's Wildcats established themselves as a strong contender in the coming tourneys when they emerged victorious over the fighting Elmhurst Trojans in the Allen County high school tournament held at the Central gymnasium over the last week-end. Coach Whitehead has been bringing his band of Wildcats slowly along this season and they really turned on the pressure in the tournament. It remains to be seen whether or not the Wildcats will take over the role of Lafayette Central, which has proved to be a stumbling block for the Fort Wayne fives in the tournaments in former years.

The slump of the Central Tigers has brought up plenty of comment from basketball fans all over Hoosierdom. After piling up an impressive string of consecutive victories and gaining recognition as one of the top-notch quintets of the state, the Blue seemingly have hit the skids. However, the question of whether or not the Tiger high-scoring combination has really lost its punch will be answered tomorrow evening when the Blue battle with the North Side Redskins in what may prove to be the crucial clash of the race for the city net crown. However, regardless of the result of this tilt, the wearer of the city crown for this season cannot be definitely decided until South Side has met both of the contesting teams, and then perhaps not until the Green have tangled with the Irish of Central Catholic.

It was with the greatest of disappointment that the local sports writers awaited in vain the arrival of Ben Tenny at the Froebel game last Saturday evening. Ample seating room was graciously reserved for him by his hosts and carefully protected by an honorable member of the law-enforcement agency of our fair city.

G.A.A. Invites Yearling Girls To Participate

Seven Major Sports, Four Minors Included In Roster Of Girls' Activities.

Hello, freshies! We, the older girls of the G. A. A., wish to introduce you to the largest and what we consider the best organization in South Side. Having been freshies once ourselves we realize that there is much for you to learn about South Side and its activities; therefore we will help you out by telling you about the Girls' Athletic Association.

The G. A. A. was organized in 1926, ten years ago January 10, and has developed greatly under the guidance of Miss Patterson and Miss Smith from four major sports to the place where it now includes basketball, baseball, tumbling, hockey, (speedball for frosh), and volleyball as the major sports while swimming, hiking, skating (ice and roller), and tennis are the minor sports.

One hundred points are given for each major sport if you do not miss more than once with an unexcused absence and twice with excused absences. Points gained in the minor sports are: hiking, one point a mile with not more than fifty points a semester; roller and ice skating, one point per hour, as many points as you wish; swimming, according to your ability to win and your attendance to the classes given at the Y. W. C. A.; the singles winner in tennis wins 100 points, the runner-up 75, and every girl who play 25 points; in the doubles the two girls who win get 75 points apiece, runners-up 50 points, and every girl in the preliminaries 25 points. It is also possible to gain 50 points a year in gym if one has an unblemished record.

The first sport you may enter this semester is tumbling, which will be announced soon on the G. A. A. bulletin board. We advise you to take advantage immediately of the opportunities to earn points for when you have earned 300 points you are eligible for your numerals and when you have gained 15,000 points you earn your letter, which is certainly worthwhile.

Call Is Extended For Gym Leaders

Prospective Student Officials Are Asked To Apply To Miss Patterson Or Miss Smith.

A call has been extended by Miss Patterson and Miss Smith for all girls particularly freshmen, who desire to be student leaders. An interview with them will decide whether the girl will be accepted or not. The girl must show some signs of leadership.

The student leaders' training class has been a part of the Girls' Athletic Association for ten years. At first there were eight student leaders. Their duties, entirely extra-curricular, included taking care of equipment and directing the gym class in the classroom. Three years later student leaders were first used in G. A. A.

All the student leaders meet after school once every week. The object of this course is to train girls in leadership in girl groups, to train them in athletics and class management, to teach them to officiate at tournaments, inter-class and squad, and to show them how to present the work to others.

At present there are about thirty student leaders. They do all the officiating, and they act as assistants in the athletic department.

Followers of Seymour's inexperienced net squad were overjoyed last week-end when the Seymourians chalked up their first victory in fifteen starts. For a while it seemed that the Seymour five was doomed to capture the trophy for the greatest number of consecutive defeats from the sons of Knox.

The Central Tigers seem well on the way to capturing the N. E. I. C. crown with six victories and no defeats now on their record. The final outcome of the race for this season depends almost entirely upon the results of the remaining city series games. Both Central and North Side must meet South Side, and they must meet each other once in conference tilts. Central rules as the favorite since the Blue have only two tilts remaining on their conference schedule while North Side must engage in six more conference encounters.

Central's winning streak of eleven straight games was finally snapped Tuesday, when our South Side Archers, playing a consistent brand of basketball, defeated the Bengals by the score of 29-25. It also broke South Side's losing streak of six straight games.

When a Green and Blue squad get together on the basketball court, anything can happen. This fact was brought out last Tuesday when an experienced South Side five met and defeated a veteran Central Tiger quintet. The Tiger outfit defeated Columbia City by ten or twelve points. The Comets in turn defeated the Archers by eleven points. South Side turned around and defeated Central's highly vaunted five.

Berne has suffered a great loss when Dro, the boy with "springs" in his legs, tore two ligaments in his foot. It may be that Dro will be kept out of competition this season. He cannot bend his foot at all and it can be seen that he would not be in a very good condition to play basketball.

Despite his sore finger, Ellenwood played a very good game against the Tigers Tuesday night. He has had an injured finger for some time, and the constant playing has aggravated it. It was most painful in the De-catur game.

Much credit is due Bud Lee, guard on the varsity, for his stellar performance, both defensive and offensive, in the Central game. He was one of the high scorers of the game by scoring seven points.

Indiana University is the leader in the Big Ten Conference with five victories and no defeats. The Crimson followers had a scare thrown into them when Wisconsin's Badgers came within two points of tying Indiana.

Another unusual occurrence happened to Jim Ellenwood, stellar guard on the varsity, when he had four personals on him and was not called out of the game because the game ended just as he fouled the Centralite. A few weeks ago Jim had five personals before he was called from the game.

It seems that whenever the reserves win, the varsity comes along with a victory.

Lettergirls Meet To Organize Club

Officers Elected, Constitution Discussed; Will Meet Every Month To Talk Over Sports.

Letter girls of South Side met Monday afternoon to organize a letter-girls' club. A proposed constitution was discussed and officers were elected; the meeting being conducted by Marjorie Hower, chairman ex tempore.

Marjorie Hower was elected vice-president of the group by ballot vote, Ruth Berning was chosen as secretary, Betty Rison as treasurer, and Norma Clauser as Inter-Club Congress representative. The nominations for president were then made by this board, to be voted on at the next meeting. Nominees for president include Marjorie Cartwright and Ada Schuelke.

The meetings of the club will be held once a month, with dues being twenty-five cents a semester.

The theme for this semester's activities is the history of sports, the next meeting specializing in basketball. A news commentator will review at every meeting the interesting events in sports as far as women are concerned. The activities will be sponsored by Miss Alice J. Patterson and Miss Gretchen Smith.

Skirts and Sports

Hiya, freshies! Every one of you is invited to join the G. A. A. (Girls' Athletic Association). This club gives you one of the best opportunities in the school to get acquainted with other girls and to strike up new friendships, because it is the largest organization in school.

Edna Disler, a girl who recently received her letter, was thoroughly embarrassed the other day in the gym when, undoubtedly having been taken for a freshman, she had the novel experience of having a shoe removed and deposited on the gym floor.

Marjorie Hower is again showing her leadership in South Side. The president of G. A. A. has recently been elected as vice-president of the newly organized Lettergirls' Club.

Even though Evelyn Chandler is one of our smaller juniors, she surely can get in there and get that basketball. She does a lot for the junior 3's.

Ada Schuelke likes to be different, so she turns out in a hand-knitted sweater with her new letter on it.

Froebel Of Gary Noses Out 25-23 Victory Over Archers

With neither of the two teams ever enjoying more than a five-point lead, the South Side Archers and the Froebel five of Gary hooked up in a tightly-contested clash on the Southern hardwood last Saturday evening. The Froebel netters finally carried off the honors by a 25-23 count by virtue of a spectacular shot from the right sideline by Divich, scrappy Gary forward. The Green stepped into the lead early in the tilt and did not relinquish it until midway in the final period.

Gary stepped into the lead at the start of the contest when Sofiak tossed in a foul shot. Hall then put his teammates into the lead with a long shot from the right side of the floor. Divich retaliated with an under-the-hoop shot. Lee then scored on a spectacular two-handed pivot placement only to have Freeman grab the lead for Froebel as he cut under the hoop and counted. Lee came right back and put his five out in front by picking in two foul shots. Reichert increased the Green lead to an 8-5 count as the quarter ended.

Tilt Becomes Rough
Opening the second period, Sofiak continued the see-saw scoring activities by tossing in two foul attempts. Hines regained the three-point lead with a set-shot on a block play. Ellenwood counted on his charity toss, and then Freeman hit to make the score 11-9. Lee increased the Archer lead with a foul attempt. At this point in the proceedings the tilt became very rough as both teams started to play a "fire-horse" brand of ball. Divich reduced the Archer lead to one point with a long arching shot as the half ended.

Hines and Hall connected on beautiful pivot shots as the second half started and the Gary aggregation took time out to decide upon a plan for stopping the sudden scoring flurry of the Archers. Their efforts were not in vain inasmuch as they held the Green scoreless during the remainder of the period. Christakis cut under and scored to reduce the Archer margin to 16-13. Sofiak then tossed in a charity opportunity as the quarter ended.

Archers Miss Fouls
In the final period the Archers literally threw away the ball game, as they missed five opportunities to score on foul shots awarded them. Hines connected on a high arching shot as the last quarter began. Foul attempts by Carr and Sofiak and a basket by Freeman knotted the count at 18-all with six minutes to play. Divich then put his team in the lead as he tipped the leather into the hoop during a melee under the Gary net. Hines knotted the score with another net swisher from far out. Freeman then regained the Gary lead with a pivot attempt. Lee's charity toss cut the Froebel margin to one point with two minutes to go. Archer fans then aided the aGry cause by booing a decision on a foul to such an extent that Umpire Vandivier was forced to award the Gary cause by booing a decision which Sofiak scored. He missed the foul toss which had been called on the Archers. Hines then revived the hopes of the Archerites with a beautiful shot

Choose Thirteen From Hundred Safety Posters

Five Faculty Members Select Most Artistic, Original, From Entries Submitted.

Thirteen posters, made by various students of Miss Emma Doehrmann's and Miss Mary Helen Ley's art classes, were selected last week by a committee of five South Side faculty members as the best of nearly a hundred original safety contest entries.

The judges for the poster contest were Miss Dorothy A. Magley, Miss Adelaide Fiedler, Mr. E. S. Gould, and Mr. J. H. Chappell. The decisions were made last Thursday afternoon during vacation in the study hall, while all the posters were placed.

Posters are unusual. All of the selected posters were unusual in design and color. George Anne Jacobs' poster, titled "Stop Accidents," is the largest of the winners. A three-tiered blue, tan, and black placard with a large policeman's head. Bud Jones submitted three winning posters. One is a picture of a smiling, chubby-faced boy with the inscription, "Would You Murder Him?" Another is titled "Beautiful But Beware," and portrays a shining blue late-model car; a third, made by Bud, features a picture of a bleeding head and carries the inscription, "Needless Agony From Headless Driving." The last of his entries is a more simple placard with the title, "Are You Guilty?"

Frank Glusenkamp's entry carries the picture of a huge gray spirit with the inscription, "You Can't Play This Game and Win." "You Expect It in a Hen" is the title of Dick Antoine's poster, which pictures the antics of a jaywalker on a busy city street, and for contrast, a lonely hen on a deserted country road. Robert Miller, an Art 1 student, entered a gray and black conception of a whirlpool of mishaps carrying cars of all descriptions. The title is "Maelstrom of Death—Keep Out."

Others are described: "If You Race With Death You Lose," Leonard Kock's entry, carries a picture of several ghost riders on phantom horses. Norman Miller, a senior, entered the placard titled "Wearing This Crown Means Death," which features a large crown with a background of tragic newspaper headlines.

Earl Engelbrecht's poster is in the form of a clever cartoon called "Don't Be a Monkey at the Wheel." "What Will the Harvest Be?" is the inscription which headlines Jack Bosserman's poster which portrays a country crossroad in gray and black. The last of the entries is that made by Mary Martha Hobrock, senior. Another cartoon pictures a comic duck with the title, "Don't Duck Between Cars."

Final Judging. "Final judging for the posters will be completed by next week," stated R. Nelson Snider. "We hope to obtain Mr. W. M. McBride, head of the Fort Wayne Art School, as our judge."

In about three weeks, a safety test covering the bulletins issued by the office will be given in the various home rooms by the teachers. The largest of the valuable prizes will be given to the winners of this contest.

This morning during the pep session period, the third of a series of club safety skits was presented by the Lettermen's Club. The skit, a comedy, will feature Mussolini and Haille Selassie and their stooges and will be presented by a large supporting cast.

Teachers Give Their Tribute

An American brother-in-law prevented is being an American citizen.—Earl Turner.

Although Kipling was never officially appointed Poet Laureate of England, he most assuredly unofficially represented a certain type of Englishman. The late King George is dead. He has left a son. Long live the King! Kipling, King of English Literature, is dead; he has left many heirs such as Kimand, rushwood Boy, all who will live forever. Long Live the King!—Dorothy Magley.

There is probably no one who does not long to be able to make other people see the world as he sees it. We feel at times that we are not understood. When a man or woman succeeds in creating literature which reveals his own clear vision and at the same time gives delight to the reader, we can not but admire his accomplishment. It is with great feeling, therefore, that we pay our respects to Rudyard Kipling. A great life has been lived; something important has been accomplished.

"Lord God of Hosts, be with us yet, Lest we forget—lest we forget!"—Beulah Rinehart.

I can remember when Kipling took his English-speaking world by storm. Here was a new outlook upon life, a fresh way of looking at the world. To read Kipling sympathetically is to have a deeper knowledge of human nature, to be quicker to recognize human qualities in even the poorest specimens of mankind.—Herman Mailey.

Writings are appreciated. If Kipling had never written anything but delightful children's stories, his fame would be assured. "How the Rhinoceros Got His Skin" (crumbs and all) and Kipling's acquaintance.

His versatility is shown in a selection which contains changes in action and emotional situations so as to demand changes in tone volume and rate of reading, many turn to Kipling's poems. Probably the most popular of his selections chosen for interpretative reading is "Boots." Other familiar choices are "Gunga Din" and "Danny Deever."—Dorothy Benner.

In a recent talk with my class, I asked the boys and girls which of Kipling's works they had read. "The Jungle Books" seemed to be the most popular. The boys are all familiar with live animals and adventure stories dealing with life and conditions in India. Each one remembers Kipling by his own particular story or poem, but my favorite is "The Ballad of East and West."—Amanda Hemmer.

Rudyard Kipling's son was very young when he died, a victim of the World War. Therefore, it has not been possible for the world to know him, to see him now as a mature man. However, it is safe to assume that he would have been fine; his father's example and direction would have taken care of that. We need not even imagine that influence and direction; we have it in the father's own words. Many are the lines, in many poems, which, while not addressed directly to the son, are such as Kipling must have wished to say to his son and the sons of other men; for they express so clearly his own ideals concerning democratic spirit, simplicity, unselfish service, work, modesty, earnestness of purpose, love of country, and reverence for God. Why not accept these lines, then, as samples culled from a loving father's words of advice to his son?

Quotes Short Excerpts. Here are just a few such passages, with their sources:

Lettermen's Movie Will Be Presented

February 5, 6, Noon Shows To Cost Nickel; Theatre To Be In Greeley Room.

The Lettermen's Club will present a moving picture show next Wednesday and Thursday, February 5 and 6. Tickets, which will cost only five cents, may be purchased from your home room teacher or any letterman.

The program will consist of pictures taken by Ed Ginn at the sectional track and field meet during spring football, and of scenes and incidents filmed around school by our principal, R. Nelson Snider.

Arrangements for the performance are being made by a committee of Frederick Meyers, Herman Makey, Jr., and Bud Feichter.

Stuart Monroe Replaces Leslie Reeves, Teacher

A 1925 graduate of South Side High School, Mr. Stuart Monroe, has been appointed by Merle J. Abbott, superintendent of schools, to a position as teacher in the South Side manual training department. While in South Side, Mr. Monroe's activities included Glee Club and Booster Corps.

Mr. Monroe will take the place of Mr. Leslie Reeves, who has been teaching at South Side for the past semester.

Mr. Reeves is going to North Side to fill an instructing position in its manual training department. Mr. Monroe will teach in South Side only in the forenoon of every day and at Harrison Hill in the afternoon. He is a graduate of Ball State Teachers' College.

"The more we work and the less we talk, The better results we shall get."—The Lesson.

"For frantic boast and foolish word, Thy mercy on Thy people, Lord."—Recessional.

"An' for all 'is dirty 'ide, 'E was white, clear white, inside."—Gunga Din.

"There is neither East nor West, border, nor breed, nor birth, When two strong men stand face to face, though they come from the ends of the earth."—Ballad of East and West.

"By the peace among our peoples Let men know we serve the Lord."—A Song of the English.

"Ah God! One sniff of England, To greet our flesh and blood."—The Broken Man.

"Have done with childish days, The lightly proffered laurel, The easy, ungrudged praise."—The White Man's Burden.

"Then only the Master shall praise us And only the Master shall blame And no one shall work for money And no one shall work for fame, But each for the joy of the working And each in his separate star, Shall draw the Thing as he sees It For the God of Things as They are."—When Earth's Last Picture Is Painted.

Of course we must make mention of Kipling's poem "If"; for nowhere in literature is there to be found better advice for youth. It is too long to be quoted here in its entirety, and short excerpts just won't do. Young people must read it all.—Emma E. Kiefer.

Alwilt Tarney Has Position As Lincoln Insurance Tabulator

Alwilt Tarney, prominent member of the class of '35, is now fulfilling a position in the actuarial tabulating department in the Lincoln National Life Insurance Company, due to her education received in South Side's commercial work. She likes her work quite well and is satisfied to continue in that field. Her hours are from 8 to 4:30 o'clock with a one hour lunch period.

She works with an electric punch on small cards for tabulating. The machine is smaller than a typewriter, but can be operated very speedily, with but twelve keys. Her greatest regret now is that she didn't spend more time on the typewriter in developing skill and speed in numbers. Alwilt advises commercial students to learn something about every office machine, and particularly the comptometer.

Advice on studying commercial work in South Side is, "Don't look at the keyboard while you are typing, as this will eventually ruin your typing." "Learn the brief forms" and last, "Do a sufficient number of pages every day." She firmly believes, though, that a conscientious study of the full commercial course is sufficient to fulfill easily the requirements of a job.

Any college ambitions were dispelled by the ardent future ambition of becoming a really good private secretary. Her favorite subject in South Side was shorthand. She found her hardest subject to be geometry, and her easiest subject she considered to be typing. Her activities in school also included many extra-curricular activities.

She was once secretary of Meteorites. She was a member of So-Si-Y, Philo, Wranglers, Times, and Math-Science. She won letters in sports and music and was elected to National Honor Society.

Sophomores, Juniors---Even Blessed Seniors---Ignorant

There may be freshmen who wonder about South Side's extensive portals, during the first few weeks of their careers here, making mistake after mistake, pulling blunder after blunder, and generally upsetting the smooth running of the school, but (wonders never cease!) even learned juniors and dignified seniors, to say nothing of sophisticated sophomores, make little mistakes now and then.

Halls and corridors, generally speaking, are not the usual places that upperclassmen choose to be the scenes of their Waterloos; no, instead they single out some classroom (especially one where there is some good-looking members of the opposite sex) for their blunders and perplexing experiences. Not that the aforesaid upperclassmen want to blunder before the dream girl or boy—heavens, no! Fate, it appears, dear, considerate Fate, always steps in and somehow pulls the strings that make upperclassmen run. Fate always sees that she steps in at the most inopportune moment just to make matters worse.

Typing Has Horrors

Typing, public speaking, and chemistry, by extra-special census, have proved to be the classes that take the largest toll of upperclassmen victims. In typing, an upperclassman may walk gaily into the room, seat himself at the most comfortable-looking desk, and merrily begin plunking away at the keys. But horrors! When the copy comes out, there, marching across the pages are row after row of letters—not the correct letters—Fate would

Don't Be A Moocher

Have you ever been reading the Times and have some moocher ask you to turn the page? The audacity of such a person usually raises the anger to such an extent that sometimes fistic reaction is the answer to the moocher's request. However, some moochers are polite enough to refrain from reading until you are ready to turn the page. This type of moocher is so polite that he only mumbles to himself as he reads. But wait; there is still a moocher who neither requests that the page be turned nor mumbles to himself—this type only rests his chin on your shoulder or even in the back of your neck.

Warning: Mr. Freshman, start your high school career right by subscribing for the Times and learn what is going on within the school. You can also preserve your health and keep your friends.

Art Club Will Sponsor Drive For Members

Ina Claire Chappell, Delbert Leininger In Charge Of Campaign; Plan Party.

Plans for coming events in the Art Club were made at an officers' meeting last Wednesday.

A big membership campaign has been started and is well underway. The membership campaign is headed by Ina Claire Chappell and Delbert Leininger. Any person wishing to join Art Club may pay his dues to either of the campaign heads, Rosemary Chappell, Stewart Trulock, or to Miss Dochterman in room 77. All students are invited to join the club.

A big party has been planned for the first regular meeting of the organization, February 26. The program will be in the form of a vaudeville. All old members are requested to bring guests. Kenny Scott will be in charge of this party. Refreshments will be served. It promises to be a gala affair. At the last officers' meeting Joan Bonisb was appointed publicity chairman. Officers will meet again on February 12, to complete plans for the party.

New officers for the semester are: Rosemary Chappell, president; Kenny Scott, vice-president; Mary Ellen Woods, secretary; Stewart Trulock, treasurer; and Selma Liff, George Anna Martin, Marjorie Dancer, Maxine Roth, Ruth Stoner, social council.

The next meeting, a Valentine Party, will be held Tuesday at 3:20 p. m. in the Voorhees Room. Members must pay their dues as they enter. New members are especially welcomed. The party committee consists of Robert Weil, Frances Craig, Norman Budde, Helen E. Meyer, and Clarence Helmsing.

Bulletin

Mr. Herbert Voorhees, chemistry instructor, who has been unable to attend school because of bronchial trouble, was reported as getting along very well today. Mrs. Voorhees stated that he is able to be up part of the time. He is at his home on Wildwood Avenue.

Sophomores, Juniors---Even Blessed Seniors---Ignorant

There may be freshmen who wonder about South Side's extensive portals, during the first few weeks of their careers here, making mistake after mistake, pulling blunder after blunder, and generally upsetting the smooth running of the school, but (wonders never cease!) even learned juniors and dignified seniors, to say nothing of sophisticated sophomores, make little mistakes now and then.

Halls and corridors, generally speaking, are not the usual places that upperclassmen choose to be the scenes of their Waterloos; no, instead they single out some classroom (especially one where there is some good-looking members of the opposite sex) for their blunders and perplexing experiences. Miss Fiedler stated that the very simplest forms of logarithms will be reviewed. It is desired that all members bring with them a book containing a table of logarithms.

It is desired that all members come promptly to the meeting in order that a short business meeting might follow the evening's drill. At this meeting the newly elected officers will preside. They are John Will, president; Ruth Adler, vice-president; and Helen Anderson, secretary.

The three captains of the club are Mildred Foellinger, Richard Meyer, and Norman Buck.

For the study meetings, the club voted to have the topics to deal with the history of Motion Pictures. Five out of nine forthcoming meetings will be for study.

Lois Reisinger, the acting president, appointed Velda Oppenlander to see Miss Pittenger regarding the skating party to be held in the near future. A definite date for this event will be announced later. The club plans to introduce new members at the next meeting and make appointments for the chairmen of various committees.

Movies Again To Be Presented This Noon

"Our Archers in Action" were shown in a moving picture show yesterday noon at 12:45 and will be shown again this noon at the same time by the Lettermen's Club. Mr. Snider and Ed Ginn, former letterman of South Side, have taken quite a few pictures around school and elsewhere, and will show them to the student body for the price of a nickel, in the Greeley Room.

Improvement in the football squad can be readily seen when comparing the pictures taken at the spring football practice and those taken at the fall practice. Others were taken at the sectional track meet of 1935, Camp Crosey, exercises before a game, and also at the Central Catholic game.

Tickets can be had from any Letterman or from Mr. Flint in room 138. The committee in charge of this program is Fred Nye, president of the club, Herman Makey, Frederick Meyers, and Bud Feichter.

Philo Discusses Southern Works

H. Flaig Leads Songs; Annual Banquet Is Announced; Play Practice Starts In Short Time.

Southern literature was the topic of the Philo meeting held Monday in the Greeley Room. Selma Liff, the newly-elected program chairman, assumed charge of the meeting after business was concluded. She introduced Sonia Velkoff, who gave an introduction to this period of literature. She also presented the background and told of the principal events which influenced the writings of this period. Among the famous writers of this period of whom she spoke were John Gilmore, Mark Twain, and J. C. Harris.

Marjorie Scheumann followed this report by giving the principle poets of the period. These were Edgar Allan Poe, Sidney Lanier, Paul Hamilton Hayne, and Henry Timrod.

Edgar Allan Poe was the author of the famous poem "The Raven," and also "Annabel Lee" and "The Bells." The particular characteristics of his writings were their hauntingness and romantic beauty. Sidney Lanier's most outstanding works are the "Tampa Robins" and "Evening Song." Paul Hamilton Hayne, who is known as the "Prince of American Sonneters," is the author of "Sonnets and Other Poems." Henry Timrod's most perfect lyric was the "Ode."

During the evening's program Helen Flaig, the music chairman, led several songs.

Ruth Adler, president, announced at the business meeting that the St. Patrick's Day banquet will be on March 17. The group has not as yet decided where it shall be held. It has been a custom to hold this banquet each year; the last banquet was at the Woman's Club.

Practice on a new Philo play will also begin soon. Tryouts, it was announced, will be held on Wednesday evening, February 5, in Miss Demare's room.

Travel Club Views Scrapbook From Sister Body In Australia

A portfolio from a branch of the Junior Red Cross in the Kerang high school, Victoria, Australia, was received Friday by the Travel Club. This came in answer to the portfolio the club sent to Australia last spring.

It is in the form of a large scrapbook, containing pictures and drawings and is neatly lettered. The first pages contain maps of Australia which were made and colored by the students. On the next few pages are pasted kodak pictures which portray views of the city, the school, students of the school, and the members of the Red Cross Club; and various kinds of birds seen on the rivers of Australia. Farther on are full page drawings of apples and oranges. The variety of orange drawn is of that kind grown at Nyah Tresco; the apples are grown at Harcourt.

Send Pressed Flowers

An interesting section is one which contains pictures of wild flowers and cereals accompanied by the actual flowers and grains which have been pressed. Among the grains are some we are familiar with, as: barley, oats, and wheat, and others that are not so common as: sudan grass, amaranth, and millet.

Several more pages hold pictures of the Blackfellows of Australia, who, as one may gather from the pictures, live an almost primitive life. Contrasting with these are pictures of some of the modern Australian farms and inhabitants.

There are many pictures of wild and domestic animals, poultry, and insects. Some of the animals pictured that are uncommon to us are: platypus, koala, kangaroo, wombat, wallaby, and ant-eater. Many kinds of eels and possums are also shown. There are also pictures depicting sea life, including sea plants, sea animals, and stone and coral formations.

Depict Industries
Another interesting page contains pictures of some of the leading industries of the country which are: wool-spinning, making felt hats, farming, and making dried fruits.

Other pages contain pictures of picturesque hills, mountains and dams, and sports.

The portfolio which the Travel Club sent to Australia was similar to the one received. In it was included a Totem. The club enjoyed making the portfolio it sent, and was very glad to receive the fine one in answer to the one they sent.

Hackneyed Success

Mr. C. E. Watkins' recent assembly talk on the hackneyed subject of success was pleasingly different. The speaker kept his promise not to preach.

The speaker's boyhood friend who supported the family could be matched by many successful men. Our parents should know some.

We know just how hard we have been working lately. From reports, so do our teachers.

Mussolini must feel like Caesar when he crossed the Rubicon. But we can't imagine him saying, "The die is cast."

Fort Wayne's Nineteen-Year-Old College Center

High school graduates have been attending college right here in Fort Wayne for nearly nineteen years at the Indiana University Extension Center.

Though without the frills of the average campus, the school has been well attended. In September, 1935, there were 658 students enrolled.

Here are some of the courses: college freshman, pre-medical, pre-dental, business administration, teacher training, and graduate work.

The center, located at Central High and elsewhere, is taught by part-time instructors. South Side furnishes two of the faculty, the Messrs. Hull and Null.

When we brag about ourselves to others, that's egotism—except in advertising.

This is a land of free speech, but it certainly costs a lot to say the wrong thing.

"La Ville Francaise De Fort Wayne"—But For A War

Students of French IV recently searched maps for American towns with French names. An amazingly large number were found, for our country was once largely owned by France.

Fort Wayne itself was a French fort from 1680 to 1760—a span of eighty years. Then the English held the fort three years until Pontiac, of conspiracy fame, captured it. The English fort dates from 1794, when General Anthony Wayne appeared on the scene.

Thus, our hamlet in the wilderness was fought over by France and England—4,700 miles distant. Most of this went on before the United States was even conceived.

And here's some food for thought: If the French had won the French and Indian War, the second city of Indiana would most likely be another "ville" of "Les Possessions Francaises En Amerique."

We suppose that a millionaire might be dubbed a doughboy.

Denver children are being given a course in humor. We hope their teachers get some new jokes.

What need for an advice column, when one can learn about affairs of the heart over the party line?

To Walk With Dignity, The Seniors Are Best—But No One Knows It

Are seniors losing some of their lofty dignity and aloofness? We can remember when seniors were something extraordinary. They considered underclassmen as something tender and young to be looked down upon from the heights of superior knowledge. The very presence of seniors at a club meeting or in the halls caused respectful admiration. They called for and received esteem.

However! Underclassmen no longer stand in awe of seniors—their feet are just as likely to be stepped on in a crowd; they are blithely hailed as equals with no compunction. Not even from the freshmen do the seniors receive courteous attention. It is sad, indeed, to see the prestige of such a noble and aristocratic band being violated by their fellow students. Yes, the seniors are less dignified—but they are more human.

Carrying On

With Marjorie Turner and Lillian Gunzenhauser

The wheel of fortune spins,
Around and around she goes
And where she stops—nobody knows.

We maintain that this is the first and greatest (and may we add the last) amateur column ever to have been printed. It is written by amateurs, read by amateurs, and printed by amateurs (Adv.) How we doin', Editor?

The position of master of ceremonies is very capably filled by Kenny (Major Bowes) Scott, the official gong sounder.

Our first amateur is Dick Orr, the little man that makes the music go round and round and round—and (Here Dick was saved by the gong). The next amateur (or should we say amateurix) is Margaret Gross, an inimitable blues singer. By inimitable we mean that she actually got through half of her selection before the Major could locate the gong. Next, Peg Kilpatrick suggests a good remedy to follow in order to make a day successful is to "Sing Before Breakfast." An excellent idea if you eat breakfast—(We don't.)

And now, dear reader, we have a special treat for you. A short skit entitled, "Lover, Where Art Thou?" will be presented by these two stars of the S. P. C. initiation, Billie Mauk, is the beautiful young heroine, and Dalton McAllister as the hero, villain, or what have you.

A tap dance executed in the true Astaire manner is next given by Bob Bosley with the able assistance of Ginger Rogers, alias Bill Wilson.

A reading, "Curfew Shall Not Ring Tonight" only recently published, is rendered very effectively with gestures and everything) by South Side's ace public speaker, Warren Zelt.

A short drama with that O'Keefian touch and entitled "She was Only A Beach Comber's Daughter But She Caught The Drift" is given next. The part of Shanghai Lil is portrayed by Mary Kay Connell with the support of Bob Haruff who plays the part of "The Guy From the Isle of Capri."

Miss Maxine (Hy-Ya Toots!) Greiner is appointed chief hen cackler (cock-a-doodle-doo) for every time she sees an egg (Bill Kruse) she has to cackle.

"We're Havin' A Heat Wave, a Tropical Heat Wave." Helen Cox has just appeared on the scene. In a short leap year drama, Helen plays the part of the hero, and the heroine is portrayed by Eddie Reeves.

John Robert Leach, the big, broad shouldered he-man from Calhoun Street now takes the microphone. He is to brood "I Never Had A Chance." The Major always ready to oblige, sounds the gong before John starts.

"Look who's here." Fresh from the backwoods, come those two little hillbillies, Jean Bollman and Doris Bennett. They yodel, and the audience goes wild. The Major excitedly beats the gong (the brute) and order is finally restored.

Now, my friends, will you kindly send in your votes for whom you think gave the best performance in this column. Each vote will be greatly appreciated, and so (with a million apologies to Major Bowes) we bid you adieu and God bless you everyone.

Mosquitoes And Fish Bite With Vigor In Central Florida Lake Region

On to central Florida with its lakes and springs. There are over thirty thousand lakes in Florida, varying in size from Okechobee to tiny lakelets with less than a hundred square feet of surface. The country which we are about to enter is a region of little hills and hollows. Sometimes lakes several miles in length, sometimes lily ponds, fill these hollows.

The Florida lakes are well stocked with fish, and furnish excellent sport for the angler—there is no need of tall story-telling among these lakes. All are filled with fresh water, even when there isn't any visible inlet or outlet. But many of the streams and lakes are more or less impregnated with lime.

Lake Okechobee is the largest fresh-water lake within the limits of the United States, excepting Lake Michigan. The other Great Lakes are partly in Canada, don't forget.

Near Gainesville there used to be what was known as Payne's Prairie, a spring which was the outlet of a lake which flowed into an unfathomed abyss. It was known to the Indians as "The Bottomless Pit," and visitors came from miles around and amused themselves by throwing in whatever they would get their hands on. Now this region has been turned into a lake with no bottom.

From the central lake region of Florida come more oranges and grapefruit than any other section of the state. Indeed every farmer in the lake region has a grapefruit and orange grove. The groves give forth an air of fragrance in March, and the ground is covered with white shell-like petals.

The early oranges are picked in November, and others not until April. The northern shipments are picked before thoroughly ripe. Therefore, the distant buyer never tastes the delicious flavor of the perfect orange. As many as ten thousand oranges are picked from a single tree. The sweet orange is a native of India and was a contribution from that country to Florida.

Few writers take the time to tell their readers of the terrible mosquitoes which infest this lake region. Some are nearly an inch in length. So don't look forward to a perfect evening. And at night the settlers sleep under heavy mosquito netting to protect themselves.

Next week we will again travel to the far West—the land of sophisticated enchantment, of inescapable desert beauty.—Dean Brahm.

Our Gift From Rome

Why are competitors called rivals? In Latin, rivis is a brook, and rivalis means pertaining to a brook. Rivales were those who lived near or beside the brook and obtained their water supply from it. Very often disputes would arise between these neighbors as to their claims on the brook and these neighbors (rivales) would become competitors or rivals in the modern sense. In English, we have applied the word to every field of competition—love, sports, business, and politics.

ANYBODY'S EARFUL

Listening in at a telephone conversation is great sport but sometimes what one hears is startling.

Hark. Someone is speaking:

"Hello big brave, and handsome! How is mamma's little itz-bitzy sugar dumpling? Yes, big boy I really do think you're the dream of my heart. What about coming over to the house tomorrow night?"

"But Mom—
"Now don't try your southern imitation on me. I am on to your tricks. You really have to come over tomorrow. We are sure gonna have a lot of fun."

"Listen, lady, I don't know—"

"Come on, Johnny boy, quit trying to fool me. I know you....say that imitation is pretty good. You would almost fool me by it. It really doesn't sound like your voice John, darling. Be a good little boy and come clean, Johnny."

"Mam, what number is yo all callin'?"

"E-97853, of course—Oh, my gosh!"

FABLE

Once upon a time there was a boy who wanted to become a good public speaker. He went to many schools of oration and oratory and was taught by many teachers as to all the best methods of good expression and speaking. He was taught to hold his body up, to place his feet correctly, to move his head in emphasis, to gesture magnificently, to orate loudly and forcefully, to be careful how he pronounced his words, and to speak distinctly. After all this he said to himself, "I am indeed a polished orator and will prove that when I speak tomorrow."

He spoke the next day but with little effect on the audience. He, with all his polished oratory, did not move them at all. His style was perfect, his poise was good, and his speaking clear; but he wasn't successful. He was greatly disturbed because of this, so he went to talk with a very good public speaker of the time who had heard him that day. In answer to his questions the great speaker said, "I admit that all those points of your speech were good, but they did not affect your audience. Your skill was wasted because you sounded too artificial. You should be more natural."

"If I am supposed to be natural why did I go to all these schools and hear all these teachers? I could be natural in the beginning without them," replied the boy.

"Probably so," said the great speaker.

Ear-Burners

For we poor little South Siders who have never been away from our dear Alma Mater, here's an item—Bob Dunfee, seen around a lot, claims attendance in twenty-five schools.

Bits for the Knitwits—the school's full of them. Rosemary Chappell brings along her needles and yarn to potluck and sech. And Polly Borton, a newcomer, also makes a mean sweater, she says. The Scheele sisters and Doris Bennett should go into business with the start they have. Once on a time Bennett and Dolly stayed up half the night so they could finish theirs.

Chemistry just isn't chemistry without Mr. Voorhees. It seems he's been very ill. But he's better now. And we'll be seeing him soon, we hope.

Lil' Dorothy Douglas is back. And isn't she cute! She's been way out in Oklahoma much too long, and we're all glad she's here to stay.

And even seniors make mistakes. Ruth Rose, our extemp finalist, you now, realizes it all too well. Someone dropped sulphuric acid down her 'boot, and besides making blisters on her arch, it ate out half her shoe.

Speaking of traveling, Jim Dern will make a beautiful tramp; no, not beautiful, because he isn't, very, but he will be a swell bum. He's already been to Labrador, Alaska, Cuba, Panama Canal, and so forth.

Speaking of followings, how's this for one? Gwen Horn has sixteen aspiring young pupils—in dancing. There's too, tap, and what have you? (Not adv.)

Because she's so Continental, we suspected that Sonia Velkoff had been abroad, even before we found out that she had been there—not once, mind you, but twice, or maybe even thrice. That makes us all hicks, I guess.

Mr. Crabill's case is analogous to Mr. Dionne's except that Mr. Crabill's five girls didn't come all at once. But there they are, all five of them: beautiful, young, and very sweet. Who wants quintuplets, anyway? (What about Eddie Cantor?)—Ed.

Robin Hood's Barn

Do you remember when one of the best-liked columns in this paper was one written by "Onewho Nose"? The present columnists don't profess to know everything about everyone, but they certainly can do a good job of finding out. By the way, you notice that the Totem office is rather sparsely populated with those that just fill up space. This is due to the excellent ability of the one in charge to tell people exactly what he thinks of them. For those that are interested, let them read Louis Bonish's two-page dissertation discussing an article printed in this column last week. It is in plain sight in his office.

Our red-headed wanderer, Bill Korte, enjoys taking his bobsled over the municipal golf course, especially with his Peggy Kilpatrick, because they like to be alone. And then, there is John (Businessman) Miller who likes to get stuck with his "Borman" in snow drifts. He thinks that his automobile's three hundred and seventy-five horsepower motor would pull him out of any mess.

Dorothy Douglas, our long lost occupant of South Side, again crashes the head lines. All the males in this institution are already chasing her. About three years ago she was in every column every week. Then she went to Oklahoma City, but they always come back.

Warning! Danger! All those that want to protect their homes, don't invite a certain crowd to their parties. At a farewell party for Tom Hearn (yes, he is gone) they broke all the glasses and dishes, decorations, mirrors, and even the kitchen stove.

Everyone enjoys Bobby Zeig's originality in class, except the teacher. In trigonometry class, he insisted that a difference of one or two in the answers made no difference to him.

Pat Murphy tells his classes that his co-teacher, Bill Wilson, was raised on the farm and drove mules. He added that if there was any "cussin" in anyone, driving mules would bring it out.

Greater Appreciation Of Nature's Art Culminates From Botany Study

Laboratory Equipment Is Complete, Efficient

This week we quote Mr. E. S. Gould, prominent member of South Side's faculty, and instructor of botany.

What are some of the important things the botany course of South Side tries to teach? "One of the most important aims of our course in botany in South Side is to help the student to see that the world is an interesting place in which to live. Many people go through life blind to the beauties of their surroundings. The study of plants in our botany classes will open up a field of enjoyment rich in its possibilities. We are born with a love of flowers. When we learn more of their structure and function and find out just how they do their work, they take on a new meaning and our appreciation deepens."

Is the scientific method in the laboratory here as complete as you would like to have it? "I am very proud of our laboratory and while some equipment is still needed, yet it is adequate for our main purposes."

Do a very large percentage of persons who take botany at high school ever follow it up after graduation? "Some of our former pupils have followed up this subject after graduation. I have in mind those who now have their Ph. D. degrees in botany and closely allied lines. My observation has been that a large percent

Ambitionless

Oh! for the life of a poet,
I'd love to write lovely verse
To make the hearts of people thrill,
To have all their cares disperse.

But I don't think I'll be a poet,
Though I ponder and rack my brain,
For my head feels quite empty—
Except for a mental pain.
—John Jackson.

of our botany graduates have continued their interest in plants, making of them hobbies which increase their joy of living.

"We aim to open the eyes of the student to the infinite possibilities of plants as a hobby. In his laboratory work the student begins to form the habit of the scientific approach to all problems. On the practical side, botany is the foundation of forestry, bacteriology, horticulture, and agriculture."

As Mr. Gould stated, the South Side botany laboratory is a very well-equipped outfit. It contains a large recitation division, experimentation tables, and a complete conservatory.

Shoes and Ships

KNITWITS—(Apologies to Junior Ballway for purloining his pet word.) But have you noticed all the fair maids who follow in the steps of their grandmothers and knit at the games? Well, we have. At the last game, Maxine Greiner and Florence Oransky found that knitting was even more interesting than the game. Dolly Scheele was also spied while she was indulging in the same occupation.

BRIGHT SAYING—shall we say, of a small child? We just couldn't help overhearing a certain conversation in room 18 the other day. Participants were Virginia Vesey, Janet Fisher, and Betty Meigs. Virginia was relating the fact that Betty's mother called her "Tina"—her father called her "Boots"—and Rex called her "Mickey." So, Janet popped up with the following question—"Do you call your dog Betty?"

NEW-COMER—or old-comer? Never-the-less, we have again in our midst, the bright face of a former well-known Archer. Our long-lost Dorothy Douglas has recently returned to our Alma Mater to resume the studies which she left so suddenly. For over a year, she has been in Oklahoma, and we're certainly glad to have her back again. Remember her tap dancing accompanied by Bob Goldstine at the piano?

EXCERPTS—Instead of measuring our highways in miles, we should measure them in kilometers. Also, there was the hardened French criminal who was found to have tattooed on his neck: "Executioner, please cut along dotted line."

TEA-PARTY—At the Student Players' initiation, the initiates acted out a Japanese wedding. Joan Bonish played the part of an official tea server. She served three cups to the bride, (Marjorie Turner), the groom, (Bill Schaeffer), and to several other members of the cast. The ceremony was quite impressive, but we couldn't figure out how so many cups of tea could come out of such a small teapot. How about it, Joan?

SLEDDERS—Don't tell anyone, but we have among the members of our student body some girls (no—they're not freshmen) who love to play in the snow. In fact, they were discovered during vacation, sliding down a steep hill on sleds. After a lot of practice, Lois Magley, Janice Cross, and several other girls have evidently acquired the technique of being able to slide down hills on their sleds without falling off.

Friendship Ideal

(By An English Teacher)

The authorship of the following little poem is anonymous. I discovered it one day when I was rummaging through some papers on my desk. Whether it was turned in to me as a theme or was placed surreptitiously (see Webster) on my desk, I do not know. However, I felt that it might be of interest to the Times; therefore, I submit it with some notes explaining some rather difficult and some peculiar passages and words.

Jo-Anne and Ann
Jo-Anne and Ann are each to each
Like the patient's arm and the doctor's leech!

Or like his dog and Whistling Sam,
Or Mary and her little lamb.

Two souls that move as they were one;
Two hearts that beat in unison.

Two minds that strive to accomplish all
Four big feet that paddle down the hall.

'Tis fine to see such friendship dear,
But sometimes I am filled with fear.

The thing that has me terribly worried
Is what the other will do when one gets married.

Notes:

1. The leech is a blood-sucking annulate worm which was used by doctors, who were sometimes called leeches themselves, to draw blood from ailing patients. The leech was usually applied to the part of the body which was affected. Probably the patient in this case had been driving too much with one hand.

2. The antecedent of the word his would seem to be Whistling Sam. It could hardly be the noun leech, for there is no case on record of a leech owning a dog.

3. The word big literally ruins the rhythm of the line in which it occurs. It seems strange that the author would put the word in. Probably his sense of rhythm yielded to his appreciation of fact, or his purpose in putting the adjective in was purely devilish. It is sometimes difficult to account for what a poet does.

4. The rhythm in the last couplet is lumpy. It is only reasonable, I think, to assume that it was purposely made so to help convey the idea of a disturbed state of mind.

Most Unpopular Person

Back in the days when there was less haste,
A checkered suit, a diamond of paste,
A gay cravat and a limber cane,
Such were the marks of a male who was vain.

But now he struts in a car with flash,
He's always out for a crazy dash.
His brakes may be worn and out of line,
But both of his horns are out of time.

He drives like a demon, even though
He hasn't a single place to go.
He cuts around when chances are slim,
Danger to others means naught to him.

He thinks that a "Stop" sign just means "Slow."
And jumps the light before it says

Soloists Feature Music Assembly

Miss Luella Feiertag, Mr. Dale Schumaker, Dr. Robert Mills Are Concert Guest Artists.

Miss Luella Feiertag, Dr. Robert Mills, and Mr. Dale Schumaker were featured as the outstanding guest artists of the first music assembly presented by the South Side music department in the first of a series of concerts to be held during the ensuing semester. The ninety-piece school band and orchestra was led and directed by Mr. Jack Wainwright.

Sousa's march, "Black Horse Troupe," and L. Arditi's "Tarantella" were presented by the band as the opening features of the concert. These numbers were immediately followed by a piccolo solo by Mr. Schumaker, "Song of the Nightingale," by Filipovsky. A modern composition by Gault, "Spiritual Rivers," followed.

"Song of Love" Given
"Song of Love" from Blossom Time was rendered by Miss Feiertag, soprano, and Mr. Mills, basso, with the band accompaniment. Because of favorable receptions and popular student request, the chorus and orchestra repeated Friml's "Symphony." Two orchestra selections "Celebrated Minuet" by Valensin, and "Sextet from Lucia di Lammermoor" by Donizetti, were given next. The chorus sang the vocal of the second piece.

"The French horn is one of the most important instruments we have, and there is a great opportunity for anyone interested in it. I also hope that some of you will be," stated Mr. Wainwright in his discussion and description of the French horn. Immediately preceding the discussion, Jean Meyer played a solo from Der Freischütz Overture by Weber, on the French horn. Mr. Wainwright explained that the French horn had originated from the cow horn. The cow horn was originally used for calling the cattle together and also in hunting. Later it was made of brass and made curved so that it could rest over the shoulder and be played with only one hand. A demonstration of the high pitch of the instrument was given.

"Serenade" Is Played
When this horn was first introduced into opera in 1720, many people were shocked. The next improvement was the addition of individual attachments for variety of tones. In 1830 valves were added, making it possible to play the scale. It might interest many to note that the French horn was the inspiration for the song "The Music Goes 'Round and 'Round."

Tidi's "Serenade" for flute and horn was played by Mr. Schumaker and Mr. Wainwright, flute and horn soloists respectively. Dr. Mills, basso, returned with "Let's Play a Rose" by Nevin. Both of these numbers had an accompaniment by the band. The band continued with "Lo, Hear the Gentle Lark," a duet for soprano and flute, by Bishop, with Miss Feiertag, soprano, and Mr. Schumaker, flute. An unusually difficult composition was presented by the band. It was "Zampa" by Herold. The final selection of the program was Sousa's march, "Stars and Stripes Forever." The piccolo obligato was played by Mr. Dale Schumaker.

There will be more music assemblies in the future. The usual five cents will be charged.

Instructor Invites All To View "Amorphophallus Rivieri" Lily

The Sacred Lily of India, a very unusual plant which blooms only once every four years and is native to India is starting to bloom in the botany laboratory.

A friend gave the plant to Mr. Elna Gould, botany instructor, about four years ago, so he has never had the opportunity to see it while in bloom. From general information that he has heard, he thinks that the plant, when in full bloom, will be from six to seven feet in height, and the blossom will be from one to two feet in diameter.

Amorphophallus Rivieri is the scientific name of this plant, which belongs to the same family as the jack-in-the-pulpit or Indian turnip. The common name is Arum.

In the winter the plant has the form of large corn, or bulb, about eight inches in diameter. During the summer it develops large compound leaves which manufacture the food and store it in the bulb.

After the bulb has been taken up in the fall, once every four years in February a flower stalk develops. This shoots up very rapidly, using the material from the bulb, usually growing from five to seven inches each day. The flower resembles the calla lily, in shape and is very dark in color. Mr. Gould expects the flower to be dark red or purple.

Since the stalk is developing very rapidly on the plant, Mr. Gould stated that blossom will develop before many days. Anyone interested in watching this plant grow or seeing it when in full bloom is invited to visit the botany laboratory in room 76 anytime before or after school.

Dwight Frost Chosen New Torch President

The South Side Torch Club held its first meeting of the new semester Monday, February 3. The new officers are Dwight Frost, president; Charles Bollman, vice-president; and Morris Boyce, secretary-treasurer. The club voted to have a recreational meeting at the Y. M. C. A. every month. The recreational committee is composed of Bob Rodell, Rodney Stair, and George Kempf, chairman. Freshmen and sophomore boys are cordially invited to join this club. The club will welcome all freshmen who have been in Pioneer Club members in the grade schools. The meetings are held each Monday in the Voorhees Room at 3:20.

Orchestra, Glee Club Entertain P-T. A. Meet

South Side contributed its orchestra and glee club to the combined Parent-Teacher Association of the three high schools, which was held last Tuesday evening at the Central auditorium. The orchestra, directed by Mr. Jack Wainwright, offered "The Celebrated Minuet," from "First Symphony," by Valensin, and also accompanied the chorus with "Symphony," from the comedy opera, "The Firefly," by Rudolf Friml, and Moses' "Sextet," from Lucia di Lammermoor.

Times Finds Error On Signs In Rooms

The Times wishes to correct the wording which appears on the signs placed in the various rooms. The signs read: Sub-scribe to the Times before you leave. They should read: Sub-scribe for the Times before you leave. Miss Harvey explained this at a recent staff meeting in this way: An idea is subscribed to, but a paper or magazine is subscribed for, the dictionary informs us.

South Side Students Give Their Opinions About Final Grades

Variety seems to be the only word which would correctly summarize the opinion of the students on their final grades of last semester. After a weary tramp through the halls, the following views were cast from a few of our colleagues:

Bob Storm—I'm happy.
Virginia Baumgartner—They're "snoozy" if you ask me, although I want to make a little better grades in some of my subjects next year.

Oscar Eggers—Fine, but Latin should have been a little higher. I'll do a little better next time, I hope.

Virginia Vesey—I think the best thing to do is not to look at my grades. And am I going to work harder next year? Answer for the teachers—of course; but then I always say that.

Rosemary Chappell—Pretty good except for civics.

Ruth Allemeier—I think my grades were just "fair"; but I intend to do better next semester, if the teachers don't change their minds.

Earle Paxton—They're O. K., but I could have done better in English and civics.

Morgan Harrison—They're O. K.—nothing special.

"Will you be living tomorrow?" was the topic of last Sunday afternoon's Forum held at the Y. W. C. A. This discussion, the first in a series of six, is sponsored by the Hi-Y and the Girl Reserve clubs of the city. Next Sunday at 2:30 o'clock the subject of "How can the United States keep out of the War?" will be discussed at the Y. M. C. A. A leader for this meeting has not yet been chosen.

Marybelle Galmeyer, from North Side Polar-Y and leader of the first meeting, brought up the following questions for discussion:

Why do we ask this question?—Statistics show that 35,000 people were killed in the U. S. last year in traffic accidents, and 954,000 were injured. In Fort Wayne last year, 16 people were killed and 594 injured in auto accidents. Do you deserve to be living tomorrow? A—Do you observe all traffic laws? B—Is your car safe? C—Does your car sound like a tractor and drive like one? D—Do you give the other fellow an even break? Or do you give him the kind of breaks you swear at him for giving you? Do you know the law governing two cars meeting at an unmarked intersection? E—Do you expect to be granted favors that you would not want everyone to receive? (Double parking just for a minute.)

Are you a good pedestrian? A—Do you always look both ways before crossing a street? B—Do you always go to the corner to cross a street? C—Do you always wait for the green light? D—Or do you like to take a chance?

1. Should we have governors on our cars?
a. If so, at what maximum speed should they be set?

2. Should we have mental and physical driver tests?
a. Of what sort?

3. Should we have new and more stringent laws?
a. Or would strict enforcing of our present laws be enough?

4. Should we have compulsory insurance, i. e. financial responsibility law?
a. Of what sort?

5. Are our highways well marked?
a. Or is the fault ours, in that we don't watch the signs?

6. Should some mark be placed on a driver who has been in an accident?
a. Mark the car?
b. Or the driver?
c. How?

7. Should there be stringent compulsory safety tests for cars? (Lights, brakes, horn, acceleration, steering, etc.)
a. Free garage tests.
b. Voluntary state police tests.
c. Compulsory state police tests.

8. Uniform traffic rules throughout U. S.?
a. How?

South Side students who are members of the Forum committee are John Edwards, the general chairman; Anna Bremer, Helen Doenges, Helen Anderson, and Dick Helm.

Mrs. Ward O. Gilbert Finds A Year Of Chemistry Enough

Mrs. Ward O. Gilbert, wife of South Side's chemistry and health teacher, declares that one year of chemistry in college was sufficient to quell any fondness for it, but considers health a more favorable subject. Mrs. Gilbert taught for ten years in schools, and was particularly connected with health when she taught in one of the Fort Wayne open air schools for two years. The children that studied there were usually frail, underweight children and had to be brought back to health as well as given an education.

Fond Of Reading

The Gilberts, and particularly Mrs. Gilbert, are quite fond of reading. Nearly all of the magazines, books, and a great deal of fiction are in the list of their reading matter. Mr. Gilbert also reads many chemistry magazines, but his wife contents herself with looking at the pretty pictures in them. She considers reading as her one be-setting sin, but would not go so far as to denounce it as a undesirable habit.

The family includes a pair of twin boys, aged ten years, and a girl nearly seven. Following the interests of their dad, they stick closely to all sorts of athletic games for amusement and their hobby. Stamp collecting follows also, however, to take up some of their time. Health doesn't bother them, at least at this time.

Meals Served Regularly

Meals are served regularly and on the dot, the dots being a 7:30 breakfast and 6:30 supper. The ambitions of the family are centered mainly on giving their children a good education and aiding them in following their chosen professions. Both Mr. and Mrs. Gilbert were brought up in the same community, went to the same school, and had almost the same ambitions, which they eventually realized in teaching. Nothing queer or unusual happened which could have changed their fate.

Mr. Gilbert considers eating as a bad habit that he would like to rid himself of, and made this the object of a New Year's resolution. His pet peeve is chewing gum, and having to wait for people keeping late appointments. Mrs. Gilbert closes with the statement, "I'm very well satisfied with my present position."

Skit Likens Tolls Of Auto To War

Sportsmanship Warning By Mr. Snider Marks Session January 1; Meyers Gives Talk.

A safety skit presented by the Lettermen's Club featured an assembly January 31. The skit was based on the war in Ethiopia. When the "Italian general" found that with all his shooting no one was being killed, he was sorely displeased; but his right-hand man, the lieutenant, had a bright idea. He had heard how thousands are killed in America each year by automobiles; so he brought one onto the "battlefield." With this, the "Italian army" killed all the "Ethiopians" and won the war.

Fred Meyers, an officer of the Lettermen's Club, spoke briefly on the serious thought which their humorous skit should bring out; namely, that automobiles kill more people than even the worst of wars.

The program proceeded with a short talk by Mr. Snider. He pointed out that South Side had always had an enviable reputation in school publications, in scholastic standing, in athletics, and in sportsmanship; but recently the sportsmanship quality has been steadily decreasing and it reached its very bottom at the South Side-Gary game. He told of six bad practices seen at the game: sitting in places other than the South Side rooting section; cheering, jeering, and booing a player who was forced to leave the game on personal fouls; booing the referee's decisions; booing and jeering a player about to shoot a free throw; and taking down decorations made through much hard work. He said that these disgusting practices should and must be stopped, or something would be done about it.

Yells and the school song ended the assembly.

New Stamp Officers Installed At Meeting

John Jackson was installed president at a meeting of the Philatelic Society in the Voorhees Room. Other new officers are Dorothy Aldridge, vice-president; Mary Ellen Kilpatrick, secretary; Emily Lepper, treasurer; and Rosemary Shea, sergeant-at-arms. Plans to reorganize the club were discussed. The officers are planning a membership drive. Each old member who brings a new member gets five cents taken off their dues providing the new member pays his, under the plan.

South Side Hopes To Finish Season With Six Victories

Losses So Far Mainly Blamed On Hard Luck

Green Lose Many Games By Close Margin; Outscore Foes Fifty-Three Points.

Recent Showing Favors Archers

Kelly Klads Lately Improved Game Makes Triumphs A Possibility; Chances Good.

With only six games remaining to be played on their twenty-tilt schedule, South Side's Archers have high hopes of adding the remainder of their opponents' names on the win column and leaving the number of losses remain at eight. If they do this, they will have twelve wins and eight losses to their credit.

Most of the games that the Kelly Klads have lost this season have been by such small margins that in spite of the fact that they have lost two more games than they have won, they have scored 53 more points than their opponents. The Archers have scored 381 points to their opponents' 328. This high scoring ability of the Archers is probably due to the "sharpshooting" of Carl Hall, John Hines, and Jim Ellenwood. Carl Hall has scored more points than any other player in the city. Ellenwood is sixth and Hines is ninth.

Lose By Small Margin
In the first three games of the season the Green won one and lost two. In the opening game on December 6, the Friddlemen won from Butler, 38-17. On December 7, the Green and White netmen lost to Michigan City and on the following Friday lost to Bluffton.

The next three games were played during Christmas vacation, the Archers winning these three games from Auburn, Pierceton, and Central Catholic.

The next three games the Kelly Klads lost, but by such a small margin that one could hardly tell which team was the better. The Redskins of North Side defeated the Green by one point 11-10. Kendallville won by one point, and Decatur by three points.

Improvement Is Shown

At this point of the season a marked improvement was shown in the Friddlemen. In the game with the Bern Bears January 17, the Southerners lost by only one point. The next game was with the Central Tigers, who had won seven games in a row. The fighting Archers went into this game as the underdogs but came out on top with the score reading, South Side 29, Central 25. The Kelly Klads next played Columbia City, but didn't seem to be clicking in this game and lost, the score reading 25 to 36.

In the game with Froebel from Gary, the Archers lost by only two points. Again the Kelly Klads lost by a small margin. The last game up to late was with Huntington. The Archers played a good brand of ball in this game and defeated Huntington by the score of 33 to 13.

To Play Six Games

In the next six games the Friddlemen have their work cut out for them, meeting three city opponents and playing three N. E. I. C. games. Those teams on the schedule yet to be played are Hartford City, North Side, Central, Goshen, Central Catholic, and Central of South Bend.

If the Archers continue to demonstrate their improved brand of ball, their chances for finishing the season without any more defeats, or only one or two more seems more than a possibility, almost a probability.

Dancers To Enter Act In Coming G. A. A. Show

Miss Smith and Miss Patterson, advisers of the Dancing Club, have announced that the members of the group will contribute to the G. A. A. Vod-Vil, to be given the 27th and 28th of February by the music and physical education departments. The girls will present a comedy ballet to the strains of "I Dream Too Much." They will be attired in formals and will be accompanied by the boys' quartet from the Glee club. Soft lights and formals will present a beautiful picture and the plastic movements of the girls will make the dance one of the most attractive sights of the Vod-Vil. It is expected that from twelve to sixteen girls will take part; all girls who wish to be in the Vod-Vil must be present at the next regular meeting to be held today.

Work on a dance for the G. A. A. exhibition to be held some time in May will begin next week as the present dance will be completed then. Miss Smith has been having charge of the club during the basketball season; but, because she is to take over the forthcoming tumbling activities, Miss Patterson will take over her duties in the Dancing Club in a week or two.

G.A.A. Plays Eight Frosh Net Clashes

Double Round Of Games Run Off Monday To Keep On Schedule; Scores Are Consistently Low.

In order to get in the necessary G. A. A. underclassmen basketball games which were on schedule, a double round of games was played off last Monday. Freshman teams 4, 1, 6, and 2 defeated teams 7, 3, 5, and 1 respectively in the first round of tilts played at 4:00 and 4:15. In the second round, teams 6, 5, 2, and 1 defeated teams 8, 7, 3, and 4 in closely contested games played at 4:00 and 4:15.

High Scorers Given

On the south court at 3:30, Frieda Schubert's Frosh 4's defeated Hazel Perry's Frosh 7's by the score of 4-0. Neva Foster and Frieda Schubert tied up the most points for the winners. At the same time on the north court, the Frosh 4's, led by Virginia Menze, bested Nadine Mueller's Frosh 1's with the score of 10-2. June Enoch scored most for the winners, while Lilly Kensler scored for the losers.

At 3:45 Norman Martin's Frosh 6 played on the south court against Ruth Luyben's Frosh 5's, and defeated them by the score of 1-0. On the north court at the same time, Sara Melly's team 8 defeated Betty Neeb's team 2, the score also being 1-0.

During the second round Norma Martin's team played Sara Melly's team on the south court at 4:00, the former winning, 7-0. Virginia Porter was high scorer for the winners. Ruth Luyben scored the winning points for her team while playing Hazel Perry's team on the north court at 4:00. The final score was 2-0. At 4:15 on the south court, Betty Neeb's team came out on top when they played Nadine Mueller's team, the final score being 12-6. Marjorie Wallace was high scorer for the winners, while Nadine Mueller scored most for the losers.

On the north court at the same time, Virginia Menze's team won again over Frieda Schubert's team by the score of 4 to 1. The scorers for the winners were June Enoch and Dorothy Bloomer, while Frieda Schubert scored for the losers.

Soph Games Played

Only two sophomore games were played, both being at 4:30. On the south court, Mae Persing's team bested Irene Niemeyer's team with the score of 13 to 8. Maxine Morrison piled up the most points for the winners, while Delores Pequignot contributed most for the winners. Barbara Raymond's team won easily over Eldora Buesking's team, the score being 11 to 2. Barbara Raymond scored most points for her team, and Martha Ann Bacon scored for the losers.

Jim Shollenberger and Corky Ryan, both seniors, have shown much scoring strength this season on North Side's quintet. Jim, a forward, is third in the city race, but is high on average of points per game. He's a deadly shot from way out and from under the basket. Corky, center of the Northerners, has been particularly adept in using his height on follow-in under-the-basket shots, and is in tenth place in the city scoring race.

Congratulations to the many girls who have been active ice skaters. Nancy Valiton, Trilby Mueller, Enita Snavelly, Eleanor Rarick, Betty Beyrau, Ada Schuelke, and Velma Connert have gained a number of points by ice skating.

Miss Patterson wishes to thank the girls for the grand response to the call for office workers. It is pleasant to know that the girls wish to serve.

It sure is grand to have a Girls' Letter Club, one of the nicest things is the refreshments served; just ask those who were at the last meeting!

A large group of knitters are seen going in and out of the G. A. A. office. It seems to be the fad and a very good one at that.

Wouldn't it be nice (and unusual) if the Sinish girls would appear to play basketball with their teams?

One of the most striking resemblances in the G. A. A. is between Enita Snavelly and her young frosh sister, Mary, so don't feel bad if we get your names switched.

Betty Rison is one of the senior girls who certainly knows how to put the ball in the basket. We have also noticed that Marge Hower seems to know a little about the game!

There is quite a group of girls in the gym classes who are either mermaids or wish to be. Many girls have signed up for swimming.

Could anyone tell us who an outstanding G. A. A. member is that looks well in trousers and has worn them on various occasions?

Story Of Tumbling, Ancient, Modern Is Told By Instructor

"Tumbling is nearly as old as man himself," said Miss Alice J. Patterson, when asked about the history of tumbling and the approaching tumbling season in G. A. A. Tumbling really originated in religious dances and rituals, when natives and savages eaped up and turned summersaults in mid-air. These actions, which also included cartwheels and handstands, are not known by those names which are in use in this present day, but were merely the savage girations which the "pe of dance called for. A number of years ago, and even in our present day, the visitor to Africa might come upon tribes performing some of the tumbling stunts in their various tribal dances.

Considered Boys' Sport

Miss Patterson stated that even while she attended college, tumbling was yet looked upon as exclusively a boy's sport. The women attending college were given two hours of instruction each Saturday morning on the tumbling stunts, with the apology that they might be called upon to teach it someday. Of course, even this did not include bar and apparatus work.

Today, tumbling is fully a girls' sport as well as a boys'! The gym classes have a special season for it as well as the G. A. A. The student leaders also have a special section in their notebooks for this work. A certain amount of copy must be handed in by them and graded.

Many Stunts Included

The gym classes include such exercises as summersaults, head and handstands. The stunts include the balance wheel, cartwheel, knee-dip, balance of three and five, Indian wrestle, square wrestle, and rocking chair, the human ball, human rocker, shoulderstand, back bend, and sheep roll. The classes have already begun their tumbling assignments. The G. A. A. will choose squads for this season as soon as the basketball schedule is completed. Miss Patterson is in charge of the advanced students, while the beginners are headed by Miss Smith.

Archers Play Good Basketball, Beat Vikings By 33-13 Score

Throwing up an air-tight defense and showing much added strength in their scoring ability, South Side's Archers played a splendid brand of ball as they handed the powerful Huntington Vikings a 33 to 13 setback on the southern hardwood last Friday evening.

The Green showed considerable improvement in every department of their game in this tilt. With Carl Hall, clever sharpshooting forward, setting the pace with fifteen points, every Archer except Speaker got into the scoring column. The Green flashed a defense which held the Vikings in check at all times and allowed them only three successful attempts from the field. The Vikings were not hitting on the one-handed shots which they have utilized to a great advantage this season, and the Archer defense gave them little chance to get set for short heaves at the basket.

Passing Is Clever

Opening the first period the Vikings went into a momentary lead only to have the Green tie the score at four-all with baskets by Hines and Hall. Clever passing enabled Lee to drive in for a short shot and then Hines sank a long angle attempt to put the Green into an 8 to 4 lead. Lee increased the lead with two foul attempts and Petrie dropped in a charity toss as the quarter ended. The Green led the proceedings by a 10 to 5 count. In the second period the Green held the Vikings to a single fielder by Meckstroth while they collected eight points. Reichert tossed in a fielder, while Close and Hall scored a fielder and a foul toss each. The half ended with the Archers holding a commanding 18 to 7 lead.

In the third period the Friddlemen increased their lead by cleverly passing around the Viking defense and blocking for short set shots. Hall hit on a beautiful long arching shot, a short attempt, and a charity toss while Lee dropped in three of the five charity tosses offered him. The Viking points were scored on a basket and a technical by Meckstroth, and foul shots by Coolman and O'Dier.

The tilt became considerably rougher in the last quarter as the Vikings attempted to break up the stalling offensive type of ball which the Green resorted to. Ed Miller, replacing Reichert when he left the game on personals, gave a good account of himself by scoring on a clever pass from Hines. Meckstroth counted the only Huntington score of the quarter from the charity stripe. Hall went down fast on a tipoff play and dumped one in with the entire Viking defense being thrown off balance. He then tossed in a foul attempt, and concluded the scoring festivities for the evening by connecting on a short shot after receiving a nice pass from Joe Close in the pivot position.

Foul-Shooting Poor

The Green offense took forty-three shots at the basket during the evening scoring on twelve of the attempts for about a thirty percent average. However, they showed a bad weakness at the foul stripe as they missed eleven of the twenty attempts offered them. The Vikings had a terrible evening as far as their shooting was concerned, and they connected on only three of the fifty-three attempts they took from the floor. This gave them an average of about six percent. They showed considerably more strength in the foul-shooting department where they counted on seven of the twelve opportunities awarded to them.

Student Leaders Help Mr. Briner In Classes

In the gym classes, Mr. Briner has many boys working for him. These boys are called Student Leaders, and their duties are to look after the lights in the shower rooms, referee games, see that the students take their showers, sometimes lead the class, and do various other duties that Mr. Briner wishes them to perform. The boys who have volunteered for this work are: in the first period, Frasel, Kempf, Antoine, Gardner, Nelson, Lamar, Jones, Garrison, Campbell, and Dammeier; in the second period, Lauer, Howell, Dearing, Bell, Rison, Seibt, Kiester, and Stoner; in the third period, Logue, Forbing, Bopp, Selzer, Koch, Stewart, Gidley, Faux, Klotz, and Bennett; in the fourth period, LeChot, Cramer, Eggers, Phelps, Bly, Hines, and Jones; in the sixth period, McAllister, Hirschman, Bell, Frost, Morton, Russell, Strahlem, Hamilton, Antryn, and Miller; in the seventh and last period, Belot, Kelsey, Kirkpatrick, Bosely, Schwan, Allway, Pio, and Boone.

Mothers' Gym Classes Started For Semester

The mother's gym classes have been started this semester as usual. The first class was held last Monday evening. These classes will be continued throughout the rest of the school year, with about ten or twelve classes being held. Miss Patterson invites any older women, whether a mother of a South Side student or not, to attend these sessions with their friends. The cost is only fifty cents, which fee is used in welfare work.

Saturday To See North Side Here

Much Depends On Outcome; Game Is To Be City Series Tilt And N. E. I. C. Clash.

South Side's Archers face the tough assignment of trying to hand setbacks to two N. E. I. C. rivals over the coming week-end when they take on the powerful North Side Redskins and the Hartford City Airdales. The tilt with North Side will also be counted as a city series competition. The followers of the Green and White quintet were greatly impressed by the fine showing made against the Huntington Vikings last week-end and are hopeful that the Green will chalk up two more wins over this week-end.

Have Erratic Record

On Friday evening the Archers will attempt to hand the Airdale quintet a setback on the southern hardwood. The Hartford City aggregation has been playing erratic ball thus far this season with their best performance being turned in early in the season when they dropped the Muncie Bearcats. Since then the Airdales have won several tilts to teams of little strength. The varsity tilt will begin at 8:30 o'clock, with the toss-up for the reserve game being at 7:15 o'clock. Craney and Geller will officiate. The tilt with North Side is of special importance to both teams. The Redskins need a win to stay in the N. E. I. C. race as well as to remain in the running for the city series championship. In the case of both the conference and city series races the Redskins hopes are dependent upon South Side dumping the Central Tigers in their coming clash. The Archers are especially desirous of wins in both of their tilts. The Green must defeat the Airdale if they hope to continue in the city series race. By defeating the Airdales the Archers can force on through to the city title by dropping Central and Central Catholic in their coming tilts.

Redskins Use Zone

The Redskins have been using a zone defense this season with great success until last week when the Central Tigers ran roughshod over the Redskins. Coach Nulf will continue to use the zone defense to beat the Central Tigers. Shollenberger and Boedeker had the Redskins offense with Corky also showing plenty of sniping ability. The guard positions are handled by Goodman, Miller, and Bojinnoff. The Redskins-Archers clash will start at 8:30 o'clock with the reserve squads tussling together at 7:15 o'clock. Officials will be Strohmeier and Fink.

Wrestling, Boxing Practice Continues

Entries Still Accepted, As Boys Train For Tourney March 10; Last Year's Winners Listed.

Training for intramural wrestling and boxing is going on under way. Briner has been working with the boys, showing them how to procure holds and how to break them. The boys have been working hard at calisthenics and other work to get in condition for the tournament that is to be held on March 10. Mr. Briner has been boxing and wrestling to everyone in South Side this year, and he expects everyone to come out, and to be out as soon as possible to get in the best physical condition.

Some of the boys out for the matches are Feichter, Bennett, and Smoak. The weight divisions are: 100-106 pounds, midweight; 107-113 pounds, lightweight; 115-125, bantamweight; 125-135, 135-145, 145-155, and over. The results of last year's bouts are: in the midweight, Clyde Brown was the champion, the flyweight was won by Grigal, bantamweight by Feichter, 125-135 Squires, 145 pounds won by Baney, and the 155 pounds and over won by Raymond. A year there were sixty-two boys take part in boxing. This is the best turnout that has ever been recorded. Mr. Briner hopes for more to participate this year than last. The results in last year's wrestling in the midweight, 100 pounds under, Nussbaum was the winner; flyweight, 100-112 pounds, was won by Smoak; in the bantamweight, he was the winner; in the featherweight, Pequinot was the winner; lightweight, Blume and Funder were tied to a draw. Both boys were exceptionally good wrestlers. The welterweight, Baney was the winner, the middle saw Eschoff the winner, the light heavy was won by Feichter, and the heavyweight was won by Smoak.

Bob Nulf

North Side's Redskins will be led into battle against South Side's Archers here Saturday night by Coach Bob Nulf, who is in the business of turning out crackerjack teams for North Side. This year's team is no exception, and a battle royal is promised.

Sportlights

The Wanamaker Mile, feature of the annual Millrose games, produced an amazing upset when the hitherto untried Glenn Cunningham faltered in his sprint and was beaten to the tape by both Joe Mangan and Gene Venzke. For three years Venzke has been attempting to show the barrel-chested Kansan his heels, and last Saturday night Venzke succeeded, only himself to trail another man to the tape. Cunningham was accused of blocking Mangan in their sprint for the tape a week before and Mangan's victory in the Wanamaker Mile leads many to believe in Mangan's superiority.

Many baseball trades are still on the fire and rumors are running rampant as to what will occur at the annual baseball spring convention. Both the St. Louis Cardinals and the Chicago Cubs are openly after Curt Davis, young Philly hurler, and the Cubs are expected to send Chuck Klein back to his old stamping grounds in order to get Davis.

The Yankees are still after a second baseman but it looks as if the aging Tony Lazzeri will start the season at the keystone sack, since the price set on the heads of Odell Hale of Cleveland and Buddy Myer of Washington seems a little too much for even Col. Ruppert. Joe DiMaggio, recruit outfielder of the Yankees, is starting his career as holdout early. He returned his initial Yankee contract unsigned. This astonishing young man is, in his first year in the major league, holding out for a salary larger than that which some of the old hands are now receiving.

The Big Ten basketball race has seemingly turned into the question, "Who can beat Indiana or Purdue?" The two Indiana teams have been bowling over all opposition and they seem destined to wind up in a deadlock for the conference title as Purdue and Indiana do not meet this year because of the Big Ten's rotating schedule. Iowa, which started out with two startling Big Ten victories, has fallen back to its predicted level; and when the Hawkeyes lose Barko, a sharpshooting forward, in February, they will offer little opposition to their remaining Big Ten games. Northwestern, Michigan, and Ohio State all have up-and-coming ball clubs that are likely to knock off the leaders at any time; Illinois and Wisconsin have failed to live up to expectations, while Chicago, or rather Bill Haarlow, and Minnesota seemed doomed to the league cellar.

It seems that Joe Louis' opponents should have learned by now not to be so optimistic before fighting the Brown Bomber. Carnera, Levinsky, Uzcudum, Retzlaff, and Baer, not to mention many others, were seemingly confident that when they left the ring after fighting Louis, they would leave the Detroit negro shaken and badly beaten. In every case, the optimistic opponent has had to receive assistance to leave the ring himself. Braddock and Schmeling each seem confident that he will be Louis' Waterloo. Will they go the way of all the rest? This brings up another question: just how long is Braddock going to put off his fight with Louis?

Lime City Subs Beat S.S. 19-17 As Rally Fails

Lack Of Time Dooms Fourth Quarter Push; Sixteen Archer Hopefuls Play.

Falling just short of the Huntington total in a spasmodic scoring effort late in the final quarter, the Wavelets succumbed to the Huntington reserves by the score of 19-17.

Giving the frantic pressmen writer's cramp by inserting no less than sixteen players, Coach Burl Friddle gave a group of "hopefuls" a chance to show their stuff before the home crowd. Although the result wasn't wholly gratifying, a great many young players nevertheless got their chance. After the recruits played, a see-saw affair most of the way, Coach Friddle inserted his first five in the last quarter and they almost surmounted the 10 point lead held by Huntington. Six players broke into the scoring for the Wavelets with Budde and Bolyard sharing high point honors, scoring four points each. Bucheltz and Zinsmeister were high for Huntington, each gaining five points.

The scoring in the first quarter was almost entirely limited to free throws as Budde and Fratzel dropped in a charity toss apiece while Kitzmiller converted two. For Huntington, West, Bucheltz, and Guest dropped in free throws, while Zinsmeister scored a fielder.

In the second period, Huntington increased their lead to four points as Zinsmeister's foul toss was sandwiched between two pointers by Hannon and Fullerton. The South Side scoring was confined to a field goal by Roth. In the third quarter Huntington widened the gap to 16-8 on fielders by Guest and Zinsmeister, coupled by two charity tosses by Bucheltz. The final quarter was featured by a sensational South Side rally which ended just two points short of the desired total.

The final contributions to the South Side scoring was made by Budde, Fratzel, Miller and Bolyard who scored field goals and Budde, who dropped in a foul toss.

Archers Once More See The Basket, Hit .279 Average Against Vikings

South Side's Archers regained their basket eyes in Friday's tilt against Huntington, hitting field goals at .279, and foul throws at .450, while Huntington hit .058 and .583 averages in the two clashes.

Court Capers

Hoagland comes through for the country championship! This was the surprise that court fans received several weeks ago. Leo, the favorite of the tourney, was defeated in the semi-final game by Elmhurst. Thus we see that the outstanding teams in the different conferences do not always come out on top in tournament competition. South Side has not done so well in N. E. I. C. action, but there is a sectional coming soon. Enough said!

South Side team members had better practice foul shots for an evening or more. The varsity athletes missed eleven out of twenty fouls, while Huntington members made eight out of eleven.

The Huntington basketball team is rather handicapped this season because of the fact that Coolman and O'Dier, veteran members of the squad, are out of action much because of injuries. CoColman has a bad ankle and a weak knee. O'Dier has a torn ligament which he received while playing football.

Two of South Side's athletic products, Jack Fleming and Chet Ensley, will be on the Northwestern University's mile relay team during the indoor and outdoor track seasons. Fleming, a junior and co-captain of the squad, has gained prominence as one of the nation's best half-milers. Ensley is but a sophomore and is seeing competition for the first time as a collegian.

Dan Zehr, former South Side student, has started training preparations in quest of a position on the 1936 Olympic team. Dan was sixteen years old when he won a place on the United States swimming team four years ago. He placed fourth in the 100-meter backstroke. This year, however, he may compete in the free style events in the Olympics instead of the backstroke.

To Be Captain Of Industry Is High Hope Of Joe Close

Perhaps in the future one will read of a famous steel king named Joseph Close. The memories of many ex-South Siders will go back to the day that long, lanky, six-foot two-inch boy named Joe Close played center on South Side's reserve and varsity teams. Although Joe did not name this as his vocation, it is probable to think this because of the interest that he takes in his work at the Joselyn Steel Mills.

From Harrison Hill

Joe was born in Fort Wayne on February 1. It might have been a cold day, but, for some reason or other, he can't remember. Joe acquired his grade school education at Harrison Hill, where he was noted for his basketball playing. Mr. Tudor, now teaching at South Side, was his coach. When he was a young and tender freshman, he went out for basketball, and immediately landed a berth on the reserve squad. During his freshman and sophomore years, he was on the reserves. In his junior year, he was advanced to the varsity. During his years on the reserve squad, the Wavelets enjoyed an enviable record. Joe has also shown some fine work on the tennis squad, of which he is a member.

In the summer of 1934, South Side fans became worried because it appeared doubtful that Joe would play. The reason for this is that while Joe was picking cherries, the law of gravity came into effect, causing Joe to hit the ground with tremendous force, breaking both of his arms. This unforgettable event occurred at Leo.

The Boy Is Bashful

Joe is a very bashful boy. When told that this was going in the Times, he blushed; and it was with the utmost persuasion that he finally consented to talk.

In basketball he is a very consistent player and did much towards South Side's victory over Central. But he has not escaped without any tough

Redskins Schedule Eight Grid Games

Laporte, Replacing Lima, Is Only New Rival Listed In North Side's 1936 Football Program.

The North Side football team will take the field in their 1936 gridiron campaign next fall against the customary eight opponents, with one new team in these eight. There will be three games on the home stamping grounds while seven of the eight contests will take place under the arc lights.

The new addition to the Redskins' schedule is Laporte, to where the Redskins will journey for the first time. Laporte, taking the place of Lima on last year's schedule, is coached by the former Indiana star, Chuck Bennett, and can usually be counted on to turn out a strong outfit.

The schedule follows:
September 11—Auburn, here.
September 18—Laporte, there.
September 25—Goshen, here.
October 2—Central Catholic.
October 10—Central.
October 16—Decatur, here.
October 23—South Side.
October 30—Huntington, there.

Discuss Olympics In German Group

Club Hears John Jackson, Kate Simminger, And Verna Holtman; Installs Sparkman Head.

Scenes of former Olympics and the preparation which Germany is now making for the 1936 Olympics was the subject of three talks given before the German Club Wednesday, January 29, by John Jackson, Katherine Simminger, and Verna Holtman.

Installation of officers was also held at the meeting. The new officers are: Don Sparkman, president; Harriet Basford, vice-president; Elizabeth Neff, secretary; Betty Rison, treasurer; and Verna Holtman, Inter-Club Congress representative.

Olympics Are Discussed
Verna Holtman spoke on the preparation Germany is making for the Olympic festivities. "The Grunewald Stadium, built for the 1916 Olympics, which were never held because of the war, was selected as the site. Chancellor Hitler visited the proposed site and immediately decided that an extensive reconstruction was necessary. Accordingly, the entire grounds of the Grunewald race course were acquired by the government for the Reich's Sports field. It will include a 'Hall of German Sport' which will house the offices of the Reich's Sport Leader and Reich's committee for physical culture, and an arena for big events."

The World Prepares was the subject of Katherine Simminger's speech. She explained the different ways each country prepares for the Olympics. "In countries outside Europe, where the climate is favorable, there have already been performances this season worthy of attention. In America it is the policy to strive for top form at the beginning of the season. American athletes try to reach their peaks as soon as possible. They do not use the steps of a gradual development, and that is perhaps why American has never produced a long-distance runner of world reputation. Apart from this one disadvantage, America has always accomplished her end—an Olympic victory."

John Jackson described the scene of the Olympics outside Berlin. "The great Olympic ski jump will be used only for the special events in the Olympic winter games. The jumping competitions in the combinations event will be carried out on the 'Little Olympic Jump,' which lies parallel to its big brother. During the past winter, it was possible for the first time in central Europe to provide sufficient illumination for night events. When the jumper suddenly soars out, he is illuminated in the air by giant spotlights, and the lands safely on the brilliantly lighted slope."

At the next meeting, which will be held next Wednesday, Don Sparkman, Eric Beyer, and Harriet Basford will continue the series.

Champ Displays Speed In Typing

Chester Soucek, Ace of Amateur Typists, Demonstrates Before Group Of Commercial Pupils.

Chester Soucek, world's amateur champion typist, gave a typing demonstration the second period last Monday before members of the advanced shorthand and typing class and Miss Covatt's second period shorthand class. Mr. Soucek won his title in an international contest, during which he typed at a speed of 118 words per minute, net, using the five-letter word as a basis for figuring.

"You should type as fast as you can without making an error and no faster," he said in a short talk which he made before the demonstration. He went on to say that he attributed much of his speed to concentration and rhythmic typing.

Begins With Drills
He opened the demonstration by doing some warming-up drills which he uses to develop speed. Then he typed at the rate of 127 words per minute, after which he typed a copy which he had memorized. The latter can be done at an even greater rate of speed because the motions become purely mechanical and do not require any thinking.

He did an exercise composed of very short words, which also allows a much greater speed. After this, Mr. Soucek demonstrated the manner in which some typists type, with feet entangled on chair legs, sloshing position, arms moving up and down at a rapid rate, back-spacing, strikeouts, erasing, and stopping to look at the copy.

Answers Various Questions
He then showed how the paper is changed in the international contests, first sliding one paper out of the typewriter and another in at lightning speed, then doing it slowly and explaining the various motions necessary.

While typing very fast, Mr. Soucek volunteered to answer any questions that were asked him, and proceeded to answer in detail inquiries made by students and teachers.

At Mr. Murch's request, he typed at a rate of slightly over 60 words a minute, which is the objective of the Typing 4 course at South Side; this seemed extremely slow compared to his former speed.

Mr. Soucek has also appeared before the commercial departments of other schools in the city.

Questionnaire Is Held By C. Of C.

Chamber Of Commerce Sponsors High School Queries Monday, Tuesday On Vocational Topic.

The Chamber of Commerce recently published a questionnaire for the high school pupils of Fort Wayne. Monday and Tuesday morning it was filled out by the pupils of South Side in the Home Room periods. The object of the questionnaire was to find out what the students of Fort Wayne think would improve the business in Fort Wayne.

The Chamber of Commerce has just concluded a series of twelve Business Clinics in which over 1,200 business and professional men and women were asked what they thought they could do to accelerate business in Fort Wayne.

Such questions as: What vocation do you hope to follow? What University or College do you expect to attend? What do you think would help business in Fort Wayne?

High school students in many other cities, during the past few months, have answered similar questionnaires and many helpful suggestions were received.

Cold Wave Seems To Have Struck City In Big, Big Way

It seems that the groundhog certainly must have seen his shadow! Now we are doomed to suffer six weeks more of these "cold-waves" which seem to have been striking us on an average of at least three times a week.

The latest one, which "struck" last week-end, evidently is the worst one yet. Last Tuesday morning I saw one of our distinguished English teachers (Miss Rinehart, by name) standing on a street corner, huddled into a ball, waiting miserably for a street car. Nor is she alone in her sufferings. We are all in the same boat, so to speak, for frozen noses and frozen toes seem to be only too common.

Numerous students have made Miss Montgomery's days busy ones by coming late every day. All the old excuses have been hashed over, and, if anyone were curious enough to ask her, probably she has heard several new ones. Street cars were late, street cars were stalled, automobiles wouldn't start, alarm clocks froze up and wouldn't ring, all these and many more are heard as excuses for tardiness.

And then there's the student's side of the matter. Can he help it if the ice was frozen so solidly in front of the garage that the door would not open until he and his father had practically melted the ice and thawed out the door? All these things take time, and it is no wonder that poor Billy Brown and Bobby Green are late every morning.

The North Pole has nothing on us. What with Niagara Falls frozen solid and our own streets, sidewalks, and yards frozen into one solid sheet of ice, we wouldn't be inconvenienced any more if we were at the North Pole.

But then, think of all the fun we can have when our chores are done (if ever). We can ski, skate, and slide. The reservoir is frozen and offers a place for us to indulge in our winter sports. However, we seem something in the papers about flooding a playground to make a safe place for the younger generation to enjoy a few healthful winter activities? Even though we can't stand up on this ice to walk to school, we can still skate, can't we?

French Club Officers Welcome Members

Club Constitution, Point System Are Explained At Business Meeting By Mildred Rudig.

An usually large number of new members were present at the first French Club meeting of this semester, which was held last Thursday, January 30, in the Voorhees Room. The new students were given a welcome by Virginia Woods, incoming president. The recently elected executive body began their duties with this meeting. They are as follows: President, Virginia Woods; vice-president, Maria Haven; secretary, Mildred Rudig; and point recorder, Vivian Hickman.

Plan Travel Film

The club constitution and the point system were read and explained to the new members by Mildred Rudig. Miss Olive Perkins, faculty adviser, showed a sample of the club pin, saying that only seniors who had worked and been of service to the club were eligible to receive one; but other seniors who wished to get a pin could purchase one upon graduation. She then read a letter from a film company which stated that the French travel films that were requested could be sent sometime during March or April. Nancee Newell was appointed to take charge of the arrangements in connection with the showing of them here at school.

Program Committee Chosen

Maria Haven selected the following persons to compose the new program committee, whose duty it is to plan the club's theme for the school year: Bob Locke, Jean Bollman, and Irene Ehlinger. A meeting of this committee will be held soon.

At the conclusion of the business meeting, a French song was sung and some games were played. A get-acquainted game was played, each person getting ten toothpicks and then asking each other questions in French which were answered by "yes" or "no". Whenever a person answered a "yes" with "no" he had to give up a toothpick. The one having the most won. Another talking game was played at which Lillian Gable won a "Tootsie Roll" as a prize.

South Siders! Incite School Spirit By Singing Pep Song

Right here in South Side High you'll always see us smile, Because we're happy, happy all the while. We wear a big broad grin the whole day long, and always sing this merry song, Oh gee, it's great to be in South Side High. Right here in South Side High we always have much fun, Especially when our lessons and our work's all done, We always back our team in every fray, we laugh, we sing, we shout hurra, Oh gee, it's great to be in South Side High.

Just wait 'till we get through with Central's team tonight; They'll know those South Side Archer boys are full of fight. We'll trim those Tigers down to normal size, And they'll get a big surprise when they tangle with South Side High tonight. Our team has got the punch, vitality, and vim, We'll support them with our yells and help them win, We'll shoot a little arrow from our bow, and lay those big bad Tigers low, When we get through with Central's team tonight.

What's Your View? Will Weather Ever Quit Zero Marker?

Will it ever get warm was the question asked some of the students. They answered this question in the following way:

Lida Mae Millburg—Sure! Some day. Vivian Hickman—There will be a long cold spell if it doesn't get warm. Royal Steiner—Some day soon. Betty Eisenbacher—Give it time. Betty Harnish—No. Audrey Fels—No. Just back from Florida. Walter Jackson—Sometime, hope not right away. Vera Walker—Wouldn't be surprised. Walter Cook—I doubt it. Lois Daughtery—Don't know. Je ne sais pas. Jeanette James—I suppose when the time changes. Vera Jane Wells—I don't know. Ruth Luyben—Don't suppose so, must be a gag. Helen Frances—I don't know. Why? Will it? Martha Zelt—If it doesn't get warm, there will be no spring love affairs. Dorothy McClellan—Uh huh! Mr. Tudor—Afraid not. Don't think I will play golf this year. Marian Owens—I suppose so. At the end of this month. Velma Yoder—Don't think so, but I hope so.

Dance Is Feature Of Nautical Party

"Anchors Aweigh," "Shipmates Forever" Sung By Members; Miriam Lickert Plays Harp.

So-Si-Y's semi-annual membership party, which was held on Tuesday in the Greeley Room, was featured by nautical games, songs, and readings all carrying out the chosen theme for the meeting, "All Aboard." Verna Holtman, opened the meeting reading the poem, "My Ships," as the devotional part of the meeting. Following the reading, the members of the club sang "Anchors Aweigh," and "Shipmates Forever," accompanied by the piano by Miriam Lickert. Miriam afterward played as a harp solo, "Red Sails in the Sunset."

A sailor's tap dance, performed by members of the regular dancing classes under the direction of Miss Alice Jane Patterson, girls' physical education director, followed on the evening program. After the dance, Geneva Shearer, chairman of the programs for the semester, introduced a novel "Ship" game. Suggestions of words ending in the syllable "ship" were given on mimeographed sheets, and the members were asked to fill in as many as possible.

After the game, all of the members of the club assembled in the groups assigned on their "passports" and elected their captains. The groups gave as stunts various songs, among them were "Johnson from Wisconsin," "Red Sails in the Sunset," "Old MacDonald Had a Farm," "John Brown's Flivver," "The Music Goes 'Round and 'Round," and the school song. Refreshments consisting of Dixie cups and cookies decorated by clever anchor designs were served at the conclusion of the meeting.

Friday's Pep Session To Feature New Stunt

A Centralite will be the main feature of the pep session which will be held tomorrow for the purpose of peping up the students before the final clash on Saturday evening. The pep meeting is to be given by the letter girls. The stunt will be under the direction of Ruth Berning and her committee which is composed of Anita Snavely, Marjorie Cartwright, Marjorie Hower, Edna Disler, Annie Baumgartner, and Betty Harnish.

Ruth would not give any hint as to the nature of the stunt, but she said that it would be very different from others which have been held. At other pep meetings our contestant has usually been the victim of some practical joke; Ruth stated that this would not hold true, but that Central would be put on an equal basis with South Side.

Ex-Convict Gives Talk On His Experiences

Nelson Covey, who has been in penitentiaries, jails, and reform schools for nineteen years, spoke to the pupils in the study hall last Wednesday. When he was only eight years old, he was in a reform school. He was in jail five years with Dillinger. When he was out of prison, he secured a very reliable position; but when his employers found out that he was an ex-convict, he was immediately dismissed. From his experiences in prison, he is thoroughly convinced that crime does not pay.

Mr. Wainwright is conducting this band, which is now working on several new marches and college melodies. Mr. Wainwright plans to spend much time teaching the members how to blow their instruments so as to get a good tone and those students, who advance, will have a chance for position in the concert band if a regular member fails to attend practices. The "military" band has been requested to turn in all uniforms to Myron Jones in effort to equip fully the members of the concert band.

Mr. Herbert Voorhees stated that he is feeling better, getting along fine. He is able to be up and around at his home and expects to be back teaching before very long. Until he does return, Ward O. Gilbert and Mrs. C. A. Bex are taking charge of his classes.

Principal And Teachers Are Tea Speakers

Miss Van Gorder, Mr. Snider, Mr. Murch, And Mr. Flint Address Mothers.

The freshman mothers' tea was held Monday afternoon in the cafeteria. Due to the cold weather approximately only thirty-five mothers attended. The principal part of the program included talks by R. Nelson Snider, Mr. Murch, Mr. Flint, and Miss Van Gorder.

Mr. Snider stressed the importance of extra-curricular activities, as well as the importance of obeying school rules. He gave several illustrations. One illustration was that of a boy who was assigned to an eighth period. As this boy worked after school, his father called up to see if the boy couldn't be excused. This exemption, of course, would never lead to obeying of school rules.

Clubs Aid Attitudes

"Clubs are the means by which we can train a right attitude in the students," Mr. Snider said. The second speaker, Mr. Earl H. Murch, head of the commercial department, spoke about the commercial course with its many advantages. He said that nearly one-third of the students of South Side are enrolled in the commercial course. The commercial course includes pupils in both the vocational and the general course. The vocational is for students who are very good in English and have a high average. The general course is for the students who have less ability. In conclusion, Mr. Murch stated, "Everyone at some time or other is bound to have some business dealings; therefore, this course should be of great importance to each and every one of us."

College Course Discussed

The third speaker, Mr. A. Verne Flint, spoke upon the college preparatory course. He stated, "A college preparatory course taken satisfactorily will admit a person to college." He also said, "This course provides a general cultural training for the student."

Miss Pauline Van Gorder, the last speaker, spoke about the general course. She said that the general course has several definite objectives. First, it offers a general training for pupils who want to graduate from high school. Secondly, pupils who do not intend to go to college can specialize in the particular training which will be most beneficial to them.

The speakers were introduced by Mrs. Kelsey, who was the program chairman for the meeting. She gave a short welcome speech. Mrs. Ray, president of the Parent-Teacher's organization, mentioned that more parents should attend the music assemblies, because they are really worthwhile.

Sunshine Club Skating Plans Are Complete

Betty Beyrau Is In General Charge Of Annual Affair To Be Held Friday Night.

South Side's Sunshine Club chapter will hold its second annual skating party at Bell's Rink on the Lincoln Highway. Entry to the skating party, contrary to the announcement which appeared in last week's Times to the effect that the event would take place last Friday evening.

Betty Beyrau, who is in general charge of all of the arrangements for the affair, has announced that Valentine favors will be presented to everyone who attends the party. She said that a skating bus will leave South Side at 7:30 o'clock. Several hundred students and guests are expected to attend.

On February 20, which is the date of the next meeting of the club, the members of the winning ticket-selling team will be entertained by the members of the losing team. Geraldine Valiton and Marjorie Gouss are the winners of the two teams which were organized several weeks ago.

Chaperones for the affair are the club's advisers, the Misses Mary and Edith Crowe; Miss Martha Pittenger, dean of girls; and the parents of the former and past presidents of the club, the Messrs. and Mesdames F. A. Beyrau, A. J. Noll, Floyd Schuler, and Otto Dirmeyer.

The officers of the club are Hazel Noll, president; Jean Hildebrand, vice-president; Dorothy Zaegel, secretary; Eileen Fuelling, treasurer; Mary Ellen Kilpatrick, sergeant-at-arms; and Francine Schuler, Inter-Club Congress representative.

Eighth Period For Breaking School's Rules

Attendance Will Be Checked Daily By Mr. Heine; Other Teachers To Assist.

Since many students had been taking advantage of the fact that eighth periods were not being assigned to those who broke school rules, Mr. Snider is renewing that form of punishment. The following is a bulletin which Mr. Snider issued on eighth periods: "Some form of detention seems unavoidable, inasmuch as this is about our only method of correcting violations of school rules and regulations. Consequently, we have re-established our traditional period after school, which started last Monday."

"The eighth period will run in the following fashion. Mr. Heine will check attendance each evening, immediately at the beginning of the period. Other teachers will be assigned, in rotation, to take charge of the room for the entire period, their duty being merely that of supervision."

"The following assignments will be effective:

February 10-11—Miss Perkins.
February 12-13—Miss Hemmer.
February 14-17—Miss Kelley.
February 18-19—Mr. Chappell.
February 20-21—Miss Covak.

Logarithm Review Is X, Y, Z's Subject

At February 6 Meeting Mildred Foellinger Holds High Mark; Team Takes First In Drill.

Logarithms will be the subject of the X. Y. Z's meeting to be held this evening in Miss Fiedler, the faculty adviser's room. The regular drill practice will be followed by the reading and discussion of the constitution. Logarithms was also the subject of the last meeting of the group, which was held on Thursday, February 6. It is probable that this subject will be continued for several meetings, because it is very complicated and there are many varieties to be covered in this field. It is desired that all members bring with them to these meetings their trigonometry books or some other mathematical book containing a five-place table of logarithms.

Mildred Foellinger was the highest scorer at the last meeting of the club. She had a total of thirteen points. The second highest score was made by John Will, who is president of the club.

The girls' group, which is Team X, won the evening's contest with a total score of fifteen points. Team Z, captained by Richard Meyer, was second with nine points.

Several of the members of the X. Y. Z's have planned to surprise the group with a very novel program some time in the near future. Just what this program is to be is anticipated with a great deal of interest.

Plan Health Trip

The applied arts class of the Union High School at Santa Maria, California, is planning a trip to the health clinic and a nursery to view the work of these institutions.

Annual Tea Dance Of Semester Friday

All freshmen are given a special invitation to attend the Valentine tea dance, the first of the semester, tomorrow afternoon in the school cafeteria.

Jacqueline Hench and Virginia McNamara, dressed as valentines, will feature the program. The school orchestra will play for the dance. Valentine favors will be given to all that attend.

The committee composed of Harriet Yapp, Rosemary Lehman, Virginia Vesey, and Ruth Garrison, who is taking the place of Bernadette Dygert, are in charge of the arrangements.

Travel's Subject To Be On Japan

Leona Menze Will Be In Charge Of Next Meeting; Officers Are Installed On February 5.

Installation of the new officers for this semester was held at the meeting of Travel Club Wednesday in the Greeley Room. Virginia Baumgartner, the outgoing president, conducted the installation. The officers installed to serve this semester are: Catherine Allendorph, president; Walter Prange, vice-president; Virginia Greiner, secretary; Lorraine Meyer, treasurer; Martha Franz, foreign secretary; Marjorie Ruhl, Inter-Club Congress representative; and Donald Hickman, sergeant-at-arms.

Since the meeting was devoted to Red Cross, Miss Marjorie Snyder, secretary of the Allen County Junior Red Cross, gave a talk on how Travel Club could co-operate with the Junior Red Cross. The program was concluded with the serving of novel refreshments, which consisted of a red cross made out of valentine hearts.

The scene of the next meeting will be in Japan. An outside speaker has been chosen to speak on the subject, "Traveling Through Japan." Refreshments will be served at the conclusion of the meeting. The committee in charge of the meeting is Leona Menze, chairman; Helen Walbert, Geneva Shearer, Mary Ann Park, Betty Broxon, Mary Wetzel, Virginia Menze, June Shelley, June Holzworth, Dick Miller, Margaret Crankshaw, Tom Sellers, and Calvin Shultz.

Yearbook Starts Freshman Drive

Mid-Term Underclassmen Urged To Subscribe For The Totem, Have Their Pictures Taken.

Wednesday morning initiated the annual drive for Totem subscriptions among the mid-term freshmen. Four members who visited the freshmen home rooms urged the newcomers to subscribe and to have their pictures taken immediately. The price for freshmen is two dollars, which includes, during the campaign, the subscriber's name in gold, engraved on the cover of his Totem. Pictures will be taken within a week, but the freshmen are urged to pay their twenty-five cents immediately. The following agents will be in the home rooms to take subscriptions and money for the pictures: Dorothy Crabill, room 30; Mary Martha Hobrock, room 8; Ruth Adler, room 76; and Louis Bonsib, room 85.

All seniors who have just entered South Side this semester should report to the Totem office immediately so that arrangements can be made for their senior pictures.

Louis Bonsib also announced that any underclassmen who would like to see his picture may stop at the Totem office, however, these may not be taken out of that place.

Prizes!

Attention—All subscribers—all who intend to subscribe—all who could subscribe—Starting this week and each week following twenty names of student subscribers will appear in the ads of the paper. If your name appears bring the ad to the Times Room and give it to the advertising manager or business manager and receive a gift from the advertiser.

"Jack And Jill" Theme Of Hi-Y, So-Si-Y Dance

Arrangements Committee Is Composed Of Helen Anderson, Morgan Harrison.

Attendance Prizes To Be Presented

Hop To Follow Central Tilt; Tickets Are Twenty-Five Stag; Thirty-Five Couple.

The So-Si-Y Girl Reserves and the South Side Hi-Y Club will join in giving a sport dance Saturday evening in the Greeley Room, following the Central-South Side basketball game. Approximately one hundred couples are expected to attend the dance.

"Jack and Jill" is the theme which was selected by a joint meeting of the club officers. Anna Bremer, Bill Willson, and their committee have arranged the decorations for the affair.

Two Meetings Held

Tickets for the dance were distributed at separate meetings of both So-Si-Y and Hi-Y clubs on Tuesday. They may be purchased at any time from members of either club. The price is thirty-five cents a couple or twenty-five cents stag. Fred Meyers and Virginia Greiner, assisted by Bud Feichter and Mildred Foellinger have charge of the ticket sale.

The orchestra committee is composed of Martha Franz and Bill Hoblet, assisted by Ned Henslee and Geneva Shearer.

The arrangements committee is composed of Morgan Harrison and Helen Anderson.

"Jack And Jill" Prizes

Attendance prizes will be given to the Jack and Jill holding the lucky numbers which will be drawn sometime during the dance.

Mary Michaels and Dick Dochterman have been selected to serve as co-chairmen for the publicity committee. Their assistants will be Paul Boyer, Charles Stone, Helen Doenges, and Mary Ann Park.

The chaperones for the dance will be Mr. and Mrs. Merle Abbott, Mr. and Mrs. R. Nelson Snider, Mr. A. Verne Flint, Mr. Henry Chappell, Mr. C. A. Bex, Mr. E. S. Gould, Mr. Ward O. Gilbert, Miss Martha Pittenger, Miss Hazel Miller, Miss Beulah Rinehart, and Mr. and Mrs. M. W. Harrison.

The decorations committee, which is composed of Bill Willson, Anna Bremer, Ed Leitz, Miller, Makey, John Edwards, Constance Hang, Harriet Basford, Lorraine Quackenbush, and Virginia Greiner have arranged some very clever and novel ideas for the decorating of the Greeley Room.

More On Boards

Students should watch the bulletin boards for further information concerning the dance arrangements.

Ruth Adler and James Dern with their committee will sell tickets at the same Saturday evening. Stag tickets will not be sold until that time.

Besides the appointed committees the officers of each club are also taking a part in the arrangements for the dance.

Officers of the So-Si-Y Club are: President, Helen Anderson; vice-president, Numa Clausen; secretary, Helen Doenges; and treasurer, Mary Ann Park.

Officers of the South Side Hi-Y Club are: President, Morgan Harrison; vice-president, Fred Meyers; secretary, Nelson Miller; and treasurer, Richard Snook.

Advisers of the Hi-Y Club who are lending their support are Mr. Ward Gilbert and Mr. Burl Friddle. The advisers of So-Si-Y are Miss Beulah Rinehart, Miss Hazel Miller, Miss Eleanor Smeltzly, and Miss Alda Jane Woodward.

Let's Not—Again

Our team's recent victories have been very pleasing, very thrilling, and have shown us that we definitely have a team of promise—and fulfillment. When everything is going all right, it's easy to be good sports. If, and we hope it doesn't happen, but if our team does have some bad times later on, don't repeat the mistake we made at a recent game. We've a reputation to maintain which we should never spoil again.

Just in case that you didn't know it, we would like to state that when a man has his back to a wall he is really up against it.

We now see the value of cheap tabloids. They teach us to appreciate good newspapers.

The difference between a genius and an ordinary man is that one has learned to concentrate on a single subject.

A Different Valentine

No hearts and flowers, no lace-trimmed bits of sentiment, no gaily printed messages—what, no valentines? Well, not as many as we grow older, perhaps, but February 14 is still Valentine's Day; and it is still set apart as somewhat different from the rest of the days. It would not be amiss for us to remember those who matter to us on this day with some special act of kindness which we somehow always mean to do but never find time to accomplish. It would be the best valentine of all; and, besides, we can be somewhat sentimental on one day, can't we?

We can't blame the crooks and kidnappers too much, for without them we would be without any material for our newspapers.

Britain wants peace. Probably because they can't find any other nation to fight for them this time.

A politician is the man who has to be nice to those who don't like him, and at the same time gruff and harsh to the ones that do.

Neither Storm Nor Snow Cools Desire For Education

We commend those pupils who during the past weeks of zero and sub-zero temperatures have attended school every day in spite of inclement weather. It takes real grit to get up early in the morning and face snow and a cold, biting wind all the way to school. For some, school is a great distance off and yet they have come every day, risking frost-bitten ears, toes, and fingers to get to their school. School means something to them and they mean something to the school. Who said we had compulsory education?

A cynic is a person that has just found out that all optimists are not angels.

So there aren't many absolute monarchs any more. What else then are all the wives throughout the country?

Lincoln Had It—Surely Self-Confidence Helps In Achieving Real Fame

Confidence in one's self has often been declared to be one of the greatest necessities of modern life. Surely no more fitting example to prove this axiom can be found than the success of the life of Abraham Lincoln. Born in the backwoods of Kentucky and reared in rural Indiana, the average youth of Lincoln's day would have been content with the position of a fairly successful lawyer. But not Lincoln. His ambition to rise above the multitude, backed by his personal confidence, opened a pathway for him to the highest honor his country could bestow upon him. Possessing the characteristics of "his people back home," Lincoln constantly faced the problem of breaking down any obstructions which might present themselves because of the social contrasts between the class from which he sprang and the classes with which he was constantly coming in contact. Every high school pupil should strive to develop a confidence in himself adequate to meet any problem which might arise, just as the "Great Emancipator" did.

Carrying On

With Leona Menze

The handiest topic for an impromptu meeting, a letter, and now for Carrying On is the weather—so-o-o "Don't ou wish it would get warmer?" There's nothing like a niffing nose, cauliflower ears, and chapped hands to ake the romance out of any snow—no matter how prolonged. Now to bring this topic back to the dear old Alma Mater—That reminds me of Ruth Garrison's nose, which freezes so easily.... Ruth Goeglein's feet, which manage to find the slippery spots.... Kenny Scott's ears, which turn a beautiful red, in spite of the huge muffler with which he drapes them.... and lastly, the quality skin you love to touch on the hands of a boy named Charlie Geyer, who daily comes be-mittened in great gauntlets. I WONDER WHY.

CAN YOU IMAGINE:

Virginia Fathauer coming to school without her lessons.... Louise Gerding keeping her mouth closed for a period of five minutes.... Marjorie Hower not wearing a beaming smile.... John Bex taking up knitting (a noteworthy ambition).... Ann Abbott without the aid of a snappy comeback.... Joe Bex without a good imitation. I WONDER WHY.

DID YOU KNOW THAT:

You can call Thekla Leininger Aunt Thekla now.... Marjorie Boerger was born with two teeth in her mouth.... Mr. Ward O. Gilbert once made a trip to Japan with a baseball team.... Katie Simminger's secret passion is one of the Miller boys (just try and find out which one).... Jim Sweet melodiously warbles "Sextet From Lucia," with emphasis on the woa whoa whoa while reposing in the bathtub.... But Beanie Dygert modestly sticks to the equally popular, "Alone".... Bob Harruff likes t-bone steak with mushroom sauce for breakfast.... Betty Pugh's favorite fruit is pineapples.... When but an infant, Janice Cross fell out of an automobile and landed on her head, but lived to tell the story.... Herby Cramer's favorite expression is "I don't know," and Rose Ann Certia accompanies him with the elegant phrase, "Goody, goody gum drop".... Robert Taylor is the object of Mary Jane Redding's affections for a favorite screen actor.... Norm Buck sticks close to good ol' South Side with inclinations falling Gwen Horn's way.... Bob Storm's ambition is to light a match with his thumbnail. I WONDER WHY.

Have you ever noticed the common characteristics of our daily class rooms?

Miss Van Gorder's desk reposing on a table in the southeast corner of room 64.... The amiable four-inch letters "What if we all did it?" occupying a blackboard square in room 174.... Miss Covall's coat hanging on the blackboard of 28.... Room 52 flaunting numerous pieces of chalk attached to string.... The Japanese girl with the slanting eyes staring down at you from aside of Miss Smith's desk in the gym office.

CLEAR-CUT CAMEOS

Editor's Note:

This column is a sort of tribute to those people, especially seniors, who have really accomplished something during their high school career. Those who have attained the honor of belonging to the National Honor Society, Quill and Scroll, or of being a club president, are worthy of this column.

We want to start this column with a bang!—not a loud, crashing bang, but a small, neat bang, perfectly depicting the small, neat subject of our discussion.

Sitting across from this small but energetic personality is rather a nice experience, but talking to her is much better.

First a list of extra-curricular activities worthy of notice is among her repertoire of activities. Among these are Philo, Library Club, Wranglers, Speakers Bureau, Totem feature writer, S. P. C., Times copy reader, proof-reader, and reporter, Art Club, and Social Science.

Maxine didn't tell us the following incident, but we hope she won't mind our relating it.

It happened at North Side High School. Maxine was trying to find her way to room 120 in that labyrinth of halls, going round and round and coming out in the same place she started every time. Finally "Max" asked a small boy where to go. He directed her to the place and then tried to sell her a freshman book.

"I'm not a freshman," disgustedly answered Maxine. "I'm a post-graduate."

"Oh yeah!" retorted the small but snippy sophomore, "you can't kid me; I know a 'greenie' when I see one."

That's what comes from being a "shortie," Maxine, but don't let it bother you. Always remember that it's easier to get out of a tight squeeze when you're small than when you're large.

Now let's get back to Maxine's ambitions and hobbies. Her main interests are in dramatics and public speaking. She hopes to be a second Demosthenes or Cicero in her time. At least she says she's trying. One can hear her quoting Shakespeare or Milton for blocks around. Maybe she makes a little louder bang than we expected.

Well, to bring things to a conclusion, Maxine Mariotte is a very sweet girl, has blue eyes, brown hair, weighs all of ninety-five pounds, and is almost five feet tall.

Last but not least, Maxine is a National Honor Society member, a typical example of those students possessing the assets of scholarship, leadership, service, and character.

Our Gift From Rome

When mother says, "Johnny, every vestige of that cake has disappeared. Did you eat it?" You reply "No, I didn't, mother."
What mother really says is that the cake has disappeared without leaving a footprint. Vestige comes from the Latin word vestigium, which means without a footprint. An investigator is a person who traces footprints for a clue.
Miles F. Porter, III.

SING BEFORE THINKING

It's easy to pick some popular songs apart. For instance, "Home On The Range."

"Where the deer and the antelope play." There are no deer and very few, if any, antelope on our western ranges; and if there were, they would not play.

"Where seldom is heard a discouraging word." Maybe you've never been out West and heard the language of our tough cowpunchers when something goes wrong.

"And the skies are not cloudy all day." If the skies were not cloudy, you would suffer from drought, and the heat would be unbearable. Moreover, perhaps you have never heard of the dust storms in the West.

Ah, well, sentimentality is a great thing after all.

AMERICA THE PESSIMISTIC?

A gentleman from a foreign country had been in our country for a few weeks and was asked to give his opinion of it.

He said, "I pity the good citizens of your country. They are constantly in danger of disaster. Calamities are happening all the time. Criminals overrun your country and are always killing and robbing. Thousands are forever meeting misfortune. Life and wealth is always in danger. Your people are very unfortunate. I pity them, and I wouldn't live here for the world."

"But these misfortunes occur only to a small part of the people," said his listeners. "Most of the people are happy and unmolesed. Our criminals are very few compared to our population, our casualties even fewer."

"This may be true," he said, "yet, from what I have seen and heard, conditions seem as I have told you. Every newspaper I have read is full of such stories. Every person I speak to is talking about such things. If there is only a small percentage of such misfortunes and crimes, why do I hear so much about them? Why are they considered so important? Isn't someone's good fortune more important? Isn't someone's honesty a better topic for conversation than someone's dishonesty?"

"Yes, those things are more important," responded the others.

"Then why don't you write, read, and talk about them?" he inquired.

"Why do you look on the black side of life? I dislike America, for you Americans are pessimistic. You don't think on the bright side of things."

Thru The Wringer

The best bit of news this week is that Morgan Harrison has officially declared that Millie Foellinger is the Dorothy Dix of his most complicated love affairs.... They are trying to keep it a secret, but Raymond Bushing, Bruce Bradbury are secret admirers of Phyllis Bundy, but we don't think that it will do them much good.... To the curious, it seems that "Bud" Feichter and Benny Woodhull went over to Jean Bollman's house, but she wasn't home to them; and they just found it out, and were their faces red?

....Betty Jaebark has almost lost all hope of ever landing the "Roving Romeo" from C. C., who calls himself Paul Geary, but don't worry, Betty, we don't think that he knows what he is losing.... The latest scandal is that the "Prince Albert" of today, His Majesty Eddie Reeves, has won Barbara Arney who took his bait, hook, line, and sinker.... The health of K. Green is improving, as he is feeling much better since he met Peg Gross.... Alice Shillet recently stated that she would die if her name appeared in a "dirty" column. Well, we are very accommodating, so we hope that your death won't be very painful.... What was the generally respected Phil Bowser doing chasing Dorothy Wilson around, and round the halls? It must be love.... The most ignorant remark from one of our inmates is by Marjorie Bowser who said, quote: Where do the boys take gym while the girls are taking it? Unquote. We hope that she doesn't investigate.

Bob Hodell is really going for a cute North Sider, and her name is Doris Parker, and she doesn't seem to object.... It seems that Helen Weike has so attracted the attention of "Chuck" Hall that he even addresses his teachers as Miss Weike.... Our new little freshman, Bob Bolyard, has the bad habit of changing girl friends, and now his new bright light is Margaret Green.... Miles Newhard wants to take Vivian Cassidy to the skating rink, but she always has an answer that foils him.... Phil Green thinks that Gwen Horn is swell, and we can't disagree with him.... Margaret Crankshaw sure seems to think a lot of Joe Close, the basketball star.... The sentimental Miriam Oberkiser thinks that Don Safford is the sweetest thing on earth.... What is the reason that Virginia Shidler's face gets red (the color of her hair) when she sees Dick Garton in the halls?.... Irene Stuart is another girl who isn't true to South Side, and she finds her flame at Central, Lester Merica.... Florence Oransky thinks that love is grand when she is with Allen Muller.

Ear-Burners

Reginald Gerig has a swell collection of autographs of famous people. Among them are the signatures of baritone Lawrence Tibbett, pianist Josef Lhevinne, Salvation Army head, Evangeline Booth, our own Governor McNutt, Chicago opera star Cyrena Van Gordon, and pianist Leonard Shure.

Then there are those who have their careers practically mapped out for them now. There's Norman Buck, that promising senior, who has started his by writing sports stories of our basketball games for the Journal-Gazette.

Merrie Valentine's Day is also a birthday time. Tomorrow you can wish a happy birthday to Georgie Martin, who was a sweet heart-throb on that February 14, eighteen years ago.

It's been breezed around lately that the wonderful presence of mind of Myron Jones saved both him and his father from serious injury the other night when the two slid on the ice and cracked up on a telephone pole.

One boy has forsaken our portals, but not for a distant place. He's Ray Racine, who's living up north and attends the school of the Redskins now.

Dick Baade says he refuses to subscribe for the Times because his name is never in it. Okay, Anderson, get his seventy-five cents for a subscription.

Norman Budde has been making loads of his own marionettes. Every so often he and his friends give their own shows, and Norman is really a director.

Our System Of Physical Education Has Descended From Europe

Activity For Everyone Is Department's Aim

The teacher we quote this week is Miss Alice J. Patterson, head of the girls' physical educational department at South Side. She makes the following comments on the subject she teaches:

"Physical education has seen a great change since the World War, but the change has been more apparent in the last ten years. Before this time, formal gymnastics were the order of the day, along with a few recreative games and some well-worn folk dances. The German and Swedish systems, as developed by the key men in those countries, were taught to all grades and classes. The German system often employed a few dance steps along with gymnastic exercises. The Swedish system was purely exercises done in a definite progression. Today we have lost the formalism of that type of work. This is due possibly to the interest in Danish gymnastics, which allows for a greater freedom of movement and a greater development of rhythm. Added to this interest is the development in the United States in the recreative side of physical education, so that now our gymnastics are built upon recreative sports. We call the miltmic exercises used in the preparation of these activities "Natural Gymnastics."

Study of Rhythm

"Formerly the study of rhythm was limited chiefly to a few folk dances from Scotland, Ireland, Germany, Sweden, and Italy, and to some clog dancing. Dancing has gone farther educationally in the last ten years than almost any branch in the field of physical education. Newer dances, those which we teach now, are English country dances, tap dances, and

Organized Pep

To instill pep into the student body, and yet keep them from indulging in unruly pep demonstrations was the object back of the formation of pep clubs in different sections of the country. By setting an example, the pep-club members lead yells and then keep quiet at the proper times. This method of yelling was very effective at the high school which I attended in Oklahoma City, Oklahoma.

There are two separate clubs, one for boys and one for girls, consisting of about seventy-five students, who are elected to membership. They wear uniforms of the school colors, and a section of seats is reserved for them at the games.

Clubs, with the aid of their sponsors, plan different stunts, learn new yells, decorate goal posts, and show any courtesy to visiting teams and spectators that they can.

It is surprising how much influence these organizations have over the student body. Much unnecessary yelling and booing has been eliminated as a result of the efforts of the pep-club members. Perhaps if such organizations existed in South Side, they would help prevent a repetition of the distasteful conduct at the Gary game.

—Dorothy Douglas.

Unsuccessful

I sat for hours trying hard To originate some verse; And yet my efforts steadily Were growing worse and worse.

And though 'till dawn I labored, I knew I could not win; So I just gave up all hope And sent this darn thing in.

Robin Hood's Barn

Novel! Original! Sensational! These words describe the greatest brainstorm of all time. It originated and is produced by some of our own friends. Soon everyone will have at least one in his home and office. Already the demand is greater than the production.

It first started three years ago, when C. Hardvordt Worden watched Miss Paxton, eminent mathematician, proved that 2 equals 1. Suddenly the light dawned that this theory could be put to practical uses. With this faint ray of hope, Worden organized a company to manufacture and market it. This corporation is now working in full swing because of the efficiency and the ability of the directors.

With Worden as Chief Chemical Engineer and B. Clifford Schrom as Public Information Disperser, the nation now knows of the product. R. Davidson Stigarette is furnishing some of the capital.

Ramboscoth X. Strasser is applying the formula, 2 equals 1, to the atomic construction of the product. He serves as Manager of the Electronics Division. Miss Paxton will receive a royalty for her valuable contribution to the theoretical construction. Watch your local newspapers for further details.

Vic Nussbaum thinks he has the best homing pigeon. Once Dick Baade bet him that his pigeon couldn't go 500 miles in five hours. Vic had so much confidence in his bird that he took the bet. Then Dick took the bird in a basket to a place 500 miles away and then set it loose. To make sure he would win, Dick clipped the bird's wings before he let it go.

In three hours Dick telephoned Vic, "Is your critter home yet?"

"Give him time," answered Vic. "No bird with clipped wings could win this bet. One hour before the specified time, Dick called again, 'Has your bird come yet?'"

"Not yet," Vic began to get nervous.

Five minutes before the five hour mark, Dick called, "Has your homer arrived yet?"

Vic answered calmly, "Yes, it just came, but the poor little bird's feet are about worn off."

What a bird!

SKATERS—The cold, icy weather which we have been experiencing during the past few weeks evidently has some good points. Some of South Side's well-known Archers have started skating to school on ice skates. We'll admit that's originality.

MUSICIAN—We couldn't exactly tell what Myron Jones was attempting to play, but it sounded as though all his efforts were aimed at that popular composition known as "The Music Goes Round and Round." Nevertheless, we didn't appreciate his talents. Maybe he can play in the band, but when it comes to blowing on test tubes, he's just no good.

LIVE WIRES—Somehow or other we have gained a bit of choice information. Believe it or not, Ann Abbott used to have a habit of calling up various numbers on the telephone and then exclaiming that she had the wrong number. Once she got a lucky break and called some boys from Concordia. If you want to know the rest, ask her.

BAD GIRL—One of the members of her public speaking class has told us that Virginia Vesey also had a very bad habit when she was younger. She practiced throwing gum-wrappers in the chandeliers at her house. Please, don't tell her mother.

EXTRA—Dorothy Durbin has just brought to light an amazing fact about herself. When she was very young, she was run over by a zebra. Bob Zeig saw it happen, but he just laughed. Also, Sheffa has confessed a strange liking which she used to have for boa constrictors. She even went as far as to have her picture taken with one coiled around her!

Secrets to Seventeens

THE IDEAL GIRL FRIEND—Every girl wants to be the ideal of some boy. Of course all boys are different, but there are certain set qualities which all boys like in girls.

First and foremost among these is attention. The ideal girl is not attentive to all the boys on a date, but she gives her undivided attention to her escort. This little lass always knows the score about her boy friend's conversation. She is always interested in everything he says or does.

Cheerfulness will get a girl a long way. How many times have you heard a boy remark, "I like her because she is always smiling?" Make your motto, "I'll smile if it kills me." Every boy likes to think he can master every situation and has a grand line. If you act like you're having a swell time, being a man, he will think that he is a born entertainer and that women just naturally fall for his line.

Remember not to overdo the cheerful part or you may seem noisy and "tomboyish." Talk enough so that you don't seem dull, but let someone else do the biggest part of the noise making. That's what men are for. Don't giggle and seem flighty and excited, or your date will think that you are crazy about him, and that is always a bad policy. Keep them in the dark.

Yes, this art of being someone's ideal is quite complicated; but, once you catch on, it surely works.

Athletic Games

"Athletic games which have become an increasingly more important factor in physical education have increased in number. Twenty-five years ago tennis and basketball for girls, and tennis, football, basketball, and baseball for boys, were about the only games. The somewhat recent revival of international games known as the Olympics has developed our sports program. Today we have added volleyball, speedball, hockey, swimming, track, and many minor sports and recreative activities for boys and girls.

"The aim in physical education is to provide activity for every member of a group. At South Side we all are trying to add activities each year which we hope will meet the needs of our student body."

Don Reichert

Curly Armstrong, Central's sharpshooting forward, and Don Reichert, up-and-coming forward of South Side, should do big things in the Central-South Side game Saturday. Armstrong has been consistently brilliant all season for the Tigers, and is tied for third place in the city scoring race. Reichert, a lanky junior, saw little action earlier in the season, but now is a regular of his own right and has played good ball on the first five in the last three games.

Next Season's Card Includes Twenty Games

One Of Hardest Net Programs In Years Drawn Up By Athletic Manager.

Three New Fives To Meet Archers

Laporte, Brazil, Rushville Are New Opponents; Butler, Piercetown Dropped.

South Side's 1936-37 basketball season, according to the schedule released this week by Mr. Ora Davis, faculty manager of South Side athletics, The Fiddlemen will face ten of their opponents on the southern hardwood and a like number on foreign courts.

Three new opponents will make their initial starts against the Green next season. The new opposition will be comprised of the quintets representing Laporte, Brazil, Rushville, and Piercetown. These cities have repeated season after season with five rating high among the hardwood contestants of Hoosierdom. The addition of these stronger opponents to next season's schedule indicates that in the future the Green will step into competition of a higher calibre than in the past. The teams from last year's schedule which have been left off this year are Butler and Piercetown.

N. E. I. C. Counts In Six

Twelve return games with out-of-town squads will be played next season. Six of these engagements will be counted in the N. E. I. C. race.

A slight change has been made in competition involving city series games for next season. Instead of playing each of the three other schools twice, the present arrangements call for home-and-home games with North Side and Central, while the Green will oppose the Central Catholic five but once during the season instead of twice as it did this season. The last games of the pairs of tilts against Central and North Side will count on the N. E. I. C. standings. A definite date for the first clash with the Central Tigers has not been set definitely, because of the fact that the dates for the conclusion of the scholastic semesters have not been announced.

Holiday Tilts Not Planned

No plans have been made as yet for a local tourney during the Christmas vacation similar to those that have been played during the past few seasons.

The complete basketball schedule for the 1936-37 season follows: November 25—Laporte, there. December 4—Kendallville, here. December 5—Michigan City, here. December 11—Bluffton, there. December 18—Auburn, there. December 19—Brazil, here. January 8—North Side, there.

Archers Enjoy Good Week-End Defeat Redskins And Airdales

Penetrating the tough hides of a pack of Airdales and making the Redskins "hit the dust," the Archers of South Side gave a splendid demonstration of clever sniping as they handed their two N. E. I. C. rivals setbacks during the last week-end. In both battles the superiority of the Archer defense proved to be the deciding factor in determining the winners. The Airdales went down in defeat by a 28-to-20 count, while the Redskins found themselves on the short end of a 26-16 score.

On Saturday evening the South Side quintet played clever ball as they humbled the Redskins. Coach Fiddle made a strategic move by placing Close, veteran Archer ball handler, in a pivot position to the right of the foul circle. Such action nullified any plans which Coach Nulf might have made to strengthen the Redskins defense's weak spots, which cropped up in their tilt with Central last week. Central placed Armstrong in a pivot position to the left of the foul circle and ran the Redskins defense ragged.

Archers Penetrate Defense

With Close handling the ball in great shape, the Fiddlemen constantly had the Redskin zone out of position. The Green maneuvered around the hardwood for set shots off of blocks and shots from under the basket when the Redskin defense shifted too much and left holes through which the Archers could penetrate.

In the first half the Green quintet was unable to get enough time to get good set shots, and, as a result, they connected on but five of the thirty-two shots they attempted. The Nulf five were having even greater difficulty penetrating the South Side man-to-man defense, and their efforts from the field were unsuccessful on all but two of the twenty-two heaves they took. Corky Ryan, Redskin center, contributed two charity tosses and the count was 10 to 6 in favor of the Archers at the halfway mark.

Fiddlemen Change Offense

Changing their style of offense in the last half in such a manner as to increase the effectiveness of their blocks, the Archers sniped with much greater accuracy and managed to coast through to a win after building up a good lead in the third quarter. In the third period the Green passed the ball very rapidly around the Redskin defense until the Nulfmen went out of position. Then the Archers sifted through for short shots at the hoop. By scoring seven points to their opponent's three, the Green held a 17 to 9 lead as the final period opened. In the last quarter the Green were content to stall as much as possible. This action forced the Nulfmen to come out after the ball and the effectiveness of their zone defense was greatly lessened. The Fiddlemen broke through for nine more points, while the Redskins gained a little less, dropping in seven markers.

On Friday evening the Fiddlemen showed too much power for a fighting band of Airdales to compete with. Stepping out into a 12 to 4 lead at the end of the first quarter, the Green coasted through to an eight-point victory, 28 to 20. Led by Hall, who garnered nine points during the tilt, the Green outplayed the Hartford City five throughout the contest.

Green Resort To Stalling Offense

In the first half Hall dumped in four buckets and Hines and Reichert contributed one each to put the Green out in the lead. However, the Airdales changed their defense in the second period and held the Archers scoreless from the floor while they scored eleven points. The Green sank five of their seven charity tosses to stay out in the lead.

The Hartford City quintet opened the last half with a basket which tied up the score at 17-all. However, the Archers added five more markers to their total, while the Hartford City five were limited to one during the remainder of the quarter. In the final quarter the Green resorted to a stalling offense which pulled the Airdales' defense out. Then, by clever passing, the Archers broke through the Airdales for three more buckets while the Airdales could score but two of their attempts from the floor.

S.S. Reserves Win, Lose One Over Weekend

Wavelets Drop 23-22 Tilt To Hartford City; Triumph, 17-13, Over North Side.

The South Side reserves last week-end played two thrilling tilts, ending up once on the long end and once on the wrong end of the score. On Friday night the Wavelets, entertaining Hartford City, proved the perfect host by losing out to the Airdales in a thrilling finish, the final count being 23-22. On the following night the Wavelets played hosts to North Side and helped the varsity make a clean sweep of the evening, by outscoring the Redskins, 17-13.

Game Closely Contested
The Hartford City game was closely contested throughout and the Airdales came out on top due to a last minute field goal which overcame the Wavelet's one-point lead. Starting a miscellaneous group of reserves, Coach Fiddle gradually inserted his first five, only to have them fall short of the Hartford City total by one point. The Airdales held a five to four lead at the end of the first quarter, but at the half the Wavelets had overcome this advantage and the score was deadlocked at 9-all. In the third period the lead saw-sawed back and forth, Frasier netting a field goal just before the conclusion of the third stanza to put the Wavelets in front, 15 to 14. In the final quarter, the two teams exchanged points until Campbell's field goal from far out on the floor proved the deciding factor in favor of Hartford City.

At no time during the game were the two teams separated by more than two points. Kitsmiller proved the individual star for South Side as he rang up eight points, while Alexander and Morris were high for the Hartford boys with six points each.

Once again South Side's greatly improved Archers will tackle Central's fast-breaking Tigers, and once again these two traditional rivals will battle for the coveted city championship when they meet for the third time this year, in a very crucial tilt. These two teams will enter this game with all odds even; and, as has been the case in their previous meetings, the game promises to be a battle from the initial whistle to the final gun.

The victory over North Side last Saturday, which definitely eliminated the Redskins from the race for the city crown and makes the pending battle with Central all-important, was featured by the wonderful defensive playing on the part of John Hines, stellar guard on the Archers' five, who held Jim Shollenberger, North Side star, to a pair of foul tosses.

Hartford City defeat as they turned back their city rivals from North Side by a score of 17 to 13. This proved to be another close game; but the Wavelets led all the way and, although the Paposes threatened a good many times, South Side was never headed. North Side began to creep up on the Wavelets in the last few minutes of play, but a field goal by Budde in the final seconds clinched the victory. Coach Fiddle started his strongest outfit and they remained in throughout most of the game. The scoring was evenly divided, with no one outstanding and the whole team playing steady ball.

Name Archer Teacher Head Of Association

Louis Briner, Gym Teacher, Elected As Chief Of Physical Education Teachers.

Mr. Louis A. Briner, well-known gym instructor at South Side, received an outstanding honor recently when he was elected to the presidency of the Second District Physical Education Teachers' Association. He succeeds Miss Leota Haynes of Auburn. The meeting of this association was held at North Side.

Mr. Briner has gained much recognition for the splendid results he has accomplished in the development of a physical education course to meet the requirements of a student body of the size of that of South Side. Realizing that the regular gymnasium course offered no opportunity for upperclassmen unless they were successful in varsity sport activities Mr. Briner instituted a program of intramural sports in which over seven hundred fellows participate each school year. In addition to this extra-curricular work Mr. Briner has found a means of uncovering the outstanding gymnasts of our school by conducting an annual gym class carnival in which feats calling for strength, resistance, skill, and nerve are performed.

Test On Safety Points For All Home Rooms

Next week in all the home rooms of the school, a test including the points covered in all five of the safety bulletins which have been issued from time to time by the office will be given to students of South Side. All students are required to take the test, regardless of how much emphasis has been placed upon the bulletins in the home rooms. Teachers are asked to review all the sheets for the benefit of those who are taking the examination.

After the outcome of the preliminary tests have been determined, a safety assembly will be held to award the prizes for the examination. At least two winners will be picked; and the major prizes, which were donated by prominent automotive dealers of the city, will be presented to these winners. The first prize is expected to be the tan fur and wool laprobe, valued at over thirty dollars, which was presented by the Packard Agency of Fort Wayne.

Pall Mall Marionettes

Give Puppet Shows

The Pall Mall Marionettes of Monticello, Indiana, gave two professional puppet shows in the study hall last Tuesday during both the sixth and the seventh periods. Each performance was presented to large and enthusiastic audiences who marveled at the delightful, artistic reality of the puppets. The show was sponsored by the South Side Marionette Club as a method of raising money to finance its own annual production.

The Puppeteers, under the direction of Miss Virginia Rice of Monticello, as head, and W. H. Stout, of Greenwood, Indiana, as manager, presented three short plays during the sixth period. They were "The Pied Piper of Hamelin," in dance and rhythm; "Bilking's Collapsed," a modern detective story with modernistic settings and stylish costumes; and "Peter Rabbit." During the seventh period "Bilking's Collapsed" was repeated and "Jack and the Beanstalk" replaced the other two previous plays.

Doreen Russell and Marjorie Meyer were chairmen of ticket sales and Mary Anne Park acted as publicity chairman.

Principal Comments On Sportsmanship

After the recent drive for good sportsmanship at our basketball games, the conduct of our students has returned to its former standard with such alacrity that R. Nelson Snider, principal, saw fit to comment on it in the following words:

"The sportsmanship and school loyalty displayed at our last two games are sources of great pride to me. They gave evidence of the fine spirit which has always characterized our student body."

At the room agents' meeting, Thursday evening in room 24, Leona Menze stated, "More subscriptions must be secured." As this is only a "drop in the bucket" towards the 1500 goal, Leona said that more vim, vigor, and vitality must be put in the subscription campaign. All agents were urged to call up every student in their home room and remind them of the money that they must bring next day.

Miss Harvey told about North Side being ahead of South Side in securing subscriptions, as they have two one-hundred percent rooms. Candy bars were passed out to those who were present. In concluding the talk, the agents were reminded that more pep and enthusiasm were necessary to put this campaign over.

Zippers, Fruits, Victors In Two Games Each In Intramural Court Sport; Scores Are Low.

Intramural basketball competition extended into its third week with several teams showing up exceptionally well.

The Zippers' powerful five proved too strong for the Nats, as they downed them by a score of 17-3. Gronauer of the Zippers held first place for individual high score with five points. On the same day the Zippers again turned on their power to trample the Panthers by a wide margin. The game ended at 21 to 3, with Colicho scoring ten points for the Zippers.

The Blues fell before the Fruits by the score of 3 to 12. Green made four points for the Fruits. Again the same day the Fruits proved victorious over their adversaries when they defeated the Scrappers by the score of 21 to 6. Schaaf chalked up ten points and Vogelsang scored seven points for the Fruits. This team is one of the favorites for the middle weight crown, since they displayed such a smooth brand of ball.

Popeye's five defeated the Bowmen by the close score of 9 to 7. The Apples (the doctor's favorite) smothered the Potatoes by a score of 17 to 6.

The Dukes were defeated by the Nameless with the score of 10 to 6. The Sardines unleashed an attack that proved strong enough to defeat the Dark Horses. The scoring ended at 6 to 3.

Skyscrapers, Star, Moon Adorn "Midnight In Manhattan" Prom

Approximately 125 couples attended Wranglers' "Midnight in Manhattan" dance, which was held Saturday evening in the Greeley Room following the North Side game. The dance floor was transformed into a pent-house view of Manhattan. Skyscrapers adorned the walls, with a golden moon and silver stars forming a canopy overhead. Blue lights gave the room a warm and cheerful appearance while white lights twinkled from the windows of the buildings around the wall.

In keeping with the theme of the dance, Lowell Meyers and his band played "Manhattan Serenade," and "She's a Latin From Manhattan." The band also played their own arrangement of "The Music Goes 'Round and Around." As a specialty, Bob Augsburg sang several selections.

Several prizes were awarded during the course of the evening. They were given to Marybelle Gallmeyer and Corby Ryan for being the tallest couple; Mildred Foellinger and Rex Parker for being the cutest couple; Joe Bex and Freda Schubert for the shyest couple. Louis Bonsib and Dorothy Douglas won the spot dances. Honorary gifts were given to Miss Dorothy Benner, faculty adviser, and Miss Martha Pittenger, dean. These prizes and gifts were donated by various firms of this city, including Vesey's Floral Shop, Harrison Hill Drug Store, Martha Washington Shop, Morrow Nut Shop, and Martin's Drug Store.

The exciting game of "winkum" was then played, after which an elimination contest was held in the game, "There she blows." The winners in this game were not determined, however. Refreshments were served, and then the meeting was adjourned.

The committee for this meeting was comprised of Helen E. Meyer, Frances Craig, Clarence Helmsing, Allen Garrison, and Marion Roehrs.

Valentine Day Talk Given At Junior Math

Norman Budde gave a short talk on the origin of Valentine's Day at Junior Math Club's Valentine party held recently. The boys of the club then chose their Valentines for the year by throwing darts at cardboard hearts which were pinned to the wall.

Co-operation is expected from every home room student.

The circulation staff is now seeking the support of the parents, clubs and basketball team. It is expected that in uniting the outstanding people in regular school life, more subscriptions than ever before will be brought in.

In order to present the merits of The South Side Times to the students in an entirely different way, Mr. Snider has consented to a Times assembly this morning after The Times has been handed out. The speakers include Mr. R. Nelson Snider, Miss Rowena Harvey, Bryce Minier and Mary Michaels.

Percentages, as of Tuesday afternoon, are given below. The agents now leading home room percentages are Helen Anderson with 86 per cent, Ruth Goeglein with 77 per cent, and M. K. Smith with 73 per cent.

Wife Of Our Latin Department Head Dislikes Dead Language

Representing the Latin department of South Side High School, we find Mr. and Mrs. Martin Rothert tied together by mutual interests, with the exception of Mr. Rothert's profession, Latin. It seems that Mrs. Rothert has no special dislike for the subject; it's just disinterest, as she has never studied the subject.

Her life was uneventful though picturesque. She received her education in a country school in Booneville, Indiana. Then she retired to the quiet life of a country lass. Now she avers that though a country home may be more healthful, she prefers the modern city conveniences.

Children Through College

They have two children, both of whom have gone through college and are now following their own interests. The one son is connected with the Fort Wayne Motor Club, the other's real interest lies in chemistry. At present, though, he has no definite job in this profession.

Mrs. Rothert believes that forgetfulness increases with age, and can't see just why this has to be. When this occurs in her daily life, she regards it as most unfortunate and her pet peeve. Mr. Rothert is rather easy going and has no particular peevishness.

His main form of recreation, study, and likewise is "read, read, read." He reads anything from daily papers, magazines, to heavy reading matter. Mrs. Rothert likes to read the daily papers, a few magazine articles, and the Bible.

Interested In Church Work

Meals are served regularly and on the dot. Phone calls are not too frequent but vary with certain activities. Mrs. Rothert takes an interest in church work and is especially active in the Home and Foreign Mission. Following these lines of interest, together with her ordinary house work, occupies all her time.

Her favorite colors are dark green and black; her husband favors green. Thus we have condensed the interests, tastes, and characteristics, from a pleasant man and his wife from our Latin department.

Talk On Olympics Features Program

German Club Is Told Of Various Phases Of Germany's Duties
As Host For 1936 Olympics.

"The Olympic Village" was the German Club topic discussed Wednesday, February 12, by Harriet Basford, vice-president. The talk was a continuation of a series of topics on the 1936 Olympics to be held in Germany. "Germany undertook the responsibility for the next Olympic celebration and with it, the difficult task of carrying out the celebration with the same degree of beauty, hospitality, and care as was done at Los Angeles. Although Germany does not have the advantages of a mild climate, the certainty of no rain, and the broad spaces of town which developed in the age of the motor car, Berlin has other advantages.

Describe Olympic Village
"Many thousands of hands are kept busy working on the buildings and grounds of the Olympic Village, where all the athletes will live during their stay at Berlin. There is no doubt that the fact that the athletes of all nations lived together largely contributed to the great success of the Olympic games at Los Angeles. This village will accommodate 3,000 men athletes and all the women who will participate in the sports. The village will be completed by May 1, 1936."

Other Olympic talks were "Olympic Preparations in Berlin," by Fred Meyers and "German Sport Prepares for the Olympic games," by Rodney Stair, concerning the opening of the Olympic winter sports and the ceremonies and program which started off the winter sports. Maurice Cornell gave another which added to the descriptions of the impressive ceremonies, especially the one in which all athletes take the oath required.

The last of these reports was given by Jim Phelps. He gave a brief summary of the sports now in progress at Berlin, with emphasis on the United States' part in them. He pointed out that the U. S. looms as a threat against the Canadian hockey team, a three-time champion.

The club will meet on Tuesday evening to complete the bus schedules and ticket sales plans.

Tickets for the party are going on sale this week and may be purchased from any member of the club or in room 146. A skaters bus probably will leave South Side at 7:30 p. m.

Jim Sweet's Picture Run In Press Paper

The "Special Contests" folder of February, 1936, published by the Columbia Scholastic Press Association is carrying a story featuring the names of the national winners for the various divisions of the annual contests sponsored by that society. Jim Sweet's picture, along with the notice of his award, is being run in the bulletin. Only four national prizes are offered a year, the divisions being literary, story, article, and publicity. Jim won first award in the publicity division. Six thousand copies of the bulletin were distributed in the United States.

The members of the people who work in the offices around the school, including Miss Pittenger's office, the regular office, the athletic offices and the study-hall.

Approximately twenty-five students belong. The club is purely social, and there are no club officers; instead, a chairman and his assistants are chosen for each meeting. The people chosen for the first meeting were Rosemary Lehman, chairman, and Helen Doenges.

The first meeting was held last Tuesday. Refreshments were served and games were played. The games dealt with geometric figures. Jokes were also told. The next meeting will be in the form of a potluck.

One Hundred Pairs Scare Off Gloom At 'Jack And Jill' Hop

Nearly one hundred couples attended the Jack and Jill dance sponsored by the school's two senior Y. M. and Y. W. organizations, So-Si-Y and Hi-Y, in the Greeley Room after the South Side-Central game Saturday.

The affair, for which Ted Pierson and his orchestra played, was in general charge of Helen Anderson and Morgan Harrison, the presidents of the clubs; and was chaperoned by Mr. and Mrs. Merle J. Abbott, Mr. and Mrs. R. Nelson Snider, Miss Martha Beulah Rinehart, Miss Dorothy A. Magley, Mr. A. Verne Flint, Mr. J. H. Chappell, Mr. C. A. Bex, Mr. E. S. Gould, Mr. Ward O. Gilbert and Mr. and Mrs. M. W. Harrison.

Before the intermission two attendance prizes given by the Martha Washington Candy Company and the Coca Cola Company were awarded to two lucky persons.

Students will probably be excused from their classes for the afternoon performance. If the show proves to be a success, the affair will become an annual event.

"Elaborate preparations are underway to make the show a true portrayal of western life," Miss Patterson stated.

The setting will probably be on a dude ranch. Cowboy songs will be sung, and traditional western tales will be told.

A group of girls from the dancing classes will give a dance. The dance will be composed of a group of tourists, some westerners and Indians from a neighboring reservation.

Dorothy J. Canada Gets Nurse Award

1935 Graduate Enters Michael Reese Hospital At Chicago
On Three-Year Scholarship.

Miss Dorothy J. Canada, a '35 graduate, left for Chicago January 30, to enroll in the Michael Reese hospital to which she received a scholarship.

The award of the scholarship was based on an examination and Miss Canada's general scholastic standing. It covers tuition, books, and uniforms, during a three-year course. After graduating from this nurses' training course, Miss Canada intends to follow that profession.

While she received the scholarship Miss Canada worked in the office at the Jefferson School.

While at South Side she was very active, having been a member of the four year honor roll, secretary of Philo, sergeant-at-arms for Philatelic, a member of Meterites, Math Science, Latin Club, and the Times staff.

DeMolays Plan Their Gingham, Overall Hop

Plans are now being made for the annual gingham and overall dance, sponsored each spring by the Fort Wayne chapter of the Order of DeMolay. Roy Ewing, a senior at South Side, has been appointed general chairman for the affair, which will be held at the Scottish Rite Cathedral. The date has been set for March 13, with dancing from 9:30 till 12:30 o'clock. Many attendance and novelty prizes will be awarded during the course of the dance. The dance is one of the outstanding affairs on the DeMolay social calendar.

Even Sunny Florida Has Much Difficulty Over Cold Weather

Major Bowes may rave about good old Florida, the land of perpetual sunshine; he may talk for minutes on end about Tampa, a recent honor city on his well-known program. Nevertheless, Edward Turner, a former student of South Side who is now working in Tampa, Florida, knows better. In a recent letter to Miss Rowena Harvey, adviser of publications, Edward sent a clipping from a late issue of the Times, a story describing the beauties of Tampa foliage, the joy of the city's sunshiny days, and the glamour of its nights. A really good descriptive piece, it illustrated well the normal climate of the city. But its author was not, at the time the story was written, contemplating the recent cold wave which is sweeping the country. Evidently Edward Turner disagreed with Major Bowes and the author of that certain editorial, for across the clipped article was inscribed one word—BUNK!

On the top of the clipping, which was entitled "Sun and Sea—Away to the Sunny Southland and the Soft Zephyrs of Tampa, Florida," Edward wrote, "Take a tip from a Tampa and stay in Fort Wayne." Tampa, it seems, with the rest of the Key State, has been experiencing its coldest weather in many years. This week the mercury has slid down as far as the low forties, which, for Florida, is really cold.

While attending South Side, which he left last year, Edward was prominent in art activities. Besides being an active member of Art Club, he was considered one of the most talented wood-figurine carvers this school has ever claimed. His figurines were exhibited in the display of general art work in the front hall case last spring. Edward was also consistently on the honor roll. Before coming to South Side, he attended several private boarding schools for boys in the East.

First Program Of High School Varieties Features South Side

The first program in a series of high school varieties was presented by South Side Monday evening, February 17, from 7:30 to 8 p. m. over station WOWO. This series of programs is being sponsored by the Holsum Bakery Company and features a different school each week.

The program was opened by the South Side chorus singing "Cheerio," the school pep song written by Mr. Jack Wainwright. Following this Mr. Al Becker introduced Manuel Rothberg, who acted as spokesman. Manuel gave many facts concerning the school, including the building in 1922 at an approximate cost of $1,000,000, what each course cost the student and the reputation South Side has won for itself. He said that achievements in public speaking, journalism, athletics, and other departments have won South Side a top-notch ranking among other schools in the country. In concluding, he said South Side's aim was to train young men and women to face the future.

Magazine Editor Speaks To Club

City Government Is Subject Of Gordon Foster At Meeting Of Social Science Last Friday.

Mr. Gordon Foster, the editor of the Fort Wayne Municipal Booster, spoke at the Social Science Club meeting held last Friday evening in the Greeley Room. Mr. Foster spoke on "City Government." He said that a public servant must possess character, objectivity to laws, intelligence, and aggressiveness.

"City government depends more upon the attitude of the people than it does upon the governing."

"Government does not only consist of the mayor and councilmen; but it consists of the letter carriers, school teachers, policemen, dieticians, and others."

"Most people think that the duty of the mayor is only to welcome Mrs. Roosevelt, Jr. and other noted people. However, the mayor has many other duties besides these."

Was the inventor of duck soup a quack?

Correct this sentence: "Oh, I'm not afraid of these get-rich-quick schemes. I know the people of my country are too smart to be fooled by them," said the diplomat.

We'll Miss Her Personality and Service

The passing of Virginia Vesey came as an indescribable shock, especially among those of us privileged to be her friend. No longer will Virginia's friendly, happy personality shine out in the Times room. No longer will her voice ring out in Wranglers. Never again will she give unselfish service at the tea dances. Virginia is gone.

We shall always think of her as one whose mere presence was a constant of cheer in our shifting world. The years pass by in endless procession taking one here and there. We live on. But the joys of a long lifetime are denied Virginia. She shall never have the thrill of graduation, of the life of cheer she personified.

Words are somehow futile, for words are often imperfect tools when expressing our inner feelings. We can only express our sympathy and sorrow to the Vesey family.

You always lose by arguing. If you are in a deadlock at the finish, your opponent still thinks that he is right and dislikes you for being stubborn. If it is proved that you are right, he hates you for that. If it is proved that he is right, he despises and ignores you.

We Maul The "Moochers"— And Those Who Help Them

It is indeed unfortunate that the students of South Side have so little appreciation of their own school paper that they have instituted the undesirable custom of "mooching" on other people's Times. Those who show no school spirit, and whose vocabularies do not include the words "co-operation" and "fulfillment of obligations" would no doubt be the very first to condemn the Times if its quality were in any way impaired. Yet they are not entirely to blame for this prevailing habit. Those people who lend their papers to others show just as little appreciation; for if they really did appreciate the Times, they would refuse to lend it to those who aren't "interested enough to subscribe."

A student once said that he didn't see the reason for calling the study hall what it is because it wasn't really a hall and he had seen very few people every really studying in it.

We can readily see why most hermits are men. A woman couldn't stand not having anybody to talk to—or about.

A Man Whose Character Created A New Country— One George Washington

On a cold winter day in 1732, just two hundred four years ago this Saturday, February 22, a man who was destined to be of great service to his country was born. This man whose birthday will be observed on Saturday was named George Washington.

The name of George Washington is known to all American citizens and patriots. His ideals and purposes are sacred to every American school boy and girl. His wonderful characteristics and qualities are a knowledge to all.

George Washington has been visualized as a very courageous, strong, patient, intensely human person who did what he thought best with no regard for criticism. A man who lived to foster the United States of America, then an infant republic, into being. A man who was the first president of the new republic and by his work became known as the Father of his Country. A human being who was not only a greatly beloved man, but an excellent leader, statesman, soldier, and family man besides. Washington was a builder of men, of nations, and of ideals.

It is very fitting that the Father of our Country should be remembered each year on the anniversary of his birth and given the honor which he so greatly deserves, for without his unwavering leadership, there might not have been a United States of America today.

Carrying On

With Jim Sweet

Tests are the order of the day; and so, just to see how much you know that you shouldn't, this column turns to that horrible end. The answers are at the end. Anyone who knows all the answers is a horrible snob; anyone who doesn't know a few is a rare person who minds his own business. Let's go!

1. Why does Ann Abbott like to snip unknown people from behind? 2. Who says Selma Liff has beautiful eyebrows? 3. Who made Vera Ellinger cry? 4. Who is the most beautiful girl in school? 5. Who vamps young innocents into giving her bicycle rides? 6. Does Manford Adams orate while seated on the floor? 7. What does Helen Anderson know of model airplanes? 8. Did you ever hear Joe Bex imitate President Roosevelt and Father Coughlin? 9. Who drove Herbie Kramer two blocks to school one morning? 10. Does Beanie Dyerger know when George eats at Purdue? 11. Whence Queen Velkoff's new sweater? 12. What must the man behind the counter have said when Mr. Wilson (none other) asked for a hamburger with relish, mustard, and pickle? 13. What did Myron Jones say when Mr. Murphy asked what business cycles do? 14. Do Elizabeth Simminger, Kate Simminger, Grace Nelson, and John Muller slide down piles of cornstalks and pet antelopes in their dreams? (pet is a verb here, teachers). 15. What Archerette's papa helped plan the "round-and-round" streets in South Wood Park? 16. Who put the lugs in the office pay phone? 17. Why can't Polly Borton sleep at night? 18. Are Mr. Wilson's pupils Chinamen? 19. Why did Phil Green sit down in the river? 20. Am I any relation to the Sweets who raise celery?

And now a few items, and no questions asked, ere we tender the answers. Hoff says she walked into a door. Bonnie only asks one to furnish a cow to prove she can milk them. Chappell says she wants South Side to win. He's the North Side basket sniper. Kent Bohns says he froze his coat so stiff he had to stand over a register to bend his arm and take it off. (the coat).

Now—you can peek: 1. Because they know it can't be she when they look around. 2. Dick Helm, the old smoothie. 3. Suffice to say it was not Georgie Porgie. Ask her. 4. Look in the mirror, gals. 5. Gwen Horn, Dame Rumor says. 6. No. He just hasn't learned to balance in Miss Benner's seats. 7. Only what Garland Eickmeyer, '35, told her once. 8. No doubt, no doubt. 9. Roseanne Certia. 10. Even that, it seems. 11. She claims she knit it herself. 12. "Must be for Jo—dash—Anne Smith." (It was). 13. "They go round and round." 14. No. On hikes to the old Bass farm. 15. Jo-Anne Smith's. 16. That's what Mr. Snider wonders. 17. Her pet Pekinese, which, she says, snores, sleeps with her. 18. No. Don Sinish only mimeographed the test papers backwards. 19. He tried to joust in a canoe with Don Coghagen. Don, it seems, sat down too. 20. If I were, I would be in Florida with them now. Tra la.

Go West, Young 'Uns!

Riotous Colors, Wonders Of Nature
Make Canyon, Desert Inspiring

After the long train ride through the hilly regions of Illinois and Missouri, the wind-swept plains of Kansas, semi-desert sections of Oklahoma, Texas, and New Mexico, we come to Williams, Arizona, the principal port of entry to the Grand Canyon. We will put up for the night at one of the many small tourist hotels.

Up bright and early, we're ready to start our adventures. Making sure that the old bus has gas and oil—we turn on the switch, step on the starter, and after a few shakes we're off!

Our road crosses Dead Man's Flat, a level, semi-desert tract of sagebrush with occasional outcroppings of volcanic rock. It all becomes more brilliant, more fantastic in variegated hues as we proceed. There are reds, salmon, pinks, bronze, brown, buff, violet, steel-blue, and grays all in the sands, rocks and broken cliffs of the Painted Desert.

The road travels on to Coconino Plateau and continues on that level towards Grand Canon village, looping back and forth through pine, pinon, and cedar that grow to the very brink of the chasm.

At Grand Canon village, perched on the very rim of the gorge, is El Tovar, our hotel. About sixty feet from the hotel, the ground ceases. An iron guard-rail protects the unwary from falling into the big ditch.

Before going any farther, one must admit that the wonders of the chasm are beyond mere words of description. It would take more than a thousand volumes of encyclopedias to utilize words in an effort to make those who have never seen the canon realize its true beauty.

We look over the brink near El Tovar; and, to our surprise, there is no river in sight. "Where is the Colorado?" we ask. "Down, down, and down," we are told, into the black depths a mile below. No longer are there swift rapids, but quiet pools and a long, narrow, placid lake formed by water backing up from the great Boulder Dam.

Far to the north are snows high atop the mountains of Arizona, Utah, New Mexico, Nevada, Colorado, and Wyoming. When spring comes, the melted snows have only one avenue of escape to the sea. The Colorado and its branches will be raging floods. Across the avenue of escape lies Boulder Dam.

Robin Hood's Barn

The more we think about the weather we have been having, the more we think about Mark Twain's remark about New England weather. He said that he thought that when Mother Nature made out the weather for the world, she gave to each country and section of the country its own respective climate; then after she was all through, she took what kinds of weather there were left and from them composed the weather for New England. Only, of course, our weather is so bad that we can't believe that it is the leftovers of any weather of any section of the country.

Now that we are through talking about the weather, what is the next logical subject for us to pursue? As you know, all conversations should begin with the weather. Thus far we have very nobly lived up to this convention of conversation. We have spoken as to the weather, but now what! The business man follows by talking about business; the teacher by talking about school; the pupil by talking about lessons, etc. But what does a columnist do! Perhaps we should talk about love, romance, and affairs of the heart. But then they might say that this is a dirt column. Far be it from us to drop to such vile depths.

However, we would like to say something about the sheiks of the school, namely, Warren Zelt and Eddie Reeves. To all would-be-lovers we may say that Warren Zelt's object of affections is at present Rosemary Chappell; and Eddie Reeves, Barbara Arney. Notwithstanding, the descriptions of these two Beau Brummells follows. Warren is a tall, blond, smiling lad. He is a swell dresser and can he dance! (Ask Rosemary). Eddie is a little shorter and has beautiful curly black hair. He collects stamps and plays a swell game of golf. Warren's chief merit is in being handsome and Eddie's is in being (he'll murder us for this) cute. There's your men, gals!

(Sorry, you've loaned your paper so much. This space is worth about 21 subscriptions.)

Waggin' Tongues

Dick Helm seems to get a Valentine (Forrestine) every day the second period. Keep it up, Dick. Mildred Hoff and a dashing romeo from North Side, seem to be hitting it off pretty well. You should have seen them at a popular eating place recently; they certainly bill and coo. She coos and he pays the bill. (Joke). Imagine our wonderment when we arrived at the Math-Science meeting last Tuesday and saw our big burly lettermen, Derr, Harrison, Meyers, Leitz, and Willson doing a strange dance with a handkerchief. We thought of many things that they could have been doing but never, never playing drop the handkerchief. Oh well—every man for his own sport.

And by the way, what is Ray Speaker doing going over to Betty Rose Wolf's house? Big bad Wolf, spoiling all of the other girls' chances. Judy Kroeff finally got her date with Loyd Dolan. We are all glad, because we would really hate to see such effort misplaced. Delbert Dickmeyer has said farewell to a fair Centralite, and already he has his pin out to Polly Borton.

Virginia Gross and Dick Hobson are about to come to the parting of the ways. What a break for all of the girls out at North Side. Has anyone noticed Barbara Raymond? Keep your eye on her; she is one of the cutest girls out at school. Maybe that is why Rodney Stair spends all of his spare time trying to see her. Trying is right. Ray Ballweg says that she died a thousand deaths before a recent dance because Rodney was sick and couldn't take her. That's nothing; so did he.

'Tis rumored that Dave Steger has three fair damsels on his string. Dave is just a little (Sally) Rea of sunshine to all of the girls. We wonder what Floyd Sutter finds so interesting the third period in the library. He and Doris Osgood certainly aren't embarrassed by lack of conversation. Hines was at Wranglers dance stag. Isn't that a shame? Especially when Gwen Horn thinks he is so cute. The younger generation really shone at Wranglers.

Did you all see Fritz (younger brother of Bob) Lohman there? My, my, and to think how much we all thought of Bob. Eddie Reeves and Barbara Arney are rumored as going steady. Barbara is home with tonsillitis. They say that Listerine is good for that, Reeves.

Thru The Wringer

Someone starts us off this week by sending us a very smart simile, namely, as inferior as Kenton Dickey's superiority complex. . . . Dick Rastetter should do something about . Beverly Ann Griffith rates ace-high with . but we have heard that she could do better. . . . Blond Wanda Nahrwald won't give  the break he is looking for. . . . People think that your present heart, who has answered to many names other than . could improve in many ways, Eleanor Vesey.

Mary Kay Connell is reported as going steady with the aforementioned superiority complex person. . . . Janet Fisher causes jumps in the blood pressure of Red Rarick, but another Rarick,  by name is very jealous and would like to lower the pressure. . . . Margaret Gross is following in her brother's footsteps by being the sweetness in some guy named 's life. . . . Whoever the girl is who coupled her name with that of Jim Ellenwood on a desk in room 24, could use her pencil to write lessons and learn more. . . . Jane Bradley and Marian McAtee are nominated for two of the better looking underclassmen, and how they make use of the fact!

Marjorie Rohrer really shines with Paul McConnell and she has kept him beaming very much of late. . . . What a war Sonia Velkoff and Margery Turner could wage if they both started talking as fast as they could! The other side wouldn't have a chance. . . . Bob Hawkins has started an adventure with Doris Hayes which promises to be very eventful. . . . Bruce Bradbury, if you don't know how to tell  that you love her, why not forget her? . . . Phil Perkins is a very good prospect this week. At least we have three notes which say so. . . . And now for some of the names of the kids you are used to seeing in the columns. They haven't even subscribed, and so they are out.

And in case you've wondered, the asterisks indicate that that person has not subscribed. They don't deserve to be mentioned.

Wise Solution Of Problems Of Family Depends Largely On Domestic Science

Skill In Management Attained From Course

This week we turn our attention to the field of home economics and quote Miss Pearl Rehorst, a sewing instructor, who has submitted the following excerpts from a P.-T. A. talk as her views on the services and importance of home economics:

"Home economics fits the needs of a present-day functioning curriculum for many very good reasons. Some of these are: the study makes for intelligent understanding of the family and its position of supreme importance in our type of civilization; its subject matter and activities are an essential part of the concerns of the largest group of our adolescent and adult female population; home economics courses are requisite for the development of specific abilities, such as maintenance and direction of the modern home, wise spending of incomes, economical purchasing, and definite sewing and cooking skills; home economics courses enable us to better appreciate what is taught in other courses; the subject helps in the general education of adults; it is productive of emotional stability through giving opportunity for creative expression; and the subject, by its inherent nature, offers educative opportunities that conform in a maximum degree to the most modern and valid principles of education."

Miss Rehorst, fearing that her remarks might seem biased and prejudiced, asked a girl who has had three semesters of sewing to

Our Gift From Rome

There was once a man who got up so early that he prevented the rising sun. Now don't get excited. He didn't prevent the sun from rising. He just got up before it did. He came before it, prae (before); venire (to come). That is the older and literal meaning; but because we mean to prohibit by getting ahead of something, "prevent" now means stop or prohibit.

Venire gives us many words, among them intervene, come between; advent, coming to, or arrival; contraveney, coming against.

—Constance Haag.

Secrets to Seventeens

BE NATURAL—If you don't have the allure of Garbo, and can't naturally move your eyelashes as she does, don't let it bother you.

If you don't naturally have Jimmy Cagney's wit and punch, don't let it bother you.

Maybe some of the qualities in other people appeal to you, but don't try to copy these characteristics; develop similar ones in yourself.

Other people's actions are a part of them; but since they are not a part of you, they look out of place.

Remember how disgusted you were the last time you saw a naturally quiet girl running around gushing over everyone.

Or when you saw a quiet, serious boy trying to be the life of the party, and succeeding in genuinely making a fool of himself.

This practice of imitating other people would be all right if anyone knew how to do it. But the imitator wastes everyone to notice these changes; so he over-acts every part and as a result looks ridiculous.

You have characteristics which are just as attractive to other people as theirs are to you. So just act natural, and your own characteristics will develop to such an extent that other people will pattern their actions after yours.

Shoes and Ships

COMIC—We thought that the childish practice of sending comic valentines had gone out of style. Evidently someone is behind the times, because a certain mean person sent such a scrap of paper to Marjorie Rohrer. It hurts her pride to have someone think that she is a "social snob."

PREDICAMENT—"Isn't this a lovely night to be caught in the snow," was undoubtedly the theme song of Ed Wilding and Bob Dull (two members of the staff of ye Northerner) after the Wranglers dance. You see, their car wouldn't start. One of them finally got a bright idea and called a taxi. We hope they arrived home safely.

ARTIST—Louis Bonsib was enjoying himself greatly while painting the Totem office the other day. Absent-mindedly he put a light bulb in his pocket. Later, while walking nonchalantly down the hall, he heard a queer noise. Imagine his surprise to find that the light bulb was broken. He claims he didn't fall down either.

THINKERS—Some curious persons noticed Bryce Minier and Joe Bex engaged in deep conversation not so long ago in the Times room. Their curiosity almost got the best of them. The funny part of the whole thing is that Bryce and Joe were talking about love. They both insist that it is the most widely discussed topic in the world today.

DANCING—Among the Jacks and Jills at the So-Si-Y and Hi-Y were: Forrestine Valentine and Dick Helm, Helen Kelsey and Bob Adams, Juanita Wolford and Dave Steger, Jeanette Kellogg and Don Sparkman, Elinor White and Miller Makey, Ruth Adler and Morgan Harrison, and Roseanne Certia and Herb Kramer. Everyone was disappointed because none of them fell down.

Ear-Burners

Myron Jones seems always to be getting into scrapes and is trying his best to land in the hospital. Last Thursday he almost succeeded. He was playing basketball in the gym fifth period and the ball hit him in the head, and then he hit his head on the floor. It all resulted in a slight concussion of the brain.

Speaking of odd collections, how's this one of Virginia Gardner? Every little scrap of material she finds she immediately makes into a collar. And what a large number she already has!

Although Warren Zelt has no car, he's hoping one will turn up sometime. In anticipation of a miracle, he's started getting license plates already. From his sister, we learned that he has so many that they're all over his walls, and even a few are on the ceiling.

Then there's Mary Ellen Pens for original definitions. Mr. Rothert, in Latin class the other day, when he was discussing derivatives from the Latin word "sex," asked what a sextette was. And Mary Ellen answered, "A quartette and two people besides."

An addition in the Sweet family! Jim has a new second cousin, a nine-pound boy, whose mother, his cousin, Mrs. M. T. Yates, nee Betty Stouder, graduated from South Side in '34.

Technique Improves All Things-Including Mastication Of Gum

Because the subject is still fresh, having appeared only recently in the News-Sentinel and the Delineator Magazine, we pass on to you some points to be remembered when comfortably munching on a wad of gum. Not long ago, Emily Post and those who follow her doctrines, frowned on the chewing of gum. However, the motion went on, gaining in popularity and becoming more and more violent, until now, "It is no longer a question of whether we should chew gum, but the appropriateness of the time and place where it is chewed."

"Here is where etiquette steps in. We don't chew gum when we are with people who don't enjoy gum or who don't approve of chewing gum. We don't chew it in places where it is obviously inappropriate. We either accept or refuse gum without making a fuss either way. We remember that chewing gum is like chewing anything else—we keep our lips closed, chew noiselessly, inconspicuously. And we don't park our gum where another person can see or touch it, or where there is a chance of its being stepped on."

Remembering these things, one should be able to enjoy chewing gum in perfect propriety. But even the most ardent advocates of the sport can scarcely chew it forever. Next arises the question of what to do with the gum after we are through with it. Again we quote: "Finished? Ready to 'park' the gum? For this you wisely adopt the habit of saving the inside wrapper. Never put the gum where another person can touch it."

In case you are one of those people who simply must pop and crack your gum, to the destruction of the nerves and disposition of all about you, better heed this warning: "If you do indulge in gum, chew discreetly, noiselessly. Don't gobble your gum, and we don't like to see anyone chew gum on a street car or on the street—or, for reason, mainly, the way people chew."

Miss Pearl Rehorst

write a short comment on the value of the specific course in which she is so interested. The article follows:

"I admit that, like many other girls, I was once under the impression that it is much wiser to buy ready-made clothes than to try my hand at sewing them. Now, however, the semesters of sewing I have taken have made me more fully appreciate clothes, whether they are ready-made ones or otherwise; it has given me a sense of values, the ability to judge. Even the girl who buys everything she owns needs to know what is good and what is not good in materials and workmanship. The principles of deciding upon such things she learns in South Side's sewing course."

Tiger, Redskin Squads Have Fair Week-End

Central And North Side Each Lose Friday Night, But Win Saturday's Tilts.

Central and North Side enjoyed a fairly good week-end, both teams losing Friday night, but coming back strong on Saturday by winning. Central lost to Bedford by a score of 34-19, but won the city championship the next evening by defeating the Archers, 32-21. North Side was nosed out by Columbia City, 35 to 34, Friday but trounced Kendallville on Saturday, 38-16.

Central traveled to Bedford Friday and was handed its worst trimming of this season, never having been beaten before by more than four points. It was also the first time the Tigers did not chalk up at least 25 points, the score being 34-19.

Combination Not Clicking

Central, not being able to break through the Bedford defense, could not hit when forced to shoot from well out on the floor, getting but four field goals, three contributed by the center, Motter.

Coach Mendenhall, finding that his combination was not clicking, could not alter it very much, as he had only seven players with him, wisely saving the rest for the South Side game. When the Tigers' defense faltered, the Stonecutters scored consistently, gaining an early lead, to go ahead at 18-10 by halftime.

The Redskin-Eagle battle, a closely fought battle from beginning to finish, ended with the hosts, Columbia City, one point in the lead, the score being 35-34.

Shots Were Hurried

North Side took an early lead and was out in front, 8 to 1, at the end of the first quarter; but the Eagles rallied and led, 16 to 15, at halftime. North Side was back in front again at the beginning of the final quarter, but the Eagles shot in front at this point. North Side led with less than a minute to play by a score of 34 to 33, but Walter of Columbia City was fouled at this point. He made both free throws to give the Eagles a win. The Redskins fared better Saturday evening, tramping the Kendallville Comets at the Northern gym by a score of 38 to 16. Kendallville, being unable to solve the Nulmen's tight defense, were forced to take practically all of their shots from a distance and, although they shot often, most of their shots were hurried and therefore inaccurate.

North Side led 7-1 at the end of the first quarter and gained a seven-point advantage at halftime, the score being 14 to 7. Throughout the rest of the game the North Siders were never threatened.

Several South Side Stars Swap Socks In Boxing Tourney

In the Golden Gloves tourney being held at the General Electric Club gymnasium, two boys from South Side have entered. These boys are Kenneth Miller, first string guard on the football team, and Ken Heersche. The first night saw Kenny Miller defeat Glessner Wyatt of Glover, Ohio, by a decision and Ken Heersche defeat Robert Randall of Angola in the third round by a technical knockout. Miller, a welterweight, and Heersche, a lightweight, are both juniors.

In the second round of the tourney, Miller defeated Boris Kuzoff of Fort Wayne, by a decision. Both boys are punchers, Kuzoff having a troublesome left, and Miller having a dangerous right. Kuzoff started off very well, but Miller finished fast in the last two sessions to take the bout. Heersche was not so fortunate in his second bout, as he lost a hairline decision to Chuck Gaunt, Fort Wayne flash.

Doris Rindchen Head Of Conservation Club

Doris Rindchen was elected president to succeed Bill McNutt at a recent meeting of the Conservation Club held in room 14.

The last three meetings have been spent in discussing astronomy. Vivian Rindchen gave a talk on types of stars at the meeting Thursday and was followed by a talk on the origin of the earth and the solar system by Virginia Gardner. The club is planning a point system. Refreshments were served at the close of the meeting.

Recondition Mama; Send Her To Gym!

All mothers and friends are invited to become members of the gym classes every Monday night at 7 o'clock. There are to be from ten to twelve weekly meetings for fifty cents. This class, under the direction of Miss Alice J. Patterson, is sponsored by the South Side Parent-Teacher Association.

Tumbling Classes For Year Formed

One Hundred Fifty-One Girls In G. A. A. Beginners' Group; 28 Are In Advanced Section.

The first of the G. A. A. tumbling meets to be held this season have started this week in the handball court. Classes are being divided into three sections, the beginners on Tuesdays and Thursdays, and the advanced class on Wednesdays.

The following, seventy-five girls have signed up for the beginners' class on Tuesdays:

"Forgotten Men" Role Played By Press Box Men At Games

Comparable to the unheralded linemen on the football team, the conscientious street cleaner who preserves our boulevards, and to the numerous other denizens of our little world who reap no glory from unenviable jobs, are the workers in the press box at the basketball games.

The four men, or rather two men and two boys, who hold down the responsible positions of official scorer, timekeeper, scoreboard operator, and general office and errand boy (the last named is all one position) are respectively, Mr. A. Verne Flint, Mr. Lloyd K. Whelan, John Edwards, and Herman Makey. At every home basketball game this quartet can be observed busily engaged in their various duties centering about the ten men who cavort upon the gym floor.

Scorekeeper Kept Busy

Mr. Flint, whose insignia bears the title of scorekeeper, is mainly concerned in a little black book in which he notes such essentials as the number of field goals scored and who scored them, the foul shots attempted, the foul shots converted, the timeouts, the substitutions, the personal fouls, and a running score of the game. Outside of these things, Mr. Flint is a man of comparative leisure. The position of score-keeper is one which requires cool calculating precision. Mr. Flint fulfills this requirement efficiently.

The job of firing the gun after completion of eight minutes of play falls upon Mr. Whelan, who during the week turns his thoughts to physical geography. At basketball games, Mr. Whelan concentrates on a medium-sized red clock which ticks off monotonously each second of play. The main asset to the job of timekeeper is accuracy, and, of course, honesty. Promptly on the second, the gun must go off. A good many times the game hangs in the balance over the timekeeper's gun, and a great deal depends on when the timekeeper fires.

Girls' Basketball Program Monday Features To Our Freshmen Games, Two Soph Clashes

The gymnasium was filled with thrills, yells and cheers last Monday when freshman basketball teams 1, 2 and 3 defeated teams 4, 5, 6 and 7 respectively. Sophomore teams 3 and 4 won over teams 5 and 6.

Freshman team 1 defeated team 8 by a score of 6 to 1. June Enoch scored highest for the winner, while Mary Melching made the only point for the losers. Mary Mantin led team 2 to success by making 4 baskets out of the 6 which gave her team a score of 10 to the losers' 3. Lily Kensler made two points for the losing team.

Fresh team 7 took a beating from team 2 in a hard-fought battle. At the half the score was only 1 to 0; but by the end of the game Betty Showalter had made a total of 6 points. The other point for team 2 was made by Donna Dennis. Mildred Franz, Beverly Bond and Ruth Luyben scored evenly for team 5 in order to beat team 4 by a score of 6 to 3. The game between sophomore teams 3 and 5 proved to be a very exciting one. Anita Affolder scored highest for the winners with 4 points. Irene Bredemeyer took honors for team 5 by making 1 decisive point for team 3 by a foul shot.

The other sophomore game which was rather interesting, was the one between teams 4 and 6. Team 4 defeated team 6 with a score of 8 to 4, the winning team making 4 points. The only scorer for team 6 was Frances Craig who made 4 points.

Riddle Leads Central Tigers To 32-21 Win Over Archers

Because of their inability to stop the sensational sniping of Virgil Riddle, Central's tall, colored guard, the South Side Archers went down to a 32-21 defeat as they met the revenge-bent Centralites on one of their "hot" streaks last Saturday evening.

Court Capers

Central's Tigers, led by the sniping of Virgil Riddle, annexed the 1935-36 city scholastic basketball title after a very hard-fought game which was more closely contested than the final score indicates. The game was very well played and the downfall of the Archers may partly be caused by the tough luck of Carl Hall, South Side star, who holds the lead in the city race for individual scoring honors. Many of Carl's shots rolled around the rim, but didn't go in the basket.

Central played the game Saturday after being humbled at the hands of Bedford on Friday. But the Tigers refused to be downhearted after this defeat, and came back north and avenged it by defeating South Side unceremoniously.

Next Saturday the Archers take on Central Catholic for the second time this season, something which has never been done before in the history of scholastic basketball in this city. The Archers are a big favorite for this game, but the Irish can be expected to do their share of the battling and a very interesting game is expected.

Those Tipton Red Devils are still going strong and seem destined to figure greatly in the final outcome of the state tournament. The Hot Dogs from Frankfort, the other great five in the state, are also going great guns, and if these two teams meet, the final outcome would be very close. Although their meeting the first part of the season found the Tipton five victorious, pre-tourney done in this case would be positively no-count.

We wonder if North Side and Decatur can get back into sectional with enough power to cope with South Side and Central, the leading figures at the present time. We say they can, giving as our reason that basketball is very inconsistent, and as an example, we give the sensational comeback of North Side in the sectional semi-final last year after being twice defeated very ignominiously during the season by the Tigers.

We take our hats off to Don Reichert, who very efficiently stepped into the boots of Jim Ellenwood during his illness, and has earned a regular berth on the first five with his stellar playing.

South Side and Central have met three times already this year. In two of these contests Central has emerged victorious, while in the other South Side was the conqueror. If the two teams meet again in the sectional, and this is highly probable, a very interesting contest can again be expected. The first game this year was won by

With this victory Central also captured the city championship title for this net season, ending its city series play with a record of four wins against one defeat. Their only loss in city competition was suffered at the hands of the hitherto weak Archers early in January. This victory also closed the Tiger's N. E. I. C. campaign with eight straight victories to their credit. This gives the Blue and White the undisputed claim to the conference championship, which they held jointly with the Archers last season.

Tigers Rally

After a close first half in which both teams played cautious ball, the Tigers put on a second half rally which insured them of victory. With Riddle playing one of the best games of his net career, the Blue went out in the second half and matched baskets with the Green, and then widened their margin of victory by virtue of a rally late in the tilt.

Both teams opened up cautiously and tried to find the weak points in the defenses being thrown up against them. South Side broke through the Blue defense for a basket and a foul while holding the Tigers to a foul to take a 3 to 1 lead as the first period ended. In the second quarter the Green discontinued trying to pull the Tiger defense out as they had in the initial period. They changed to a driving-in type of play but missed the shots they obtained on all but two occasions. Riddle started his scoring spree with three buckets to give his five an 11 to 7 lead at the half-way mark.

Hines, Reichert Leaders

At the start of the third period the Green worked the ball through the Blue defense very well and slowly gained upon their opponents. However, near the end of the period the Mendenhall aggregation clamped down on the Archer offensive and opened up a scoring attack which gave them a 20 to 15 lead as the quarter ended. The final period saw the Tigers play clever ball as they rode on to victory. Widening their lead early in the period, the Blue then stalled and matched the Archer sniping efforts point for point. With a safe margin insuring them of victory, the Blue were content to coast through the remainder of the tilt.

All of the Central netters who saw action got into the scoring column, with Riddle out in front with fourteen points to his credit. Hines and Reichert led the Archers with six and five points respectively.

Central, the second by South Side, and the third by Central, so this tentative fourth meeting seems to be destined to go to South Side. Another interesting fact is that the victory won by South Side was at the North Side gymnasium, the site of the sectional tournament.

Another question of great importance to sport fans in this part of the state is: Can Berne come back without the services of Bob Dro and defeat Bluffton in their sectional after being decisively defeated by the Bluffton five in their first meeting this year?

Archers To Take On Goshen, C. C. In Week-End Tilts

Green To Play Irish Net Quint Here Saturday

South Side Out After Second Victory Of Season Over Central Catholic Squad.

Kelly Klads Face Tough Tilt Friday

First Week-End Game To Be Played At Goshen Gym; Rivals Have Good Record.

South Side's Archers will put in a busy week end, as they journey to Goshen next Friday to tangle with the local quintet and return home Saturday to entertain Bill Barrett's much-improved Central Catholic outfit. The Archers will be at full strength for both of these contests, and both should develop into close ball games. After the Central defeat, South Side will be attempting to regain some lost prestige, and victories in these two games will do much toward establishing the Archers as a real threat in the Sectional tourney which comes up in two weeks.

Goshen has a fine ball club and will provide South Side with some stiff competition. They boast an enviable record for this season, and taking into consideration the fact that Goshen will be playing on their home floor, it looks as if the Archers' offense must show a great deal of improvement to enable them to come out victorious on Friday night.

New Lease on Life

Central Catholic, after a miserable start, has suddenly taken a new lease on life, and the Irish have swept through their last few opponents without even being pushed. Especially notable is Central Catholic's victory over the Decatur Commodores, who were hailed as the strongest Catholic team in the state and who had survived a difficult schedule without a blemish until their defeat at the hands of the Irish. This game marked Central Catholic as a real ball club; and, since that signal victory, they have not been headed. When the Central Catholic slump was at its lowest ebb, Coach Bill Barrett inserted three sophomores into his starting lineup, and the response was far beyond all expectations. Even the veterans seemed to take heart at this; and, as a consequence, the Irish stock has risen greatly.

Archer Offense Bugged

South Side's offense, which has been clicking with astonishing regularity, bogged down considerably against the Tigers, and the Archers were held to seven field goals. For this reason, stress will probably be laid on this department of the game during the practice sessions this week. South Side's defense also was not at its best, and Coach Friddle will have his hands full preparing his charges for this week's pair of games. Although Ellenwood is wholly recovered from his recent illness, it is questionable whether he will be inserted into the lineup which Coach Friddle has been using for the last few games. Possibly, due to the showing against Central, the Archer lineup may be juggled in hope of discovering a better combination. At any rate, the Archers will really be gunning for victories this week end; and, unless they suffer another reversal of form, they should have sailed away two more games in the win column before the final tilt of the regular season a week later.

South Siders Enter Ping-Pong Tourney

Several South Side students participated in the table tennis tournament Saturday, February 8. Though none of them won any prizes, some did reach the semi-finals.

Those who participated were: Ruth Stoner, Madeline Rothschild, Delbert Leininger, William Epmeier, Robert Zeig, Robert Hoffman, Delbert Dickmeyer, and Ralph Jones.

Offensive, Defensive Strength Make Bud Lee A Star Netman

An eye for the basket and a toughness on defense make Floyd Lee an important cog in South Side's basketball machine.

Bud, as he is commonly called, was born in Fort Wayne on February 26. Bud acquired his grade school education at Harrison Hill. He was quite prominent in basketball and baseball while attending there. When he came to South Side he immediately went out for football and landed the fullback position on the second string. As soon as football season ended, he went out for basketball and very quickly was seen playing with the Wavelets.

In his sophomore year he again went out for football where he landed the halfback position on the second string. He again played ball for the reserves during the basketball season. In his junior year he became a first-string substitute at the halfback position. It was in this year that Bud was advanced from the reserves to the varsity and gained some good experience.

In his senior year, he became South Side's star passer, punter, and fullback on the football team. When asked what position he liked best, Bud replied, "I like the fullback position the best." This year, his last, he is playing guard and forward on the first five. Bud has three stripes on his letter.

Bud did not say what vocation he is going to take up, but said he will probably enter Purdue University, and will go out for football.

John Hines, depicted above, has been an important cog in the Archer basketball machine this year. Only a sophomore, Johnny's chief virtue on the hardwood is versatility. Some of the endless varieties of things he can do well are: shooting, dribbling, passing, ball handling, guarding, jumping center, and recovering the ball off the backboard.

Salmon, Muskie Leap In Letterman Movies

Cubs Nose Out Green Seconds By 23-21 Score

Last Minute Basket Wins For Central Reserves, After Wavelets Hold Lead.

Coming from behind after trailing throughout the tilt, the Central Cubs knotted the score with three minutes to play and then beat the Green Wavelets of South Side by a 23 to 21 count in the reserve tilt last Saturday evening.

In the first quarter South Side piled up a good lead of 11 to 4. The points for South Side were made on field goals by Roth, Squires, and Bolyard, and three free throws by Budde. Central was held to only four points, two field goals.

In the second quarter South Side made three field goals, two by Budde, and one by Kitzmiller. Kitzmiller also made two charity attempts good. In the third quarter South Side was held scoreless, and due to the consistent fouling by the Green, Central gained steadily in this quarter.

In this quarter Bolyard, who played a fine offensive game for South Side, was forced to leave the game on account of fouls. In the thrilling fourth quarter, Budde made a short follow-up shot, which Central soon equaled. Kitzmiller then made good on a free throw that knotted the score at 21 to 21. Then Central made the final points of the game with a field goal that brought them the victory.

Sportlights

The tie that existed in the Big Ten hardwood race between Purdue and Indiana was broken last Saturday night by virtue of Ohio State's victory over Indiana's Cream and Crimson by a 43-34 score. The Purdue Boilermakers strengthened their hold on the lead by beating Northwestern 31-27.

Gene Venzke, champion miler from Pennsylvania, scored a smashing victory over his arch-rival Glen Cunningham in the Baxter Mile last Saturday night. A crowd of 13,000 screaming fans saw Venzke break the tape three yards in front of the barrel-chested Kansan. He ran one of the fastest miles of his eventful career, stopping the clock at 4 minutes, 10.2 seconds.

The Chicago Cubs' chances of repeating their last year's pennant victory might have been cracked a blow between the eyes on the announcement of the latest report that their mound ace, Lon Warneke, has a sore pitching arm. The uncertainty results from Manager Grimm's belief that Lonnie, tired of repeating to everyone that his arm was O. K., might have given this statement to ward off inquisitive fans.

Bill Haarlow, Chicago's ace forward, seems destined to repeat his last year's victory in the Big Ten scoring race. Like Jay Berwanger, Chicago's one-man grid team, he has had little support from his mates and the Maroons have not yet scored a victory in the Big Ten race. In his studies, as in basketball, he rates tops.

Paul Dean, silent partner of the Dean and Dean act, which has become famous in the last two summers, has decided to stick to his farming in case his boss, Sam Brendon, refuses to raise his salary. The younger Dean informs his eager public that he would rather farm than play baseball for less money than he thinks he is worth.

Heads Teachers' Group

Louis Briner

Louis Briner, physical education instructor and director of intramural sports at South Side, was elected president of the Second District Physical Education Teachers' Association at a meeting of the organization at North Side High School recently. He succeeds Miss Leota Haynes of Auburn.

Skirts and Sports

Miss Smith has a method of transportation which, she says, is better than machine, airplane, motorcycle, etc. She would rather be carried by Velma Yoder, Marjorie Hower, and Marjorie Cartwright.

Miss Patterson is one of the "sickest well persons around school," with the continual back trouble she is having. Frank goodness, she has Heather, the pup, to console her.

The earliest sport in which freshmen may participate is tumbling, so we urge the new freshmen to begin action in this popular sport immediately. Remember, a section of the annual G. A. A. exhibition is composed of tumbling.

That group of girls on the gym floor last Friday at about 4 o'clock really were attempting to play basketball? Vivian Hickman, Helen Foraker, Edna Disler, and Joyce Brett were some of the group who were "dead tired" after only about ten or fifteen minutes of play.

Ruth Goeglein and Leona Menze played fine basketball games for Junior 2 in their victory over Junior team 5 on Friday. Leona certainly can make those under-the-basket shots.

Betty Eisenacher is one of the smoothest basketball players the sophomore class has. We pity her guard, who must nearly run herself ragged in the useless attempt to prevent Betty from making numerous baskets.

Gwen Roberts, an up-and-coming freshman, was awarded a position on the freshman honor team because of her splendid guarding. Gwen's opponent rarely makes any points.

Begin Planning G.A.A. Honor Cage Tourney

Miss Patterson, Miss Smith Make Plans; Freshman Honor Team Announced.

Plans for the annual G. A. A. honor basketball tourney have been begun by Miss Alice Patterson and Miss Gretchen Smith, girls' gym instructors. The semi-final and first round will be played Monday, February 24, with the finals probably being played on the following Monday.

Because there are four teams playing, each class having a representative team, a drawing will be held before the semi-final round.

The freshman honor team was chosen Monday afternoon by Miss Smith who sponsored the tryouts. Those girls who were finally chosen to represent the freshman class include Betty Neeb, Norma Martin, Betty Showalter, Hazel Perry, Marjorie Wallace, Virginia Menze, Gwen Roberts, Patty Lyman, Marge Shelper, Marjory Stratton, Dorothy Bloemker, and Ruth Luyben.

Ten I-M Contests Played In Week

Archer Five Shows Most Power As Intramural Basketball Goes Into Its Fourth Week.

Intramural basketball is now progressing into its fourth week, with a few teams showing up exceptionally well. Among the teams, the Archers have been showing the best results. In several games their opponents have scored but one point against them.

In a game a week ago Tuesday the Hazards overcame the Sunshines by a score of 8-3. Broun headed the individual scoring with six points for the Hazards, while Diem made two points for the losers. In the second tilt, the Dukes downed the Mousers with the score standing 6-3. Flaig connected twice from the field to lead with four points.

The Ex-Varsity five fell before the Greenhorns Wednesday by a score of 3 to 10. Moeller chalked up a total of four points for the victorious team. The Clodhoppers trampled the Hotshots by a score of 12-3 in the second game. Ballinger scored six points and Brown totaled four points for the Clodhoppers. Carbaugh made all three points for the losers.

On Thursday, the Times flashed a snappy play from the center jump that proved most effective as they downed the Monkeys by the score of 14-4. Helm and Ballweg each made five points for the victors. On the same day the powerful Archers downed the "400" by the score of 14-0.

The Juniors, who show a possibility at the crowd, defeated the P. S. S. Friday by the score of 14-2. Peguignot totaled seven points and Leigben scored six for the Juniors. The Tish Tashes defeated the Hawkers by a score of 12-0. This team also has been showing up very well. Rarick made seven points for the victors.

In being defeated by the Redskins last Monday, the Chiefs put up a good fight to score eight points to the Redskins' ten. The Riff Riffs defeated the Aces by the score of 13-4. Masters made six points for the Riff Riffs.

New Members Act, Sing, Play At Philo Meet

Club Gives Gold And White Ribbons To Thirty Girls In Its Formal Initiation.

An amateur hour given by the new members of Philo was the program for the meeting held Monday in the Greeley room. Judges were appointed and prizes were given to the two best performers. They were Kathleen Witmer and Ruth Gerber.

At the business meeting which preceded initiation of new members, the announcement of the St. Patrick's day banquet was made. Dorothy Crabill, the place committee chairman, gave a report of the various suggested places of meeting and the club voted to have it at the Woman's club. The banquet will be on Tuesday evening, March 7. The price is 50 cents.

Initiates Are Listed

Mary Martha Hobcock, vice-president, and Helen Anderson, sergeant-at-arms, had charge of the formal initiation. Gold and white ribbons were given to each new member and are to be worn for a week. Thirty girls were made Philatheans at this meeting. They are: Betty Lee Wilson, Eleanor White, Marion Wolf, Beatrice Judge, Betty Pugh, Ruth Henline, Joan Bonisib, Lillian Gunzenbauser, Margaret Ann Ruckel, Helen Cox, Martha Zelt, Evelyn Heine, Louise Gerding, Ann Peters, Martha Ann Bacon, Ruth Garrison, Porrestine Valentine, Mary Ellen Kelley, Phyllis Culver, Ann Hull, Mary Jo Allen, Margaret Manning, Marie Mitchell, Elizabeth Linhart, Elizabeth Neff, Marian Lickert, Mary Nicolai, Kathleen Witmer, Ruth Gerber and Katherine Simminger.

Program Is Given

Each new member or a group of new members gave some kind of a skit, song or reading. Kathleen Witmer, winner of the first prize, played a piano solo.

Refreshments were served after the amateur hour program.

The committees for the annual St. Patrick's day banquet met in Miss Demaree's room Wednesday.

There will be a play practice this evening for those who have parts in the Meterite-Philo joint meeting. This has been scheduled for March 2.

Sixteen Cities Scenes Of Intellectual Quizzes

The University of Chicago's annual intellectual tournament will be held in sixteen U. S. cities April 18. The total amount of scholarships to be given in them amount to $10,000.00. Last year forty-three full or partial prize awards were made. All seniors are invited to compete in these examinations.

Competing students will go to the city that has been selected in each district. Students from Fort Wayne will go to either Central High School of South Bend or to Chicago. Chicago pupils will wait until Friday, April 24, to take the examination. On that evening, the nation-wide winners will be announced.

From the first seven topics listed, one must be chosen; and any other two may be selected. One-hour examinations are to be written on three of the following subjects: English, world history, mathematics, Latin, German, French, Spanish, botany, zoology, chemistry, and physics. A plaque will be given to the school whose representatives win the most points.

All arrangements must be made through the principal, and all names must be in the university's office of the registrar before March 14.

Study Famed Artists At French Gathering

A program dealing with the study of French art and famous French artists was presented at the regular French Club meeting held on Thursday, February 13, in the Voorhees Room.

A brief summary of the lives of different artists was given. Mary Shaffer talked on Jean Francois Millet, famed painter of peasant pictures, who received his first inspirations from Bible pictures. Elizabeth Simpson discussed Jean Baptiste Corot, famous French landscape artist. Several reproductions of Corot's paintings were passed among the members.

The early life and later works of Vigee Le Brun, portrait painter, was given by Constance Schultz. The program was completed by the singing of "Frere Jacques" and the playing of a guessing game.

During the short business meeting, cards were filed out for Miss Pittenger. Theo Schuenburg was appointed Inter-Club Congress representative. Further plans were also made for the showing of a French travel film.

Four Hundred Have Diphtheria Immunity

A count of all the pupils immunized against diphtheria was taken Thursday morning, February 13, during the home room period. Out of the two thousand students in South Side, one fifth of the students have been immunized against diphtheria. The exact count amounted to 408. The count was taken at the request of Doctor Duemling, the school physician, and also at the request of Mr. Abbett.

One student replied, "To get the pruness!"

In each of Mr. Chappell's classes there is a general foreman, shop foreman, millroom foreman, finishing room foreman, and a tool-room foreman.

Some of the funny answers that were given on a test over the play, "What Men Live By," in Miss Melton's 9B English class were: (1) That Simon found Michael lying in a cutter. (2) Michael was an angle from heaven, and (3) God carried away Michael's sole to heaven.

Funeral services for Miss Virginia Vesey, a prominent senior who died from bronchial pneumonia Sunday morning, were held Tuesday afternoon at 2:30 o'clock, and the burial was in Lindenwood Cemetery.

Funeral services were held Tuesday afternoon for Miss Virginia Vesey, a prominent senior, who died Sunday morning of bronchial pneumonia.

Virginia

Like a flower He had plucked from His garden,

God lent her to us for awhile: And she gave to the credit of South Side,

In scholarship, service and smile. But the plans that were made for Virginia

Did not meet God's approval, it seemed;

So He gathered her back to His garden, E'er maturity's light had yet gleamed.

But South Side will long feel her spirit;

Up incline, in classroom and hall; And in memory she will stand at Commencement,

Tho' her soul chose to answer God's call.

Tardy, Absent Record Reaches High Mark

The already large number of students who have been absent or late because of the extremely cold weather this year is being increased daily, according to reports by Miss Virginia Montgomery, keeper of records. The past few weeks of sub-zero weather have sent the daily number of absentees and late-comers far past the regular average of former years.

The list of tardy persons reached a new height on Monday morning with approximately 116 students coming in late for their classes. Most of the tardiness is the result of pupils' inability to make proper transportation connections.

Eighth periods are not being given the pupils who have been late to school because of the cold weather.

Wanted!

Any South Side student who is interested in working up to a good position on the business side of Times staff should see John Bex or Georgianna Martin in Room 18, tonight.

Ask Him, Girls; If He Refuses You Get A Silk Gown, A Kiss

Girls, now is the time to start your new spring wardrobe. This is leap year, the time when women take time by the forelock and do the proposing.

There are many theories for the origin of this delicate privilege extended to the fair sex every fourth year, but none is quite satisfactory. However, the Irish have it in this fashion.

Refused Bridget's Proposal
St. Patrick, after driving the frogs out of the bogs and the snakes out of the grass on the Emerald Isle, was walking along Lough Neagh when St. Bridget accosted him. She was lamenting that the ladies of her nunnery were grumbling about the fact that they were prevented from "popping the question." St. Patrick was a single man himself, but he was so moved by his sad state of affairs that he granted to the ladies the privilege of proposing one year out of every seven. At this, St. Bridget protested and throwing her arms about his neck exclaimed, "Arrah! Patrick, jewel, I daurn't go back to the girls with such a proposal. Mek it wan year in four."

To which St. Patrick replied, "Bidy, acushla, squeeze me that way again and I'll give you leap year, the longest one of the lot."

Then St. Bridget, greatly encouraged, asked for the hand of St. Patrick, but unfortunately, for St. Bridget at least, St. Patrick had taken the vow of celibacy. Therefore, he had to patch up the difficulty as well as he could with a kiss and a silk gown.

And ever since then, says the legend, if a man refuses a leap year proposal, he has to give the girl who proposes a kiss and a silk gown.

Have Scotch Law
History also has something to say about leap year.

In Scotland in 1288, a law saying that if a man refused a leap year proposal, the man was to be taxed. Similar laws were passed in France shortly afterward.

Then, according to a little book called, "Love, Courtship, and Matrimony," which was published in London in 1606, the English allowed this tradition to become an unwritten law.

There are also many leap year superstitions. In many parts of New England today, people believe that beans grow on the wrong side of the pod during leap year.

John Jackson Plays Philatelic "Gongster"
Plans for an amateur show were discussed at the last meeting of Philatelic Club, which was held Wednesday, February 19, in the Voorhees Room. It was decided to pattern their show after Fred Allen's show. Red Gallen, master of ceremonies, will be enacted by John Jackson. Alice Shiftet will take the part of Portland. The show will be held at their next meeting.

Nominations for Inter-Club Congress representative were held, and John Thackeray was elected. It was announced that a membership party would be held in the near future.

During the social part of the meeting, various members gave talks on issues of stamps. At the close of the meeting, refreshments were served. The committee in charge of the meeting was John Thackeray, chairman; Homer Miller, Emily Lepper, and Alice Shiftet.

The purpose of this program was to illustrate the various phases of art in an entertaining and attractive manner. Every student of South Side is invited to join the Art Club. One does not need to be an art student to become a member of the club.

Characters of "Frances and Francis" were Frances Summerhays, Selma Liff, Miss Forbes, Ruth Adler, and James H. North, Dick Helm. The plays were given under the direction of Miss Marjorie Suter, director of dramatics.

Nominating Committee Named The properties committee consisted of Gwen Horn, Mary Martha Horbuck and Maxine Borchert. Kenneth Scott, Luther Precise and Darwin Leitz helped with the changing of scenery.

Mrs. Victor Rea, vice-president of P-T. A., announced the nominating committee. It is composed of Mesdames Kelsey, Rippe, Knudson, Crabill and Chappell.

The ensemble which played for the meeting was composed of Margaret Rehm, Ruth Baade, Bob Wiehe, Bill Cargile, George Strahlem and Vernon Gregory.

Wranglers Hold Potluck, Initiation

Cliff Schrom, Dalton McAlister, Richard Helm, Mildred Hoff, Sally Rea, D. Bennett Heads.

The new members of Wranglers Club were initiated Wednesday evening after the club's potluck which was held in the cafeteria. The president, Clifford Schrom, was general chairman and head of the initiation arrangements.

A short business meeting was held after the potluck followed by a speech of welcome by the president. Dick Helm then gave the club's aims and ambitions. Wranglers also had as their guests two of their alumni. Music and singing was another of the after-dinner features.

The menu for the potluck included meat loaf, potato salad, olives, pickles, sandwiches, ice cream and cake. Committee members were as follows: program, Sally Rea, chairman, Mary Lancia, Helms, Joan Lohman, and Dalton McAlister. This committee was responsible for the songs that were sung during the course of the evening. Mildred Hoff was the piano accompanist. The initiation committee was Doris Bennett, Dick Helm, Dave Steger, Ann Winters, Dick Strasser, Louis Bonsib, Betty Meigs, Victor Nusbaum, Dorothy Crabill, and Dick Baade.

Lewis Carol Is Topic Of Junior Math Meet

Charles Hart, a former member, gave an interesting talk to the Junior Math Club at a meeting held last Tuesday. His subject was Charles L. Dodgson, better known under the pen name of Lewis Carol. Besides writing "Alice in Wonderland," Mr. Dodgson was also a learned mathematician and a clergyman. After the speech, Charles showed the club pictures of the author and of his heroine, Alice.

For business, a discussion was held concerning the forthcoming skating party. The meeting was cut short in order that members might be able to help make favors for the skating party.

So-Si-Y Talks On Statesmen Of Importance

George Washington, Lincoln Feature Meet; Carry Out Theme of "Ship of State."

Short talks on unusual facts about two of America's greatest statesmen, George Washington and Abraham Lincoln, featured So-Si-Y's regular meeting held Tuesday evening in the Greeley room. The theme of the meeting was "Ship of State," a patriotic program.

Talks were given by Helen Forker, who spoke on unusual Lincoln facts; Eleanor Kirkpatrick, whose topic was "What Famous Americans Have Had to Say About Lincoln;" and Betty Weibel, who gave a short biography of Washington.

Preceding the talks, June Close, chairman of the meeting's program committee, introduced Gladys Shifflet, who read as devotion Longfellow's poem, "Ship of State." With Roadcap, pianist, accompanied the members of the club as they sang "America, the Beautiful," and "The Star-Spangled Banner." Ruth then gave a reading, entitled "O Captain, My Captain."

Projects Named During the business meeting, Helen Anderson, president, announced that So-Si-Y members would again sell school stationery as a service project. The stationery will probably be sold in the front hall soon. Pay Bechtold, service chairman of the club, gave a report on the response received from the Kate Bilderback Neighborhood House supervisor, to whom the 100 Valentine service projects had been given. Following the service reports, Martha Franz, Inter-Club Congress representative, made a report on the coming clean-up campaign. Miss Beulah Rinehart, one of the advisers, closed the business meeting with an announcement pertaining to the music leadership course offered to Girl Reserve members by Mrs. Seibt, former city Girl Reserve councilor. The first class will be held Monday afternoon at 4 o'clock at the Y. W. C. A.

Committee Is Listed The members of the committee for the next meeting, the theme of which will be "Storms at Sea," are Dorothy DeHaven, chairman, and Marilyn Smith, Helen Doenges, Betty Lou Lindenberg, Betty Burhenn, Edna Schneider, Barbara Von Gunten, Ruth Gerber, Mary Shaffer, Betty Jane Tuerschemann, Rosalie Huston, Marcelle Bantel, Virginia Fathauer, Gertrude Dannenfeldt and Verna Holtman.

Clean-Up Planned By Club Congress Group Is Also Making Plans For Another Get-Acquainted Day That Will Be Held In Spring.

The second session of the Inter-Club Congress was held Monday in Room 38 with two faculty advisers, Mr. Flint and Mr. Bex, present. Miss Pittenger also attended the meeting and gave some very vital and important points and details which need the attention of the student body. Theo Schurenberg acted as the presiding officer in the absence of Charles Stone, newly-elected chairman, and Ruth Roadcap served as secretary pro tem.

Student Cooperation Sought The forthcoming clean-up campaign was the main topic of the discussion. Suggestions were made by the members as to the method by which this campaign will be conducted. The plan which was decided upon was that a bulletin would be given to the teachers of each home room, describing the object of the campaign. The home room teacher would then appoint a boy and a girl to take care of the chart, which will be a check-up of the various misdemeanors which the members of the home room have observed during the course of the day. These charts will be collected at the end of two weeks; and many improvements about the school are anticipated if the whole student body cooperates. Members of the committee to write the bulletin are John Thackery, Miles Frisinger, Robert Shinel, Virginia Gross, Rosemary Lehman, and Jane Loomis. Mr. Flint will mimeograph these bulletins.

The get-acquainted program which was first introduced and conducted last year will again be held this year. The program proved to be very successful last year. Plans for this campaign will be given at the next meeting. This campaign consisted of the signing of colored cards, which had "Hello" printed on them, by persons unknown to the bearer.

Members of the present Inter-club Congress and the clubs represented include: Miles Frisinger, Boys' Rifle; John Thackery, Philatelic; John Edwards, Senior Hi-Y; Charles Stone, Lettermen; Roy Roadcap, Radio; Julia Crabill, U. S. A.; Margery Ruhf, Travel; Virginia Gross, Wranglers; Francine Shelper, Sunshine; Norma Clausner, Letter Girls; James Derr, Math-Science; Ruth Roadcap, Social Science; Verna Holtman, German; Ruth Reitz, Wo-Ho-Ma; Rosemary Lehman, Library; Helen E. Meyers, Junior-Math; Peggy Kilpatrick, Philo; Barbara Raymond, G. A. A.; Theo Schurenberg, French; Jane Loomis, Girls' Rifle; and Robert Shinel, Societas Romana; and Martha Franz, So-Si-Y.

Philatelists Will Hold New Stamp Exchange

A stamp exchange will be held by the members of the Philatelic Society at their meeting Wednesday in the Voorhees room.

It is not compulsory that the members exchange stamps with other members at this meeting. Any members who have stamps that they do not want are requested to bring them to the meeting, where they may be able to exchange them for stamps that they want.

Mr. Wilson Offers Pleas With Rulers For Winter Relief

"Ye Gods and rulers of the sky, when will you discontinue your discomforting activities?" Thus does our beloved social science instructor, Mr. Wilburn Wilson, plead with the Gods on high during these days of wintery breezes.

And can you blame him for his wrath and pleadings? Each day Mr. Wilson trudges slowly home, weary of foot and torn of nerve. For every day Mr. Wilson is tortured with the weariness caused by his efforts to dodge the small, sparkling drops of water as they descend from the ceiling of that fair enclosure in which he injects the fluids of education into his stooges.

Ah, but the crafty professor of American history, after observing how his nation removed all obstructions from its paths, wracked his mental facilities until it produced a real brainstorm. By carefully placing a tin trough under the rivulets of water and deflecting its course into a pail, Mr. Wilson has defeated the angered forces of nature.

Literary Clubs Prepares Plays For Next Meet

"Dish Of China Tea" Features Joint Program; Helen Flaig Heads Music.

"A Dish of China Tea," written by Elizabeth H. Neff, is the name of the play to be given by the Philo Thespians at the joint meeting of the Philo and Meterite Clubs Tuesday, March 3, in the Greeley Room. The Meterite Club will also present a play. Music under the direction of Helen Flaig will be included in the program.

The opening scene of the Philo play, "A Dish of China Tea," is the sitting room at "Wynnewood," a few miles from Williamsburg, Virginia, in the year 1781. The occasion of the affair is a small tea party in honor of Lady Augusta Clive. The properties are in charge of Eliza Bess Lucas and Lorraine Meyer.

Characters Named The characters for the play are Mrs. Wynne, played by Eva Allison; Lady Augusta Clive, Verna Holtman; Clarissa Courtayne, Marian Wolf; Cornelia Throckmorton, Theo Schurenberg; Cynthia Raverenfort, Peggy Kilpatrick; Janitney Wynne, Martha Zelt; and Nancy Gordon, LaVerne DeKeele.

The costumes will be very colorful and of the fashion of Revolutionary period. The Philo program is in charge of Selma Liff, and it will precede the program of the Meterite Club at the joint meeting. Philo and Meterites are both literary clubs and it has long been their custom to have one joint meeting a year.

Thespians Plan Play "While Brother Phil Was Walking," is the name of a new play which the Philo Thespians will give at the meeting after next. Tryouts were held at the last of the Thespians. The characters are Marian Marsden, played by Jo-Anne Smith; Mrs. Marsden, Louise Closs; Phil, Maxine Mariotte; and Jack, Mildred Hoff.

At a meeting of the program committee held on Monday evening, plans were started for the St. Patrick's Day banquet, which will be held on Tuesday, March 17, at the Women's Club. The program committee is composed of Selma Liff, Mary Michaels, Helen Flaig, Mildred Foellinger, and Helen Anderson.

The forty-eight piece orchestra presented the following program: Overture—Odipi a Colonne—Sachinini; orchestra. Variation on Air—Chopin—Flute solo by Eldon Baker, accompanied by Margaret Baker.

First Movement in G Minor—Chausson—Trio composed of Margaret Baker, Ruth Seigle, and Kathleen Bolyard.

First Movement of Mendelssohn Concerto—Violin solo by Margaret Baker. March and Chorus from Tannhauser—Wagner—Orchestra.

First Grading Period Ends Friday, Feb. 28

The first grading period of the term ends tomorrow. S and U grades will be issued on March 3. For the benefit of new pupils and freshmen, an explanation of these grades follows. S stands for satisfactory, U for unsatisfactory. A U grade does not necessarily mean that a pupil is failing, but rather that he is not doing as much or as well as he could. These grades are only important in that they serve as warning notices and add impetus to lagging students.

Several members of the club will give the lives and works of the following great masters: Chopin, by Dorothy Newell; DeBussey, by Jerry Zehr; Bizet, by Margaret Monning; and Chaminade, by Mary Lou Monning.

Several piano selections will be presented to illustrate the various artists' work. Shirley Corman will play pieces written by Chopin, including "Chopin's Etude." Kathleen Winner will play a musical masterpiece by DeBussey. To conclude the program, several interesting games have been planned by the entertainment committee.

X, Y, Z's To Study Logarithms Again

Girls Plan Program For Future; Mildred Foellinger, Norman Buck Lead In Score Point.

Logarithms will again be the subject of the X, Y, Z's meeting to be held this afternoon, in room 16. This subject will be used at the next few meetings of the group. It is desired that all members bring with them their trigonometry books, containing a four-place table of logarithms.

The team of the X, Y, Z's, composed entirely of girls, is planning a very novel program. Mildred Foellinger is the captain of the "X" team. Other members of the team are Ruth Adler, Dorothy Crabill, Hazel Kuttler, Betty Rayl and Helen Anderson.

At the meeting held last Thursday, "Z" team, captained by Richard Meyer, won the contest drill with a total of 46 points. Members of this team are: Herman, Ruthkowsky, David Sherman, John Stealy, John Will and Richard Meyer.

Team "Y" was second with a total of 41 points. Team "X" had a total of 37 points. The highest score was made by Mildred Foellinger for the third consecutive week. The second highest score was made by Norman Buck, captain of "Y" team.

Jo-Anne Smith Is Psi Iota Xi Victor

Prominent Senior Writes Best Story; Virginia Blakley And Shirley Seabold Win Places.

Jo-Anne Smith, one of South Side's prominent seniors, who has recently won several honors in the journalism field, has been named the winner of the first prize of $5 in the city in the short story contest sponsored by the Psi Iota Xi sorority, a national, social, literary, and philanthropic organization. Other winners were Virginia Blakley and Shirley Seabold of North Side, who were second and third prize winners, respectively.

Contest Newly Started This short story contest originated with the Alpha Psi chapter of the sorority at Washington, Indiana, three years ago. Last June at the convention of the sorority at Bloomington, Indiana, the contest was undertaken as a national project. Any high school senior girl may enter a short story not exceeding five thousand words.

The contest is divided into three parts, city, province, and state. The state prize for the final contest is $75. The judges for the local contest were Mrs. Buri Fiddle, Mrs. Paul White, of New Haven, and Mrs. Vera Lane, head of the English department of Central High School.

Jo-Anne's story showed exceptional literary ability and training. It was entitled "Cap'n Sees Anew," and related how "Cap'n Dan" Andrews came to look upon the sea not as so much water and salt but a thing of beauty. The three winners were entertained by the Delta Gamma chapter at their meeting last Tuesday evening at the home of Mrs. Fred Tangeman.

"Parlor" Will Be Jammed When Cowboys And Girls, Tourists "Do Their Stuff"

Hollywood Beauts To Do Their Share

Fact Is, Afternoon, Evening Performances Scheduled For Tomorrow; Low Cost.

The cattle may graze tomorrow where they will, for the cow hands have something more interesting to do than act as grass nurses to a bunch of cows.

"Wouldn't miss that show for a month's grub and pay," one cow hand declared, and boasted that his pinto would have him back at the ranch and in the front row 'fore the others even got headed the right way. "Can't git too near them Hollywood gals," he chuckled.

Yep, there won't be much work done around The Dude Ranch tomorrow afternoon, for everybody's going to put on a big show in the afternoon. And those who can't sing, or tell yarns, or go into a dance, will be sitting on the sidelines having a good time.

That's not all. Seems as if the visitors from Hollywood who've been roughing it at The Dude Ranch are going to "do their stuff."

Quite in contrast to the tourists from the cinema city will be the Indian dancers from a neighboring reservation. In other words South Side's first annual vaudeville, sponsored by the departments of music and physical education, will be presented tomorrow afternoon and evening on the gymnasium stage. Miss Alice Jane Patterson and Miss Gretchen A. Smith, of the girls' gym department, and J. W. Wainwright of the music department, are in charge of arrangements for the performances.

Ducats A Quarter Admission prices for the performances are twenty-five cents and tickets are on sale from any member of the music department and in the girls' gym office. Students will be excused from their afternoon classes to attend the Friday afternoon performance if they wish. The evening performance will begin at 8 o'clock.

An outstanding act will be that of Clifford Kirkpatrick, well-known city magician, who will be seen in a rope twirling novelty. Probably an educated horse will be put through its paces.

Bex Chief Of Dudes John Bex will portray the dude ranch proprietor; and members of the boys' glee club, the orchestra, and the girls' physical department will also be prominently cast.

The complete program is as follows: Cowboy songs—Boys' Glee Club. Equestrian number, Pony Ballet—Girls' department. Western Yarns—Member of Boys' Glee Club. Square Dance—Boys and girls. Songs—Boys' Glee Club. Indian dance from the neighboring reservation. Tap Dance—Billy Korte and Peggy Kilpatrick. Rope Twirling—Clifford Kirkpatrick.

Hollywood troupe—Novelty act. "Top Hat"—Verna Lehman and Marguerite Hitzeman. Two Step and Polka—Boys and girls. Educated horse. Tall Stories—Members of Boys' Glee Club. Musical Stairs—Girls' department. Finale—Entire cast.

Gym Girls Dance Members of the girls' physical education department who are featured in the pony ballet are Marjorie Clapp, Janet Hartman, Peggy Kilpatrick, Helen DiGregory, Bernadette Shearer, Barbara Scheele, Peggy Woodhull, Marian Patterson, Julia Crabill, Ann Hull, Marjorie Mitten, and Olive Zahn. The Indian dancers from the neighboring reservation are Teddy Confer, Frances Craig, Lila Patton, Eva Allison, Kathryn Cook, Marjorie Howard, Lubadelle Jughans, Rafida Laulalo, Betty McKown, Betty Jean Griffith, Dorothy Karnap, and Marjorie Quackenbush.

Members of the square dance ensemble are Marjorie Mitten, Marian Patterson, Julia Crabill, Olive Zahn, Dwight Frost, Joe Faulkner, and Glen and Vernon Gregory.

Girls In Hollywood Act Dance Club members who will do a musical comedy ballet to "I Dream Too Much" as a part of the Hollywood troupe's act, are Maxine Althouse, Kathryn Cook, Teddy Confer, Helen DiGregory, Beatrice Craig, Janet Hartman, Peggy Kilpatrick, Betty McKown, Dorothy Roudeshub, Bernadette Shearer, Barbara Scheele, and Deloris Cleaver.

The students who will do the Two Step and Polka dance are Janet Hartman, Peggy Woodhull, Louis Bonsib, and Joe Faulkner. Members of the Musical Stairway act are Virginia Baumgartner, Martha Franz, Betty Kreischer, and Betty Broderick.

All of the scenes will take place in the recreation room of the imaginative dude ranch and will offer a distinctive different type of entertainment. The songs which will be featured as the Boys' Glee Club's acts are "Home on the Range," "Carry Me Back to the Lone Prairie," "Boots and Saddle," and "The Last Round-Up."

College Representative Here A representative from Western College will be at South Side today. The representative will discuss Western College with all senior girls who are interested.

A politician is a man who tells the people of his own party that they haven't enough enthusiasm and tells the people of the opposite party that they take politics too seriously.

The average American citizen is the man who looks down on the "common herd" and says how dumb he thinks the average American citizen is.

Most inflationists are thinking only of the good of the country. Of course, if it accidentally makes them a lot of money from speculations, that will be also very nice.

An American business man is the fellow who rides in a car every place to save energy, and pays dollars for machines and gymnasium fees in order that he may get enough exercise.

See those people cheering the referee? That doesn't mean that he is doing a particularly good job, but that at the present their team is winning.

Extra-Curricular

The proper balance between the curricular and extra-curricular activities has always been one of the most vital and difficult problems of high school. Any fairly intelligent student can maintain a few activities outside of his regular school work. The problem is how much each individual student can carry outside his school work and still not mar in any way his chances of making good grades.

As in all things, some people can do more and better work than others. However, those who can't do so much often try to do many things and as a result do nothing well. In view of the number and variety of our clubs and other activities, several unfortunate students sometimes forget entirely the purpose of their coming to school. The purpose of our going to school is to learn one's daily lessons. Therefore, we should in no way slight our daily lessons for they are what we are sent here for. In fact, we may safely say that each individual's success in high school often depends on his balance of curricular and extra-curricular activities.

A Humble Spirit Is A Real Virtue

Humbleness has often been called one of the most essentials of human virtues. It is indeed one of the most redeeming qualities any person may acquire. No one can become perfect, but everyone can sensibly recognize his faults and weaknesses. Each person's recognition of his imperfections is one of his greatest virtues. If someone ever attained perfection of character, he might have the right to be proud; but if he became proud to such a degree as to make it a fault, he would no longer be morally perfect. Therefore, none of us has any just cause to be unduly proud. Great self-admiration is only a sign of littleness. All truly great men have been humble. It is only the small unimportant fellow who believes himself great who engages in such a mentally degrading fault as self-admiration. May we all in our own achievements realize the virtue of humbleness.

Life's Best Treasures Can Be Obtained But—It Takes A Lot Of Time

"Dost thou love life? Then do not squander time, for time is the stuff life is made of."

The above quotation from Benjamin Franklin shows clearly in a few words what writers, preachers and philosophers have lectured to people about for hours. The proper knowledge of the value of time is indeed a fundamental thing for the success of any man or woman. Each person has so much time allotted to him. All his efforts will never change the length of his days, hours, or minutes. Time waits for no man, but everything anyone accomplishes depends on how he spends his amount of time. If he squanders his amount of time, in the end he will have nothing to show for it. He who spends his time wisely will not be ashamed of the things he has bought with it. Alas for him who after a while finds that things he has spent his time and life for are like bubbles and are worthless. Our success in high school or in life depends largely on how we spend our time.

Carrying On

With Dot Crabill and Marty Hobrock

It was rather difficult to get to the dirt this week since the snow was so deep, but never fear, we managed to get some. Now that the weather has been mentioned, don't you wish it were spring, when love is in the air, and all nature is dressed in beautiful flowers? Oh, here we go getting romantic! Well we'll leave the love stuff out, maybe, and just stick to the pretty flowers.

We think there should be orchids to the new couples seen around lately. Pat Patterson and Johnny Dolan; it seems to meet with most everyone's approval. Also orchids to Sue Wallace and Eddie Leitz and to Bill Hoblet and the girl "who couldn't have her picture in the Times because 81 people didn't subscribe." Paul McConnell is lying "among the sweet peas" about Lois Rea and about a little North Sider too. He doesn't know her name, but she's beautiful.

Maybe a dozen roses would take Zieg's place with Virginia Heller, now that Maxine Howard is filling her place. Roses are also in store for Schaaf and Parmalee. Did you know that they have gone steady for almost three years? And speaking of people going steady, we have quite a collection of pansies here in South Side: Kramer and Jertia, Max Roth and "Bugs" Jurgenson, Durbin and Ream, Nelson and Gardner, Henslee and Haven. And some of the almost-not-quite-hardly-going-steadies are Ruth Adler and Morgan Harrison, Theo Schurenberg and Bob Gargett, Jean Bollman and Chuck Worden, Bob Adams and Helen Kelsey.

"Extra!" The wonder of all wonders among our fair lovers. Little boy "Green" has at last gotten to blow his Horn. We'll give a large bunch of Violets to Polly Borton. She certainly has had her string of admirers; first it was Bonsib (ye foremost pickle-eater-in-back-of-street cars). Then it was Brazy, and now she has young Delbert on the string.

"We'll say it with flowers" to Bob Brazy. By special delivery we're sending him some golden rod for his hay fever. Some people say it in letters instead of with flowers. Jean Creighton does to Brower, while Dorothy Douglas says it to her southern flame, Jimmy, and Manuel Rothberg to far away Pat Berry.

Earl Paxton's little rosebud is Martha Franz, but Ray Ballweg and Rodney Stair have Babs Raymond for theirs. We'll all agree with Bonsib's taste in choosing Dot Douglas for his. Wouldn't ebony haired Hardendorf look lovely with a black-haired rose bud?

A pressed rose, Wainwright's Camp, summer breezes, a little southern girl, these memories pass through Dick Rastetter's mind as he writes to Gerry Gulf. Judy Kroeff doesn't need to write to Lloyd because he's here all the time. Even though Steger is here, Wolford and he keep up their "budding" affair with notes.

B. B. and B. No, that isn't a bee buzzing around a flower; we mean Joan Bonsib and Bob Bosely, the humorist and the darling, a grand combination.

Poor Warren Zelt, raving about Rosie Chappell's iris blue eyes and lily white skin and rose-red lips. Oh Romeo!

Now when all the flowers are being tossed about, we want to throw a bouquet to one of South Side's sweetest and most charming young ladies, Mary Louise Helms.

We might add that this column was typed by the copyrighted Myron Jones-Bryce Minier-Manuel Rothberg system, "Look-and-don't-let-Covalt-catch-you."

CLEAR CUT CAMEOS

Serene, calm, unruffled; yet with a humorous twinkle in her eye, has this versatile senior passed blithely through four well-spent years at our beloved Alma Mater. She did not put up a fight when asked to be interviewed, merely smiled and graciously consented. Finding her so willing to please, we took advantage of the situation and plied her with innumerable questions.

First and foremost came the inevitable question: "With what extra-curricular activities have you been affiliated during the past year?"

"I am a member of Travel, Booster, Societas Romana, So-Si-Y, Philo, and the Times," she answered without hesitance.

Virginia tells this little incident about her recent visit to Washington, D. C. She and Mary K. Smith were sent as delegates to represent Travel Club at the Red Cross Convention. Virginia laughed as she related this:

"Mary K. and I attended a tea given by Mrs. Roosevelt at the White House. Of course, Mary and I wanted to eat and look our very best. I had a bad cold at the time, and when I shook hands with the President's wife, I had the awfulest urge to sneeze! Instead of smiling sweetly and saying something like 'The pleasure is all mine,' I held on to my breath for dear life!—And then made a bee-line to the nearest corner pulled out my handkerchief and executed the heartiest 'gezuntzeit!' I could. You can't blame me can you? I should be complimented for not sneezing directly in her face."

With that, we had a hearty laugh and changed our interview to other subjects.

Virginia is an art enthusiast. Her principal hobby is dabbling in oil paints; her main ambition is to be an artist; her favorite subject in school is art; and she hopes very much to attend the Chicago Art Institute. That certainly proves that she is very much "art-minded."

We must sum up this little talk, so we will just say that Virginia Greiner is a very good looking (being tall and blonde, with dimples in both cheeks), capable (having the offices of secretary of Travel Club and vice-president of Latin Club), and interesting (you should hear her stories!) senior.

Our Gift From Rome

Today sellers of ladies' hats use a name having its derivation from the name of a Roman town.

In ancient Latin, Mediolanus was the name of a town; as the Italian language finally took the place of the Latin, the name of this town went through a number of changes resulting in Milano or Milan.

In time, Milan became noted for its fine wearing apparel. The merchants of Milan became known as Milaners or Miliners, but this name soon spread to be applied to anyone selling ladies' headwear.

AMATEUR COMEDIAN

"Now listen closely. Keep your ears open, buddy. You see, son, you are going to be a comedian on the radio; and you're going to make the crowds roar with laughter."

"But I'm not as funny as that."

"You think not! Say, all you have to do is to stand up there and look like you do now."

"Maybe so, but what about the people outside the studio? I can't make them laugh, 'cause they won't be able to see me."

"Let me tell you something, son. If the studio audience laughs, everybody else will. All the people listening in just laugh when the studio audience does. If they believe that somebody thinks it's funny, they'll roar. That's the way it is. The other people haven't got enough sense to laugh on their own initiative. By the way, I'll see to it that we get a good studio audience. I'll hire some professional chucklers and roasters. Why, I remember, when H. E. Giggles was in his prime; he and his crew out in the crowd could start everyone in the studio laughing."

"Then why don't you hire this gang as the comedian instead of me?"

"Don't try to get fresh! Let's get down to work. Now, the first thing you say is, 'The reason that Jack Armstrong isn't another Bernard Shaw is that he doesn't look enough like Greta Garbo.'"

"Heck, that isn't funny!"

"Say, that one will have them rolling in the aisles. Anything about Bernard Shaw makes 'em grin. Anything about Greta Garbo makes 'em chuckle. Anything about Jack Armstrong makes 'em roar. Now just think (if you can) what mentioning all three of them would do to the audience. Fella, that's a prize gag."

"Then what do I say?"

"Well, then you tell 'em the one about the Scotchman and the Austin car."

"Oh, I heard that one. It isn't funny at all."

"Anything about a Scotchman will make 'em laugh no matter whether it's funny or not. All you have to do is say the name. The first lesson for radio comedians to learn is that it isn't what you say but whom you say it about that makes people think it's funny."

"I would have them laughing quite a lot by now, wouldn't I?"

"Sure, you are a lot better than the average. You'll sweep the country. You'll be a sensation!"

"Yeah?"

"Yeah!"

"Well, what do I say after that?"

"Oh, yes. The next thing you say is a good ole mother-in-law joke. They always go off swell. But you'd better be careful not to tell a funny one or it'll lose its effect. You see, if there's really a joke to it they won't catch on, and we'll just have a dumb, puzzled look on their faces."

"Daren't I say one funny thing?"

"No, you will have to be plenty careful about that. Well, now the next thing you say will be a colossal hit. After one of your gags, or some other places, you say, 'That's not in the script,' or 'the censors cut that.'"

"Does that make 'em laugh?"

"Does it?!"

"Does it?"

"Yeah, it does. Let's get on with the show. Now, I'll tell you what your last gag is, and is it ever a honey! It's the icing to the cake, the straw that broke the camel's back, etc. First you begin laughing and telling 'em hat the next one is ridiculous. (They'll laugh at anything if you say that.) Then you say between fits of giggling, 'I saw a man walk across the street the other night and he slipped and fell down right in the middle of a puddle.'"

"But there isn't anything funny to that. They won't laugh at that!"

"That's just it. They'll see that there isn't anything humorous about it and that'll make 'em split their sides with laughs till long after the program's over. That is what I call a super-gag."

"Do you mean to tell me people will laugh at something like that?"

"Sure! It'll kill 'em!"

Lo! Lollypop Leap's Last Lissom Lyrics Leave Laments Lost

Jacqueline Hensch and Virginia McNamara were featured at the Valentine tea dance held Friday, February 14, in South Side's cafeteria. Favors, consisting of a clever valentine containing a red lollypop, were presented to each of the two hundred guests present.

The committee in charge of this tea dance was Harriett Yapp, Rosemary Lehman, Betty Garton, and Ruth Garrison. Miss Gertrude Oppelt is the faculty adviser in charge of South Side's tea dances.

Music was furnished by the school orchestra, led by Louis Bonsib. Other members of the orchestra are Robert Harroff, Lester Yoder, Arnold Mettsch, Bob Phillips, Frank Eldre, Don Hickman, Raymond Erismon, Elmer Webb and Mel Shott.

Waggin' Tongues

A big error was made in this column last week; and, by all means, we want to correct it. Gwen Horn wishes to announce that her heart throbs is not 57 varieties (Hines), but none other than that charming basketball hero, Ray Speaker. Come on, Ray, Gwen tells us that she has lost four pounds just worrying about you. That is a serious matter when you stop to consider how small "Squeeze" is anyway.

Harold Schmidt tells us that he likes hot chocolate on a cold night. Maybe that is why he spends most of his time over at Jane Bradley's house. She does make good hot chocolate, doesn't she, Harold?

Anita Catlett has been taking a vacation since her parents went to Florida. She has been home with a cold.

Why hasn't anyone noticed Melvyn Groner? He seems to have what Kay Green thinks he has—personality.

Watch out, Arney, Eleanor Vesey seems to think that Reeves (Yes, Reeves, your name is in again) is pretty nice. In fact, it is almost impossible to phone Eleanor at night because Reeves has rented the line out for the evening—and has he got a line.

Imagine Barbara Raymond's embarrassment when she thanked the wrong Art for a gift. Such a business!

A vote was taken to see who was the best looking couple at Jan Garber's last Monday. It proved to be none other than our handsome coach, Burl Friddle and his wife.

Listen, girls! The way to get your friend now is to be a Sunday school teacher. At least that is the way Scheele (Dorothy) gets hers.

Speaking of Dorothy's we wonder what might be the strange attraction that the International Business College has for Dorothy Golden. She goes down there every night after school and takes a certain student home. What a way to spend one's time. Maybe she is just following the Golden Rule. (Joke.)

Bud Miller seems to have a strange reaction on Mildred Close. We were told that is why she comes in the Times Room every sixth period. They are trying to keep it a secret, but we can't see why they should hide such good news from the rest of the student body. Do you?

Secrets to Seventeens

BE INFORMAL—Informality is the substitute that most of us get by on when we are not quite sure what we should do. It is fortunate that everyone doesn't know the proper thing to do all of the time, because when we are informal we reveal our true nature. When we try to be formal and are a bit doubtful about the procedure, we seem stiff and not at ease.

When a gang of high schools kids gets together for a party, the hostess should always start with an almost impossibly silly game such as "pig" or "cooty." This helps everyone get acquainted and into the spirit of the thing.

Refreshments shouldn't be served on the family's best china with fancy lace napkins and about three extra spoons. The guests are usually so worried for fear they will spill something, use the wrong fork, or break one of the delicate structures called cups, that they can't enjoy themselves.

Every clever hostess knows that young people enjoy hamburgers, hot dogs, coca cola and potato chips much more than fancy cookies and cakes, with a frozen dessert. It isn't logical that young people should like plain things better than more expensive fancy things, but then do they do anything that is logical?

Candle light suppers are lovely but most boys think the only nice thing about them is that the darkness hides some of their embarrassment. If you like especially informal parties, a good plan is to prompt someone to throw a hamburger or so. That will surely pep up the party.

Sophomore Souffle

Think back, oh sophomore! Think back just a few short months! Do you recall what you thought of the state of sophomoreism? Do you remember your contempt, your utter scorn for the whole tribe? Have you forgotten their brutalities, their asinities, their pretensions?

But we have arrived. We are now sophomores, and we can see sophomores, not blurred and indistinct as from afar off, but with the precise discernment of personal experience. We now perceive that what we thought brutal is but a seasoning of the freshmen for the hard ways of life, and is therefore not brutality but beneficence. What we, in our innocence thought asinine is but harmless relaxation from the tedium of toil. Sophomore pretensions, upon more enlightened examination, become real superiorities.

Thus, oh sophomore, would we seatter abroad the seeds of comprehension. We must correct the false supposition that from that stage of school life known as freshmanity, we were thrown headlong down to the so-called abyss of sophomoreism. The truth was that, because of the shroud of innocence with which all freshmen are cloaked, they were victims of a deluding mirage. They were not able to perceive that the sophomores were not precipitated into gloomy depths, but rather that they were buoyed up by a gentle but firmly uplifting sophomoreistic current. In this manner they were wafted to that elevation which they now occupy.

Perchance when our turn comes to join the higher ranks, when strikes the hour when we shall become juniors, and on that later day when we attain seniority, it is possible that we may discover some real reason for the curious behaviour of the junior and the detached elevation of the senior. Incredible as it seems, it may yet be true. So let us do our duty by the freshmen bringing them up in the way in which they should go, yet, withal curiously observant of the junior and the senior, remembering always that there may be some meaning to at least some of the queer things they say and do.

Advanced Mathematics Played Part In Many Of Greatest Discoveries

X, Y, Z Club Is Means For Drill And Review

This week we quote Miss Adelaide Fiedler, head of South Side's mathematics department and faculty adviser of the newly organized X Y Z Club. She gives her views on the importance of the subject and on the aims of the advanced math club.

What are some of the ways in which advanced mathematics help students after graduation? "It is especially helpful to those who take up any of the engineering courses, statistical work, astronomy, aeronautics, navigation, and the like. Without the use of the highest mathematical knowledge many of the great discoveries during the past generations would have been impossible."

Approximately how many students, either now or through the years, take advanced math? "Usually from 15 to 20 percent of the students who are in the mathematics department, not in high school alone, take advanced mathematics."

"Many of the students who take advanced math do not go to college, but a large percent of those who do go to college continue their work in the field of mathematics. Those who do not go to college frequently obtain positions which necessitate the knowledge of mathematics."

The purpose of the X Y Z group is to provide review and drill in BAKER—Of the three, the butcher, the baker, and the candlestick maker, John Bex has chosen to be a baker. Whenever his mother is gone, he practices by baking cookies. Maybe someday we'll be buying cookies with the Bex label on them.

DEBATER—We never thought that a girl as timid as Louise Owens would turn out to be such a debater. Rumors say that she has great ability in the line of arguing. Her pet subject is a discussion on the most prominent men of the year.

MODEST—James Smoak, alias the Governor of North Carolina, is really very modest. In fact, he is inclined to be even too modest. This unbelievable characteristic of his came to light recently in a public-speaking class.

BIRTHDAY—Many happy returns of the day go to none other than Miss Dorothy Benner. Congratulations, Miss Benner, but why did you keep it such a secret? (For the benefit of all, we'll announce that her birthday is February 24.)

DREAMER—"All I do the whole day through is dream . . ." sings Virginia Baumgartner. Only, she doesn't dream during the day. But, she does dream and what dreams! If you ask her to, maybe she'll dream a dream about you.

IMITATOR—South Side is graced with the presence of an imitator. His name is John Jackson. Fred Allen is his best imitation. Besides excelling as an imitator, he also makes great attempts at writing poems. They aren't so bad either, especially the one about the flea.

Ear-Burners

Jim Sweet had a birthday the eighteenth, and his mother had a surprise dinner party for him. He didn't get home until 7 o'clock because he was reading Times copy, and now he's sick. And all on account of a birthday!

Mr. Voorhees is back, and we're mighty glad to see him. He looks fine, is just as peppy as ever, and we don't want him to miss any more school.

Jack Hodel knows what to do with his spare time. He has in his basement a workshop, and he and a couple of friends and his brother make model airplanes. Every plane is worked out to the minutest detail, and all of them really fly. Land ho, or contact, or something.

And then there's Donald Backofen who collects stuff about Lincoln. He has pictures, write-ups, clippings, and other relics of the president.

Little toy dogs, elephants, and Chinese idols sit around on the shelves of Curly Rudy. She's been hunting them for her what-nots for about four years, and so she has a large assortment.

And for the botanists—Tommy Thompson has turned naturalist. He's saving butterflies, and how he looks with a net chasing a good specimen!

Mary Zimmerman used to send away for little bottles of ink—just samples, but she has had quite a number of them for some years. So now we expect letters from her!

Miss Schlegelmilch at Harrison Hill is telling about how she helped to make Joe Bex a good public speaker. Ah, fame is great, Joe.

South Siders Extend Hearty Welcome To Mr. Voorhees

South Side rejoices at the fact that Mr. Herbert Voorhees, chemistry teacher, is once again an active member of the faculty. After an illness of three weeks, Mr. Voorhees has now resumed his teaching activities.

During a recent interview, Mr. Voorhees stated that he feels pretty fair, but still quite weak. Mr. Voorhees' illness was quite serious; but in true teacher style, he came out on top. During the first week of his illness, he was bedfast and unable to do little more than just lie. This was quite a trying situation for a man as active as Mr. Voorhees. The monotony of the second and third week was broken by the fact that he was then able to sit up and read.

During his illness, Mrs. Voorhees was kept quite busy answering the numerous phone calls from friends of Mr. Voorhees, who were very much concerned about his condition.

Visitors were not as numerous as one might think, because of the fact that he was forbidden to have visitors during the first two weeks of his illness. During the last week of his confinement, several visits were paid him by members of the faculty.

He received many get-well cards from the pupils of his classes. He was very pleased with the bouquet of flowers sent to him by the faculty. He also received a valentine, but he did not disclose the name of the sender.

Mr. Voorhees stated that his classes are in as good condition as if he had been teaching them. They have learned to keep quiet and that is an advantage they have over his last semester classes.

In closing, he stated that he is very glad to be back and that he doesn't think that he will be off any more this semester.

Washington Sketches Presented At Assembly

In observance of George Washington's 204th birthday, the Math-Science Club presented three sketches in an assembly Friday afternoon. The first sketch was a group of modern youths going to school, our George Washington being among them. The next sketch showed how George Washington would be in modern times in a school room. The last was a club meeting after school in which Washington was a prominent member.

In the club meeting George Washington, played by Dick Rastetter, generously offered to thaw out a frozen pump so an old lady could get her water supply. Then an election of officers was held and George Washington was elected president, and Evelyn Kruse was elected secretary.

Following the sketches the girls' athletic department, under the direction of Miss Patterson and Miss Smith put on a minut in colonial dresses. Several students then went around the gym holding posters with amusing sayings on them.

Ruth Adler was the mistress of ceremonies. John Bex was the chairman in the club meeting sketch, and Mildred Foellinger, in another sketch, acted as a teacher.

Gerry Valiton's Team Wins Sunshine Meet

Announcement of the winner of the team which sold the most tickets for the Sunshine skating party, held last Friday evening at Bell's Skating Rink, was made at the club's meeting on Tuesday afternoon. Gerry Valiton and her team composed of 27 other members were the winners and will be entertained by the losing team which was captained by Marjorie Gould. Patty Lyman received a prize for selling the most tickets.

Following the program planned by Jean Hildebrand, chairman, and Viola King, assisting, began with the club singing the club song and giving the Sunshine Creed. Donna Dennis played the following selections on the violin, accompanied by Mrs. Margaret Haur, "Crimson Blushes," "Red Sails in the Sunset," "A piano solo was given by Helen Melnick at which time she played "Indian Love Call" and "Margie." Velma Lehman tap-danced to the song, "Top Hat," accompanied by Katherine Cook. She then played "Valse Dramatic" and "Russian Rag." "Rhythm Is My Business" and "Lulu's Back in Town" on her accordion.

"If" and "Tomboy" were the readings given by Iona Hudson. The Viola King led the club in some games. Patty Lyman sang "Prairie Moon" and "Take a Pack on Your Back," accompanied by Velma Lehman.

Scholarship winners are expected to reside in a college dormitory. Applications must be filed with the dean of the college by April 1, 1936.

Seniors Urged To Get In Gown, Bid Orders

The senior class is urged to get up to the office as soon as possible so that they may get in their measurements and orders for their caps and gowns. The price will be two dollars. Invitations will cost seven cents each. The applicant must have ascertained his measurements before he appears at the office. These measurements must include the height, and size of head and chest.

As there will be about four hundred to graduate this year, the seniors are requested to get their orders in early.

New Manual Training Teacher Gives Changes

The new manual training teacher, Mr. Stuart Monroe, a member of the 1925 graduating class, when asked about the most noticeable change in South Side, stated, "We have music to work by, for the band room has been changed since I was here." When asked about other changes he said, "The manual training department is managed in a better and more efficient way and I also like the home room system."

Mr. Monroe, after graduating, worked for a time at the General Electric. He attended Ball State College for two years and graduated from Indiana State in 1932. On his return he worked in a small radio shop waiting for a better position. He worked on the CWA at Monroeville for a time; and, when he returned, he worked at the General Electric about a year. Last semester he substituted some and started this semester steady. Mr. Monroe works here at South Side in the morning and at Adams School in the afternoon.

Mr. Monroe appreciates what Mr. Snider and the faculty have done in helping him to get started. He stated that South Side has lost none of its school spirit, and he is ready to boost it.

Times Staff Members Collect Tourney News

Fifteen members of the Times staff went out of town to get material on the basketball teams for the Tournament News.

Dick Helm, Betty Wolf, Myron Jones, and Jim Sweet went to Huntington; Joe Bell, Helen Kelsey, Earle Paxton, and Don Helm travelled to New Haven; Ed Reeves, Bob Locke, and Leslie Johnson to Arcola; Bob Storm, Norman Buck, Charles Hart, and Bryce Minier went to Woodburn.

Cafe Staff Discusses Last Term Problems

A meeting of the cafeteria staff was held in room 85 after school recently to review the code of ethics for the cafeteria staff in order to acquaint the new members of the staff with it, and also to refresh the minds of the old members. Problems that have arisen during the last semester were discussed and possible solutions given. Miss Mellen emphasized that the purpose of the cafeteria staff is to please the public, and to be efficient and courteous at all times. Seventeen members of the staff were present at the meeting.

Kathleen Witmer Plays Several Piano Selections; Next Meet Will Feature Talk On Egypt.

Japan was the scene of the last Travel Club meeting held Wednesday, February 19, in the Greeley Room. Leona Menze, program chairman, gave a brief talk on the history of Japan. Kathleen Witmer entertained the club with several selections on the piano. Before playing the numbers, she gave a description of them. The pieces which she played were the "Sunken Cathedral," by Debussy, and the "Hurdy Gurdy Man," by Gossens.

Leona then introduced the speaker of the afternoon, Mr. Ward O. Gilbert, chemistry teacher. He gave an account of how Japan was fourteen years ago, when he visited it while traveling with an Indiana University baseball team. He stated that the farms in Japan are very small and that two of their farms could be made out of the Greeley Room.

Collect Toothpaste Tubes Following Mr. Gilbert's talk, the business meeting was held. The foreign secretary announced that any member wishing to correspond with a student in a foreign country should bring her dime to her to obtain a name. The president announced that all members should bring their old tooth-paste tube to room 52 as they were going to send them in soon. The meeting was concluded with the serving of refreshments, which were novel cookies with Japanese writing on them. The committee in charge of the meeting was Leona Menze, chairman; Helen Walbert, Geneva Shearer, Mary Ann Park, Betty Broxon, Mary Wetzel, Virginia Menze, June Shelley, June Holzworth, Dick Miller, Margaret Crankshaw, Tom Sellers, and Calvin Schultz.

Egypt Visited Next The scene of the next meeting will be in Egypt. Miss Eleanor Smeltzley will talk about the pyramids in Egypt. An Egyptian dance will be given by the members of the physical education department. The meeting will be concluded with the serving of refreshments. The committee in charge of the meeting consists of Harriet Basford, chairman; Ruth Roadcap, Helen Meyer, Beverly Bond, Luella Liff, Marjorie Clapp, Kenneth Carbaugh, Donald Hire, Ronald Campbell, Royal Snider, Lillian Hackmeyer, Marjorie Dancer, and Mary K. Smith.

One-Act Plays By Student Players

Miss Suter Directs Acting In Short Dramas: "Frances Francis" "Columbine" Monday

"Columbine" and "Frances, Francis" are the two one-act plays which were chosen this year for the annual presentation of the Student Players' Club under the direction of Miss Marjorie Suter. They were given Monday the seventh period in the study hall. Miss Suter announced that the casts had made record time in preparing new plays in a half week to take the place of "Op-O' Me Thumb," which was abandoned due to the death of Virginia Vesey, who had been given the leading part in it.

In "Columbine," Minnie, a hardened, practical-minded and cynical young woman, was played by Ann Abbott; "Columbine," a dreamer, who was untouched by her sordid surroundings, was played by Jo-Anne Smith. In their one-room apartment, the two girls lived very different lives; Columbine persisted in wholeheartedly believing in her dreams, which came true, despite the pessimistic predictions of her friend.

"Frances, Francis" took place in the casting office of a theatrical producer. The part of Mr. North, the theatrical producer, was taken by Dick Helm. Ruth Adler acted the part of Mr. North's secretary, and Selma Liff played a child artist. The child artist succeeded in getting the part of "Little Lord Fauntleroy" in a play which Mr. North was putting on only by making him think she was a boy, for he emphatically did not wish a girl for the part.

Contributing to the success of the plays by working back-stage were Gwendolyn Horn, Mary Martha Hobrock, Bob Harruff, Luther Procie, Bud Schrom, Oscar Eggers, Maxine Borchert and Darwin Leitz.

Boys In Knit Club The boys of the Ann Arbor High School, Ann Arbor, Michigan, have a knitting club. They are making dresses for their mothers.

Barbara Noble entertained with a potluck before the South Side-Central game. Guests were Betty Jaebker, Mervyn Bohne, Margaret Gross, Mary K. Connell, Charlotte Kern, Phyllis Geller, Lois Rea, Marjorie Rohrer, Barbara Arney, Virginia Worden, and the hostess. This group of girls holds a potluck before each game.

Last Friday evening Delbert Dickmeyer entertained a group of his friends at his home. Monopoly and ping-pong were enjoyed during the evening, after which refreshments were served. Those present were Marian Patterson, Judy Kroff, Dorothy Herbst, Polly Borton, Carl Rodenbeck, John Dolan, Ed Doehman, and the host.

Janice Cross, Mary Melching, Maxine Greiner, Sarah Meily, Margie Lou Wickes, Florence Oransky, and Kathryn Patterson, Fritz Lohman, Rodney Deahl, Bill Miller, Bill Hall, Alan Lichtenberg, Jack Brazy, Bob Ridpath, and Charles Rothschild were entertained recently at a party given by Evelyn O'Day. Games and dancing were enjoyed during the evening, after which refreshments were served.

These people were present at a potluck Saturday night before the Central Catholic-South Side game for which Betty Jaebker was hostess; Barbara Arney, Mervyn Bohne, Lois Rea, Charlotte Kern, Phyllis Geller, Virginia Worden, Eleanor Vesey, Marjorie Rohrer, Mary Kay Connell, Peggy Gross, and Barbara Noble.

Sally Rea entertained with a dinner party preceding the Central Catholic-South Side game in honor of Jerry Zehr's birthday. The guests were Gwen Horn, Vera Ellinger, Ann Winter, Jerry Zehr, Dick Busch, Dave Steger, and Ed Kruse.

Dorothy Douglas entertained with an informal party Sunday afternoon at her home. The guests included Dorothy Crabbill, Jean Creighton, Mary Martha Hobrock, Millie Foellinger, Ruth Adler, Joan Bonsib, Jean Bollman, Theo Schuereberg, Mervyn Bohne, Mary Hayes, Virginia Gardner, and Mary Louise Helms. Ping-pong was enjoyed and refreshments were served at the conclusion of the afternoon.

Charlotte Kern entertained a few of her friends Friday night at a party.

Coach Friddle Announces '36 Tourney Team

Four Seniors, Three Juniors, Three Sophs, Two Frosh On S. S. Sectional Squad.

Coach Burl Friddle, South Side net mentor, announced his choices for his tourney squad this week. A total of twelve fellows are included on the tourney squad, with two names to be scratched by the coach immediately before the first game of the sectionals. These twelve players must be registered with the Indiana High School Athletic Association one week before tourney time.

Coach Friddle's regular starting five during the majority of the games this season head the list. This group includes Bud Lee, John Hines, Joe Close, Carl Hall, and Don Reichert. Next on the roll come Ray Speaker and Jim Ellenwood, who have seen much varsity action this season playing in the majority of the Archer tilts.

Bob Budde, Dick Frazell, and Ed Miller have come up from the reserve team this season, and each has seen action in at least one varsity game. James Glass and Harold Kitzmiller complete the squad.

Close, Lee, Ellenwood, and Miller are seniors on the squad. Juniors are Reichert, Budde, and Kitzmiller, while sophomore contingent includes Hines, Hall, and Frazell. The yearling members are Speaker and Glass.

Horde Of Reserves Turn Back Irish

Trail At End Of First Half But "Regulars" Pile Up Score To Take Game By 29-19 Count.

With nearly every member of the squad seeing action at some time during the game, the Archer reserves downed the scrappy Central Catholic reserves by the score of 29 to 19 last Saturday at the southern hardwood. This game concluded the Reserves 1935-36 basketball schedule with a very favorable record. They lost only a few of their encounters.

In the initial period both teams exhibited a deliberate brand of ball. All through this quarter Central Catholic was able to work the ball under the basket, but they could not connect. However, they made at intervals four charity throws which enabled them to lead at the end of the period by a score of 4 to 2.

Many See Action

In the second quarter Coach Friddle put in a new quintet in an attempt to bring his team out of the hole. Although this new team had more scoring ability, their defense was considerably weaker, and therefore both teams scored more points. At the end of this period the Archers had scored one point less than the McDermids. Chuck Hall, Laurer, and D. Hamilton scored the points for the Archers while Westrick and Smith scored for the Purple during this period. At the intermission the Green trailed by a score of 11 to 8.

At the beginning of the second half Coach Friddle put in his regular reserve five for the first time. This quintet had a hard time getting under way, and in the meantime the Irish were able to chalk up several points. Roth finally broke the ice for the Archers by scoring a field goal late in the quarter. From this point on the Archers took the ball game into their hands, and by the end of the third period they were trailing by an 18 to 12 count.

In the final period the Green continued their fine brand of play. Changing their offensive tactics, they worked the ball around the Irish defense with apparent ease, and soon had the ball game well in control. Bolyard, clever Archer forward, playing to the right of the basket, scored twelve points during the last period. The Archers attempted forty-eight heaves and the Irish attempted twenty-nine shots during the game. The following players were inserted at some time during the game into the Archer's lineup: Stoner, Berry, Belot, Howell, Hamilton, D. Hamilton, Cramer, Laurer, Hall, Miller, Stuart, Bolyard, Kitzmiller, Squires, Roth, and Frazell.

Ten More Boys' Net Tilts Played

Intramural Basketball Proceeds Rapidly; All Teams Eligible For Tourneys To Be Named.

Intra-mural basketball activities are continuing at a rapid pace. Many teams have been eliminated from further competition, and a definite list of teams which are eligible to compete in the tourney will be announced soon.

During the past week and a half ten tilts have been played. The Bootes opened the net activities of last Tuesday with a win over the Shortmen in the lowest scoring contest of the season. A basket by Neuhaid was sufficient to offset the one point scored by the Shortmen. The Panthers then trounced the Nots by a 21-to-12 count, with Cunningham leading the Panthers' scoring with 11 points.

Two more victories were marked up last Wednesday when the Spartans and the Indians downed the Berries and the Bucket-Snatchers. Melchi piled up 10 points for the Indians to lead the individual scoring of that day.

The Fruits and Blues also emerged the victors in their encounters with the Extempers and Scrappers a week ago today. Eakin, scoring 8 points, chalked up half of the points for the Fruits. Ferguson made 4 points for the other victorious five.

No games were played Friday. The Hazards fell before the Dark Horses Monday by a 7-3 count, and on the same day the Sardines packed a 21-to-17 victory over the Swishers. Eiser scored 8 points and Cramer made 1 point less for the Sardines. Diem made 7 points for the losers.

The Hotshots were downed by the Ex-Varsity Tuesday by a 16-8 count. Pio and Lassen both scored 6 points for the victors. Carbaugh made all 8 markers for the defeated five. Then the Clodhoppers were trampled by the Greenhorns with the score standing 18-6. Springer piled up 10 points for the winners.

Leads City Scorers

—Courtesy News-Sentinel

What promised to be a free-for-all battle, the city scholastic basketball scoring race now seems in the bag; as Carl Hall, South Side sophomore forward, holds a commanding lead. With North Side's regular season finished, and only one game each left for Central, Central Catholic, and South Side, the chances of anyone's overcoming the Archer sniper's lead are very poor.

Don "Grandpappy" Reichert Some Day May Be A Gigolo

Tall, lanky, six-foot two-inch Don "Grandpappy" Reichert may, in the future, become a gigolo, since he has no ideas about the future at all. Although Don did not state this, or any other vocation as his life work, we feel certain that a boy as successful in basketball as he is will be something better than a gigolo. Don was born in Fort Wayne on April 29, 1919. He acquired his grade school education at James H. Smart School. He was prominent in athletics while attending grade school, starring in basketball and indoor baseball.

Don and Carl Hall, sophomore star, played on the same basketball team when both were going there. After coming to South Side, he immediately entered intramural basketball and softball. Don, Bob Budde, and Carl Hall played on the winning freshman basketball team. Among last year reserves, Don was picked as one of the outstanding players along with Johnny Hines and Carl Hall. In the last few games of last year he practiced with the varsity, and this season he was advanced to the first team.

He has played in most of the games, and in the first North Side game, when Close had a twisted ankle, played a stellar defensive game and prevented many points that would have been scored for North Side. In the Central game Saturday, he was the second high scorer for South Side with five points. He is going out for track this season, but does not know what event he will enter.

Don is taking the general course, and although he does not know if he is going to college or not, he would enjoy it very much.

Youngster Is Salesman

Sonny Kelsey was quite a salesman at the South Side-Central Catholic game. He sold four dozen ice cream bars and did not make one single mistake in making change. He is nine years old and is in the fifth grade. The Booster Club wishes to extend thanks to their little helper.

Sophs, Juniors Named Victors In G.A.A. Meet

Defeat Yearlings, Seniors In Semi-Final Round Of Basketball Honor Tourney

Sophomores defeated freshmen and juniors bested seniors in the semi-final round of the G. A. A. honor basketball tourney, held in the gym Friday. Although the scores might not indicate exciting games, nevertheless, the audience received plenty of thrills. The scores of the first tilt were: Sophomores 16 and freshmen 5; the second game: Juniors 23 and seniors 12.

Betty Eisenacher, captaining the sophomore team, led her group to victory by playing an excellent game as forward and scoring 6 points. Delores Pequinot also sank two baskets for the winners, while Helen Forker sank one field goal and two foul shots. One fielder each by Helen Showalter and Hazel Perry, and a foul shot by Betty Neeb constituted the freshman scoring.

Winners Named

The entire victorious sophomore team included Eleanor Rarick, Betty Eisenacher, Helen Forker, Delores Pequinot, Maxine Morrison, Frances Craig, Anita Affolder, Mervyne Bohne, Barbara Raymond, Ruth Seifert and Irene Niemeyer.

Four o'clock saw the juniors defeat the seniors by the score of 23 to 12, Leona Menze leading her team by going on a scoring spree which netted 10 points. Margaret Ruhl, Edna Dieler and Barbara Scheele contributed an additional 4 points each. For the losers, Margaret Marahrens and Betty Rison were out-standing, with 7 and 5 points each. Although the seniors battled desperately, their inability to hit the basket cost them dearly.

These tilts were refereed by Dorothy Bremer, with Ruth Berning assisting. Score keepers included Betty Burhenn and Marjorie Meyer; Mildred Close acted as time keeper.

The junior team included Edna Disler, Betty Beyrau, Margaret and Marjorie Ruhl Barbara and Dorothy Scheele, Leona Menze, Helen Humcke, Ada Schuelke, Betty Harnish, Anna Marie Baumgartner and Winifred Locker. Included in the senior team are Betty Rison, Margaret Marahrens, Jeanette Braun, Marjorie Hower, Roseanne Certia, Vivian Hickman, Marjorie Cartwright, Doris Figel and Doris Rahner.

The final match between the sophomores and juniors and the consolation match between freshmen and seniors will be held next Monday afternoon.

Booster Sales Boom!

Booster club sales for the Central game were much higher than the average $50 or $60, amounting to $83.17. This amount is not as high as that of the North Side game, which was approximately $100.

The difference is probably due to the larger attendance at the Central game, which made it difficult for girls and boys to sell in the crowd. Another factor which retarded sales was a change in the location of the ice cream concession to the lower south entrance of the gym.

Stude's Cold Blooded

School was not dismissed at the Marshalltown High School, Marshalltown, Iowa, although the mercury dropped to 32 degrees below zero.

Court Capers

If you notice Coach Friddle pacing the floor, you can be fairly sure that he has received some bad news concerning the condition of John Hines' foot. John was unable to play against Central Catholic because of this infection in his heel and the hopes of the Archer fans for success in the coming sectional tourney depends much on whether or not John is in the lineup.

The Archers were greatly handicapped by the playing floor in their tilt with Goshen last Friday evening. The Goshen hardwood is not nearly so wide as the southern hardwood and by stringing three players across the floor the Goshen quintet had little trouble frustrating the efforts of the Archers to cut down the middle of the floor.

Dro, Berne's splendid center, is again playing with his teammates after being out of the lineup for a long period due to a badly injured foot. During his absence the Bears indicated that they are not a "one-man team" by winning almost all of their tilts during his absence.

The splendid play of the Central Tigers in their tilt with Morton of Richmond last weekend and the excellent performance which the Archers turned in against Central Catholic seems to have served as a reminder to the net public that a meeting of these victors in the sectionals will be one of the best tilts ever played here.

Central Catholic, which will be the host school to the parochial school tourney to be held here soon, will be in the tough lower bracket according to the drawings for the meet which were made last week. The Irish will be forced to match their abilities against those of the quintets from Memorial of Evansville and Cathedral of Indianapolis. Lundy Welborn will be the official scorekeeper and Murray Mendenhall and Jake McClure will share in the whistle-blowing activities.

We wish to inform some infamous spectator at recent games, who defines the sensational one-hand shooting of Bud Lee as luck, that it is not luck but skill. Burl Friddle, Archer mentor, has made a statement to the effect that this shot of Lee's will be, by the end of the season, one of the best in the city.

Carl Hall, Archer sophomore, seems almost sure to win first place in the race for individual scoring honors in the city, while there is an interesting race going on for second position between Curly Armstrong, Jim Shollenberger, and Tony Barile.

North Side recently played at Auburn and became the first school in Fort Wayne to play a double overtime and still be tied. The new rule in effect in Indiana this year prohibits a team from playing more than two overtimes, and states that after two overtimes have been played without breaking the tie each player on each team should shoot one free throw.

I.H.S.A.A. Is Supreme Power In State High School Athletics

There are a certain group of men in the state of Indiana who reign supreme over high school football, basketball, and track. These men make possible the varied conferences in which the Indiana high school teams play; the Sectional, Regional, and State tournaments which are followed so rapidly by basketball fans; as well as the preservation and stimulation of the proper regulations and conditions, which should be prevalent in high school athletics. This group of men is recognized generally by the mouthful of initials, I. H. S. A. A., which translated means The Indiana High School Athletic Association. This association has long ruled Indiana high school athletics.

Has Large Membership

In 1930, 799 of the 841 high schools in Indiana were listed under the I. H. S. A. A., while at the present time the association boasts of a membership of 790 schools. The association holds great power, in that a team, boycotted by the I. H. S. A. A., will find itself practically without opponents to schedule unless they go outside of the state or play college freshman teams. It may be recalled that in 1927 South Side was removed, because of an infringement of the rules, from the ranks of the members of the I. H. S. A. A., and, as a consequence, one of the best Archer teams ever to take the floor was unable to meet any Indiana high school teams.

The body of the I. H. S. A. A. consists of the principals of all the high schools that are listed as members. These principals elect a committee of twenty men known as the legislative committee. Inside this body of twenty another group is selected, which consists of five men and is known as the Board of Control. All acts of the Board of Control are subject to approval by both the legislative committee and the members of the association. Membership in the association is not compulsory and is wholly up to each school to do as they please. Members subscribe $1.50 a year to the association, and, as members, adhere to the rules and regulations.

Every month the I. H. S. A. A. sends out to its members a bulletin, which expresses concisely the cases brought before the board during the previous month, and discusses the current athletic occurrences. This bulletin affords the recipient a chance to be in full knowledge of the state-wide athletics, and therefore is really indispensable to Indiana high schools.

Fishing Films Draw Good Noon Crowds

Salmon Fishing, Muski Fishing, and Seeking Steelheads were the titles of the interesting moving pictures shown last Wednesday and Thursday at noon in the Greeley Room by the Lettermen's Club. Salmon Fishing, which was shown on Wednesday, was photographed at Lake Restigouche in New Brunswick, Canada. Salmon are caught by casting from a boat.

Muski Fishing and Seeking Steelheads were shown Thursday noon. Steelheads are a species of fish which are caught with fly-casting rods and are sought in swiftly moving streams rather than in lakes.

The general student body was enthusiastic over the pictures, but the Lettermen did not attend very well.

Fred Meyers was general chairman of the affair, and Fred Nye was in charge of tickets.

Sportlights

Indiana's Cream and Crimson net swishers and the Purdue Boilermakers seem headed for a deadlock in the Big Ten net race. Indiana has won nine frays and lost one, to the Ohio State Buckeyes, while Purdue has won eight and was upset by Northwestern. Purdue has yet to play Minnesota, but the Boilermakers should win easily, thus making the tie for the crown.

Bob Kessler, of Purdue, will be the 1936 Conference scoring champion if he is not completely bottled up in the Minnesota game. He holds an 11-point lead over Bill Haarlow, Chicago's ace scorer. Both have one more game to play in Conference competition. Against Northwestern Kessler made only two field goals, but used the net as a wringer, dumping in nine fouls out of 12 attempts. He has a total of 113 points, while Haarlow has 102.

Gene Venzke, Pennsylvania's comeback sensation, proved his superiority last Saturday in the Madison Square Garden. He outran Glenn Cunningham for the third consecutive time this year. In doing so he set a new indoor world's record in the 1,500 meter distance, stopping the clock at three minutes, 49.9 seconds and bettering the old record of 3 minutes, 50.5 seconds made by Cunningham last season.

Jimmy Blake, Max Crosley and Chuck Gaunt battled their way to the third round of the annual Golden Gloves tournament held each year in Chicago. Blake and Gaunt drew first round byes and went on to win one fight each. Max Crosley, formerly of South Side, won two bouts to advance to the third round. Dick Hurst, Fort Wayne's hope in the bantamweight class, won his first bout, but dropped a close decision to lose his second start. Blake is a flyweight, Crosley a featherweight, and Gaunt takes on lightweight fighters. They were to battle again last night.

School To Have Ten Super-Regional Tickets

South Side must compete in the regionals if a great number of seats are to be reserved for its fans at the tournament to be held at the Muncie field house on March 21. South Side will be entitled to only ten tickets if the team fails to place in the sectionals. All others must be bought at Muncie.

A total of 7,500 seats will be available at the I. H. S. A. A. super-regional tournament, it was announced by the officials of the Muncie High School. All seats are to be reserved and single session tickets will be on sale at the door only. The 1,600 seats downstairs will be divided equally among the participating schools. According to the present plans each of the competing schools will thus be given four hundred seats on the main floor. There will also be one hundred seats reserved in the balcony for each of these competing schools.

South Bend Central Is Last Archer Opponent Of Season

Green To End Year Saturday At Rival's Gym

South Side Hopes To Equalize Wins And Losses; Win Nine Out Of Nineteen.

Friddle Prepares Twelve-Man Squad

Tourney Team To Make Trip; Kelly Klads Plan To Use Fast - Breaking Offensive.

South Side's Archers will attempt to equalize their wins and losses in their regularly scheduled games for the present season next Saturday evening, when they journey to South Bend to meet the Central High netters of that city. The Green have now captured nine of the 19 tilts they have played, and they are especially desirous of balancing their wins and losses over the week-end. According to the present plans a squad of 12 players will be taken to South Bend.

Gauge For Tiger Strength
The comparative strength of the South Side squad and the Central Tigers may be judged rather well over this week-end, since both teams will meet the South Bend squad, the Tigers being scheduled to tangle with the South Bend forces here on Friday evening. Neither of the local teams is expected to use anything but their fundamental plays, since both teams will probably wait until the coming sectional tourney to display their real strength.

Coach Friddle has been giving his charges long, hard workouts each evening as he prepares them for the sectionals. The squad has been cut, and Burl will make another cut when he definitely decides on the 12 members he can depend on in the tournaments. At the present time all of the players seem to be in splendid shape, and, barring accidents, the Green should enter the sectional tourney in the best condition it has been in all season.

Green Are Fast-Breaking
During the practice sessions this week Coach Friddle has been putting special emphasis on fast-breaking or offensive plays. Until the tilt with Central Catholic last week the Green had shown no tendency toward making use of a fast-breaking type of offense. However, the success of the use of this type of ball against the Irish seemingly points to a fast-breaking Archer five when the tourney time arrives. The Green have all of the requirements for this type of play. Its usage seems especially desirable because of the tight defense the Green possesses.

Six Tilts Conclude G.A.A. Net Season

Soph Teams 1 and 2, Junior 2 And 3, And Senior 3 Victors; Senior 1 Wins By Default.

The last basketball games of the season were played off last Friday in the G. A. A. basketball tournament. The majority of them were well-played, and the scores were close.

On the north court at 3:30 Betty Eisenacher's Sophomore 1's defeated Eleanor Rarick's Sophomore 3's by the score of 11 to 9. Mary Ellen Blauvelt scored highest for the winners, while Anita Afolter was high for the losers. At the same time on the south court Barbara Raymond scored the most for her Sophomore 2's against Eldora Buesking's Sophomore 6's in a 9-6 victory for the 2's. Martha Ann Bacon scored best for the losers.

At 4 o'clock on the south court Leona Menze's Junior 2's bested Ada Schuelke's Junior 5's to the tune of 26-3. Ruth Benning did the majority of the scoring for the winners, while Anna Marie Baumgartner scored for the losers. The game scheduled between Marge Hower's Senior 1's and Margaret Ruhl's Junior 1's went by default to the Senior 1's.

Junior 3's, led by Winnie Locker, clashed with Edna Disler's Junior 4's on the north court at 4:30. Both teams played good ball, but the Junior 2's came out on top with the score 18-15. Phyllis Barrows and Barbara Scheele led the scoring for the winning team, while Edna Disler scored the majority of the points for the losers. On the south court Doris Figel's Senior 3's beat Jeanette Braun's Senior 2's by the score of 20-14. Hillis Weary piled up the most points for the winners, while Betty Rison carried the burden of the scoring for the losers.

[There's That Man Again

Bud Lee

—Courtesy News-Sentinel

Bud Lee, star Archer netman, is becoming an awful nuisance to South Side's hardwood opponents this year. One of Bud's habits that proves most annoying to the Archers' rivals is that of always popping up where he is least expected, to break up a play and steal the ball. Almost impossible to be feinted out of position defensively, he has unusual success in keeping the man he is guarding out of the scoring column. And the poor fellow guarding Bud has a job on his hands when Bud has the ball, because this Archer might shoot from far out, at which he has much success, or might cut in for a one-handed shot, at which he is also skilled.

Life Is Not All Bed Of Roses For Tudor, Sport-Suits' Boss

Being cooped up in a little cubby hole and faced by a group of howling boys is the situation that faces Mr. Tudor every time it is necessary to hand out athletic equipment. In this little room on the east side of the gym, all the athletic equipment is kept, along with the medical supplies. The equipment is handed out to the boys twice a week, and they return it on Monday, when it is sent to the laundry.

Mr. Tudor, faculty athletic equipment manager, says his busiest season is football. As there are between 55 and 60 boys out for this sport, it can be seen that he would have a busy evening. It is during this sport that "Pop," as he is called, has to stay until 5 o'clock and later. In order to get ready for the football season, the equipment must be reconditioned. When it comes back, there is not enough room and according to Mr. Tudor, he is in very cramped quarters.

Basketball is the easiest sport, as there are not so many boys out for this sport. The time he has to stay after practice during the basketball season is short compared to the time it is necessary for him to stay during football season. During the net campaign it is necessary for him to stay only until 4 o'clock or a little after.

Because he has so much work to do, Mr. Tudor has three boys helping him. They are Roosevelt Blanks, Donald Steinbauer and Earl Hofstetter. Besides Mr. Tudor's duties as athletic equipment manager, he teaches social science.

Archers Take Second Place In City Race

Drop Central Catholic 40 To 22 In Concluding Game Of Season; Win 4, Lose 2.

After getting an 11-point lead in the initial quarter of the tilt, South Side's band of fighting Archers played a heads-up brand of ball and coasted through to a 40-to-22 decision over the Barrettmens of Central Catholic last Saturday night on the southern hardwood.

The win put the Green in a tie with North Side's Redskins for second place honors in the city title race of which this was the concluding game. The Green concluded their portion of the race with four wins and two losses. The Central Catholic tilt was one of the roughest in which the Green have played this season with a total of 27 personals called by the whistle blowers, 17 against the Irish and 10 against the Archers. The Irish lost Mudd and Barile via the foul route in the third canto while the Archers lost Hall midway in the last period.

Take Early Lead
Playing a fine brand of ball featured by clever passing and excellent sniping, the Archers went out in front in the first period by a 15-to-4 count. Lee's offensive activities were the highlights of this quarter during which he scored two baskets and connected on the five consecutive charity tosses awarded to him. Close dropped in two attempts from the floor while Hall and Speaker tossed in their foul attempts. Sterling and Mudd hit from the field for the wearers of the Purple and Gold. Barile, Central Catholic's star, collected three personals in this period. Looking much better in the second period, the Irish tightened their defense and limited the Green to foul opportunities by Jim Ellenwood and Carl Hall. The Barrettmens found a weakness in the Archer defense and obtained three field goals off block plays. The score stood 19 to 11 at the intermission.

Archers March Ahead
Limiting the Irish to two field goals the Green and White built up a comfortable lead in the third stanza. Close, Lee, Hall, and Ellenwood hit from the field and Jim added a charity attempt. During this period Coach Barrett was forced to revise his lineup with two of his starters, Mudd and Barile leaving the tilt on personals.

In the last period the Green again outscored the Irish. The playing became very rough and the period was characterized by continuous marches to the foul circles. Budde and Frazell made their debuts in varsity action and did very well.

Tournament Tickets Go On Sale Monday

Tickets for the Tournament will be on sale in the office Monday. Students can get the entire books anytime after that time for $1.50. These tickets will include six sessions, one Thursday, three Friday, and two Saturday.

South Side students are urged to buy their tickets here because the proceeds of the Tournament are divided among the schools on the basis of the number of tickets each school sells by Thursday afternoon.

Three Different Careers Look Attractive To Jim Ellenwood

Editor's Note: This is one of a series of articles about South Side basketball stars.

The question that has bothered many seniors does not seem to have caused Jim Ellenwood, South Side's star all-around athlete, much concern. Jim has picked for his vocation either being a physical education teacher, business administrator, or doctor. He is undecided as to what college he will attend, but has his eye on Ohio Wesleyan.

He was born on August 25, 1917, and acquired his grade school education at James H. Smart school. While there he was very prominent in athletics, being most outstanding in basketball. He entered South Side in the spring of 1932. When he first entered, he did not go out for varsity sports, waiting until he was a freshman A. This was a very wise thing to do, as it meant he could play in his post-graduate year.

Grid Player As Freshman
In the fall of his first year, he went out for football and immediately placed on the first string as a substitute. He saw much varsity action even though he was a freshman. When the basketball season opened, Jim could be seen on the floor practicing with the reserves. It was this reserve team that was so good that it beat the varsity in the majority of the practice games they played.

He again went out for football in his sophomore year and was immediately placed on the first team as a tackle. His playing was so good that he was placed on the All-City team as a tackle. As soon as basketball season opened, Jim was playing on the Wavelets again and had much to do with their success. In his junior year Jim was again placed at the tackle position and proved his worth by being placed on the All-City team again. In the same year, Jim was graduated from the reserves to the varsity and proved very effective.

Got All-State Mention
In this, his senior year, he very willingly sacrificed personal gridiron glory and honor by moving from the tackle to the end position where he was needed most. But this did not stop him from playing well, as he was for his third consecutive year placed on the All-City team. He has proved very valuable to the basketball squad this winter by his fine defensive work and offensive work under the basket. Besides his athletic prowess in football and basketball, he was third baseman for the famous Archer Trucking team of two summers ago. He received All-State

Scoring Board Not Dedicated In 1492 Figures Mixed Up

Could it be that South Side was celebrating Columbus Day a little off-season? Have 1,492 games been played in our gym? Is that the patent number of the score board? Was the board dedicated by the class of 1492? No, but still all these questions ran through our mind as we happened to glance at the score board one night at a basketball game.

Right between the two scores, there appear four numbers (they look like ordinary black and white house numbers to us); they are 1-4-9-2.

After due deliberation and a little hesitation, we decided that Mr. Snider would surely know what these mysterious figures referred to.

He explained to us that 1492 was the year when Columbus discovered America. To be sure, that is one date in history every one knows. But still, why should 1492 have anything to do with the score board? Then Mr. Snider said, "Well, some industrious, artistic, smart nut—some nut—has juggled the numbers. They should read 1924, because it was the class of 1924 that helped pay for the score board."

That explains all. We are satisfied now—but another question immediately arises in our mind, "Who changed the numbers?"

Tumbling Captains Named By G. A. A.

Beginners Elect Leaders, Choose Squads At Organization Meeting; Miss Smith Is In Charge.

Captains and squads were chosen at the organization meeting of the G. A. A. beginning tumblers last Tuesday and Thursday afternoons. Miss Gretchen Smith, who is in charge of beginners' tumbling, conducted the elections.

Those captains who were chosen to lead in the Tuesday group are Edna Disler, Irene Niemeyer, Betty Eisenacher and Louise Phillips. The following were chosen at the head of the Thursday group: Leona Menze, Barbara Raymond, Gwen Roberts and Marjorie Meyer.

This first meeting was also the first tumbling practice. The exercises included front and back summersaults, one and two at a time, variations of the front summersault, and headstands. As the season progresses more rigid exercises will be required and a number of tricks will be learned.

The tumbling season's one great goal is toward the exhibition given by the G. A. A. in the spring. A large part of this program consists of tumbling tricks.

A $2.00 game of monopoly, won by Winfred Locker, was the grand prize awarded last week by the Times. Nineteen other prizes were also awarded. Lee, Ann Peters, John Will, Jane Loomis, Eric Sicht, Robert Holloway, Mrs. Welby, William Miller, Margaret Rehm, and Betty Daniels.

Nowhere except in Australia can be found the strange black swan that has become the symbol of Western Australia, where it has been found in greatest numbers. The nearest relative to this peculiar bird is the black-necked swan of South America. In the rest of the world, the swans are all white.

The most important river in Western Australia is named Swan River, in honor of the bird. This river was discovered by a Dutch navigator in 1697. Australia commemorated the colonization of Western Australia in 1929 in their centennial celebration by a one and one-half penny stamp of dull red color, depicting the black swan, which is as characteristic of that continent as the kangaroo.

On June 28, 1914, the Archduke Francis Ferdinand, heir apparent to the throne of Austria-Hungary, and his consort were riding in their open carriage through the streets of Sarajevo when a Serbian student dashed toward them and killed both. It was that shot which started the World War which even today has not been settled to the satisfaction of the nations that became embroiled in it. More than 8,500,000 men were killed and more than 21,000,000 were injured as a result of that assassination.

In 1917 Bosnia-Herzegovina, as part of Austria-Hungary, issued a set of three stamps commemorating the assassination of the archduke and archduchess. One showed a portrait of the archduke, another illustrated a memorial church that was to be built at Sarajevo, and the third had portraits of the royal couple.

The late war and the Civil War brought the use of stamps into another large field of collecting. During these wars, the shortage of metal and the hoarding of coins, also caused the use of stamps as legal tender. During the World War, this was particularly so in France, Germany and Austria.

Since the stamps would last but a very short time if handled too often, they were put into small metal containers and covered with mica, the backs of the containers carrying advertisements which repaid the cost.

Such a stamp-coin was current in Denmark shortly after the war. In that country, this was done more as a commercial enterprise, by which the government could profit from such advertising, than from lack of specie.

Puppeteers Continue Work On Production

Marionette Club's regular meeting, which was held Thursday afternoon, was featured by a continuation of the work on puppet bodies and paper mache heads for the marionettes which are to be used in the club's annual production, "Chu Chin Chow."

Norman Budde, vice-president, presided over the business meeting in the absence of the president, Kenny Scott. Doreen Russell, who is the secretary-treasurer and who also acted as the ticket chairman with Marjorie Meyer, gave a report on the financial success of the presentation of the Fall Mall Marionettes of Monticello, Indiana. Approximately 450 students and faculty members attended the presentation.

Bewildered Frosh Relate Suffering In First Few Days

It would take a Mark Twain to do full justice to "Innocents Aboard the S. S. South Side," for many of them were bewildered in their first days here.

Marjorie Bowser had the queer idea that the boys and girls took gym at the same time; hence she went into a boys' gym class. She will probably know better next time.

Jack Merrill, when asked what queer ideas he had had about South Side which have been cleared up, said that South Side turned out to be a better school than he thought it would.

Geraldine Thomas got a little mixed up. She started out one of the gym doors, intending to go into the hall, but ended up in the cafeteria.

June Wyland and Ruth Phillips added their names to the list of the "lost." Junior Roberson said that girls kept him waiting too long. Incidentally, he was waiting on one of the female sex at the time questioned.

Wanda Nahrwald said that South Side was like the "Music Goes Round and Around" for she came out where she started.

Mary Treen thought that the inclines were a little hard to climb, but she believed that she would reach the top some time.

The band members at Missoula, Montana, have worked out a new competitive rule. If one thinks he is better than the one ahead of him, he challenges him to a "duel."

Skin Tests Given

Tuberculin skin tests have been given in several schools. The tests are given by a doctor who represents the County Health Department. The purpose of the test is to determine whether a person has had a previous tubercular infection.

Game Of Monopoly Takes Fort Wayne People By Storm

"You won second prize in a beauty contest." Where else could we possibly hear that except in that much-played game, Monopoly?

Fads are common occurrences to the American public. Look, for example, at "The Music Goes 'Round and 'Round,'" but the craze that has hit us now bids fair to be as bad or worse than all former crazes put together. We hear of big bankers, business men, doctors, lawyers, merchants, chiefs, busily engaged in playing this fascinating game from 7:30 p. m. until 2:30 a. m. The D. S. C. (District Street Cleaner, of course) draws Monopoly games in the gutter and busily buys up all the city, forcing his fellow D. S. C. into bankruptcy.

Those very dignified high school students come to class unprepared every day, and their only excuse seems to be that the Monopoly game monopolized their study time.

We even know of a boy who is constructing his own Monopoly board via tissue paper.

Of all the crazy crazes that have struck this crazy-crazy country, Monopoly is the craziest yet.

Radio Program Congratulated

Telegrams and letters of congratulation were received after the radio program presented by South Side a week ago Monday evening over WOWO. One telegram came from Evanston, Illinois, complimenting South Side on the fine program.

City Science Teachers Organize Into New Club

A meeting of all the science teachers in the city schools, both grade and high, was held on Tuesday evening at the Y. M. C. A. building for the purpose of organizing a city science teachers' club.

Mr. E. S. Gould, botany teacher here, was in charge of the arrangements for the affair, which was a dinner party at 6 o'clock. Mr. Gould, as chairman of the constitutional committee, was aided by Miss Vesta Thompson of North Side High School and Mr. C. D. Dilts of Central High School.

The next meeting of the newly organized society will be held within a few weeks, when officers and committees probably will be selected. Any teacher of science in the public school system is invited to attend the meetings of the club.

U. S. A. Hates To Stop; Holds Two Initiations

An explanation of the U. S. A. code and initiation ceremony was featured at the U. S. A. meeting last Thursday. Girls in charge of the initiation were: Thelma Pifer, chairman; Viola Yanney, Kathryn Miller, and Mary Jane Rison. For the amusement of all the members, another initiation was performed after the original one. The program which followed was composed of several stunts and enjoyable games in which every member took part. In fact, to tell the truth, the program was so entertaining that none of the members wanted to adjourn.

Jesse Markley Finds That South Side Times Advertising Pays

It is the wise merchant who looks into the future and advertises in The Times as he realizes that the students of today will be his best customers tomorrow.

Six years of experience taught this merchant the great value of advertising coverage given in the south side district by The Times.

The above is an unsolicited letter expressing a local merchant's appreciation of a model high school publication as an excellent advertising medium

Fifteen Teams Are Prepared For Annual Sectional Battles

Tourney News Is Published By 3 Schools

Local High Schools Assigned To Cover Certain Number of County Schools

The Tournament News, a copy of which you are now scanning, is an annual publication, made possible through the combined efforts of the three Fort Wayne high school newspaper staffs; the staff of the South Side Times, the Northerner of North Side, and the Spotlight of Central.

The South Side Times, South Side High School's weekly publication, began to publish a Tournament News separately, in 1925, serving both county and city schools. At the same time Central High's weekly, the Spotlight, was also publishing a Tournament News. In 1928 the present tourney news was established, with the staffs of the three local high school papers cooperating.

During the early days of the News the sectional area to be covered was considerably larger, the country roads were not so well improved, and automobiles were less efficient; for these reasons it was a far more difficult task to publish a Tourney News than it is today.

The procedure which is followed now seems to be the best plan for turning out a good paper; each of the three local high schools is assigned to cover a certain number of county schools that are to participate in the Fort Wayne Sectional Tourney. The staff members of the papers journey to their assigned schools and write up all the information they can get regarding the schools and their teams. In the early history of the Tourney News, generally only one staff member was sent, frequently by bus or interurban.

In the past the Tournament News has always had the finest type of co-operation from the county schools. They have always been willing to give as much support as possible to this publication, the purpose of which is to acquaint fans with the various teams and schools participating.

Central has been responsible for the publication of the News this year, but the three schools have worked together in visiting county schools, writing copy, reading proof, and selling advertising. North Side will be responsible for its publication next year and South Side the following year.

Semi-Regional Tourney At Muncie

Gymnasium Will Seat At Least 7,500 Persons; Downstairs Seats Reserved

Muncie High School will be the host to the Semi-Regional Tourney, the new step established this year by the Indiana High School Athletic Association. Paul Addison, the principal of Muncie High School is the tournament host, all arrangements are being made through him.

The Muncie Field House, which seats 7,500 persons, will be the scene of these tournament games. All of these seats will be reserved. There are 1600 seats down stairs which will be saved for the four schools participating in the games. In the balcony there are 1,513 seats for the remaining schools.

All arrangements have been made as to police protection, ushers, etc. All schools in the semi-regional district who are not among the contending quintets will receive only ten tickets apiece.

Central Cafeteria Head Plans Menu

Everyone Must Eat, Therefore Miss Keep Is Planning Sectional Meals

Everyone must eat, and with this in mind Miss Keep, head of Central's cafeteria, is having a job on her hands working out menus for the meals to be served at North Side High School during the Sectional Basketball Tournament.

All meals are to be served cafeteria style. A sandwich stand is going to be operated at the entrance of the cafeteria. Sandwiches, milk, both plain and chocolate, fruit juices, fruit, and candy are to be sold here for all who do not wish to sit down and eat a hot meal.

Basketball teams will be served inside. The public has its choice. At North Side the cafeteria is located on the third floor in the northwest of the northwest of the building. Signs will be posted to enable you to find the place.

The cafeteria is not going to be open on Thursday evening, but Friday it will open at 11 a. m. At this time lunch will be served inside. 4:30 p. m. is the time set for the evening meal. On Saturday it will not open until about 4:30, as there will be no game in the morning.

Hot dishes to be served in the cafeteria will include meat, soups, vegetables and salads, breads, milk, tea, coffee, pastries, and ice cream conclude the menu.

Central High Band To Furnish Music

Music Department Has Grown Considerably Under Mr. Bailhe

The 1935-36 season has been successful not only in athletics but also in music and in particular the Central High School Band.

From year to year Mr. Bailhe, the music director and instructor, has, in spite of many handicaps, organized and maintained excellent bands and this year as every other year, increased the size and playing ability of this organization. The Central band has grown rapidly the last six years under Mr. Bailhe's guidance and has showed remarkable progress.

Only last year, at the Goshen District Contest of the National Band and Orchestra Association, the band won an expensive drum major baton for its marching and flashy appearance, Lester Doell being the drum major, and won the second division in playing.

At home this season the band won the hearts of Central students during football games by playing snappy marches and between halves forming letters and fancy maneuvers while marching across the playing field. In a way, this helped our team win every game in the regular season and finish with only seven points scored against it. These maneuvers took plenty of drilling practice and with everyone willing to "pitch in" and do his part the result was the best marching and maneuvering band in the city.

The basketball games began where football stopped and the band was again active. This time not in marching but in the playing of novelties. This again aroused the students' interest as well as the interest of many fans outside of school. The band has played at every home game. About the middle of the season our principal, Mr. Croninger, and Mr. Bailhe decided to take the band to Huntington with the basketball team as a reward for the splendid attitude and interest the members showed in rehearsals and at concerts. This was a real treat and will not be quickly forgotten.

Outside of the athletics the band has given two large concerts, the first being at the North Side auditorium

Boosters' Sales Are Fairly High

Average Is $50 Per Game; $100 Worth Sold At Central Game

Booster Club sales at South Side have been consistent throughout the past basketball season. Sales averaged around $50 per game during the season. The last Central game topped the list on returns, the total money taken in being $100. The North Side game was second with receipts of $87.

The money made this season was used mainly in paying for the new indoor stage the school purchased last year. In addition to this, money was spent on the billboard on the stadium, on which the schedule is listed. Part of the money was also used to put up the decorations present at all of the games.

Host For Tournament

Fred H. Croninger

Mr. Fred H. Croninger, principal of Central High School, is serving as host for the annual sectional tournament which is being held in the North Side gymnasium.

Tourney To Be Held Here

North Side High School

North Side High School, situated on the banks of the St. Joseph's River, will be site of the sectional tournament tonight, Friday, and Saturday. North Side, the home of the Redskins, is located on the corner of State Street and Stadium Drive. The State Street trolley runs past the building, thus making transportation more convenient.

Basketball Game Is Improved Since First Invented In 1892

Dr. James Naismith, Springfield, Mass., formulated the rules for the game of basketball in 1892. This indoor game is unique in that it was originated or invented to meet the need for a competitive game that could be played during the winter months as football is played in the fall and baseball in the spring.

At first the equipment was most inadequate. Peach baskets suspended ten feet from the floor were used as goals. The ball used was a football. The backboard in some instances was made of wire screening. Gradually the equipment changed, and in 1898 the ring now in use for goals was adopted.

In the early stage of the game the team consisted of as many as nine to fifty players, with the size of the floor determining whether the team should be composed of five, seven, or nine players. About a year after the game was invented the number of players was fixed at five and has remained so for the men.

However, as early as 1892 the game of basketball was being played under modified rules by the women at Smith College. Within the next two years the game became popular among girls and women throughout the United States.

Snatching and batting seemed the chief element toward encouraging rough play in the game. This means of obtaining the ball was eliminated. To keep the game fast a ruling was made allowing but three seconds, under penalty of a foul, to the player holding the ball. Many felt there was possible danger using the dribble, and consequently, a ruling was made that allowed the player to bounce the ball only three consecutive times. This rule has since been changed, as we know, to a "one bounce" dribble.

A few years ago, a ruling was made to allow only 11 seconds to have the ball advanced over the center line from the opponents' basket. This amendment prevents stalling of any type by either team.

The most recent amendments include the following important changes: (1) A player is allowed to remain only three seconds in the foul circle; (2) Play after a foul throw is sunk may be begun from out-of-bounds without the referee touching the ball; (3) The person guarding a player who is returning a ball from out-of-bounds must remain three feet from the out-of-bounds line.

Reserve Dance After Tourney Is For Public

Admission Is 15 Cents Per Person Attendance Prizes Will Be Given

Committees Named

All basketball fans who attend the final session of the tournament are invited to attend the annual Girl Reserve Dance to be staged in the North Side High School cafeteria following the final game of the sectional tournament Saturday, March 7. This dance "The Basket Ball," is being sponsored by the Girl Reserve Inter-Club Council of the three city high schools.

Attendance prizes will be given. Admission will be 15 cents per person. So-Si-Y and U. S. A. of South Side are in charge of the orchestra, novelties, and chaperones, with Helen Anderson, Julia Crabill, and Eloise Stuart on the committee.

North Side Polar-Y is in charge of the decorations for the dance, with Charlene Reamer and Vivian Walborn, chairmen of the committee. Barbara Ashley is in charge of the check room.

The Central Girl Reserve clubs, Friendship and Central Triangle, are in charge of the publicity. Lillian Hartman, Marian Cabler, Clara Bente, and Mabel Springer are members of the committee.

Loyal boosters of all the high schools represented in the tournament will be present at this annual event.

The officers of the Girl Reserve Interclub Council, which is sponsoring this dance, are: Virginia Greiner, South Side, president; Jane Holman, Wheatley Center, vice-president; Kathleen McKay, Central, secretary; and Vivian Walborn, North Side, treasurer.

Central Boosters Sell At Tourney

All Sellers Will Be Dressed In Same Way, Blue and White

Bolson Is Chairman

Since this year Central is the host of the sectional tournament held at the North Side gym, the Booster Club has a huge job on its hands. So far, Cecelia Bolson, Booster chairman for the tournament, has all the plans for committees, decorations, and novelties, very near completion.

The Booster girls who sell at the tournament will be dressed the same in novelty costumes of blue and white to carry out Central's part in the tournament. The two in charge of costumes are Katherine McKay and Clara Bente.

Because the Booster Club members are to be the sole sellers at all the games on the three tournament days, tonight, Friday, and Saturday, the committee in charge has planned a few novelties to sell for the occasion. Besides the usual candy, popcorn, Coca-Cola, ice cream, etc., brightly colored megaphones will be sold to give more volume to the voices of the tournament fans. "Tiger Fan" novelties are also to be on sale.

Dorothy Masursky has charge of the making of the white satin Central streamer-badges printed in blue and white which are to be given away to Booster members. Decorations are under the direction of Lillian Hartman with a committee comprised of Ed Stumpf, Ward Beers, Dorothy Prange, Herschel O'Shaughnessy, Ruth Peak, Mildred Hawkins, and Ida Mae Dager. This committee has made shields for all the schools in their own colors, colored banners to be hung around the North Side gym, and four huge C's to be placed in each corner of the gym.

At the tournament the Boosters will operate three selling stands to meet the demand of the crowds. Two of the stands will be at the ends upstairs, and the third in the usual place downstairs.

Tourney Will Get Under Way Tonight On N. S. Hardwood

WOWO, WGL To Broadcast The Sectional

Gunner Elliott, Prominent Local Sports Announcer, Will Direct Broadcasts

Under the capable direction of Gunner Elliott, local prominent sportsman and sports announcer, the associated radio stations, WOWO and WGL, will broadcast the play-by-play description of the Fort Wayne sectionals and regionals.

Final permission to broadcast the Indiana State High School Basketball Tournament games was given last Friday evening by the I. H. S. A. A. Board of Control on condition that the participating principals agreed.

Mr. Elliott stated that he and his colleagues would do all they could to cooperate in broadcasting the tourneys and urged all who possibly could to attend. He added that the broadcasting was arranged to accommodate those who are shut in and cannot possibly attend the contests.

Able assistance will be given Mr. Elliott in the form of Noble Kaiser, head grid coach at Purdue, and Coach Koegan, mentor of the Notre Dame Irish, two of the most prominent sports authorities in the country.

The broadcast will be sponsored by the Perfection Biscuit Company and will be the eleventh consecutive sectional play-by-play description in Fort Wayne.

Dilts In Charge Of Arrangements

Will Mark His Fourth Term In The Capacity Of Tourney Manager

To Manage Regional

As athletic manager for Central High School Mr. C. D. Dilts again has supervision of the sectional and regional eliminations basketball tournament.

Charles Dilts

In a recent interview Mr. Dilts, chemistry teacher at Central, announced that this year will mark the fourth time that he has had charge of this division of the state tournament.

Having been in charge of arrangements of the tournaments in this district three times previous to this, and having had charge of the direction of athletics at Central over a period of time, Mr. Dilts is well fitted to successfully supervise the tournament this year.

In the capacity of athletic manager, Mr. Dilts has many duties to perform, and these will be climaxed this year by the added responsibilities and obligations of the tournament.

The work of being athletic manager does not stop at the time school is dismissed in June, but continues on throughout the year. At the beginning of an athletic season a schedule must be worked out. It must be decided which teams are to participate, when they are to play and where they are to play. A contract must be drawn up by the teams to insure their good faith and in it an amount of money must be stipulated to pay the visiting team for its expenses. This amount varies with the distance traveled, but sometimes is from $25 to $50.

Before games advertising must be arranged. The printing department of Central High School cooperates in this by making signs. Tickets must be printed and sold. They are sold in two ways. According to the first, by agents, and by the second plan by a part pay system.

Mr. Dilts must work out a schedule for the men who work at the games and place them in their various positions and during a game must act in a supervisory position.

"Big Four" Will Meet In Semi-Finals If They Down Strong County Netters.

Woodburn Draws Bye In First Round This Year

South Side Archers Will Meet Hoagland Wildcats In The Initial Tilt

Fort Wayne's thirteenth annual sectional tournament will get under way this evening at 7 o'clock on the North Side hardwood when the South Side Archers meet Hoagland in the initial tilt.

The draw, as may be noticed on the bottom of the page, places the "big four," North Side, South Side, Central, and Decatur, in such a way as will allow all four quintets to meet in the semi-finals. Should these respective teams triumph over their exceptionally tough county team competition, an interesting third round is generally predicted.

Hoagland, county champ she may be, meets the South Side Archers as the underdog in the opening game. The next hour's tilt matches Decatur with Elmhurst who has upheld many fine performances this season. The final game of the evening features an inter-county clash, Monmouth meeting New Haven.

Arcola is the more or less favorite over Monroeville in their scheduled tilt tomorrow morning at 10 o'clock, the Arcola five having defeated the Cubs three times previously. Central draws a tartar in the form of the Leo Lions, whose fast break type of ball will cause the Tigers no end of trouble. North Side meets Hometown in the first game of tomorrow afternoon's session. Harlan and Lafayette Central wind up the first round competition with Woodburn, drawer of the bye, tangling with the victor of the Archer-Hoagland clash in the final tilt of that session. After that, the sometime fickle god of basketball will decide who shall meet and who shall not in the remainder of the tourney.

The three officials who were delegated to officiate in this sectional are not well known in the city, one of which cannot be placed at all by local authorities. They are: Richard Roberts, Dana Chandler (Indianapolis), and Walter Thurston (Mishawaka).

In the regional to be held on March 14, the winner here will meet the winner at Portland in the first tilt, and Bluffton's sectional titlist engaging the Huntington winner in the subsequent game. The two victors clash in the evening to decide the regional championship.

The regional winner at Muncie will tangle with Auburn's regional victor in the initial semi-final tourney tilt to be held at the Muncie Field House on March 21. Marion's regionalist will do battle with Fort Wayne's regional representative in the second game of that tournament. The two who end on the long end of the score in their respective games will be matched in the evening tilt to decide who shall proceed to the state finals.

In that final tournament, to be held March 28, the winner at Vincennes will meet the Muncie survivor in game one. Gary's representative will match its net ability with that of the winner at Indianapolis in the second game, the two winners meeting in the evening for the Indiana State High School Basketball Championship.

Sectional drawings at Bluffton, Portland, and Huntington, which may throw light on the coming regional competition are listed as follows:

Spirit Of Tournament—

"We'll be in there fighting and have as much chance to win as anyone." These words of Principal Brown of Decatur are representative of the "Spirit of the Tournament." A determination to win is possessed by every team. Even if they have had a poor season and even if they are statistically rated as not having much chance to win, they redouble their efforts for the tournament and know that to be successful here would be to compensate for former defeats.

Teams that are pre-tourney favorites worry over upsets and defeat at the hands of rivals of equally logical choice.

In the various schools the air becomes electrified with talk of the tournament. Booster clubs work in preparation for this event. Coaches prep their teams for the competition, and the tournament is the main topic of the day.

If a penny saved is a penny earned, all of us are big money-earners. Just think of all the things we haven't bought.

Utopia is the place where all the candidates for all the offices keep all the promises they have made.

And then there was the spectator who, after seeing a basketball game, said that, after all, it wasn't fair for the other team to have played with the ball all the time, for the home team had paid for it.

After being pricked by a thorn on a rose, we don't believe we would want our life to be a bed of roses.

The value of Mussolini's doing so much construction work, such as roads and bridges in the land he has captured in Ethiopia, is now more clearly seen. When he gets the whole of Ethiopia for his empire, he will have his roads and bridges already built.

Love certainly must be blind, for it is at its best in the dark.

Then there was the man who, after being arrested for speeding, gave as his excuse that he was in a big hurry to get to a safety demonstration where he was to speak in the next few minutes.

A successful movie script writer is one who writes a story with a lot of crazy happenings and unusual phenomena and has the movie critics say they like it because it is so true to human life.

One way for a dictator to hide his failure from his people is to borrow money, and another is to start a war in far away Africa.

The modern basketball coach's opinion on the banishment of the center jump depends upon the height of the material he has for his center.

To show that human nature has always been the same and that all husbands of all ages share the same fate, we may merely point out to you that Robert Burns once wrote a poem about a henpecked husband.

Everyone spends his life seeking after contentment and being in a state of complete satisfaction; and if he does succeed in gaining this, he will have nothing more to live for. If he has nothing more to live for, he might as well be dead.

Results of invention: Man built automobiles that he might travel faster. Then he has spent the rest of his time conducting safety campaigns and erecting stoplights and signs that he may slow down.

Nobody is satisfied. The poor man wishes to be rich and the rich man yearns for the free and easy life of the man who doesn't have a couple of bodyguards hounding him all the time.

We all hate this weather we have been experiencing, but what burns us up the most is, in reading the memoirs of Admiral Byrd written while he was at the South Pole, he records that for about a month the temperature was consistently above zero.

Test For Sportsmen

As another tournament comes along, we begin to wonder whether in the same manner as it tests teams, the tournament doesn't test the sportsmanship of all of us. For every team that wins in a game there has to be some team to lose. Each game, therefore, is a test to see whether the supporters of the winning team are good winners, but above all to see whether the supporters of the losing team are good losers.

Years from now, whether a certain school wins or not will be of no importance, but whether the school has a sportsman's attitude toward its victory or defeat will always be important. The purpose of all games and sports is not for any certain team to win games but to teach the ideals of sportsmanship to every participant. Although every school cannot win, every school can be a success in the tournament by being successful sportsmen.

After all, the school that we remember and admire the most is the one whose sportsmanship is of the highest degree. Tournaments are more important as displays of sportsmanship than of showing which team happens to be undefeated.

Changes Come Quickly— A New Canal Might Change Our Futures

One hundred thirty miles from here they swear allegiance to a king 4500 miles away.

The center of a French-speaking province is but 768 miles closer than Boston.

"What do I care?" you may ask. "I never hear of them."

No one knew much of Abraham Lincoln, either—until he came into power. And this Canadian region may well affect this country as much as a presidential election.

Because water transport is dirt cheap, Great Lake interests have fought for an open way to the sea—the St. Lawrence Waterway. The plan cuts out New York and all the railroads from New York to Chicago at one sweep.

We can only guess how this affects us. With New York's former import trade, Chicago might reach a huge size. Already the midwest center of American transport, Chicago would be fitted perfectly as the chief industrial center of America, replacing New York.

The cheaper costs of the canal would make this region "closer" to Europe than New York; it would be cheapest to make things for us in Chicago; Fort Wayne would get nearly everything from Chicago.

Most of us will live here all our lives. The waterway might change our destinies as the Civil War changed those of the Southerners.

It is, at least, worth thinking about.

Thanks A Million

Generals in Ethiopia, Austins, traffic courts, penalties, Aladdins and funny-looking cars are the stuff safety skits are made of. The Travel, Lettermen's, and So-Si-Y clubs have entertained us at three separate times and in three different ways with skits which provoked mirth and thought. Back of the sense of humor and the sense of originality which prompted these bits is an earnest desire to impress upon the student body the desperate need for careful driving. Regardless of who wins the prize for the best skit, we say to all clubs participating—thanks for the amusement and THANKS FOR THE LESSON.

The newly devised system of a four-team state finals will be on trial this year as a means of safeguarding the interests of the schools and to prevent a recurrence of having one team participate in three games in one day. The use of this system is of special advantage because a team which is a strong favorite to win the tournament may be defeated in its third game of the day when tired and lacking the necessary drive to win, it is in no position to play its third game on an equal basis with a rested group. To allow this is a violation of our sentiment, "May the best team win."

This system, then, is on trial and our reaction to it will determine whether future tournaments shall be played with a fair chance for all. In the interest of fair play let's hope this system proves as popular as the old one.

On Riding On A Street Car

Have you ever ridden on a street car? If not it is high time you mounted one. I don't believe the "kick" you will receive from it will produce too many ill effects, and at the same time it will temporarily boost you up beyond reach of your own worries.

I call these electric buggies our "city hobbie-horses." You will soon understand why, after you have ridden in one, especially if it is behind time in its schedule. They start up with a jerk that nearly disconnects your neck. Then you just get settled down in the "saddle" when you are brought to such an abrupt halt that you just come within an ace of banging your nose on the seat ahead.

Now, if you have your observation eye along, we will notice something somewhat more interesting for—

Every street car is a stage,

Each passenger has his entrances and exits.

Cast your eyes upon the occupants of the seat directly across the aisle. They are a young father and mother with their first-born. The father, who is holding the child, seems to be rather awkward and inexperienced at the job. Not a movement of either the father or the child escapes the mother's eye, and she is constantly reminding her husband to pull baby's blanket up where it belongs. He tries to hold the youngster in one hand while he adjusts the blanket with the other, but in the attempt the blanket gets completely away from him. By this time baby is loudly and vehemently protesting against such treatment, and then—oh well, she might have known a man didn't know how to hold a six-weeks-old baby.

Let's forget the family trio for a while. In the seat ahead are a couple of real "neighborly" females, that is, they have the over-the-backyard-fence type of neighborliness. They're "at it" as usual. You couldn't possibly get a word in edgewise. They are doubtless en route to some Ladies' Aid Conference to make their "weakly" contribution. But take a closer look at the one next to the window. I'll wager you never saw such a sharp chin, and her nose—oh, such a nose—it looks like a parrot's beak. You are almost afraid to look at her for fear that you will see that wonderful nose have a head-on collision with that destructive chin, or maybe come to a worse fate of being swallowed up by that yawning abyss situated just below. However, by the sound of the gale coming from this opening it would be an impossibility for anything to get inside.

Over here to the right is one of our old grouchy woman-haters. My, but the look on his face would put a lemon to shame. Probably Maggie and her rolling pin could do him some good.

But what is all this delay about? No wonder! A big, two-hundred-fifty-pound Aunt Jemina is attempting to get on the car. You can feel the car teeter as she places her dainty little foot on the step. Now, she is waddling and working her way down the aisle, bulging shopping bag on one arm and packages too numerous to mention in the other, and calamity of calamities—the "ebony" lady deposits herself right beside our woman-hater friend. Now he will behave, or else get smothered.

After several stops our family has become uncomfortably large. A bunch of noisy schoolboys have possession of the rear section. Next to them is a group of young Shieks and Shebas who are probably on their way to spend their evening at a park or movie. Up near the front is one of these "swell society dames" with her darling little Fido sitting by her side. The aisle is packed with tired laborers who, as the car jerks along, listlessly jostle against one another. I hear one of them remark that if he wasn't so afraid of getting hair on his trousers he would make a cushion of that d— poodle. Some folks never will learn street car etiquette.

Fewer stops are made as the main part of town is approached, for we are now in pedestrian territory. In a few moments the motorman calls out in a loud voice, "Transfer corner." There is a general commotion among the passengers, then a mad rush for the exit. Finally your feet touch solid ground again, and so ends your ride on our "city hobbie-horse."

Sectional Host's Message

There may be some argument against basketball tournaments but, nevertheless, there is a lot of good also. They bring together dozens of players, hundreds of boys and girls, many men and women in a colorful, gay affair. All good natured and wanting their teams to win. Much good comes from this. Friendships formed, loyalty stressed, how to take both victory and defeat, self control, toleration, and good will engendered.

As tourney principal I welcome you all and hope your stay and play with us will be most pleasant. My desire at this time is that the best team win.

FRED G. CRONINGER,
Sectional Tourney Principal.

Although Central High School is the host for the fifteenth sectional tournament the games are played in the North Side High School gymnasium. Central has a modern gym, but it is lacking in seating accommodations for the crowds that usually attend these tournaments.

STUFF

By Gaspard Huff

This week we have a worm's (yell leader's) eye view of a basketball tournament from the floor of the Pasture House (only big schools have field houses). The principle of a tournament is very simple. It is even a question whether it has any principles at all, or if it does have any principles they are probably very low. So low, dear reader, that even you could appreciate them. But really the whole thing is awfully simple, or should I say simply awful.

A round of games is run off and unfortunately half the schools lose. This is one of the worst things about a tournament. Right at the beginning the crowd is hopelessly split up the middle. Half of it is feeling hotsy-totsy and the other half is willing to swear that the officials were cross-eyed and that there was a trap door on one of the baskets. To tell the truth, they are willing to swear—quite a bit. In fact more than anybody in the state you're in now, and that's saying a good deal because you might be in a pretty bad state.

Well, as I was saying, half the schools lose. Did I say half? Pardon me, I forgot Bye. My how things can slip Bye. If you look at the program, menu, line up or whatever it is that gives the arrangement of the tournament, you will see opposite one of the schools, a school named Bye. Well, Bye is licked before it starts. That's funny, too, because there are schools named Bye all over the country in tournaments and you never see them get anywhere in a tournament. In fact, they generally don't even play. I've never seen one play yet. To tell the truth I've sometimes doubted whether there is such a school. I really think the officials just pretend there is a Bye to make it come out even. But if that's so why don't they make a whole extra first round of games and give each school some fictitious school to play. Thus everybody could be happy because they got through the first bunch of games without a loss.

Well, after half the schools, including Bye, have fizzled out, the ones that are left take a crack at each other and there's only a fourth left. After that they keep doing it till there's only one left. That one is supposed to be better than the rest, but that's not very important. They just go on to another tournament and get licked. No it's not near so important as lots of other things; for instance, that cute fellow on the Phuttfutz team. He's more interesting than a couple of numbers called a score. And that girl across the gymnasium has a more interesting figure than the score board could unravel in a week.

Who's playing? What swell suits! Oh say, has number 134 got form! No not that little fat fellow. The other 134. Look at that shot. Who's Joe got with him? Wow what a wild one! Oh, do we have to stand up again; whose school song is this? Hey, that seat's taken. There goes the band. What's that guy saying? I'm hungry. Shut up! What did you say?

Mr. Effebuster, the math teacher has just fallen down one of the stairways. Everything is so crowded that it's a little difficult to get around. Isn't it Mr. Effebuster? He will probably agree as soon as he comes to. George Blutz has put his foot in Henry Pringle's coat pocket three times during one game. Jane Wilson's aunt just had her wig kicked off, and Orfy Gump has swallowed a whole package of gum from being swatted on the back.

What's that yell leader yelling about? Oh! There's a game on. Half over? Goodness! Has anybody made a touchdown—basket? I mean what's the score? Gimme a bite. Ugh, imp. Whosh made the mosht ugliph? Gimme nosher bite—Stingy. Oh, shut! Missed it! Who's the girl in the third row near that big tall fellow with a long nose running down the aisle. No, I mean that he's running, not his nose. Do you see her? No, not that fat girl. The—What the—! What's going on? A foul? Basket? Who made it? Hey, sit down! I paid my good money to see this game and not to look at your rear view. Who made the basket? I wasn't watching. Hey, who made the basket? Good gravy! Doesn't anybody know anything about what's happening? You must think you're at a basketball game.

A Saga Of A Safety Pin

There is a story that's been told Among those who are in the know. They say that the reason why Mahatma Gandhi refused to go—To America—is this:

It seems perchance the Illini fell, Into his hands one day. And as he read the woman's page About the sororities gay, A startling item was revealed Which caused him much dismay, And made the Indian potentate These sorrowful statements say:

I cannot go to America It would be quite a sin If one of those darling sorority girls Should manage to get MY PIN.

Harlan Hawks Show Improving Form Through Season

Started Year With Defeats But Improved

Able To Practice Only Once Or Twice Each Week Because Of Cold Weather.

Seven Men Are Back From Last Year's Quint

Woody Smith And Bus Harris Lead Hawks' Scoring; School Has 125 Pupils

Harlan High School, located northeast of Fort Wayne in the town of Harlan, Springfield Township, is a splendid example of a democratic, friendly, and efficient high school. Harlan, which has an enrollment of approximately 125 students, has been noted, not only for its school spirit, but also for the various accomplishments of the school and its students.

In addition to the publication of an outstanding school paper, the organization of a band, and the largest commercial department of any county high school, Harlan takes an active part in athletics, a fact which naturally deserves space in a tournament journal.

The Harlan Hawks, efficiently coached by Mr. Don Fryback, have had a season consisting of inconsistencies, or ups and downs. Getting off to a poor start, and losing their first six games, the Hawks came back to finish ahead in several games and display a fairly good brand of ball.

This winter the Blue and Gold have had difficulty along several lines. Injuries, cold weather and lack of practice, have contributed much to Harlan's inconsistent season. "Woody" Smith, star forward, suffered a sprained ankle, and the coach himself suffered severe fractures when struck in the chest by a ball bat during soft ball season.

The Harlan gym, which seats 200, has been unoccupied for most of the season due to the fact that the cold weather makes proper heating difficult. As a result, the Hawks have been practicing only once or twice a week.

Veteran Players Return

The Hawks lost several stars by last year's graduation; but also had seven men return from last year's squad. Such fellows as Kieth Klopfenstein, Jack Amstutz, Woody Smith, D. O. Huther, Bus Harris, Bud Minnick, and Wayne Rolling, are back to add their talents to Harlan's team.

Woody Smith and Bus Harris, scoring leaders, are valuable men on this year's squad. Bus won the King trophy for sportsmanship a few years back. He has been playing basketball four years of his high school career. All in all, the Harlan team is as big and fast as last year's but lacks the co-operation of an outstanding team.

Coach Is Kept Busy

Coach Fryback, who also advises the softball activities at Harlan, has had six years' coaching experience, all of which have been spent at Harlan. He is a graduate of Indiana University, where he was active in athletics and music. He teaches typing, shorthand, and music in addition to his basketball and softball mentorship. Mr. Fryback hopes that with the proper co-operation and draw, the team can go places in the tourney.

At the time of writing, the Hawks have won four and lost eleven. They lost in the opening round of the county tourney, but supported by the Harlan Booster Club, the yell leaders, and Norman Fryback, four-year-old son of the coach, and consequently mascot, they hope to go farther in the sectional.

Harlan High School Houses 128 Students

Harlan, a thriving community of 700 people, lies about fourteen miles northeast of Fort Wayne on State Road 14. As one enters Harlan, he sees the high school, which was built the early part of this century.

As one enters the high school he is met by Mr. Leslie Carsons, the genial principal, who is the teacher of geometry. The high school houses 128 students and boasts of the largest commercial department and the largest bass horn in the county outside of Fort Wayne. The school has eight periods of 45 minutes each with an hour off for lunch. During the lunch period the students go to the music room and play ping pong, of which the school boasts of several good players. The students in the high school were very friendly and helped the correspondents of the Tourney News very much.

Harlan's Softball Team Champions

Win Six And Lose One To Win Allen County Title Last Fall

This year the Harlan varsity softball team under the supervision of Coach Donald Fryback had a very successful season, winning the county championship. They won six and lost one.

The softball champions' schedule ran like this:

	H.	Op.
Sept. 11—Huntstown	5	3
Sept. 13—Leo	3	2
Sept. 16—Woodburn	4	3
Sept. 20—New Haven	4	8
Sept. 25—Huntstown	7	3
Sept. 27—Leo	9	3
Oct. 4—Woodburn	8	1

September 20 seemed to be the Hawks' bad luck day, for on that day their good record was spoiled by a loss and their coach, Donald Fryback, was injured; his ribs badly fractured when he was hit by a bat. The only other casualty was when Woody Smith sprained his ankle badly.

Hawks' Record

Below are the tabulated season's results of the Harlan Hawks. The team got off to a poor start, but came back to win several of their encounters. The reserve squad had a successful season, losing only three of their scheduled preliminary games. Girls' basketball was discontinued at Harlan last year, and one by one the county schools are doing away with girls' basketball.

Here is the record of the Blue and Gold:

Harlan 21, St. Joe 22.
Harlan 9, New Haven 27.
Harlan 20, Hoagland 33.
Harlan 22, Monroeville 26.
Harlan 19, Leo 52.
Harlan 15, Concordia 23.
Harlan 33, Huntertown 32.
Harlan 46, Mark Center 26.
Harlan 31, Elmhurst 32.
Harlan 18, Arcola 27.
Harlan 33, Monroeville 23.
Harlan 22, Woodburn 21.
County Tourney—Lost to Elmhurst.
Harlan 17, Huntertown 18.
Harlan 21, Leo 30.
Harlan 20, Hoagland 37.
Harlan 43, Mark Center 23.

"Loud Speaker" Is Harlan Newspaper

Has Remarkable Circulation Of 400 Though Only 128 In High School

The "Loud Speaker," monthly publication of Harlan High School, is a paper of which Harlan citizens are justly proud. The paper is now in its eleventh year; is growing in circulation and adding new laurels to its already extensive list. The most remarkable achievement of the paper is perhaps, the circulation. As the "Loud Speaker" boasts a circulation of 400; the population of the school is 128, and that of the town about 700, the remarkable record is clearly seen. The subscribers include the entire student body, the faculty, and the rest, townspeople, alumni, and the like. Its circulation rivals many large city high school papers.

The "Loud Speaker" is decidedly a good influence in the school, for it fosters several programs, such as "Courtsey Week," "Hobby Week," and so forth. The subscription price is only publish the final "Loud Speaker" of fifty cents a term, the profit going to the year, which with pictures and special articles, takes the place of an annual.

The "Loud Speaker," which is a five column, four to eight page paper, belongs to the Indiana High School Press Association, Quill and Scroll, and the National Scholastic Press Association. A staff of approximately twenty students aid Mr. Foote, the faculty adviser, and the co-Editors-in-Chief to publish this truly remarkable high school paper.

Teachers Supervise Assemblies

Faculty members of Santa Maria High School are now assigned seats in the assemblies with their classes. If students misbehave they are taken out of the auditorium and given to two faculty members stationed outside. They turn the guilty students over to the adviser who has charge of the detention for just such cases.

Harlan Comes With Scrappy Crew

Harlan Graduation On Tuesday, May 5

Rev. Rowe, Minister At Indianapolis, Has Been Chosen To Deliver Address

Commencement exercises of Harlan High School will be held Tuesday evening, May 5, at the school gymnasium. It is customary that the graduation exercises be held during the middle of April; but since so much school was missed during the semester, school will be dismissed later in the spring.

Rev. Rowe, a well-known minister of Indianapolis, has been chosen to deliver the commencement address. Baccalaureate will be held at the gymnasium on Sunday evening, April 26. Rev. Kenneth Timmons, pastor of the Church of Christ of Harlan, will give the baccalaureate sermon.

Twenty-one seniors will receive diplomas this year. The class is the smallest since 1931, when there were only thirteen graduates. Those to receive diplomas are: Anna Mae Beerbower, Margaret Chaney, Zella Chester, Rose Clem, Ralph Ehle, Mae Fisher, Richard Harris, Betty Horn, Keith Klopfenstein, Homer Oyer, Fern Peters, Betty Roth, Madge Ruckman, Berdene Schlatter, Woodrow Smith, Russel Stieglitz, Harriet Timbrook, Juanita Walker, Alice Wann, Maxine Webb, and Eileen Yoder.

Son Of Hawks' Coach Is Mascot For Team; Has Special Uniform

Have you seen this Harlan mascot on the floor. That's the cute little boy with the soft golden curls. His name is Norman Fryback for he is the son of Donald Fryback, the coach of the Hawks. He eats, sleeps, and plays basketball. It is his favorite pastime.

His favorite toy is the basketball which you can readily see as you step into the Fryback home, for he has several basketballs of his own. In fact the thing of which he is most proud is that he can go with the Norman Fryback team wherever they play and that he has a special made uniform of his own just like the rest of the Hawks. Whenever the Hawks get new uniforms so does he. He is the spirit behind the team.

Unique Course Of Study Tried

A new course of study, which includes a survey of school activities and traditions, personal development and occupations is being tried out by the civics department of the Olympia High School, Olympia, Washington.

Harlan Slants

Among the many fans of the Harlan Hawks at the tourney will be Juanita Walker and her redhead boyfriend, George Koch.

It may seem queer to some to notice that alumni boosters are so interested in a basketball team. However, if you lived in Harlan it wouldn't seem queer for Marjorie Kurtz, because her steady plays regular guard. You will know him as number 55.

The "Mudsock" fellows are faithful of the Blue and Gold. One of these is Guy Beerbower along with his lady friend, Berdene Schlatter.

When asked if they would feel bad in case of losing a game, "Ginger" Greenwood and "Allie" Wann, Harlan's cheer leaders, remarked: "We are determined to win; of course, if we should be the unlucky ones, we can do nothing but make the most of it."

The captain's girl friend is going to college at I. U. but we all know that no matter where she is, Gayle Spindler is rooting for dear old H. S.

We doubt if Anna Mae Beerbower will get to the tournament since her boyfriend is in Washington, D. C.

Strange as it may seem, it is probable that Isabel Bartholomew and Max Harter will journey to the tourney to yell for Harlan.

Margaret Chaney and Milford Peters will be among the boosters of Harlan as usual.

Harlan Purchases New Musical Instruments

Harlan High School has purchased four additional musical instruments in order to aid in the organization of a school band. One BB bass, one trombone, and two alto horns are now in the hands of selected pupils.

Mr. Fryback, music instructor, will start to work on individual instruction immediately after the basketball season. Group work will start April first and the first public appearance will be about June 1.

During the school months the band will be made up entirely of school pupils, but in the summer time it will be composed of all school band members and in addition several local players.

Harlan Boosters Pep Up For Meet

New Yells, Color Emblems, Good Cheer Leaders Will Inspire Hawks

This year the Harlan cheerleading squad boasts of two attractive veterans, Virginia Greenwood and Alice Wann, vice-presidents of the junior and senior classes respectively. They will be at the tournament, leading Harlan to victory and will be dressed in bright new costumes, composed of blue corduroy slacks and flashy satin gold blouses.

Over sixty persons from Harlan are expected to attend the tournament regularly this year. The Hawks who attend the tournament can be distinguished by blue and gold streamers pinned proudly to their chests. The newly organized Harlan High Booster Club, which has an enrollment of over fifty members, already has taken up this new project with added zest, and expects their club to attend the sectional in full strength of numbers and voices. Their members are expected to out-do even the fine record the Harlan fans made last year.

Harlan will inaugurate two new original yells at the sectional this year. There yells were made up by members of the Booster Club not long ago. Here they are:

"Lum 'n' Abner, Grandpappy Spears, We've got Leo sheddin' tears."

By Bill Blackburn.
"Little gold Hawks, sitting on a fence, It's crownin' for Harlan 'cause it's got good sense."

"Strawberry Kate" To Be At Harlan

Betty Horn And Richard Harris Have Leading Roles In Three-Act Comedy

"Strawberry Kate," a comedy in three acts by Eugene G. Hafer, is the name of the annual senior presentation of Harlan High School. The play is directed by Mr. Foote.

Bob Crawford, played by Richard Harris, is a member of one of the state's best families. When he and Charlie Granger, Homer Oyer, arrive in the little town of Cedar Grove on a visit, they are promptly captured by a belligerent little miss, known as "Strawberry Kate." Kate, Betty Horn, who is really a charming girl, has been bothered by strawberry raiders and suspects Bob and Charlie of being the culprits. She gives them the choice of either going to jail or taking jobs picking strawberries. Concealing their identities, they accept the strawberry picking jobs with dubious enthusiasm. About this time the town is agog over the big social event of the year—the Spring Festival. Kate, being just common "Strawberry Kate," is not even invited. Tense rivalry reigns in the aristocratic younger set as to who will be appointed "Prince Charming" and "Princess Beautiful" of the gala event. Then comes the first shock—Bob Crawford, strawberry picker, is appointed Prince Charming. The town seethes. The big night draws near. Then the bombshell explodes—"Strawberry Kate" is appointed Princess Beautiful.

Other characters are—snappy Hazel Downing, played by Juanita Walker; motherly Mrs. Winton, Kate's aunt, enacted by Harriet Timbrook; Chrysanthemum Klots, the hired girl, Anna Mae Beerbower; the part of pompous seventeen-year-old Tommy Meadows is taken by Keith Klopfenstein; Berdene Schlatter has the role of aristocratic Gwendolyn Norton; beaming Minnie Holzappel, Margaret Chaney, who mistakes Charlie for her mail-order husband; Ezra Norton, the town Shyllock, Ralph Ehle; gleeful, lovable Betty Crawford, Alice Wann; Chollie Pooster, played by Woodrow Smith, adds much to the humor of the play; Jim, the town constable, Russel Stieglitz.

It is brimful of excitement; an uproarious comedy filled with the refreshing atmosphere of spring.

The play is to be given at the high school gymnasium, but the date has not definitely been set.

pounds. He is a 17-year-old center with a number 77 on his jersey.

Gladwin Klopfenstein weighs 135 pounds, is 15, and is 5 feet 8 inches tall; plays at guard.

Billy Shaefer is also 15 years old, weighs 138 pounds, and is also 5 feet 8 inches tall. He plays at guard.

Nice fellows, every one, these boys from Harlan.

Lions Have High Hopes In This Year's Sectional Tourney

Leo Won 17, Lost Only One During Year

Veteran Material Helps Coach Davis Build Up A Successful Team.

Big Crowd Of Fans Coming To Tourney

Coach Considers This Year's Team Best He Has Ever Had At Leo

The Purple and Gold of Leo High School, will be well represented by their successful 1935-36 basketball squad, in this sectional tourney. The Lions, who have had a very impressive season, are true dark horses, and are trundling up their big guns in order to clip off a city team.

Leo High School, which has an enrollment of 145 students, is situated north of Fort Wayne in the center of hospitable, friendly rural community. The students, most of whom live in the country, are transported to and from school by means of school buses. Upon entering the high school building one is immediately impressed by the loyal, democratic school spirit. The students are justly proud for the school boasts a fine faculty, a well equipped and modern school building, a large auditorium or gym, and a competent athletic system.

As stated before, the Lions are dark horses in this sectional tourney. Their outstanding seasonal record, during which they won 17 and lost one, makes for their high hopes and better chance. Seven veterans are returned from last year's team, and four more will be back next season. Dick Bucher and Bill Bender, seniors, are the high scorers of this year's team, both playing very capably at forward posts. In addition to Dick and Bill, Coach Davis has the five following boys who are expected to contribute much to the hoped for success, and who are also back from last year: Verdon Stucky, Irvin Mensky, Ken Sanders, Elmer Griswold, and Merl Moss.

The Lions have a fairly large gym in which to play. The playing floor is sixty by forty, and the ceiling is high. The gym, the veteran material, and the capable coaching on the part of Mr. Davis, make for a large part of the Lions' success.

Leo entered the county tournament the favorites, along with Hoagland, their county rival. Elmhurst, however, eliminated the Lions, who had played two preceding strenuous games. In the regular scheduled season, Leo defeated the Trojans twice. The only game lost by Leo this season, was a defeat at the hands of Hoagland, the Lions' thirteenth game on Friday the thirteenth. Last year Leo also had a good season, winning 13 and losing seven.

Mr. Davis says of this year's squad, "The best team I have had in my coaching experience. With good breaks the boys should go a long way. They hope to upset a city team."

Mr. Slaton, genial principal, is also optimistic, and says that if the weather permits, 200 fans should be on hand to cheer the team, clad, incidentally, in new silver and purple jackets, on to victory. Therefore, ball clubs, beware! Beware when a Leo Lion leaves his den a-hunting!

Lions' Gymnasium Is One Of Newest And Best In Allen County

The Lions' Den was built several years ago in the new grade school, which is next door to the Leo High School. The gym, which is also used as an auditorium, is about 80 feet long, 60 feet wide and 24 feet high.

Around the outside of the playing floor is one row of bleachers which seats over 250 people. The playing floor is 60 feet long and 40 feet wide, and the playing floor is one of the best in the county. The average attendance at the games is over 200, and with the profits that the basketball team has made for the school, the athletic association has purchased and installed a new electric score board and new glass backstops. Altogether, the roaring Lions from Leo, have one of the best gyms in Allen County outside of Fort Wayne.

"I planted a mess of turnips in the garden and what do you think came up?"

"I d'no, what?"

"A flock of hogs and et 'um."

Doctor: "When did you first suspect that your husband was not all right mentally?"

Mrs. Jones: "When he shook the hall tree and began feeling on the floor for apples."

WE ARE FOR YOU, LEO!

Leo Short Shots

Friendly and hospitable are two characteristics of Mr. H. T. Slaton, which mark him as a popular and successful principal of Leo High School. He originally hailed from Georgia, and his pleasing Southern drawl is much in evidence. We wonder how he likes our cold weather and snow. He says that if the said snow permits, 200 Leo fans should attend the sectional.

The student manager of any squad always deserves mention for his valuable and necessary work. Leo's man behind the scenes is Max Grabill. Max performs his duties quite capably. He has charge of equipment, and is a general all around handy man. Good going, Max!

School transportation is one rural problem that has been well met by school buses. This winter the county buses and drivers have had a hard time plowing through the snow and drifts to deliver their charges. Leo High and grade school combined, have five or six buses that transport the students to and from school. The buses come early in the morning, and leave as soon as school is out.

One of the factors contributing to athletic and basketball accuracy, and which causes much interest at Leo, is the annual foul shooting contest. The contest is open to boy members of the school, and most basketball enthusiasts enter. A high degree of accuracy is naturally attained by the winner.

The publication of Leo High School is a pamphlet printed on various occasions, which is called the Bulletin. The paper contains bits of gossip, news, and literary contributions from members of both the grade and high school. Important announcements and statements are also made in this paper.

Leo High School represents the town of Leo proper, and also the town of Grabill. Both communities are strong in their support of the Lions, and many of the townsfolk will probably accompany the team here. Leo is in turn proud to represent a clean and wholesome rural community.

Laughs From Leo

Dick Bucher, a handsome varsity guard at Leo, is the school cutup. His nickname is Bessie, and he is "kinda hata way" inclined about Virginia Stucky.

Bill Bender, a varsity forward, was known as the bashful boy in Leo, until Alberta Parsons made him lose all his bashfulness. Three cheers for Alberta.

Elmer "Gris" Griswold is the varsity center on the Lions. He happens to be the tallest man on the team, and it seems his little heart beat is Frieda Maroff.

Franklin Warner, another varsity forward, is the grocery man's son. His dad owns the largest building in town and he had no trouble in finding time between clerking in his dad's store and playing varsity basketball for Kate Surfus. His sister teaches in the Leo High School and Pete Bojrab thinks she is the top. Franklin's nickname is "Jiggs."

Verdon Stucky, another varsity center, is the only man who uses good judgment off the basketball floor. Why, you ask. Well, we will tell you why, because he is a woman hater.

Virgil Ely, a varsity guard, runs a close second to Dick Bucher for the title of the school cutup. His nickname is Buck, and he froze his ear coming to school several weeks ago. His little Lambie Pie is Helen Garman.

Some of the other romancers in the Lions' Den are Irvin Mensky and Jane Moss, Dale Stucky and Mildred Hartel, Kenny Souder and Gerry Bartle, Deile Halter and Georgie Maxfield.

Ike: "Is it easy to kiss Mamie?"
Mike: "Just like falling off a log."
Ike: "How did you get that black eye?"
Mike: "Falling off a log."

Leo Proud Of Team And Hopes It Comes Through With Title

"Scholastic attainment, clean sportsmanship, clean living and training, and a superior ball club for a school of our size are some of the things the Lions excel in." These are the words of H. T. Slaton, principal of Leo High School. He also states that, "Our team has been a good advertisement to our school and community and we are proud of them and expect them to make a good showing in the sectional tourney."

Here are some opinions of Leo High School students on the coming tournament:

William Klopfenstein claims that, "Since the first few games, the team has improved greatly. They should come through in great style."

"If they keep up the good work they'll beat even the Fort Wayne schools," are the words of Raymond Brooks, a former basketballer himself, before he became ill.

Martha Shaffer backs up the principal's words with these—"I hope we retain the headlines in the sectional tournament and the team keeps up their record of good sportsmanship."

Jess Gerig seems to think that, "From all indications the boys will sure come through."

"The team showed good sportsmanship this year and I think this helped them win," says Frieda Maroff, a prominent Lion.

Pete Bojrab, speaking from the den of the Lions, is not quite so sure when he says, "They may not win the tournament but they'll make a good showing."

Eloise Klopfenstein gets behind the team with these words, "The team has played exceptionally good ball and I hope they win the tournament."

All of which lead us to believe the Lions are very optimistic and we want to wish them luck. Even the coach, Hubert G. Davis, says that this year's team is the finest in nine years and that he is eager to beat a Fort Wayne team.

Leo's Great Season

Girl Yell Leaders Pep Up Leo Lions

Virginia Stucky And Alberta Parsons To Appear At Tourney In New Outfits

"One, two, three, four, five, six, seven; "All good people go to heaven, "And when they get there they will yell, "Leo Lions sure are swell."

No, this is not a counting bee nor a song; this is one of the new yells which the Leo Lions' two girl cheer leaders, Virginia Stucky and Alberta Parsons, have introduced. When it comes to pep these girls have it because, as one loyal Leo Booster said, "These girls surely have the pep and it's their yells that keeps the team fighting when their backs are to the wall."

Both girls are very good looking and with the new yell leading outfits, which consist of purple slacks, white sweaters, and white shirts, are the inspiration of every Leo Booster. Alberta Parson said, "I hope we keep up our good record, and I am mighty proud to be cheerleader of such a grand team."

The Leo Lions Are Composed Of The Following
	Position	Age	Wgt.	Hgt.	No.
Dick Bucher	Forward	17	145	6-11	4
Elmer Griswold	Center	19	175	6-0	8

such a grand team."

Virginia Stucky said, "We had a swell year and if we get a good draw in the tournament—Watch out Fort Wayne!"

Leo Coach Played With State Champs

Hubert G. Davis Was Member Of Wonder Five; Has Good Team

For the past three years, all successful in regard to athletics, the Leo Lions have been efficiently coached by Mr. Hubert G. Davis. Though this is Mr. Davis' third year at Leo, he has had nine years of varsity coaching experience, the nine years comprising a successful record of which he is justly proud. While at Leo he initiated a new athletic system and conducts the functions of his teams as large city teams are. He has a well equipped athletic office and training room to add to the recently installed gymnasium improvements.

Mr. Davis started his athletic experience by attending Franklin High School, where he was active in basketball and track. He was for two years, a member of Franklin's famed Wonder Five, a team that won the state championship three consecutive years. Due to his pronounced activity in Indiana high school sports, he made acquaintances all over the state. He is well known in coaching circles.

Following his graduation from Franklin, he attended Hanover College, which is located in southern Indiana, overlooking the Ohio River. Here he was also active in varsity athletics, playing basketball, baseball, and track. He also played semi-professional basketball before beginning to coach high school squads.

Mr. Davis has also been much in demand as a sports official. He has officiated or refereed for twelve years, and still blows the whistle at basketball fracas in various towns around Fort Wayne. At Leo, he has had much success with his teams, and he considers this year's version of the Lions the best all-around squad he has ever coached. They have had a fine season, and he is justly proud of them.

Mr. Davis resides with his family in Leo near the high school. He was very cordial to your correspondent, and his manner is truly indicative of the school spirit and athletic success of Leo's 1936 Lion squad.

And I, pride of the nation and idol of my people, rule our vast domain. Sire, I spring from a race of conquerors and kings. Bulldog Battlers

Coach Paul White has been leading New Haven's cagers for many years. He played on the Franklin Wonder Five and Fort Wayne Hoosiers of the National Basketball League. He also referees for Fort Wayne fives. Both as a principal and hardwood mentor, he is well liked by all New Havenites.

"Doug" Hartman, diminutive junior cager, is smaller of stature than any other of the Bulldogs. However, his lack of height is made up for by his scrap. "Doug" plays forward and has totaled 117 points during the current campaign. Hartman is only 5 feet 5 and weighs 140 pounds.

Hilmer Drayer, playing his final year, has proved tough during the present season by scoring a total of 126 points to head the Bulldogs scoring column. Drayer proved to be a consistent scorer and also plays well on defense. He scales 5 feet 10 and tips the scales at 145 pounds.

Paul Armstrong, Bulldog pivot man, is the most experienced cager of the entire squad. Although he is no relation to Central's Paul Armstrong, he is a brother of Scott Armstrong, one of the best centers known in basketball. "Army" is a consistent scorer, tabulating 112 points. "Army" is 6 feet 3 and weighs 185 pounds. This is his last year.

"Cooney" Parks, senior, is the mainstay of New Haven's defense. "Cooney" is playing his third year, and will probably have a younger brother to take the place he will vacate. He weighs 135 pounds and is 5 feet 7 inches tall.

"Tons" Lake, a junior, is playing his initial year on the varsity, but has done considerable scoring this year. Lake is 5 feet 7 inches and compels the scales to balance at 150.

"Specs" Bauserman, another senior, is finding his second roost on the New Haven roster. Bauserman is 5 feet 8 and weighs in at 150 pounds.

"Slim" Ladig is playing his last year for the Purple and Gold. Slim is 5 feet 11 inches and tips the scales at 146 pounds.

"Towhead" Dunelt is a freshman and has been playing the majority of the year on the "seconds." He handles himself well and is the most promising player New Haven has owned in a long time. He is 5 feet 8 and weighs 145 pounds.

Lefty Schrock, sophomore, also has been recently elevated to the Bulldog varsity. He is 5 feet 9, and weighs 138 pounds.

"Arty" Arter, sophomore, is also a newcomer to the varsity. He is 5 feet 9 and weighs 143. He has been developing fast and will be battling for a center post on next year's five.

"Tubby" Kerr, student manager, is a valuable man to have around. He assists Coach White and helps the team. He is also a senior.

New Haven Gym Will Be Built Soon

Electric Scoreboard Is Installed; Capacity Of Old Gym Was Eight Hundred

New Haven's present gymnasium, now adjoining the school building, will soon be discarded as the gymnasium is to be constructed in the near future. The new gymnasium will resemble Fort Wayne Central's "Bengal Lair."

The gym now used by New Haven is larger than nearly any other country school gymnasium, but New Haven fans overflow the seating capacity, necessitating the larger gym. The dressing rooms for visiting teams will also be improved in the new gymnasium.

The present gym seats about eight hundred. It is sixty feet long, but does not have enough room behind the baskets to enable a player to follow under after his shot. The playing floor is twenty-five feet wide, but the line borders on the seats, hampering the player who attempts to take the ball out of bounds.

The most commendable features about the present gym are, namely, the well built playing floor, and the newly installed electric score boards presented by the present graduating class of 1936.

The gym used this year was built by the school board. Although nothing definite has been arranged for the present gym, it will probably be used for sports other than varsity basketball.

Activity, preparatory work covering the units of work prescribed for entrance to Lake Forest College, recommendation of the head of the preparatory school and three responsible persons. Applications must be received by April 1, 1936.

The Bard scholarships are awarded on the basis of ability. All applications should be sent to the committee on scholarships.

The prize fellowships from Harvard are being offered to young men of outstanding ability and promise in order to get them to go to Harvard. They will be offered to incoming freshmen now residing and attending school in the states of Ohio, Indiana, Illinois, Michigan, Wisconsin, Mississippi, Iowa, Missouri, Kentucky, and Tennessee. These fellowships will carry a stipend sufficiently large to meet all the student's essential college expenses.

Any other information that might be desired concerning these scholarships may be found in the bulletins in the front hall, or obtained from Mr. R. Nelson Snider in the office.

Bulldogs', Archers' Mentors Played On Franklin Team

New Haven's basketball coach and principal, Mr. Paul White, has mixed all types of basketball experience in his repertoire. Along with coaching Mr. White does a lot of refereeing for local fives, and he has also played on two of the strongest quintets in the United States.

Coach White is a graduate of Franklin High School, where he played on two state high school championship teams. During his two years on the Franklin Wonder Five, Mr. White played with Burl Friddle, South Side mentor, and Hubert Davis, Leo tutor.

After graduating from Franklin he attended DePauw University. At DePauw White played on the varsity with Murray Mendenhall, Central coach, and Mark Bills, former North Side mentor.

After graduating from scholastic basketball circles, White performed on Fort Wayne's Hoosiers of the American League, existing at that time.

Mr. White became a member of the New Haven faculty in 1927. During his stay at New Haven he coached numerous county champions.

This year he has a small team in both height and weight, but his team has proved tough to every strong team they have encountered, but have failed to possess that final drive needed.

Whenever his duties permit Mr. White referees for local high school quintets.

New Haven Players Are Experienced

After much deliberation Coach Paul White has picked ten of the netters whom he believes will be his best performers in the sectional tournament. It is believed that this lineup, after making such a good showing against Berne recently, will prove to be an important factor in the outcome of the tournament. Most of these players are seniors or juniors and have quite a bit of experience on the hardwood. The following is a description of each player that was entered:

	Class	No.	Height	Weight	Age
Hartman	Junior	2	5-5	140	17
Drayer	Senior	3	5-10	145	19
Armstrong	Senior	11	6-3	185	17
Parks	Senior	0	5-7	135	17
Lake	Junior	7	5-7	150	16
Bauserman	Senior	6	5-8	150	17
Ladig	Senior	8	6-11	146	18
Dienelt	Freshman	4	5-8	145	14
Schrock	Sophomore	1	5-9	138	16
Arter	Sophomore	5	5-9	143	16

To Be New Home Of New Haven Bulldogs

As soon as weather permits construction work will start on the New Haven gymnasium. The new structure will have a standard playing floor and will house 2,600 fans. The building will be constructed at a cost of $50,000.

Carnegie Tech Awards Freshman Scholarships

The Carnegie Institute of Technology has announced its freshman scholarships for 1936-1937. Each one totals one thousand dollars ($250 each year for four years) and is awarded annually outside the Western Pennsylvania area to candidates of exceptional ability as revealed by the former high school record and the recommendation of the principal.

Those interested in the scholarship should write to the Examiner, Carnegie Institute of Technology, Pittsburgh, Pennsylvania.

There are three colleges, the College of Engineering, Margaret Morrison Carnegie College, and the College of Fine Arts.

New Haven Athletics Fill Financial Losses

As all finances have suffered during the depression, so have the New Haven athletic finances, but they have stood up very well considering what they have had to go through. The basketball team is very well equipped, but the physical education department could stand more.

The ten boys on the sectional squad are all on the softball team that plays in the fall.

Bulldog Bites

Always one hundred percent behind their team is a characteristic that has always been adhered to by the New Haven High School students. When the students were asked to comment on their team, in respect to the coming tournament, they all promptly replied that they have high hopes for their team emerging victorious. The following are comments on the Bulldog netters by students of that school:

Jean Krueck—Everyone is quite optimistic in New Haven as to who will win the tournament. They didn't start out so well this year, but lately we have all noticed the sudden improvement in them. It seems that the good ole' Bulldogs always rally at the round-up and we are hoping for the best.

Violet Burlew—Our good old school colors will fly at the tournament—that is our ambition. Our team has had sort of a slow year but are now dashing for the top.

Maala Sisson—The spirit of everyone in New Haven is really keyed up because we all want them to win. Our team has improved of late and I think New Haven's Bulldogs have a chance to go on to victory.

H. Briadi—New Haven should come out of its slump in time to win the sectional.

H. Drayer—After the showing made against Berne we should go quite a ways if we get any kind of a break.

B. Sweeney—Since we gave Berne such a surprise, I think we will have a very good showing in the tournament.

F. Guardot—After getting some bad breaks during the first of the season the Bulldogs are coming back strong and have a fine chance of winning the tourney.

A. Rousell—I think that we have the best team of the sectional. After the last few thrilling games I think that we can take anything—and how! (Rousell is the senior class president.)

Roger McDonald—We have a fast, light team. We lost most of our games by close margins and we have had a tough schedule. I expect them to get rather far in the sectional.

Yellow Jackets Enter Sectional Tourney As Dark Horse

Decatur Has Average Season Due To Illness

Certain Members Of Varsity Ill During Season; Reason For Mediocre Success.

Yellow Jackets Win 9 of 16 Played

Only Lost One Man From Varsity Squad Of Last Year

Decatur's Yellow Jackets under the tutelage of Hugh Andrews, due to incessant illness of members on the varsity roster, have harbored a mediocre season during the 1935-36 hardwood campaign, chalking up nine wins while receiving seven setbacks (up to January 21.) Illness seems to enjoy flirting with the players and has taken its toll many times during the current campaign.

Decatur started the present campaign with a veteran team, losing only Harold Blythe from last year's squad. The Yellow Jackets started impressively downing New Haven, Winamac, Leporte, and Wabash, respectively. Then a slump took its course, Decatur losing to North Side, Berne, and Bluffton, using players who were originally expected to warm the bench, the Jackets' slump enabled the Andrews men to work out an evenly balanced team, which undoubtedly makes Decatur the "tourney darkhorse."

Pennville, Auburn, and South Side fell before Andrews' charges, but Fort Wayne Central, Columbia City, Bluffton, and Hartford City measured the Jacketville men. Since then, Decatur dropped Winchester and Garrett, completing the games up to the time this article goes to press.

Account of the games played, as follows:

- Decatur 22, New Haven 21.
- Decatur 33, Winamac 15.
- Decatur 28, Laporte 26.
- Decatur 23, Wabash 22.
- Decatur 23, North Side 31.
- Decatur 16, Berne 37.
- Decatur 32, Bluffton 33.
- Decatur 41, Pennville 30.
- Decatur 47, Auburn 34.
- Decatur 25, South Side 22.
- Decatur 25, Central 34.
- Decatur 35, Columbia City 52.
- Decatur 25, Bluffton 32.
- Decatur 31, Hartford City 42.
- Decatur 34, Winchester 15.
- Decatur 26, Garrett 23.

Decatur Personalities

Junior Barker

Barker is playing his second year on the varsity squad. He is a senior and has proven to be a capable ball handler, as well as an excellent shot. He is five feet eleven inches in height and weighs 165 pounds. His prowess on the gridiron was a great asset to the Decatur squad, and his playing at the left tackle position proved a feature in many of the Jackets' games. Barker is known as "Wolf Wolf" by his teammates.

Ralph Peterson

Peterson has had three years' experience in basketball and is the butt of all his teammates' jokes. He goes by the very precious name of "Precious." He is a senior, five feet ten inches in height and weighs 165 pounds. He handles the ball well and has proved to be one of the scoring mainstays of his team this year.

Dale Meyers

Meyers is one of the larger boys on the Decatur quintet this year. He is six feet one inch in height and weighs 175 pounds. His size has been helpful to the Jackets, and he has offered plenty of opposition to his opponents all season. He is a senior and has had two years' experience. He also played left guard on the varsity grid team and is known as "Tubby."

Leroy Huffman

Huffman is one of the smaller men on the Decatur squad and has been appropriately nicknamed "Baby Leroy." Leroy is only five feet nine inches tall and weighs a mere 145 pounds. He is very fast, a capable ball handler, and an exceptional shot. He is playing his second year on the varsity squad and is a senior. His stellar playing and scoring will be sadly missed by next year's team.

Ralph Ritter

Ritter is playing his first and last year on the varsity. He is a senior, five feet nine inches in height and weighs 165 pounds. He was an excellent utility man last year and worked his way up to a varsity position this season. He has not been one of the standout players on the Yellow Jacket quintet this year, but his steady playing will be sadly missed next year.

Decatur Has Grid Schedule Carded

Eight Games, Including Four Fort Wayne Games, Scheduled For 1936

Decatur's Yellow Jackets have already scheduled their grid tilts for the 1936 football season. The Yellow Jackets will play eight contests, including the four Fort Wayne teams. South Side will again be an opponent of the jackets after an interval of one year, and the Muncie Bearcats have been dropped from the schedule. Other Decatur opponents will be Bluffton, Auburn, Portland, and Columbia City. Auburn, North Side, and Central Catholic will be out-of-town tilts for the Jackets, while the remaining games will be played at the Worthman field.

The Yellow Jackets compiled an enviable football record during the 1935 grid season. The Purple and Gold was defeated only twice and was tied in one tilt, scoring wins in the others. Muncie, 1934 state champs, dropped the Jackets in a close game, 7 to 0, and the Central Tigers gave them a 29 to 0 trimming. Central Catholic held them to a scoreless tie in an early season game. The Yellow Jackets were undefeated in conference competition and won the N. E. I. C. championship for the second straight year. The Central game was a non-conference engagement.

Decatur's 1936 football schedule is as follows:

- September 18—Bluffton, here.
- September 26—Auburn, there.
- October 2—Central, here.
- October 10—Portland, here.
- October 16—North Side, there.
- October 21—Columbia City, there.
- October 31—South Side, here.
- November 6—C. Catholic, there.

Big 4 Tennis Meet May Be Planned

Huntington, Bluffton, Decatur, And Central Favored To Compose Tourney

Court Conditions Favorable

Attempts to formulate a Big Four Tennis Tournament involving four of the supposedly strongest high school tennis teams in this section will probably be started in the near future.

Last year the efforts fell through, but was commended by the coaches involved. Raymond Martin, Huntington coach, advocating the plans, stated that the net teams favored to compose the tourney are Huntington, Bluffton, Decatur, and Fort Wayne Central.

The aforementioned teams consistently stack well up in their respective match standings, and the latter three participate in the Northeastern Indiana Conference meet. Heated rivalry has always existed in the N. E. I. C. tourney with Central holding singles championship the last three years, and doubles championship for the last two years.

Huntington's schedule for the coming season appears to be the toughest of the four, but they have all of their players returning. The Huntington racketeers reported for practice this week.

Bluffton also has their experienced netters returning for action and will undoubtedly prove tough. The Decatur prospects are not so bright, but have a few experienced players to build around. Fort Wayne Central should have a formidable club, having the majority of their netters back.

Playing conditions for the tournament are very favorable despite the early season, necessitated by school vacation. Both Huntington and Decatur possess asphalt tennis courts, which are playable regardless of the weather. One of the later mentioned two schools would undoubtedly be host for the probable tournament.

Pranks By Upper Classmen Are Mere Routine To Plebe

"To instill discipline and high sense of honor; To develop the powers of analysis so that the mind may reason to a logical conclusion; To bring its graduates into the corps of officers properly equipped to enter upon the duties of the grade in which they may be commissioned," such is the mission of the United States Military Academy at West Point. The academy has its serious side as well as its humorous side. The humorous side is enjoyed by the upperclassmen; it's the plebe who suffers.

Your scribe will endeavor to give you the private (?) life of a plebe whom we shall call Smith. After Smith has received his bedding, uniforms, etc., he is assigned to a room in one of the barracks. Gathering his belongings, Smith starts for his room. Upon reaching the court yard Smith breaks into a run. "Nerts," say a couple of upperclassmen, "some one's tipped him off." Yes, Smith's been tipped off that he's to run every place he goes out side of his room for three weeks.

Now where did that plebe get to? Oh, there he is going into the dining room. That's right Smith, keep your eyes on your plate. Cer-r-r-ash! Up pops Smith's head and he sees a glass hurtling through the air towards him. Boy, he just caught it. "Hey beast," (that's Cadet slang meaning a new Cadet) yells an upperclassman, "put some water in that glass." A few minutes of silence. "You," growls a "Kaydet" pointing to Smith. "Pass the 'growley' (catsup to you). Pass the 'sammy' (syrup to you)," says another "Kaydet." Careful inspection of Smith's food will show that he's eaten just two bites.

That's right, start running just as soon as you get out of the mess hall. Ops, right into an upperclassman. "Say, plebe," says the upperclassman, "what time is it?" "Sir, I am deeply embarrassed and

New Medical Building Proposed For Indiana

The board of trustees of Indiana University will meet at Indianapolis next Tuesday to consider revised plans for a proposed new $471,000 medical building on the university campus there.

Dr. B. D. Meyers, dean of the medical school, has said that bids on the excavation work will be received by the board Tuesday.

The announcement of this new addition will be of great interest to the students of South Side, as many of those in the June graduating class will probably receive benefits from the change.

Decatur's Mentor

Coach Hugh Andrews

Coach Hugh Andrews is completing his initial year as head coach of basketball at Decatur High School, succeeding Herb Curtis who evacuated the Decatur position to that of principal at Southport, Indiana.

Mr. Andrews received his prep school training at Decatur and then attended Franklin College at Franklin, Indiana, playing basketball and football at Decatur in 1924-25, and Franklin in 1928-29.

Taking over Jacketville football reins in 1934-35, Andrews coached the football teams to N. E. I. C. championships for two years. So far this year the hardwood aggregation has failed to live up to pre-season expectations, but this is generally accredited to illness preventing the regulars to participate in all the games.

Mathematics and physical education are also on Hugh's list of activities, teaching physical education in the morning sessions, and mathematics in the afternoon. On Tuesday and Wednesday evenings, he also devotes his time to intramural basketball.

Discussion Features Meeting

Mr. Russell Earl, one of the advisers of the Leaders' Club will further his discussion on vocational guidance on Sunday, March 1, at 7:00 o'clock, at the Plymouth Congregational Church.

All high school students throughout the city are cordially invited to attend any of the meetings.

Decatur Gym Very Valuable To Comet Team

Building Measure 75 By 100 Feet And Playing Floor Alone Measures 49 By 69.

Almost As Large As Fort Wayne's

All Athletic Equipment Is Paid For By Gate Receipts Since 1923

Decatur has an advantage over many of the other out-of-town schools who are competing in the Fort Wayne sectional, because of the fact that it has a very modern gymnasium. It is a valuable asset to any team to be able to practice in a well-equipped gym.

The gym building measure 75 by 100 feet, and the playing floor alone, 49 by 69. The playing floor is nearly as large as those of North Side and South Side, but the seating capacity is much smaller.

Showers and dressing rooms are directly connected to the gym, and bleachers are on all four sides with a balcony, providing a seating capacity for approximately 900 persons. The gym is nearly always filled to capacity at a Yellow Jacket game, the lack of seating being the only disadvantage of the gym.

The gym has been equipped with modern basketball facilities. The baskets have the modern type of glass backboards, and the score board greatly resembles those of the city schools. The ceiling is fairly high but proves to be a hindrance to a player who arches the ball high when shooting. Often the ball strikes the steel girders which support the roof of the gym.

There are regular boys' and girls' gym classes held each day under the supervision of capable instructors. The gym classes are made up of both grade and high school pupils.

After the issue and sale of bonds, the gym was built as an addition to the high school building in 1923. All the athletic equipment, such as balls, medicines, suits, and other equipment are paid by the gate receipts.

Arcola Has Hopes For Best Despite Bad Seasonal Record

Arcola Girls Take County Crown Again

Net Squad Has Lost Only Two Games In Four Years

Ruth Berghorn Is Coach

The girls' basketball team of Arcola is the best girls' team in the county. Twelve of the best girl basketball players that the school can produce, compose the team.

Mrs. Ruth Berghorn, who coaches the girls, was a graduate of Arcola in '27. Since then she has taught at Arcola for five years, teaching home economics, biology, and physical education, besides her excellent work as coach of the girls' team.

The girls regularly play two-court basketball for games within the county; for games that they have scheduled out of the county, they play a three-court game.

The girls have lost only two games in four years. They have won the county championship for the past four years, and have a plaque for each year in each corner of their gymnasium. The girls play regularly scheduled games and usually play before a good crowd that thinks girls' basketball is as interesting and as exciting as the boys' varsity games.

They have gained permanent possession of the Walke Trophy.

Arcola Girl Champs Lose Seven Players Due To Graduation

The Arcola Girls' Champs of Allen County, lose seven of their girls by graduation this year. The girls were the county champs for the last four years.

The seniors who will receive sweaters are: Evelyn Prince, forward, four stripes and captain; Viva Hogan, guard, four stripes; Edith Maley, guard, four stripes; Agnes Corat, forward, four stripes; Laura Clifford, forward, four stripes; Venona DeWitt, forward, three stripes; and Helen Minich, guard, two stripes.

Prince made 532 points and DeWitt 177 points during the season.

The coach, Mrs. Berghorn, has good material for next year and we wish her a lot of success.

Evelyn Prince, Tall Forward, Big Help To Girls Of Arcola

Much of the success of Arcola's girl basketball team is probably due to the high scoring ability of Evelyn Prince, who plays forward on the girls' team. Evelyn is about six feet tall and weighs about 155 pounds. She has played on the girls' varsity team for four years, and has never failed to be high point girl for the squad. In ten games she made 276 points, and during the county tournament she made 34 points in the first game and 38 points in the second game. Evelyn is a senior this year, and the team will suffer a great loss when she graduates this May. In the entire season she has made over 500 points. When asked what she thought of the varsity boys' chances in the tournament this year, she would only say that they would try their best.

They're Going Places

Below is a summary of the games played this season by the Arcola girls. The scores are also given:

- Arcola 41, Coesse 16.

Arcola Possesses Best County Gym

Playing Floor Is Biggest With Exception Of City High Schools

Used In Many Activities

Arcola boasts the best gym in Allen County except, of course, the Fort Wayne gyms. It is what is known as a community gym. The actual playing floor is 92 feet long and 44 feet 8 inches wide. It has a seating capacity of 200, but on an average of 300 people attend each game.

The gym meets with many uses. Besides the basketball played in it there are gym classes of the high school as well as the lower grades which are also held in the gymnasium. P.T. A. and Farm Bureau meetings, band concerts, and commencement exercises are a few more of the activities held in the gym.

At one end of the playing floor is a fairly good sized stage. This stage is used in giving plays and also provides seating space at the basketball games.

A new scoreboard has just been installed in the gym. It is of about standard size, is black, and is operated from the stage. This scoreboard is of the finest quality, costing $95.

Arcola Girls Show Unusual Prowess In Winning Games

The team four years ago which comprised of Strombeck, Gerding, A. Kieler, K. Sinnigen, C. Sinnigen, M. Kieler, Smith, Michel, Schock, Clifford, Maley, and Prince won the first Allen County Championship title for our school.

In the 1932-1933 basketball season the girls won 19 games out of 20, losing to Harlan by 3 points. Later in the year they triumphed over Harlan 40 to 22. Strombeck, Gerding, and A. Kieler were lost by graduation, and Mitchell and Smith moved away.

In 1933-34 those girls were replaced by V. DeWitt, Hagan, H. Minich, M. Sinnigen, and Corbat. This year the team met again with but one defeat, namely to Hoagland by one point. At the tournament the girls received permanent possession of the Allen County Girls' Basketball Trophy. Mrs. Robin coached the girls these two years and was very successful. The girls lost the Sinnigen twins by graduation this year.

In 1934-35 the girls met with Mrs. Berghorn, who replaced Mrs. Robbins. This year the girls had a perfect record. Lamie, Berberich, and DeWitt replaced the graduates. The girls lost Kieler and Schock by graduation. A trophy was presented by Mr. Otto Greener, trustee of Lake Township, for the excellent record that the girls had attained.

During 1935-36 the Arcola champions have kept up their speed, losing one game. Arcola lost to Elmhurst by a close margin of 39-41 on the latter's court, but came back in the recent county tourney to win over them, which crowned the Arcola Girls as Allen County champions for the fourth consecutive year.

Mrs. Ruth Berghorn Coach, Former Grad

Mrs. Ruth Berghorn, girls' coach of the Arcola Champs, is an Arcola High School graduate of the class of 1927. She has taught here five years. The last two years she has coached the 1935 and the 1936 Allen County champions.

The subjects taught by Mrs. Berghorn include biology, home economics, health, Latin, and physical training. She takes much interest in coaching the girls and gives them sound advice.

Arcola Girls Can Hold Own Against Any Champion Team

Evelyn Prince, a senior, commonly known as "Princy" has been a member of the squad for four consecutive years. She has played in the position of forward since her freshman year. She has been active in basketball since entering the fifth grade where she was a member of the grade team. During the recent county tournament "Princy" scored a total of 80 points; her loss will be keenly felt.

Venona DeWitt, well-known as "Nonny," plays a hard, snappy game on the hardwood as the partner of "Princy." "Nonny," starting with the squad during her sophomore year, has held the forward position for the last two years. She has done much to help win the championship banners and will be missed greatly.

Edith Maley, otherwise known as "Edie," is a guard who has done much to help pile up that score to put Arcola in the lead. "Edie" has weight, height and speed, and forwards find it hard to keep pace with her. She has been with Arcola for four years. "Edie" has been a regular this last year and it will be none too easy to fill her place.

Mary Etta Sinnigen, also a team guard. "Giggles" has weight and height and shows great enthusiasm for retaining that title next year. "Giggles" is a junior and is all set for a glorious next year.

Viva Hagan, another senior, plays both side center or guard. "Fifi" is small, but mighty and is a "whiz" at breaking up opponents' team play. She will be missed greatly next year. She has played four years.

Reading Ability Undeveloped

Tests given recently to pupils of the West Seattle High School revealed that many of the students have not developed their reading ability to their grade level.

Arcola Principal, Central Graduate

Mr. M. J. Cook Is Also Active In Debating And Riflery

M. J. Cook, now completing his ninth year as principal of Arcola High School, is a very active booster of basketball and the Rifle Club team at his school.

Mr. Cook is an active debater. He was a member of the varsity debate team and the Forensic fraternity at Purdue. He also belonged to the Honorary Educational Fraternity at Indiana.

Mr. Cook is a graduate of Central High School in Fort Wayne, and has had teaching experience at the Center and Arcola schools in Lake Township. He was graduated from Purdue in 1922, where he received his Bachelor of Science degree. In 1930 he received his Master's degree from Indiana University.

Being very much interested in rifle clubs, Mr. Cook organized one at the Arcola School in 1929, and has since been its sponsor. The Rifle team has won two consecutive Allen County championships.

At present Mr. Cook is a member of the state championship rifle team and has been a member of the state pistol team. He was president of the Fort Wayne Rifle and Revolver Club.

In addition to his activeness in the Rifle Club, he teaches English and is newspaper adviser of the Arcola School monthly, Red Pepper.

Scholarships Offered For Lens Grinders

Rochester Institute of Applied Optics offers two scholarships each year, each for five hundred dollars annually for four years, to students entering the Rochester Institute of Applied Optics.

The courses offer an opportunity for thorough training in geometrical optics, photographic optics, physical optics, physiological optics, and mechanical design of optical instruments. These courses lead to the Bachelor of Arts degree with a major in optics. The course's objective is thorough preparation for industrial and other positions in which a knowledge of the theory and application of optics is essential. To assure individual supervision, the number admitted to the school is small.

The awards are based on scholastic attainment and superior qualifications of character and personality. Applicants should show some promise of future success in physics and mathematics. They should also be sure of obtaining between four and five hundred dollars from other sources.

Applications must be sent to Mr. Charles Dalton, Field Secretary of the University of Rochester, by April 1, 1936.

Detailed information may be secured by writing to the Acting Director of the Institute, Russell Wilkens, Rochester, New York.

Dr. Eddy Speaks At Purdue

Dr. Sherwood Eddy will speak to the students of Purdue University in Elgin Fowler Hall Monday evening, March 2, at 8 o'clock. His subject will be, "Dare We Be Christians?"

Father: "Come, Johnny, supper's ready."
Son: "I hain't hungry."
Father: "Don't say hain't, where is your grammar?"
Son: "I thought she was with grandpa."

Everett Teal Net Coach At Arcola

Attended Ball State College And Won His Letter In Athletics

Coach Everett A. Teal is the present Arcola net mentor. This season is his fourth in the coaching business, having coached three years at Ridgville High School before coming to Arcola where he has been located for the past season.

Coach Teal attended the McCordville High School in Indiana, where he participated in four years of basketball and won his letter. He went to the Ball State College where he continued his net work only one season, not making enough points for a letter. He was a Ball State Letterman, however, as he was first string tackle on the grid squad.

In addition to his coaching job he plays an important part in the academic division of the school. He teaches commerce, industrial arts, and boys' physical education. At Ball State College he was a member of the Commerce Club and Industrial Arts Club which help serve as a background for teaching.

Mr. Teal is a large, well-built man and looks like a typical football lineman. He is good looking and good natured. He is popular with the players, having a way about him that makes the fellows want to please him, and is therefore one of the best coaches Arcola has ever had. Concerning his view on his team's tournament chances, he feels that, though not as tough as the Fort Wayne teams, his team will give any county team a real scrap.

Arcola Has Best School In County

Accommodates Elementary Students As Well As Regular High School Pupils

Arcola possess one of the best schools in the county. This school is "The Lake Township School." It accommodates the elementary students as well as the high school students. In 1926, because of the need for more school room, an addition was built containing three rooms and a gymnasium. The students have founded a Rifle Club, which is one of the better rifle teams in the county. This team is under the direction of M. J. Cook, the principal, who is very interested in rifle teams.

The school publishes a monthly paper which is called the "Red Pepper." Frank Caston, a popular basketball player, is editor of this publication. There are eight faculty members in the school at this time, and four of these are elementary teachers.

Arcola Squad Triumphs In Four Games

Poor Season Likely Due To Over Anxiousness And Inexperience Of Team.

Play Twenty-One Games With Seventeen Losses

Many Of Battles Were Decided By A Matter Of Only Few Points Wrong Way

Arcola's band of Greyhounds were defeated seventeen out of twenty-one games they played this season. The losses are probably due to the players' being over anxious and due to their inexperience.

Coach Teal has not been able to find the five that play best together; however, he expects to have his best team in excellent condition for the tourney. With a few breaks it is expected that the Greyhounds will be one of the outstanding teams of the tourney. The following is the Greyhounds' season record:

Hoagland, County Champs, Chalks Up Excellent Record

Wildcats Win Sixteen Out Of 18 Games

Defeated Elmhurst, Defending Champions, In Allen County Title Tourney.

Quintet Has Scored 29 Points Per Game

Men Are Small But Dead On Shots; Reserve Material Looks Promising For 1937

Hoagland High School is a school of only one hundred students but has a basketball record that has not been equalled by many of the teams in the county. The Wildcats are the county champs for the 1935-36 season, winning by virtue of an upset over the defending champions, Elmhurst.

Richard Meyer is the only boy back from last year. He has three years of varsity competition behind him. He has been doing much of the Blue and White's scoring, holding the honor of making the most of the points of the season.

The Wildcats have had a very successful season, winning sixteen of their eighteen games played up to February 21. The Hoagland Wildcats have piled up a naverage of 29 points on all of their opponents, whereas their opponents put the leather through the hoop to the tune of only twenty points per game.

Kelro Whiteman states that the team this year is a group of much faster, clever, and better ball handlers than any team in the vicinity. The team, although unusually small, plays a game that can and should be considered by all the coaches in the section. There is no man on the quintet that reaches the height of six feet. All of the boys on the team have ben tested and found true under strain. They are "dead" on all kinds of angle shots at the hoop, which accounts for some of the high scores that they have run up in their more than successful season.

Mr. Kelro Whiteman is the coach of the county champs and also serves in the capacity of principal of the combined high school and grade school. Mr. Whiteman is a graduate of Ball State and has a Masters Degree at the University of Indiana. He has twelve years of coaching experience. Eight of these years have been at his present job. He is assisted very ably by Mr. John Reynolds, who is a graduate of Depauw. He has been with the Hoagland school only one year but has already an excellent record. The reserve team, which is under his supervision, has won all but two of its games. The boys on this team show fine prospects; and if they stick to basketball they will be excellent players next year. Reynolds and Whiteman expect much from these boys next year.

Hoagland in the County Tournament showed a fine brand of ball to a good advantage. They played heads-up ball throughout the tourney's entirety, and took Elmhurst in the finals. The game with New Haven produced the biggest thrill when Meyer put two foul shots through the hoop in the final seconds of play.

National Institute To Give Awards

Work On Journalism, Debating, Dramatics To Be Given At Northwestern During Summer

High school students taking journalism, debating, or dramatics, who are outstanding in their work, will be eligible to compete for one of the seventy-five full-tuition scholarships, totaling $3,750, which will be made by the National Institute for High School Students, to be held at Northwestern University June 20 to July 31. Only junior and senior boys and girls who are in the upper fourth of their class may compete.

The Institute has been held for the past five years and has been attended by students from forty-four states. It is under the joint direction of the School of Speech and the Medill School of Journalism of Northwestern University. The classes are taught by members of the faculties of both schools, and by a number of visiting teachers and professional men.

Theory and practice will be combined in all the courses. Journalism students will work on the summer editions of the "Daily Northwestern" in addition to their classes in copyreading, news and sports reporting, and editorial and feature writing. The debaters and dramatists will take part in plays and debates and will build and design stages and scenery, in addition to their studies in play-production, stagecraft, diction, acting, and make-up. During the semester, a few days will be devoted to trips to publishing plants, theatres, broadcasting stations, museums, and concerts in Chicago and vicinity.

Students will live at the university under the supervision of instructors. Three scholarships, each worth $200, will be awarded to students whose work has been meritorious during the summer.

Hoagland High School Hopes To Get A New Gym In A Few Years

A person visiting the Hoagland High School is sure to see a small trophy case as he enters the main doorway. In this case are two basketballs and several trophies.

On the lower floor are the grade school classes from the first grade to the sixth.

The gymnasium is situated in a wing toward the rear of the building. Taking a stairway to the right or left you come to the second floor which houses the seventh and eighth grades and the high school classes. The principal's office is at the head of the east stairway.

The school has a cafeteria which serves hot lunches to the pupils each day. The building was completed in 1927 and is very modern.

The gym floor is sixty by thirty feet and the seating capacity is about 250 people. Within a year or so a new gym is to be built west of the school.

The school is located east of Hoagland which is in Madison Township.

Music Director Resigns

Mr. William Sur, music instructor at North Side High School, has resigned from his position as head of North Side's music department. He will accept a position at the University High School, located at the University of Wisconsin, Madison, Wisconsin. Mr. Sur will act as teacher of music and supervisor of practice teaching in the School of Education. Mr. V. M. Chance will take his place at North Side.

History Of Book Making Is Story Of Civilization

The story of the making of books is the story of the civilization of man. It is an important part of the longer story of the growing of a marvelous power in man.

Man wrote on rocks first. What an achievement this was!

Before written language there had to be spoken language, a task which probably took hundreds of thousands of years.

With the invention of spoken language, man began to store his thought—not at first in written records, but in the memory.

The first written language! And after thousands of years, the first book!

Picture one of the early book-makers! A simple man, he would be to us, but to his people he is, perhaps a holy man or priest. He is an Egyptian writing on a slab of rock. Or he is a man of Babylonia, writing with a nail upon a wedge-shaped piece of river clay.

Of all the books which have been written, however, in Egypt, Greece, and Rome, on long rolls of papyrus or parchment, the common man has profited not at all. Books were a luxury of courts and nobles, scholars and kings. If we had lived in the ancient world, we should, probably, have been slaves, hewers of wood and drawers of water for the rich and powerful. We might have seen books and dusted them, perhaps rolled them up neatly for our masters. That is all.

Nobody knows who invented the modern method of printing from movable type.

Then, tradition says, John Gutenberg, a dreamer ahead of his time, invented modern printing. In 1450 he began printing Bibles—large, beautiful, books, with illuminated borders and initial letters.

The aristocracy of learning was at an end. Anyone now, for the payment of a comparatively modest sum, could have access to the Bible and other religious books. Books could be bought by average people, although

Three Yell Leaders To Spur Hoagland

Two Are Girls And One A Boy; Team Recently Honored By Banquet

The Hoagland High School has three yell leaders, two girls and one boy.

Helen Gressley, a seventeen year old senior, is one of them. This is Helen's first year as a school cheer leader. She is very proud of the team and hopes to see the team do well. Hillis Zollinger, a junior, is the boy, and Lovella Smith, a freshman, completes the trio.

The dress of the yell leaders consists of blue corduroy slacks and white satin jackets.

A banquet was recently held for the cheer leaders and the basketball team. Supper was served at 6:0 o'clock and following the meal R. Nelson Snider, principal of South Side High School, spoke. Several members of the team also spoke.

The Harmony quartet entertained with songs.

Kelro Whiteman Hoagland Principal

Has Been There Five Years; Has Charge of 240 Pupils; 100 In High School

Kelro Whiteman, principal of Hoagland High School, attended Ball State Teachers' College. He has been principal at Hoagland for five years and before that was a member of the faculty at Huntington. He teaches united States Government and Industrial Arts.

The faculty consists of nine other members. The total enrollment of the school is 240 pupils, of which 160 are in the high school. The senior class consists of twenty members.

The school has a 22-piece band as well as a dramatics club. The main sports are basketball, volleyball, and softball.

not in the luxurious quantity of today.

So began the evolution of the book as we know it today. Hundreds of inspired workmen went to the task of casting types, of illustrating, binding, and decorating the modern book.

Without the priceless deposits which our daring builders, our sensitive poets, our heroic scientists, thinkers and prophets have placed in books, without the long perfection through the ages of the art of book-making, we should be this minute, no doubt, sitting in some primitive cave or hut, with rude words coming out of our mouths and our hand against everybody's, and the fear of the elements, our fellows, and even our own shadows, contracting our hearts and making our lives starved and mean.

Hoagland Players Right There When Good Grades Are Named

The center of the county champs is Robert Meyer, who because of his flaming thatch of hair, is known as "Red." He has been a varsity player for three years and was high-point man during this season. Having seen action in three sectional tourneys, he is very cool and efficient under pressure, having won an important game by making two foul tosses thirty-eight seconds before the final gun. He is prominent in drama and has made the school honor roll. After a basketball game, he enjoys indulging in hot dogs and ice cream bars. He also carries a big load around as his feet take a size twelve shoe.

Glenn Reynolds, a forward and two-year man, goes by the nickname of "Puge." He was unlucky last year in that an illness overtook him just before tournament time and he was unable to participate. A senior, he is said to be the most active player on the team. Under pretext of seeing a girl's brother he visits the girl herself, say his pals.

Murlen Gerardot, otherwise known as "Runt," is playing his first year on the varsity at a forward post. He holds the distinction of being the shortest player on the team, standing five feet four inches in his stocking feet. He is a senior and member of the honor roll, and physics is his favorite subject. Blonds occupy his attention after practice, and at the present time he is nursing a sore toe.

The bashful member of the team is Emmet Gressley, who is a forward and center. This is his initial season on the first team and he will be back again for two more years. His favorite subject, much to our surprise, is English; and, continuing the surprises, he doesn't care for girls. The tallest player on the team he reaches a height of 5 feet 11 inches.

Ray Scherer, who wears number twenty-two on his jersey, plays at a guard position. He is a senior and also is a member of the school's baseball team. The senior play will have him in its cast as he is prominent in dramatics. His weakness, instead of being girls, is eating candy bars.

John Kraft, at the age of fifteen and under sophomore colors is playing his first year on the varsity as a guard. He thinks his team is good and that they have an even chance to cop the sectional. The school orchestra also has claim to him as well as the honor roll. According to statements during a personal interview, girls have no attraction for him. Smart fellow, eh what?

Dewey Luginbill, more widely known around Hoagland as "Dude," is another guard. He is only a junior and is expected to give good service to the team for another year. He also enjoys playing volleyball and going fishing. Milk shakes are his favorite bit of nourishment, and he goes for Hoagland's brunette cheer leader in sort of a large way.

Now comes another forward whose name is Cloyde Fry. His worst habit on the hardwood is turning ankles, a job at which he is a specialist. From very reliable sources it was found that Cloyde is the Solomon of the team. If you didn't get that, in order to take the strain off your brain, we'll say he is the smartest fellow in the class. History is his favorite subject in school but a raven haired freshman comes under this division after working hours. He also is only a junior.

Carl Ottenweller, also a forward, is not such a high scorer but his ball handling ability is very commendable. He is quite an actor, having participated in several plays and having been chosen on the senior play cast. Besides basketball he likes to play softball and swim. Foods enjoyable to his palate are hamburgers, milk shakes, and ice cream bars. He is no woman hater and, according to his teammates, he has a new girl friend every week. He is not particular, going with either blondes or brunettes.

Daniel Evenlush, a guard, is playing his last year on the team. He is seventeen years old and has been playing on the reserves part of this season. He thinks that Hoagland has a good team, and he knows that the girls don't affect him. His friends call him Dan, and his grades put him on the honor roll.

Hoagland Hopeful

Coach Whiteman: They're a scrappy little bunch of boys and are capable of quick thinking. They are all good ball handlers.

Ottenweller: We're not used to large playing floors but we'll make it tough for any team.

Scherer: We're going to do our best. Fry: We're going to fight.

Luginbill: There's always a big chance.

Reynolds: There's always a dark horse.

Meyer: The team we play will know they've been in a game.

Gerardt: We've a good chance having defeated all the county teams.

Gressley: Somebody has to win, why not us?

Evenlush: We've got a good team and a good chance.

Monroeville Cubs Will Attempt To Upset Arcola Jinx

Cubs Quintet Weak On Shots; Win Only Six

Kelly And Meyer Have Been On Team Four Years; Stephenson's On Three Years

Have Caused Trouble In Former Tourneys

Forced South Side To Go Over-time In Finals Two Years Ago To Win Title

Monroeville, a school of about 125 students, has had a fairly good season, winning six games and losing nine. Monroeville in past tournaments made good records—two years ago they met South Side in the finals and made the Southerners go to an overtime to win. Last year, however, they were eliminated in their first game.

Five of the first string men are back from last year's team and many predict that if the Cubs hit their stride that they will go rather good in the sectionals.

Kelly and Meyer head the list of those back from last year; they have four years of varsity competition behind them, while Bill and Harold Stephenson both have three years. John O'Shaughnessy has two years on the first string. These boys do much of the scoring for their team with Bill Stephenson and Meyer holding high point honors. Stephenson made forty-two field goals during the season and Meyer came a close second with thirty-three. Painter is another boy that is playing very consistently although it is only his first season on the team.

George Bush coaches the Black and White aggregation. He is a graduate of Kansas State College where he played a little baseball and football. He has been in his present position for only one year but has had six years of coaching experience. Coach Bush teaches and is an ardent supporter of the slow break; along with this, he combines good ball handling and a strong offensive attack. He states, however, that the boys have not been able to find the hoop and are unable to hit consistently. Bush does not have an assistant coach.

Although the Cubs have never won a sectional title, they have made several strong bids for it in the past years. They have held the county championship on different occasions. This year, however, they were eliminated the first game.

The reserve team has not been able to find the hoop much better than the regulars. As a result, they have won only five out of their fourteen games. The boys on the second string show promise of a good team next season, and Coach Bush is placing much of his confidence in this team for the 1936-37 season. Bauserman is the high-point man for the reserve team.

Season's Record

The scores for the teams during their season are:

	Varsity	Op. M.	Reserves	Op. M.
New Haven	22	25	30	12
Hoagland	34	23	23	24
Woodburn	27	23	18	29
Harlan	22	26	19	27
Convoys, O.	14	38	11	17
Huntstown	33	36	20	18
Decatur Catholic	33	12	24	22
Concordia	18	16
Woodburn	31	25	20	17
Leo	54	22	21	15
New Haven	18	21	37	10
Harlan	33	24	26	9
Concordia	26	29	25	21
Hoagland	49	22	38	18

Bush's probable lineup for the first game will be Kelly and B. Stephenson at the guard posts with O'Shaughnessy holding down the center and pivot position. Meyers and Painter will more than likely be in the forward positions at the starting whistle of the sectional tournament.

Interview Of Monroeville Team Reveals Interests

Norman Kelly captains the Monroeville team from a guard position. He is a senior and holds the high distinction of wearing a four-stripe sweater. He also participates in dramatics and at one time was in the band. As for eating, well, anything chocolate does for him.

John O'Shaughnessy, the center, is playing his second year on the varsity. Johnny is quite musical, playing the piano and banjo and is very popular with the girls. He also sings, but that doesn't go over so well. He finds some time for acting but more for the girls.

Arthur Meyer, who in spite of his red hair is called "Art," plays center when not on the bench. He has been on the team four years and knows quite a bit about basketball. He likes to eat candy and his favorite study is language, the English language. Besides playing basketball, he has earned a letter in football and he also sings bass when nobody is around.

Harold Stephenson, more widely known as "Dago," plays forward on the Cubs' team. He is a football player, too, and keeps tough by eating steak dinners and having frequent dates. He sings also, but not on dates. Bill Stephenson, undoubtedly a relation to the other one, plays most anything, being a jack of all positions. He is called "Ape", but we don't know why since he is a handsome woman hater. He also warbles once in a while.

Wendell Shien, a handsome brute, is usually in a guard position. His nickname is "Sniffy," perhaps acquired during a cold in the head. Dramatics claim his attention.

"Art" Parnin, who is also known as "Affa," plays basketball as a forward. Quite prominent in sports he also plays baseball and handball and participates in track. He likes to eat candy and beans, and his favorite study is chemistry because he can burn sulphur and cause putrid odors. He also plays in the band, sings, and acts.

Another forward is Jack Richards, a prominent singer and piano player. "Bess" is his other monicker, and he likes dogs, apples, girls, and English. From other sources he likes apples best, but we doubt it. Now comes Bobbie Brown, the student manager, who is last and probably least. He is a senior, and, "according to the team," he is very indolent, or lazy, if you didn't get that other word. He covers the team's games for the city paper.

Monroeville Proud Of Big Gymnasium

Seats Nearly 500; Has Stage; Is Used For Dances, Meetings

Monroeville High School, with an enrollment of about 125 students, has, according to Coach Bush's opinion, "The best gym in the county, excepting, of course, those in the Fort Wayne high schools."

The gymnasium was built, along with a new addition to the old building, in 1926 by orders of the school board and in accordance with the regulation of the county and state. The gym is 70 feet long and 38 feet wide. It is modernly equipped with an excellent playing floor, with two end baskets having glass backstops of the most recent design and side baskets equally well equipped.

At one end of the gymnasium is a modern stage about eighteen feet wide and thirty feet long, which at game time, is used to seat part of the audience. The total seating capacity of the gym is about five hundred. The playing floor is designed for baseball, volleyball and basketball games. As an accessory to the gym, there are modernly equipped shower rooms for boys and girls.

The gymnasium is used primarily for athletic work, but it is also used as a gathering place for dances and frequently as a public meeting place.

Coach George Bush

Monroeville's Cubs have ended their first season under the tutelage of Coach George Bush, a graduate of Kansas State College. Despite only a fair record for the season, the Black and White can well be watched, as Coach Bush has on hand five of the first string of last year's tourney squad.

The principal of Monroeville High School, Mr. Erwin A. Doty, is a graduate of Indiana University. Mr. Doty taught for five years in Steuben County before taking the position of principal of Monroeville. Along with being principal, Mr. Doty teaches mathematics and law.

The sports of Monroeville consist of basketball and baseball.

The school also has a band, consisting of sixteen members, as well as a Dramatic Club.

The faculty consists of fourteen teachers.

The total enrolment of the school is about 385 students. Of these 125 are high school pupils. In the class of '36, twenty-five seniors will graduate.

Monroeville Boosters Win Championship By Presenting Good Play

The Monroeville High School has again organized a Booster Club. A year or two ago the school had a Booster Club; however, it was dropped after a while.

This newly organized Booster Club won the county contest with a one-act play.

The officers of the new club are Mae Johnson, president; LaVonne Casselman, vice-president; Roberta Brabek, secretary; Helene Blaybatt, treasurer, and Margaret Swet, program chairman.

The music and dramatic departments will unite in a one-act play to be given sometime in the middle of March.

Monroeville Players Downhearted? Just Read What They Say

Here's what the individual members of the Monroeville Cubs have to say about their team's chances in the Sectional:

O'Shaughnessy: If we play Hoagland, we can beat them.

B. Stephenson: Wait and see how it turns out.

H. Stephenson: We've as good a chance as anybody.

Meyer: If we draw Central, we can beat them.

Kelly: We expect a comeback to redeem ourselves.

Shien: I think we can win our first game.

Parnin: We'll beat Central.

Richards: We'll win the first game.

Brown (student manager): We have a good chance.

Lafayette Central Wins Good Percentage Of Net Games

Pirates Stage Fine Comeback To Get 12 Wins

Lafayette Central Drops Six Engagements Of Eighteen For Good Record.

Mr. Ralph Young

Lafayette Central Goes To Second Round in County Tourney Being Defeated By Leo

Losing three of their first four games of the 1935-36 net season, Lafayette Central's Pirates staged a fine comeback to compile a winning record for the year, scoring twelve victories, while dropping six engagements. The Pirates, coached by Ralph Young, failed to go far in either of the tournaments in which they participated, being eliminated in the second round in both the blind tourney at Roanoke and the Allen County tournament.

Lafayette Central opened their season with a loss, being downed by East Union to a count of 28 to 20. However, they followed this with their first win of the season, nosing Monroeville by a 21 to 13 margin.

The Pirates then dropped two straight games, losing to Hoagland, Allen County champs, by a 32 to 23 count, and going down to defeat to Rockcreek by a score of 20 to 22.

The Lafayette Central quintet followed their two losses with their best display of form for the season, hitting a win streak extending over eight successive tilts. Jefferson Center was the first to feel the wrath of the Pirates, being trimmed by a score of 24 to 16. Roanoke was beaten 29 to 24, Huntstown was dropped by the same score, West Union was easily defeated 40 to 18, and Ossian was trimmed by a score of 44 to 20. Huntstown was defeated for the second time, 27 to 24, and Ossian was also dropped for the second time, 33 to 31. This was Lafayette Central's seventh straight victory.

The Red and Black scored their eighth consecutive triumph in the blind tourney at Roanoke, reiterating over West Union for a 44 to 21 victory, but also received their fourth setback of the season at the hands of Roanoke in the second round, 40 to 21. The Pirates came back strong in their next game to drop Arcola by an overwhelming score of 48 to 15.

Lafayette Central scored a first round victory over Woodburn, 35 to 23, in the Allen County tournament, but dropped their second game to Leo, 40 to 21. Roanoke was downed for the second time in a regularly scheduled game by a score of 30 to 23, but New Haven inflicted the sixth loss on the Red and Black by a 38 to 29 margin. A few more games remained to be played by the Pirates, but the results were unavailable at this writing.

Lafayette Central Mentor Develops Strong Net Squads

For the past five years Coach Ralph Waldo Young has made the schools of the county admire and yet fear the strength of the Lafayette Central team.

Through his determination and stick-to-itiveness he has developed each year a team of strength and speed. During these five years the Lafayette team has recorded victories over two city teams, the state Catholic champs, and many other strong fives. By all means Mr. Young does not intend to lower this reputation in the coming sectional.

Having received an A.B. degree at Ball State and an M.S. at Indiana University, Mr. Young teaches mathematics and science. In his classes and assembly he attempts to keep perfect order, and when he appears at the assembly door, all library books are quietly and quickly replaced by text books, and vigorous study is continued. But laying all jokes aside, Mr. Young is an excellent teacher in his subjects.

Coach Young has had six years of coaching, five of which were at Lafayette Central. This season he has again exposed his determination and patience in the development of his fine team; and consequently the cooperation, spirit and hope are the best preceding this sectional tourney.

Lafayette Central's Boosters' Club Sells At All Pirate Tilts

The Lafayette Central Booster Club, under the guidance of Clair Motz, has had charge of all concessions at games this season. Maxine Weaver, Elwood Jennings, and Kedric Chaney were chosen as yell leaders. Floyd Jennings, John Crabbs, and Mary Ellen Carpenter were elected president, treasurer, and secretary respectively, and have charge of all business carried on by the club. The Booster Club is transported to all basketball games during "reasonable" weather.

Laughs From Lafayette

Pete Marcher flatly refused to go in to Roanoke after basketball practice because he didn't have on his good clothes. Who would expect this tall, easy going, good natured boy to think of his appearance at a time like this? Perhaps there is a little "red-headed" reason.

The next thing we know John Zurbrick, L. S. H. S. forward, will be taking up knitting. Last week he invited himself to attend a "hen party." He was answered by a snappy click of the receiver at the Roanoke end of the line.

Harry McClure's chance of going to the sectional tournament depended upon his making two more points than his opponent in the Lafayette-Hoagland game. In the first few minutes of the third quarter, Harry scored, giving him his extra points. The elated boy jumped up and down, clapped his hands with glee, and screamed to the coach, "Take me out, quick."

Coach Nabo of East Union and Coach Young of Lafayette Central sometimes get into terrible arguments when they meet at the Shoup home," said Dick Ehrman.

"I hear their girl friends have arguments, too," said Floyd.
"Why they are sisters. What do they argue about?" asked Pete.
"Why Beulah says, 'I think Pete Marcher is the cutest thing,' and Marion says, 'Well I don't see where you get it.'"

Ralph Reed, S. M., is very fortunate in securing freshman girls to take to Huntington and then leaving them.

We don't know whether Richard Good is interested in agriculture, electricity, royalty, or baking. The following Elmhurst girls are proof that he has tried them all: Jean McCormick, Helen Watt, Clotilda Prince, and Audra Baker.

We are surprised that Max Carpenter and Larue Reddin were at school the day following their "hitch-hiking" trip to Huntington.

Our principal doesn't approve of students being called to the telephone by their girl friends or boy friends. An Ossian brunette violated this law by calling Dick Ehrman to the 'phone during history class.

"Johnny" Alexander is a "shark" when it comes to making blind dates.

Dewey Hobbs fell asleep in history class after being in Ossian the previous night, and dreamed he was going to heaven. Just as he was entering the "golden gates" he got the "gong." He was so astonished that he fell off his chair.

Bill Baker was very much disgusted at "Old Man Weather" a few weeks ago. Bill had a "heavy" date with a certain Sophomore girl whose initials are V. L., and couldn't go because of the ice.

Have you ever seen two boys quarreling over a girl? This is the conversation we heard after a certain girl by the name of Mary won $20 at Roanoke:

Pete Marcher: We'll get married now.

Harry McClure: No, you won't. She's my gal.

Pete: Okey, we'll both marry her.

It is not only freshmen who get in bad. Sometimes seniors get unruly. "Dick" happened to have a birthday Monday; as there was no school, he didn't "get his." Tuesday noon Mr. Young caught him molesting the eighth grade team and had him put through the paddling machine. Congratulations, Dick!

Can you imagine a senior boy apologizing in front of the assembly for discoloring the referee's eye? Don't worry, Pete, it won't be long now.

Public Speaking Dept. Of Lafayette Central Studies Dramatics Too

The advanced public speaking class of Lafayette Central, directed by Lawrence A. Warner, studied dramatics and debating. The class gave one-act plays for the purpose of financing the debating class as well as to gain knowledge in the art of play production.

The debating class had as their opponents: Elmhurst, Bippus, Huntington Township, and Larwill of Richland Township in the Northeastern Indiana Debate League. In the invitational contest held at Huntington Township High School, Lafayette Central debated Wabash, South Whitley affirmative and negative, and Washington Center.

In spite of the financial success of the plays, it seems that another party received the benefit of the money; consequently the debate class didn't get to enter the district contest.

Many Lafayette Central Rooters Boost Team

This Lafayette Central Club should wind up in the finals; then with a few breaks can be expected to come out on top.—Von Knight, Zanesville merchant.

I have seen many basketball games this year, but the best games were between Lafayette Central and their opponents. The boys have shown the best sportsmanship and more school spirit than any I have seen. If the boys get any breaks, they will go to the finals in the tournament.—Everett Sink, East Union Janitor.

If the boys play the basketball they are able to play, they have a pretty good show in the tournament.—Roy Chaney, Lafayette Janitor.

I believe this will be an interesting contest, with many upsets. There is no question in my mind but that Lafayette Central will be one of the last teams to lose out in the Fort Wayne Sectional.—Ray Kohr, Lafayette Central Teacher.

The death of Tom Kearney, nationally known betting commissioner, last week brought to light one of the most exciting and varied careers in the field of sport celebrities. While handling millions of dollars for other persons, Tom always refused to bet himself. He did not play cards, and he was against women gambling. During his life he worked in steel mills, tended bar, operated bookie establishments, race booking, dice games, gambling clubs, poolrooms and cigar stores. Mr. Kearney always conducted his business on the theory that there was a "price against everything."

Eighth Grade Quintet Wins Nine of Twelve Games In Past Season

Lafayette Central's eighth grade squad has had a very successful basketball season, having won nine out of twelve starts. The Junior Pirates have won twice over New Haven, Anthony Wayne, Hillcrest, Union Center, and once over the freshmen. They lost twice to Waynedale, the first time in an overtime, the second time without the services of their regular center. The other loss was to Roanoke, one of Huntington county's strongest junior fives.

The first six of Lafayette's juniors are as follows: James Chaney, forward; Forrest Rupright, forward; Clifford Denny, forward; Harry Zurbrick, center; Paul Reddin, guard; and Emmerson Jennings, guard.

Coach Clair Motz stated that the outlook for next season seems very promising as Paul Reddin, Carl Caley, and Richard Crull will then be ready to replace their graduated teammates.

Lafayette Central To Give Senior Play April 10, 11

The seniors of Lafayette Central High School have chosen "Home-Town Girl" by Roland Oliver, as their class play to be presented at the high school gymnasium on Friday and Saturday, April 10 and 11.

The cast includes a country kick who tries to be a city "feller," a New England "swell," a girl who licks, Home-Town Girl, herself, S. O. Swift, a lawyer, two neighbors, Mrs. Hastings Smith, and Carrie Arms.

The junior class is busy working on their class play "Aunt Cindy Cleans Up," a hilarious rip-roaring comedy by Wilbur Braun, to be presented in the gymnasium of the high school on Wednesday and Thursday, March 11 and 12.

Dorothy Johnson plays the role of Aunt Cindy who detests men until Parker Tubbs, played by James Hulvey, appears. Other leading parts of the play are taken by Mary Ellen Carpenter, Aloisius Sorg, Roger French, Barbara Manes, Avenelle McLaughlin, Marcel Shaw, Maxine Weaver, Miller Tonkel, Alice May Shoop, and Wanda Sweet.

Three Of Ten Go To Tourney Fourth Time

Five Seniors, Four Juniors, One Soph Compose "Big Ten Of Lafayette Central."

Larue Reddin Is Captain of Quintet

Three Of Team Have Played In Tourney Twice

Five seniors, four juniors and one sophomore compose the "big ten" who are to go to the county tournament at Fort Wayne from Lafayette Central High School.

Beginning their athletic career in the freshman year, Dewey Hobbs and Max Carpenter are going to the tournament for the third time. Both boys also play on the baseball team in the fall. Carpenter is the pitcher on the diamond.

John Zurbrick, a senior, is also a veteran of the team, having been on it for three years. He also plays an important part in baseball and other sports.

Although Larue Reddin has gone to the tournament only twice, he has gained the distinction of being the captain of the team. Pete Marcher and Johnny Alexander have also been on the team two years.

Richard Ehrman, the wise-cracking senior, Richard Good, the slow, easy-going junior, and Harry McClure, the "country rube" of one-act play fame, are going with the big ten for the first time; but they promise to play an important part in some of the games.

The team is also proud to have Bill Baker, a sophomore, going with them. Here's hoping that Baker becomes another of Lafayette's renowned basketball heroes at this tourney.

Huntertown Five Employs Fast Break And Zone Defense

Wildcats Lose Many Tilts By Small Margins

Squad, However, Shows Improvement, Taking Four Of Last Seven Contests.

Practice Inefficiency Is Caused By Small Gym

Several Players Were Also Lost For Time Due To Ineligibility

The Huntertown Wildcats have found the 1935-36 season one of the toughest in years, due to handicaps. Coach George Fryback has had to contend with the smallest gymnasium in the county. Their gym furnishes the biggest handicap because practice cannot be held efficiently. However, next year, this handicap will be overcome because they will have a new school with a large open ceiling gymnasium, 44 by 70.

The other big obstacle was the ineligibility of several of the varsity players. Only very few boys turned out for basketball, therefore leaving Coach Fryback with little or no material. Since January, however, the boys have all become eligible and Coach Fryback has changed the style of play to a fast breaking offense, while using a zone for bottling up their opponents.

The change of style has certainly done things to the squad, the Wildcats having won four out of the last seven games. The wins were over Hoagland, Spencerville, Woodburn, and Arcola. The team, on a whole, is fairly small, scrappy, and fast. It has met the following opponents outside of the county tournament in which they were defeated by Churubusco, 17-20; and Laotto, 24-29.

The Wildcats' wins and defeats, the latter all by small margins, are as

Booster Club Issues Huntertown Activities Tickets, Give Letters

When we refer to the Huntertown student body, we must remember they are small, but mighty.

The Booster Club of Huntertown is well organized and serves a very good purpose in the small city. They give letters and sweaters to the athletes who have met with the requirements. They also issue season tickets that cover the entire school activities for a year.

The school colors are blue and gold and are displayed brightly at every game. Pep sessions are held nearly every Friday afternoon during which the team is encouraged and the student body is pepped up. The cheer leaders, who are also small but mighty, bring forth all possible vocal volume from the student body.

Huntertown will be well represented at the tournament and can be counted to to add their share of life, color, and volume to it.

Rated On A's

The students of Martinsville High School, Indiana, are rated as to the number of A's instead of percentage for the admittance to the National Honor Society. The seniors having eighty A's were awarded the honor and scholarship plaque. The juniors had forty-four A's while the sophomores followed closely with thirty-seven A's.

Wildcats On The Scent

Drayer Is Outstanding Scorer Of New Haven

Three of the New Haven's Bulldogs have proven to be exceptionally good snipers this season. Drayer leads this individual scoring with 126 points. Drayer has determined the outcome of many of the Bulldogs' encounters, and he should be an outstanding figure in the coming tourney. Hart holds second place in the individual scoring with 117 points. Armstrong has totaled 112 points to capture the third place.

Coach Fryback Of Huntertown Hopes To Win

Wildcat's Athletic Trainer Has Held Present Position For Five Years

Deserves Much Credit

When interviewed, George Louis Fryback, coach of the Huntertown Wildcats, stated, "We may have a small gym and poor equipment, but the boys keep on plugging and may account for themselves in the Sectional tourney."

Mr. Fryback has been at Huntertown for five years and deserves a large amount of credit for his work. Despite the fact that he has a small gymnasium, he has turned out squads that rate above average and that work hard, not only because of their school, but also because of their coach.

The Wildcats' trainer first became interested in athletics when he played four years of varsity basketball on the Wells County High School quintet. After high school, he attended Tri-State and Ball State Colleges, earning letters in both baseball and basketball.

Being athletically built as well as athletically minded, Coach Fryback referees games throughout the season. He keeps careful check of all his players and thoroughly understands his sports. Not only does he coach basketball but baseball as well. He stated that he hopes that baseball would become a major sport in the county so that a league may be formed.

When we discussed tournaments with Mr. Fryback, we learned that Huntertown lost to Central last year. Coach Fryback believes that the chances of the county teams are better this year than last, but he said that South Side or Central is very likely to come out on top. (That is, if the Huntertown Wildcats get some tough breaks.)

Lafayette Central Has Junior High School Curriculum

During the past two years Lafayette Central has had a junior high school curriculum. The seventh and eighth grades, numbering fifty-six pupils, receive instruction from the high school teachers in high school fashion.
In addition to their regular course the seventh and eighth grade boys have work in industrial arts, while the girls take home economics.

In the regular high school department a two-year course in industrial arts, courses in bookkeeping, stenog-raphy, and typing have been incorporated in the last few years. At present Lafayette Central High School offers journalism, public speaking, business, art, and music, both vocal and instrumental, supplementing the regular academic course, with debating and dramatics as extra-curricular activities.

Besides being principal and personal adviser of many of Lafayette's 340 pupils, Mrs. Flory C. Tonkel teaches four regular classes, English, junior and senior and French, sophomore and junior, and supervises two session study periods.

Coach Ralph W. Young, instructor and adviser of all athletic activities in the high school, teaches mathematics in both junior and senior high schools, and also physics.

Mr. Lawrence A. Warner, social science instructor, also teaches three classes in public speaking and has charge of the high school debating and dramatics.

Miss Marjorie Wasmuth teaches first and second years of English, as home economics in both junior and senior high schools. She also teaches journalism and has charge of the "Lafayette Central Transcript."

Miss Juanita Hurt is instructor in biology and in general science, in grammar, and in literature in the junior high; Miss Hurt also has charge of the high school library.

Miss Olive Teal directs the commercial department, supervises two session room periods, and helps in the office.

Mr. Leonard Nolte teaches industrial arts in the seventh, eighth, ninth, and tenth years and also supervises two study periods.

The art throughout the grades and the high school is directed by Miss Ethel Van Hoosen who teaches also geography in the junior high and a class in freshman English.

Courses in music have been organized in vocal, orchestra and band music. Mr. Herbert Shive is instructor in this department. The majority of the students are young and inexperienced; consequently, the band has made no appearance in public this year. An orchestra will be organized the coming year.

One of the chief duties of the athletic manager is in the line of finance.
He has charge of paying all the bills that the athletic association incurs.
The officials at the games must be paid, bills for equipment, transportation, meals and lodging must be taken care of for the schools visiting here, collect the amount taken in at a game must be counted, checked, and deposited in the bank. Many of the duties of the athletic manager, then, can be classed in line with bookkeeping. Accounts must balance and must check with those at the bank.

All the money taken in payment for tournament tickets at the sectional and regional will be handled by Mr.
Dilts, who has had agents from the Booster Club working in this capacity for over a week.

The profit that is realized by the tournament will be divided among the participants in accordance with a pro rata arrangement.

During the course of the athletic season accounts about balance.

"In the last ten years," said Mr.
Dilts, "football, I believe, has paid for itself only two times." Track has paid for itself less than that, and basketball, then, must make up this deficit.

This work of being athletic director may be summarized by saying that it comprises the scheduling of games, handling of tickets, both sales and printing, arrangement for advertising, and the supervision of the duties at the actual contests. Besides these one of the most important factors is the handling of money. Bills must be paid to the officials, also bills are incurred for equipment, transportation, meals, lodging, and expenses of visiting teams.

Secrets to Seventeens

Watch Yourself—Everyone goes to the Tournament to cut loose and enjoy himself to the utmost of his ability.
This is swell idea because that is what the games are for, but be careful that you don't have too much fun and spoil someone else's fun.

A few little ladies attend the games who have no intention whatever of watching the players. They parade around the gym with their arms around each others' necks, visiting all of their friends. The idea is to attract attention; they do this but it is the wrong kind of attention. When fans pay to see a tournament they want to see a basketball game without having their view obstructed every few minutes by a group of giddy little girls.

Then there are those people who fulfill the Darwin theory by forming little groups in the top seats of the gym. These people have regular little parties and for entertainment throw paper wads, candy bar wrappers, coca cola cups, and anything else handy on the audience below. A few little boys with more playful natures even go back to that old grade school habit of shooting beans through bean shooters.
This may be great fun but it is certainly out of place at a basketball game.

Did you ever sit in front of someone who couldn't keep his feet on the floor and was continually kicking you in the back? This sensation is very annoying; besides it is hard on clothes to have someone wipe their feet on them for an hour or so.

Have a lot of fun at the Tournament, but just remember that everyone else wants to have fun, too.

Harlan Loyal Rooters Are Pulling Hard For Team To Win Meet

Here are some of the opinions of the loyal Harlan rooters who plan to attend the sectional at North Side
High School gym.

Bill Blackburn, the president of the freshman class says, "If they play as they have in some games, the Hawks will go a long way."

"I think they'll come through according to the draw," says Bill Schaefer.

Harriet Timbrook thinks, "The Hawks are sure to go to town."

Alice Wann believe, "It's in the bag; the Hawks must tie it shut." She is the vice-president of the senior class;
therefore she should know.

Ralph Ehle, another Harlanite, says
"Our team may be small in size, but I'm sure they will make a good record in the tournament."

"I've got my fingers crossed," says
Virginia Greenwood, who really knows that basketball and is vice-president of the junior class.

Betty Kinn claims that she is "betting on the Hawks," which is backed up by Ruth Zehr's statement that the Hawks should not worry; "the game is ours."

"I surely hope we win" is the remark made by Catherine Kurtz; while Keith Henry boldly says, "If Bus
Harris and Woody Smith are hitting, it will be a cinch for Harlan."

Girls Tournament Won By Juniors

Central Girls Now Have After-School Tumbling And Tap Dancing

Basketball playing for Central girls is over for another year, and now tumbling and tap dancing become the after-school attractions in the gym. The season closed with a tournament for both first and second teams of all four classes, each class team playing each other team. Practices were held for six weeks, one night a week for each class. At the end of that time, teams were picked and the tournament drawn up. By playing three games each night after school, it was possible to finish the tournament in four nights, with no team playing twice the same day. The first half of all games played before any second half was played, made this possible.

The tournament started with a game between the senior and freshman first teams, with the seniors winning by a score of 20-12. Lena Kies, captain of the senior team, was high scorer. In the game by the second teams, the freshman won by a score of 21-20. Loretta Winkler was high scorer with sixteen points. The third game of that group was the Junior-Sophomore game, with all the junior forwards scoring to the tune of 39-0. The junior guards didn't let the sophomores get near the ball.

The round was started by the Junior and Freshman second teams, who played a 29-23 game in favor of the Juniors. Jean Teagarden, a junior, and Bernice Garad, a freshman, tied scoring honors at 13 points each. Then followed the Junior and Freshman first team game, the Juniors again winning by a score of 32-8. The Senior and Sophomore seconds played an 18-11 game, to close the second night of the tournament.

On Thursday, play was resumed with a game between the second teams of Seniors and Juniors, and Teagarden ran away with the scoring at 17 points for the Juniors. The Sophomore second team played the Freshman seconds a 36-22 game with everyone scoring. The last game was merely a struggle to find space in the scoreboard to put down the baskets made by Hilda Kiger. She made 24 points, and the other Senior forwards all contributed to a 53-5 victory over the Sophomore firsts.

The Friday night games brought the tournament to a close. Junior and sophomore second teams played first making the juniors the second team champions by winning from the sophomores 29 to 13. Then the junior first team made it a complete championship by beating the seniors 32 to 9, and so become holders of the Koerber Cup for the second season. The last game was one between the Sophomore and Freshman firsts, with the Freshmen the victors.

To the Junior class goes the championship and the honor to have its numeral again placed on the cup—also a speech at the banquet by the captain, Ella Hardick; to the Seniors the award for good sportsmanship.

Tiger Personality Sketches

"Steve" Sitko—"Steve" is one of the most valuable members of the team this year, holding down one of the guard posts. He is a senior and is playing his second and last year on the varsity team. Although Sitko has not been as great a scoring threat this year as last, his defensive play and "never say die" spirit has greatly aided the morale of the team. He is 5 feet 11 inches and carries 160 pounds. Steve has also earned a reputation as one of the best football players ever turned out by a Fort Wayne school. He was picked on the all-state football team at the quarterback post. Sitko is also a member of the National Honor Society at Central, being an outstanding scholar as well as an all around athlete. Central High School will be suffering a great loss when "Steve" is graduated in June.

Paul Armstrong—Paul, better known as "Curly," is only a junior and is playing his first year on the varsity. However, his playing at one of the forward positions has been outstanding all year. Although he is only 5 feet 9 inches in height, weighing 145 pounds, he is one of the city's leading scorers and also holds down

Mendy Able Athletic Director Of Central

Mr. Murray Mendenhall, better known as "Mendy" is the successful coach of the Central Tigers. Mendy began his connection with athletics when he was a student in DePauw University. Many a game was won for the Black and Gold through his clever playing. His record in college is one to be envied by anyone.

From college he went to Greencastle where he coached the Trojans. In 1924 he came to Central to take charge of the basketball and track squads, while Mark Bills coached football and baseball. When North Side was opened, Bills was transferred there and Mendy took charge of all four sports.

Central teams have gone to the state finals four times since Mendy has occupied his present position and it won't be his fault if this year's team does not advance. In describing him, all that can be said is that he impresses you as a quiet, unimposing man who draws friends readily. Both the other city high schools have more than one coach, but Central continues putting out winning teams with Mendy as the single mentor; although Bob Dornte relieves him of an otherwise heavy burden.

Central Tigers' Lineup

a high position in the N. E. I. C. scoring. He is the leading scorer on the Tiger team. His clever ball handling and sniping ability, against North Side in a city series clash, completely broke up the highly vaunted Redskin zone defense. "Curly" is, without a doubt, one of the cleverest players in the city, and the Tigers are fortunate that he will be on the Tiger squad next year.

Tom Motter—Tom is one of the squad's six-footers and weighs 167 pounds. He holds down the center position, where his height proves valuable to him. He is only a junior and has had no previous varsity experience. However, Tom has a lot of natural ability and has turned in many fine performances. He is an excellent shot and is especially good from under the basket. Although he is not usually high point man, he has, on a few occasions, won high point honors, and nearly always comes through with his share of points. With a year's experience behind him, Tom should prove invaluable to next year's team.

Jack Paul—Jack is completing his second year on the varsity squad, and is still has one more year of competition, as he is only a junior. He carries 160 pounds on his 6 foot 1 inch frame, and holds down one of the forward positions in fine style. His ball handling, passing, and floor game have contributed much to the Tigers success during the season. Jack is not consistently a high scorer, but usually breaks into the scoring column, sometimes hitting a goodly number of points. His athletic ability is not limited to basketball alone. He played on the Tiger eleven last year and will probably hold down a varsity end post on next year's football team.

Fred Kabisch—Fred is playing his last season of basketball for the Central Tigers. This is his second year on the varsity, and he is holding down a guard post. He is five feet 11 inches in height and weighs 157 pounds. Fred does not contribute many points, but makes up for his lack of a scoring punch by his excellent floor play. He handles the ball well, gets many rebounds, and plays a fine defensive game. Fred is also a football man. He held down an end post on the football squad last season. His ability is not limited to athletics alone. He is also a member of the National Honor

Dornte Works Well As Assistant Coach

"Bob" Dornte, aide-de-camp of Murray Mendenhall, Central High School mentor, is now in his second year as assistant coach at his former Alma Mater. "Bob" is a 1929 graduate of Central. He continued his education at Purdue, where he compiled an excellent record in the field of sports.

As a freshman at Purdue, "Bob" was a member of both the freshman football and basketball teams. He played varsity basketball for three years under Ward Lambert. Purdue won the Big Ten basketball championship twice during Dornte's career as a varsity member of the squad. Bob also played varsity football at Purdue for two years. He graduated in 1934 and secured his present coaching position the following year, 1935.

Bob received his early athletic training while a student at Central. He played three years on the varsity football and basketball teams, and was picked on the all-state football team at the fullback post his senior year. He also played center field on the baseball team, and was a member of the track squad, participating in the high jump and pole vault.

Bob was taught the fast break type of basketball at college and still prefers it to any other. Combined with the fast break type of ball, he prefers to develop his future ball players from the underclassmen. He advocates this to enable the boys to be well schooled in fundamentals.

In his first year of coaching, Bob developed a fine reserve team. The team dropped only one tilt all season and was considered one of the best in the state.

Society. Fred will graduate in June. Herman Schaefer—Schaefer is playing his first year of varsity basketball and has come through in fine style. He is 5 feet 11 inches in height, weighs 150 pounds, and takes care of a guard position. Schaefer seldom starts a game but usually sees plenty

Meeting Of Central's G. A. A. Held Feb. 26 In Central Clubrooms

The February meeting of the Central Girls' Athletic Association was held in the club rooms on Wednesday, February 26. The rooms were filled to overflowing, but the scarcity of seats didn't matter, as no one sat down anyway. There was only a short business meeting, and then games were played. Several of the girls proved that their nerves were steady by carrying large numbers of beans on a knife. However, even larger numbers of beans were swept up from the floor after the meeting by some of the more energetic members. The next stunt was to drop clothes pins in a cream bottle, which proved to be no easy task. The noisiest game was "Hot and Cold," played to the refrain, "The Music Goes Round and Round." After several expeditions into the depths of the back stairs and first floor of the building, with Miss Ingham being personally conducted by Sis Arnold, calm was restored and refreshments were served. About eighty members were present.

Intramural Leagues Haven For Those Who Fail To Make Varsity

Although there are always many disappointed youths when Mendy does his annual "cutting" from Central's basketball roster, the aspirants find some consolation from intramural basketball. Intramural covers a large scope of athletics at Central High. "Bob" Dornte supervises all the intramural athletics, which includes tag football, basketball, tennis, golf, track, and foul throwing. The sports attract a large number of boys who hope to earn intramural "C's".

Basketball, Hoosiers' favorite pastime, draws the largest number of participants. "Bob" segregates the groups into three leagues. The All-Star League is composed of Reserves and other more experienced ball players. The Panthers and Crescents comprised of boys who play independent ball, met in the playoff with the Panthers coping the tilt.

The other two leagues, senior and midget, possess boys within the required weight limit. Both leagues are still running with the Goons and Five Aces leading.

of action before the final gun is fired. He plays a fine game, both offensively and defensively, and is a scoring threat at all times. His scoring ability is excellent both from under the basket and from out on the floor. He has a natural ability for basketball and is developing very rapidly. His presence on next year's squad will greatly aid the Tigers in producing another strong team.

Harold Braden—Harold, or "Red," the name everybody knows him by, is another junior representative on the Tiger team. He is six foot in height, weighs 145 pounds, and plays at a forward position. "Red" does not play with the so-called first five, but has proved to be one of the Tigers' most valuable replacements. His steady, dependable playing has helped give Central the powerful reserve strength that has so greatly aided the Tigers in compiling their fine record. He is valuable at getting rebounds and is a very good shot, driving under the basket for most of his points. Red has learned a lot during the past year and will make a strong cog in the Tiger machine next year.

Tigers Enter Strong Squad In Tourney

Out Of Possible Twenty-Three Central Wins Eighteen; 8 N. E. I. C. Games.

Have City Series And N. E. I. C. Titles

Tigers Are Defeated Only Twice By Scores Of Twenty-Five Or Lower

Central High School enters sectional competition tomorrow represented by a pack of Tigers whose seasonal record of eighteen wins and five losses, ascertained through their powerful brand of basketball, install them as one of the heavy favorites to capture the tourney.

In the course of the 1935-36 net season, the Blue netters have carried off many singular honors. By defeating all the Northeastern Indiana Conference contenders in their respective series games, the Bengals have taken that trophy into camp. With only a loss to the South Side Archers to mar another otherwise perfect standing, the Blue Tide also carried off the City Series crown. Central was also victor in an invitational tournament held in late December of the previous year.

The Tigers have scored 793 points to their opponents' 560 during the season, the average being 34-24. Only twice have the Tigers failed to score at least twenty-five points in a single tilt.

Newcastle's Trojans, highly touted throughout the state, made amends for their loss of the previous season suffered at the hands of the Tigers by defeating them by a close margin of 35-31 in a closely contested game. In the second tilt of the season, Anderson, last year's state champs, humbled the Blue, 29-27, by way of a twelve-point rally in the final quarter. North Side became the first victim of the Tigers who down the Redskins 33-25, and gave Laporte the same dose of bitter defeat the following evening, 29-21. Columbia City and Kendallville, two N. E. I. C. quintets were the next opponents of the Blue and White. Both teams were like putty in the hands of the Tigers who defeated them easily, 40-16 and 37-13, respectively. Central Catholic fell by the wayside stinging under a 40-23 defeat.

Central, North Side, South Side, and Berne then congregated at the Archer hardwood in an invitational tournament, a meet which proved to be a Christmas present to the Bengal squad. Central drew South Side as her first opponent and downed the Archer, 27-18. In the crucial tilt of the tourney, the Tigers repeated to hand the Flying Dutchmen from Berne, last year's regional winner and equally strong this season, a 39-29 setback.

In the initial game of the new year, Auburn met the Mendymen only to lose in a high-scoring affair, 51-37. Still in high gear, the Tigers then downed a kennel of Airedales from Hartford City to a tune of 49-26. DeCATUR was the next victim to fall before the onslaught of the Felines, 34-25. With the Bluffton Tigers going hot in their section of the country, it was rumored that they were to be a stumbling block in the path of Central. But the Centralites took little heed to such propaganda and easily slashed down their fellow Bengals, 39-22. Not demoralized by their defeat in the invitational, the South Side Archers proved to be a thorn in the Tigers' paw and down them 29-25, due to a last minute rally. The Blue then travelled to Huntington to meet the Vikings of that fair city, but were repulsed, 33-31.

School Of 56 Students Turns In Wonderful Net Season

Monmouth Win 14 Of 18 Games During Season

Eagles Take Part in Annual Adams County Tourney, Reaching Second Round.

Most Successful Campaign Since '32

Monmouth's Longest Winning Streak This Year Was Seven Games

During the current net season, the Monmouth Eagles have experienced their most successful campaign since 1932, scoring fourteen victories as compared to four setbacks for the year in regular scheduled games. All four of the defeats were inflicted by two of the Eagles' opponents, Hartford and Hoagland, who inflicted two losses apiece.

Monmouth got off to a bad start, opening their season with two straight defeats. Hartford easily downed the Eagles by a 26 to 13 score, and Hoagland captured a one-point victory by a score of 18 to 17.

The Eagles then found themselves and won their next four games in a row, downing Geneva in a close game 23 to 21. Pleasant Mills by a score of 23 to 17, Bryant by a 21 to 17 count, and Decatur Catholic by a 27 to 17 margin.

The third loss of the season was inflicted on Monmouth by Hartford in a return contest. The Hartford quintet had previously defeated the Eagles easily, doubling the score on them. However, the return game was much tougher, with the Eagles forcing Hartford to the limit to pull out a 29 to 26 triumph.

The Eagles also participated in the annual Adams County tournament and advanced to the second round, where they sustained a fifth loss, being eliminated by Geneva. Monmouth defeated Geneva twice during the regular season by one and two point margins, but failed to click in the tournament and fell by the wayside.

Monmouth got back into their winning stride and won their next seven games, for their longest win streak of the year. Monroe was the first victim, going down to defeat by a 25 to 10 score. The alumni was the next to fall and were upset by a 25 to 15 count. Kirkland was defeated by a 18 to 15 margin, and Laotto was conquered easily 28 to 11. Both Pleasant Mills and Geneva were beaten for the second time by scores of 34 to 21 and 22 to 20 respectively. Their win over Decatur Catholic for the second time by a 30 to 17 count, ended their winning streak.

In another return engagement, the Eagles lost their fourth contest of the regular season at the hands of Hoagland, Allen County champs. The game proved to be just as exciting as the first, when Monmouth was dropped by an 18 to 17 count. The score was tied as the game ended, but Hoagland won in an overtime by a score of 31 to 23.

The Eagles closed their regular season with a 33 to 15 victory over Laotto and a 21 to 15 triumph over Bryant. Both contests were return engagements. Pleasant Mills was defeated by a count of 44 to 18, and Monroe was dropped, 33 to 26. This was Monmouth's third victory over Pleasant Mills and their second over Monroe.

Monmouth Has Many Boosting For Victory

Monmouth is a standout when it comes to boosting its team.

Although only an average of approximately twenty-five fans were present at each of the games, weather conditions and remote residences were just cause for that condition. But the Eagle fans when asked of their team's chances in the coming sectional are optimistic.

Two days after asked to sell Booster ads, of which Ed Merica was placed in charge, 100 individual names were turned in, almost twice as many as are going to that school. An equal number of this news issue was asked for with assurances that they can be sold.

Monmouth Athletic Head And Principal Enthused Over Work

If there is any coach who is sincerely enthused over his work and whose relation with his men is one of utter comradeship and respect, Coach Ernest Curtis, Monmouth athletic head and principal, is the man.

Mr. Curtis believes that if the coach of any sport "wraps himself up with his boys," taking a real interest in their mutual goal of success, the team will produce far better results than the lackadaisical attitude of "just my duty." His basketball squad, considering his limited available material, shows the accuracy of his doctrine.

His material must be considered. The little settlement has a mere population of approximately 60 residents. There are fifty-six pupils attending the Monmouth High School—twenty-eight boys and a similar number of girls. Of the twenty-eight boys, twenty-four answered his call for basketball practice, eighteen remaining to make up the squad.

Coach Curtis received his high school education at the Eminence High School near Martinsville, Indiana, at which place he played four years of varsity basketball. He then enrolled in Indiana State where he participated for three years. The University of Chicago was his next and last alma mater of higher learning. Here he performed on the varsity squad for two years and on graduation was appointed freshman coach, his first position as a sports mentor. He then accepted a coaching position at Eminence High School, scene of his high school days, in 1914. Gilford, in Dearborn County, his next assignment, won the Dearborn County conference in 1926. In 1928 he accepted a position at the Jasper County High School, where he organized his most successful quintet in his experience thus far. This school, under the tutelage of Mr. Curtis, won the Jasper County invitational tournament in 1929, two invitational tournaments during the years of 1930-31, the state free throw crown in 1930, scoring 410 out of a possible 500, was on the long end of nineteen out of twenty scheduled games in 1931, and won the Jasper County tournament in 1931. He then proceeded to French Lick in 1933, Sandborn in 1934-35, and is now executive of the Monmouth High School.

He has no evident activities outside of his high school duties except caring for two cows, a calf, and other farm chores, an occupation which seems to add delightful diversification to his daily pedagogical routine. Besides being the coach and principal, he teaches history, mathematics, and physical education.

He is, by the way, a cousin to Herb Curtis, former coach of the Decatur Yellow Jackets, and now at Southport and Glen Curtis, able mentor of the Martinsville Artesians.

You all right.
Yeah.

The faculty of the girls' high school, Atlanta, Georgia, will present "Orlando Furioso" as their annual play.

Girl Yell Leaders

Tourney fans will have the opportunity of seeing the yells, of at least one school entered in the tournament, led entirely by girls. Monmouth has two very attractive girl yell leaders. They are Marcia Garner and Leona Dornseif. For the benefit of the fellows who don't prefer blondes, these girls are both brunettes.

Central Tournament News Reporters Enjoy Assignments

Central's delegation to Decatur and Monmouth had one "swell" time combined with the work they were doing for the Tournament News. Those who embarked on the journey were Don Troxel, Bob Larimer, Dave Arnold, Harry Perriguy, and Orel Sprunger. Sprunger did the chauffeuring for the gang but Troxel shifted the gears and held the steering wheel most of the time, feeling quite important over his glowing accomplishments.

The band of youthful journalists stopped in at Monmouth first to soak in all available dope on that community's quintet. Coach Curtis kindly left his class to accommodate the demands of the five boisterous Centralites. Troxel finally summoned up enough courage to inquire meekly if they might have a ball to shoot baskets in order to create an appetite, since lunch was at the paper's expense. While Larimer labored industriously at his task of interviewing anybody interviewable, Sprunger, innocent of Troxel's dastardly intentions, racked his brain in an effort to organize a plan of economizing for the coming noon snack.

From there they went to the Decatur public high school, where they listlessly interviewed Coach Andrews, all the while concentrating intently on what they would order for dinner.

Everyone hurriedly piled into the "taxi" and spent a full halfhour on a debate of where to eat, finally deciding on a certain restaurant opposite the courthouse. After thoroughly enjoying their mid-day repast, a bill of $1.75 took away the remainder of their appetite.

Perriguy and Arnold then wended their way in quest of ads while Larimer, Troxel, and Sprunger returned to the school building. The latter, not being able to locate the coach, found their way to the gym where Bob Larimer, displaying his dynamic football form, finally wrested a basketball from the hands of the sixth graders then occupying the floor. Finally Coach Andrews appeared on the scene and the remainder of the afternoon was spent in waiting.

Their day's work done, the troupe proceeded on their way back to the "big city." On the journey back home, Troxel and Sprunger raised their talented voices to the "Sextet of Lucia," much to the dismay of the audience.

Monmouth Gymnasium Formerly A Church

Whether it's a gym or an old church, it makes no difference to the Monmouth net squad, which has been practicing and playing their games in a church converted into a gym. This church was converted into a suitable playing floor when the school called upon the townspeople for some means of gym equipment. Before this request was made the teams of the various years endured the cold and practiced their basketball out in the open.

As the request was made, ten men from the community went together and purchased an old church standing vacant out in the country. This was then moved to town and placed on a piece of land adjoining the school. A section of about 10 feet then needed in the center of the gym to make it long enough to make a half-way decent playing floor. This completed the Monmouth high school had an improvised gym which served their purpose.

As the visiting reporters entered the building they saw a small but practical hardwood. On either end there is a large mat against the wall which prevents injury to the players as they charge under the basket. These mats were presented by the classes of '36 and '37. There are two large wooden baskets that serve their purpose excellently because of the smoothness and their true vertical positions.

This gym seats at least 100 at the basketball games and about 200 at plays and other meetings. The heat is furnished by a large stove on one side that fulfills its purpose very satisfactorily.

Boys Are Guests

Jim Ellenwood and Fred Nye were guests Tuesday noon at a dinner given by the Kiwanis Club for the outstanding athletes of Fort Wayne and their coaches. The principal speaker was Coach McMillen from Indiana University. Faculty members who attended from South Side are Coach Lundy Welborn and Mr. Ward O. Gilbert. Other high schools were represented by Bojinnoff and Poorman from North Side, Sitko and Kabisch from Central, and Agenbroad and O'Connor from Central Catholic. Coaches Bob Nulf from North Side, Murray Mendenhall from Central, and Bill Barrett from Central Catholic were also among the guests.

Miss Fiedler Absent

Miss Adelaide Fiedler, head of the mathematics department, has been ill at her home at 905 Columbia Avenue, with influenza. She was unable to be at school on Tuesday or Wednesday; however, she is expected back today. Mrs. Ora M. Davis has been acting as substitute in her place.

Amelia Earhart To Speak

Miss Amelia Earhart, famous American aviatrix, will talk to the pupils of Hamilton High School, Hamilton, Ohio. The talk will be on her experiences in flying.

Monmouth Hi-Lights

Monmouth is a small town about two miles north of Decatur on State Road 27, and has a population of between 50 and 60.

The Monmouth boys are under the colors of Black and Old Gold and are dubbed the Eagles.

A good basketball season is not the only admirable sport record hung up by the Monmouth school. That school's nine won the Adams County softball championship last year for the fifth consecutive year, scoring 69 runs to their opponents' 12.

The Eagles are in third place in county standings, Berne and the Decatur Commies being the only ones to lead them. However, the Monmouth quintet downed the parochial netters twice in the season, 27-17, and very decisively, 30-7.

The high school building is composed of six rooms and all are heated by steam, thus traveling back and forth to school is all that bothered the students during the recent cold spell.

The graduating class of '36 will number six boys and six girls, and of the six boys graduating, four are on the varsity basketball team.

This winter was the worst since 1873, and consequently the Monmouth netters equipped with a not too warm gym and the fact that the players lived some distance from the school made it impossible for the team to practice regularly. In fact, the Custis men have not had a decent practice since Christmas, due to these conditions.

Monmouth's most exciting game of the season was probably the tilt played with Hoagland, Allen County champs and the Eagle's most bitter rivals. The game was going into the final minute with Monmouth on the long end of a 21-20 score. The echo of the gun resounded through the improvised gym, but a foul occurred simultaneously with the shot and Hoagland converted to tie the score. The game went

North Side Redskins Expect To Go Far In Tournament

Redskins Win Ten, Lose Four Net Battles

Six, Largest Number Of Games In Winning Streak For North Side Five.

Lose Twice To Central Tigers

Redskins Rank Fourth In N. E. I. Conference; Wins Five, Loses Three

The Redskins' 1935-36 season has been comparatively good as the team lost four games and won ten. The Northern five suffered only one losing streak in which four games were lost. The most games the Red won in a row was six.

North Side started out with a bang, defeating the strong Masonic Home five by a score of 25 to 14. The following week, however, the Red lost to Central 33 to 25. This game was a City Series tilt.

Decatur was the next to fall before the Northerners to the tune of 31 to 23. This was an N. E. I. C. tilt. New Haven was next in line, and the Red defeated them 33 to 15. Peru was taken down a notch when the Red beat them 19 to 15.

The next game was a City Series battle with South Side; and, finally, after a tough battle, North Side came out on top by one point, 11 to 10. The Marion Giants, considered one of the strongest teams in the state, was set back considerably when the Red triumphed over them 22 to 12.

Central Catholic came next and the Redskins added another scalp, beating them 29 to 10. A N. E. I. C. tilt came next, and the Redskins still went on their winning spree and downed the Hartford City Airedales, 34 to 21.

The Central Tigers ended North Side's winning streak when they defeated them 31 to 14. This game was an N. E. I. C. tilt as well as a City Series game.

South Side swept over the Redskins 26 to 16. In a double overtime game with Auburn, North Side lost by a single free throw, 45 to 44. Columbia City was the next defaeter of the Red, beating them 35 to 24.

North Side emerged from their losing slump when they defeated Kendallville, 38 to 16. Bluffton came next, the Red downing them 28 to 22. At the time this is being written the North Side-Huntington game has not been played.

The Redskins rank fourth in the N. E. I. C., having won five and lost three.

Redskin Hardwood Site Of Regionals

Two First Round Tilts To Be Played In Afternoon, Final At Night

Date To Be March 14

Central High School was named host of the regional tourney of its district according to the announcement of the 1936 regional tournament centers made by Arthur L. Trester, Indiana High School Athletic Association Commissioner, on January 14.

The tournament will be held at the North Side High School gymnasium on March 14, and will be composed of two sessions. The two first round games will be played in the afternoon, with the championship clash staged in the evening. There will be four teams in the Fort Wayne regional, namely, the winners of the sectional tourneys held at Fort Wayne, Bluffton, Huntington, and Portland.

Central and South Side appear to be the logical pre-tourney favorites of the Fort Wayne sectional, while Berne, last year's regional champs, and Bluffton are installed as early favorites at the Bluffton center. Hartford City appears to be the outstanding team in the Portland sectional, while Huntington is expected to capture the sectional meet at that city, with Roanoke rated as a threat to upset the Vikings. However, none of these prognostications can be taken definitely, because sectional tournaments are noted for upsets, and this year should be no different than those of the past.

Regional tourney duets, involving four sectional champs, can be purchased for 75 cents.

Redskin Coach

Robert Nulf

Mr. Robert Nulf, head coach in football and basketball, who brought to North Side its first city football championship, is sending his Redskin basketballers into the sectional for the second time.

Bob, as he is known to most of the lettermen, was educated at Butler University and University of Illinois, where he played in football, basketball and baseball. He won letters in these sports for two years.

Coaching has been Bob's occupation seven years, two of which have been at North Side. Bob also coached at Norwiche, New York, and at Central in Fort Wayne.

Mr. Nulf is married and has a small son named Terry. His hobbies are hunting, fishing, football, basketball, and, in his spare time, refereeing a few basketball games.

"This year's team has done far better than was expected the first of the season and has won more games than the average years at North Side," Mr. Nulf stated.

Team Equipment Backbone Is Found To Be Backbreak

The student managers are the backbone of the football and basketball equipment staff.

Our illustrious staff is composed of John Walley, Phil Olofson, Jimmy Haskins, and Bob Tone. Mr. John Walley is the beeg-a-boss. He's the guy that reposes with an extra double dip ice cream cone while he bosses the other stooges.

First in line we shall have the smallest "stoogent" manager, Jimmy Haskins. Jimmy is exactly four feet tall and weighs 62 pounds. Taking care of the towel is his job.

Bob Tone is a freshman, and his job to see that the basketballs are spic and span. That's so the players won't soil their hands.

The "Brain Child" of the group is: Phil (I bane Swede) Olofson. Phil takes care of all the "statostics" for Coach Nulf.

And last but not least is John (Take a bow) Walley, the boss. John is a faithful servant and he sees that the basketball players do not appear on the floor in football uniforms.

Going on road games is the objective of every manager. But to go on "road games means work, but, after all, think of all the pretty girls you meet. For their services the underclassmen receive numerals; and, if they become senior manager they receive a letter, if they're lucky.

However, putting all kidding aside, the managers really work. So what's say and give the boys a hand 'cause they've done nice work this season.

offered to teach him the art of telegraphy, and the proposition was eagerly accepted.

Some time later, while working as an operator, Edison invented a telegraph repeater by means of which the speed of a message could be retarded, so that he could easily handle dispatches which came in so fast that he could not transcribe them. Through a series of inventions useful in the stock market, he received $40,000 with which he established a factory in Newark, New Jersey, where he engaged in the manufacture of electrical appliances until 1874, when owing to poor health, he gave up the factory, and began to experiment in a laboratory at Menlo Park, New Jersey. Here he devoted all his time to experimental work, and it was here on October 21, 1879, that he perfected the incandescent lamp.

Edison worked on some of his in-

"Please, Please Yell At The Sectionals," Plead Yell Leaders

North Side fans will be expected to yell at all the sectional games in which North Side's quintet is involved. The yell leaders will attend all the sessions and will lead the regular sessions and yells.

Mr. Loy Laney has also asked that all the Redskin fans try to sit together. There will be a regular reserved section for all the fans from the different sections. Therefore the choice seats will be filled unless the North Side fans get in their seats early for each session.

The yell leaders have asked that the pep be at a high level at all times whether the Red and White team be ahead or behind. For the benefit of the new freshmen and others who don't know the opening yell, here it is.

Warriors Eternal Optimists, Hope To Be Sectional Champs

Thud—thud—thud is the only sound that can be heard from the gym anytime after 3:20 o'clock every night after school. And when your inquiring reporter was wandering down around the gym, he heard the usual sound mixed in with a few instructions yelled out by Coach Nulf.

We opened the door at the northern entrance to the gym. Someone "holered" in a rather large voice for such a small boy, telling me to get out of the way. Jim Haskins with his arms full of basketballs was stumbling around trying to get out the door.

Seeing a chance to satisfy our questions, we started after him.

"What, my little fellow, do you think of our chances in the sectionals?"

Jim, a smart little fellow, came back with a snappy answer, "It's all according to whom we play." And that, my friends, is a rather intelligent answer for the freshman class president.

As we wandered around, the first victim we came across was a dark fellow with black hair, dark skin, (and girls, does he ever look swell in a white basketball suit). He had a build like a Greek god.

As usual we asked him our one and only question. The answer was very slow in coming; but when it did it was full of real, honest self confidence.

"We'll make it tough for any of them," was what Pete Bojinnoff, forward on our team, had to say.

Jim Shollenberger came over and joined our friendly circle. Jim, our rather tall, smart forward, came up from Shortridge last year where he served as captain of the reserve basketball team.

Our black haired forward stated in answer to my query, "If we get the breaks in the draw, we ought to win."

And then six foot two inches of good basketball player wandered over because of pure curiosity (we hope) to our huddle. "Corky" Ryan plays a good game at the center position, so we qualified him as a logical man to know something about our chances in the sectionals.

"Corky" says, "Just as good a chance as any other team. We can't promise that we'll win; however, you won't have to be ashamed of our record in the tournament." (A rather talkative fellow.)

"Piggie" Foster and Ed Boedeker were later contacted when they came sweating to the bench. We fired our question to them and in return we got about the same sort of answer that we received from the rest of the first ten. Foster, a rather short, blond curly-haired, finely-built boy, said that we would win if we get the breaks. Boedeker is also a short fellow who, unlike "Piggie" Foster, has been on the team for the whole season, Foster having served well in the last five or six games.

Ed said very pessimistically, "We've got a good chance."

Goodman, a quiet and reserved fellow on and off the hardwood, answered the question in a rather alarming way for such a quiet boy.

He broke forth and said, "I don't see why we can't win the tournament."

When the rest of the team saw that they were going to get their names in the paper they crowded around and the statements came thick and fast.

Friedrich was first to make himself heard above the babble of the crowd.

His statement was, "All we need is one break and we are positive of a win." (Continued on page 19)

Eight Of Twelve Tourney Players Underclassmen

One characteristic that has been notable in past North Side athletic teams, is the fact that most of the varsity squads have been composed of graduating seniors. This year, however, the team, and consequently the school, is fortunate in having eight of the twelve tourney squad members eligible for participation next year.

Although the Redskins lose Jimmy Shollenberger, "Corky" Ryan, Pete Bojinnoff, and Joe Goodman, a good team is expected to be developed from the eight remaining bucketers, six of whom have received varsity experience.

Height will be lacking in next year's team, but speed, accuracy, and all around class, are expected to make up for this deficiency. This is one of the cases where elimination of the center jump would greatly improve the chances of a small but fast team.

Heading the list of our underclassmen basketballers, is none other than Eddie Boedeker, fast little guard. Ed is especially good on defense, is noted for his cool playing, and can hit the net to a pretty tune. Ed is 5 feet 8 inches, is 16 years old, and is only a sophomore.

Our second varsity boy who, being a junior, has another year to play, is Norm Foster. "Piggie" handles the ball well, and is also noted for his sniping. He has been playing first string ball the latter part of the season. He stands 5 feet 8 inches.

Warren Miller, who usually plays at forward, is also a junior, and shows much promise for next year. He plays a steady, consistent game. He is one of those fellows that is popular with fans and teammates alike.

George Elliott, whose speed and accuracy mark him as outstanding, is only a sophomore, and has two years of varsity ball yet to play.

"Herm" Friedrick is another junior. He is a scrappy ball player, and is in there, good on defense and offense as well. This is Herm's first year at North Side.

Bob Rupel, who usually plays guard, is a junior. He played reserve ball last year. His outstanding qualities being on defense.

The two other boys who complete the junior tourney squad, are both big boys who show much promise. Bob Horne and Dick Fruechtenicht, both standing six feet one inch, are only sophomores, and should develop into fine ball players.

These eight boys are expected to form the nucleus of the '36-'37 Redskin basketball squad. In addition to these boys, a well-balanced squad of reserves is on hand, and thus, under the competent tutelage of Coach Bob Nulf, a good squad should be developed for next year.

Pupils To Give Play

The pupils of Pomona High School, California, are planning to give the play, "The Merchant of Venice." This is the first Shakespearean play to be given by the drama department.

Trojans Have Good Record; Runner-up In County Meet

Elmhurst Wins Sixteen Games Lose Only Four

Trojans Compile Impressive Basket Record For New Hardwood Mentor, Byerly

Eliminated In Finals Of Allen County Meet

Central Catholic Of Fort Wayne Falls Prey To The Elmhurst Trojans

Elmhurst's Trojans, battling under a new basketball mentor, Dwight Byerly, have compiled an impressive hardwood record, downing many quintets heretofore unbeaten by an Elmhurst team. The Trojans' ledger totals sixteen games won, while losing four—All County tourney inclusive—up to February 20.

Roanoke, Ossian, Central Catholic, Concordia, and Butler fell before the Trojan onslaught, while making a good account of themselves against Decatur Catholic and St. Mary's of Huntington despite ending on the short end of the count.

Elmhurst opened its campaign by downing Roanoke and Arcola, but Leo proved a stumbling block, doubling the count on the Trojans, 15-30. Ten consecutive victories gradually appeared before Decatur Catholic nosed a one-point victory, 36-37. The teams falling by the wayside during the Trojan win streak were Churubusco, Hoagland, Ossian twice, New Haven, Central Catholic, Concordia, Woodburn, Harlan, and Butler.

The Trojans, attempting to retain their Allen County tourney crown, downed Harlan and Leo, but lost to Hoagland in a slow game for the championship.

The Scarlet and Gray bounced back in the winning column by taking Woodburn into camp, 35-29, but lost to Huntington St. Mary's. In their last game to date, Arcola fell by the wayside, 45-27. The tabulated results are as follows:

November 1—Roanoke, 31-17.
November 8—Arcola, 34-17.
November 15—Leo, 15-30.
November 16—Churubusco, 34-11.
November 22—Hoagland, 28-23.
November 27—Ossian, 39-21.
December 6—New Haven, 31-27.
December 7—Cen. Catholic, 20-19.
December 20—Concordia, 29-12.
December 21—Woodburn, 31-12.
January 3—Ossian, 38-21.
January 4—Harlan, 32-31.
January 10—Butler, 18-13.
January 17—Decatur Cath., 36-37.
January 24—Harlan, 45-24.
January 25—Leo, 28-21.
January 25—Hoagland, 23-26.
January 31—Woodburn, 35-29.
February 12—St. Marys, 28-32.
February 14—Arcola, 45-27.

Elmhurst H.S. Has Outstanding Gym

New Scoreboard Recently Installed; Gym And Auditorium Combined

One of the outstanding parts of the Elmhurst High School is their gymnasium. It is in this spacious room that the Trojans play their hardwood contests and hold their entertainments.

At one end of the gym is a large stage, suitable for any high school production, with a beautiful gray curtain. On either side of this is a dressing room equipped with showers and other modern appliances. Among other equipment in the gym are the two glass backboards which enable all persons to see the game without difficulty. Horizontal ladders, climbing poles, swinging rings, and hair mats also aid in enabling them to have a complete line of modern gymnastic work.

Adding to the attractiveness of the gym is the new electric scoreboard that has been recently installed.

The gym has a seating capacity of 250 for basketball games, while it easily holds 700 used as an auditorium.

Trojans Last Year Softball Champs

Many Persons In Track, Softball, And Golf Were Lost By Graduation

Track, softball, and golf will be the main sports this spring at Elmhurst. Softball will probably be the most important of the sports this season. Last fall the Trojan team was Allen County Softball champs. This spring, as yet, there will be no county league. The squad will be picked from all those who go out for the team, with exceptions of all seniors. The spring softball will be opened with idea of getting material for next fall's team. The positions of first base, right short stop, center field, right field, second base and catcher will be left vacant by Lauer, Carriger, Miller Churchward, Beaman, and C. Engle respectively. These men will be lost by graduation. The position of first base, short stop and catcher will be the hardest to be filled because they are the most difficult places to play. Parkison, as pitcher, Alberts at left short stop, Bade at left field, and Scherer at third base will be the remaining men on the team.

The results of Elmhurst's softball games last year were as follows:

Elmhurst 8, Huntertown 2.
Elmhurst 15, Arcola 7.
Elmhurst 4, Hoagland 3.
Elmhurst 6, Huntertown 3.
Elmhurst 9, Arcola 2.
Elmhurst 19, Lafayette 15.
Elmhurst 32, Lafayette 10.

Golf is recognized as a minor sport in Elmhurst but is gaining popularity as the team plays more. The golf team has won many awards. It has entered several meets in the past years and won recognition in winning them. All those interested in golf should see Mr. Byerly in the near future, because several men are needed to make a successful team. Dale McKinzie is probably the only senior who will have a chance to stick on the team.

Track will be next in line as the popularity among the boys. Any student, including seniors, may go out for the track team. There will probably be very few seniors going out for the track team. Fred Cronau, Charles Lauer, Charles Engle, and Don Koons are the only seniors who were on the track team last year. Each one placed in several meets. Coach Byerly is expecting to have many boys out for track and have a complete team of about fifteen or twenty men.

Mr. Dwight Byerly Is Trojan Mentor

Besides Coaching At Elmhurst He Has Been Coach At Arcola and Avilla

Mr. Dwight Byerly, the Trojan mentor, has proved to be a very capable coach since he has turned his head toward that task on graduation from college. In his eight years of tutoring athletic teams he has been located at Arcola, Avilla, and now at the home of the Trojans.

Upon graduation from the Kirkland High School, where he played varsity basketball, Byerly entered Manchester College, where he continued his studies. While attending this school he continued to show his athletic ability and was a member of the varsity net squad for three years.

His first position as a coach was at Arcola where he remained for four years. During the period the Arcola team was under his direction they experienced an average number of wins.

Mr. Byerly was then transferred to the Avilla school where he turned out two county champions. During the last year of coaching at Avilla his team won 17 of 20 games besides putting the county championship under their belts.

Since he has been transferred to Elmhurst, where he also teaches United States history, and physical education, besides coaching basketball, baseball, track and golf teams.

There were six teams with whom the Snipers played this season, they include Roanoke, Arcola, Woodburn, Coesse, Clear Creek, and Huntertown. A good team is expected next year, although two of the senior girls will be leaving. There will be some good prospects in the coming sophomore girls next year. The squad is as follows:

Elmhurst Glee Club To Give Opperetta Soon

Miss Steiber Will Direct Musical Production, "The Sunbonnet Girl"

Cast Is Named

Elmhurst's Glee Club, under the direction of Miss Steiber, will present its annual operetta the last of March. The operetta, "The Sunbonnet Girl," was written by G. F. Morgan and F. G. Johnson and will support the following main cast: Helen Fusselman as Susan Clifton; Jack Harper as Bob Coleman; Kathleen Scott, as Barbara Coleman; and James Bell, as Jerry Jackson.

The plot of the musical production is one of interest and employs many tuneful melodies. The story centers about a young lady, Susan Clifton, an orphan of musical parents. She has been placed under guardianship of a skintight couple who treat "the Sunbonnet Girl" in a mean close-fisted manner.

An authority on music arrives in town, with her son, daughter, and their chum, and conducts a musical contest in which Susan would like to enter, but is refused the privilege by her stingy guardian. The young leading lady then makes acquaintance with the sponsor's family and confides with them on the subject of her life, her new friends promising to help.

The second act discloses the contest with all the competitors taking part. The last one to participate is Susan, who is garbed in finery and whose fine performance wins her the prize. The musician's son falls in love with her and his sister, with the chum. It is discovered that the guardian has withheld Susan's inheritance and the play ends with the scene of a double wedding.

Scholarship Offered By School For Girls

Scholarships for girls in the tenth, eleventh and twelfth grades are offered by the Frances Shimer Junior College for Girls of Mount Carroll, Illinois. The award, valued at $200, is for the College of Fine Arts.

The basis for the award is the scholastic standing in high school. Graduates may also apply for the scholarship, but they must not be of more than two years' standing and not enrolled in another college. Girls interested in the Shimer award should see Mr. Snider.

South Side Will Be Real Threat In Sectional Tournament

Archers Win Ten Net Tilts Out Of Twenty

Defeat North Side, Central, And C. C. In City Games; Place Second In City Race.

Friddlemen Win, Lose In Streaks

Have Three Three-Game Winning Streaks, Two Three-Game Losing Streaks

South Side's Archers have enjoyed a fairly successful season during the 1935-36 net campaign by emerging victorious ten times in twenty starts and taking second in the city race.

The Archers started off with a bang in the first game by defeating Butler by the score of 38-17, but lost to a powerful Michigan City squad the next night by the score of 27-22. Coach Friddle, Close, Speaker and Hall at forwards, started at center, and Reichert and Miller at guards. A varied lineup was used in the Michigan City game, which proved to be fairly effective.

In their next game, South Side netters lost to the powerful Bluffton Tigers by the score of 16-23. South Side then stepped out in their next two games to defeat Auburn to the tune of 44-25 and the following night to trim Pierceton 39-25. In the blind tournament during Christmas vacation South Side played Central on even terms for three full quarters before going down to defeat before the Bengals. In the consolation game, North Side defeated South Side by the score of 29-25. It was in this game with Central that Joe Close twisted his ankle, and could not participate in the North Side game.

The following week North Side again defeated the Archers, but this time the score was very low, 10-11. South Side outplayed the Redskins except in the most important department, that being making their baskets stick. It was since this game that Coach Friddle improved Bud Lee's shooting to the extent that he was becoming a serious threat. The Green then lost their next two games, falling before the Kendallville Comets by the close score of 24-25. It was a very lucky basket in the closing seconds that enabled the Comets to win. The following night, the Archers fell before the Decatur Yellow Jackets, 22-25.

The Archers had hit a losing streak and it seemed that they would not have a chance against Central the next week. But South Side pulled a surprise and, with a last-minute rally, defeated the Tigers 29-25. Bud Lee and Carl Hall were the outstanding players, with the rest of the team coming close. After the Central game, the Archers seemed to hit another slump and lost their next three games. The first one was to Columbia City, by the score of 36-25. The following game, the Archers travelled to Berne and put up a stiff battle before losing to the Bears, 25-26. Froebel of Gary brought their strong team down here and went home on the long end of a 25-23 count.

Huntington then came to the Green gym and received a 33-13 beating. Hartford City visited the Archers and received a 28-20 defeat. North Side then came here with the high hopes of defeating the South Side quintet, but had to be content with a defeat by a ten-point margin.

In the next game, between Central and South Side, the City title was at stake. The game was very interesting for three quarters, but in the fourth period, the boys from uptown put on a spurt and set the Friddlemen back with a 32-21 count. In the three final games South Side emerged victorious over Central Catholic and South Bend Central, and lost to Goshen.

South Side Band To Add Its Music To Net Festivity

An added feature of South Side's portion of the tournament will be the Archer band under the direction of Jack W. Wainwright, music instructor. The band will play only at the games in which the South Side netters participate. Other schools are expected to bring their bands to contribute to the program.

South Side's band consists of approximately eighty pupils who are interested in music. Some instruments belong to the members while others are provided by the Wainwright Camps.

The type of music which will be played will be the marches. Several new selections by famous composers, such as John Philip Sousa and Edwin Franko Goldman, have been introduced and worked on.

Uniforms of the band adhere to school colors while trousers and green jackets are worn. Black shoes and black capes, lined with white and bearing the school initial complete the costumes.

Archers Given Even Chance In Tourney

South Side Faculty Men Make Comments On Green's Possibilities

Much Depends On Draw

According to the following comments from the knowing sportsmen of the South Side faculty, the state tournament this year will not hold its usual interest, and South Side will win the sectional tourney if given a break in the drawings.

When asked: "What do you think of the way the tournament is to be staged this year?" "Who do you think will win our sectional tourney and why?" the following faculty members' remarks were as follows:

Mr. Welborn: "The extra week of tournament play will take away much of the state-wide interest in the finals. If it will reduce the pressure on coaches in some schools it will be a fine thing. This, however, cannot be told until after it has been tried out for a few years.

"The sectional winner here for the past few years has depended much on the luck of the draw. This year will be no exception; in fact I think the final winner will have to depend more on the luck of the pairings than on the number of good teams. South Side has drawn the easy bracket for the past few years."

Mr. Tudor: "I don't believe that the present tourney system will remain in force for a very long time. The boys will miss those gala days at Indianapolis; so I think that possibly next year or surely the year after, we will return to the old system of holding the tourneys.

Mr. Davis: "I don't believe that there is any necessity for the new arrangement of the tourneys. The reasons advanced for making a change are based on fears that are groundless. I think that 'interest' will be less than in previous years.

"I suspect that Central will win the Sectional. They have a lot of power. If their second five players can beat us, it may be too bad if their first five 'turns on the heat.'"

Mr. Windmiller: "I think in the sectional tournament it is a good plan for the winner not to play more than two games in one day, but it seems that the new system is going to take most of the 'kick' out of the state tourney.

"It is hard to determine the winner of a sectional, but with a good draw and a few good breaks South Side may win."

Mr. Gilbert: "I do not like it. I do not think the old method hurt anyone. The 'big show' at Indianapolis, as I see it, is gone. It will hold interest only for the four teams that go that far. After one month of play, I cannot see how the interest will hold.

"I believe South Side is due. They have come along in fine shape, showing a steady improvement in all their games."

Mr. Briner: "There are three reasons why I think we should adopt the new system. We will lose only one day of school while we lost two before. This new system will keep the basketball fans in a certain amount of frenzy for another week. Players will get more rest between games.

Archer Coach, Burl Friddle, Makes Good In First Year

Although this season's results may not show it to the unobserving, Coach Burl Friddle has accomplished amazing things with the raw material he inherited in his first season as net mentor for the Archers. Few people realize the extra burdens that have been placed upon him. The new rules added two extra burdens for him to overcome. These new rules called for a new style of play and this meant that he must train his players to this style. However, Burl did not let this extra job hold him back; he set grimly to the task of whipping a five together that he had never worked with before. It was here his efficiency stood forth, for he completed this job admirably. It was here that his undaunted spirit made a team that any school would be proud of.

Burl's fame on the hardwood first goes to the days that he attended Franklin High School. While at that school, he was a member of the famous Wonder Five that took the State Championship three years in a row. Under Griz Wagner, Burl became an outstanding player of the Franklin College basketball team.

The Washington Hatchets have always been in the limelight at the State Tournament through his coaching. In 1930 he led the Hatchets to the state crown and four other times they represented their section at the state but failed to get the title.

This year the Archers are rated among the first teams of the sectional, and Coach Friddle has established the Archers among the leading teams of the state. Every student of South Side should be proud to have such a coach for the Archers.

Four South Side Men To Officiate

Briner, Welborn, McClure, Tudor To Referee In Other Sectionals

Four athletically-inclined members of South Side's faculty will "blow through here" and let the "music go 'round and 'round and come out here" during the sectional tourneys this week end. According to the present arrangements Mr. Louis Briner will do the whistle-blowing in the Kendallville tourney. Mr. Jake McClure and Mr. Lundy Welborn will defy the lustiest boos of the spectators at the Muncie tourney. Mr. Maurice Tudor has drawn the tough Richmond sectional, a twelve-team affair with only two officials.

List Members Of South Side Tourney Team

Fine Players Are Promoted From Reserves To First Squad

Eight Are Underclassmen

Twelve men will carry the Green and White of South Side into the Sectional tourney on March 2; four seniors, three juniors, three sophomores, and two freshmen, namely Joe Close, Bud Lee, Jim Ellenwood, Don Reichert, Carl Hall, John Hines, and Roy Speaker, who have confined their activities to the varsity this season, and Robert Budde, Harold Kitzmiller, Ed Miller, Dick Frazell, and Jim Glass, who have been promoted from the reserve squad to the tournament team.

Carl Hall, long-range sharpshooter, has achieved varsity success as a sophomore as has Johnny Hines, who has served the purpose of playing great defensive games as well as proving a steady influence on the team. Both Hines and Hall, who reach heights of 6 feet and 5 feet 10½ inches respectively, seem rather shy of the fair sex, but remember, they're only sophomores.

Joe Close, who regularly holds down the center position, evidently suffers none of the qualms of the aforementioned sophomores in respect to the ladies. Close, a senior who measures 6 feet 2 inches has had three years of experience, and plays a consistently fine game.

Jim Ellenwood, a senior, who plays at both the guard and center positions, scales 6 feet ½ inch and stands out for the Archers as a steady defensive player as well as being offensively valuable by constantly working himself free for pot shots from under the basket.

Don Reichert, who is a rangy junior forward and reaches 6 feet ½ inch in height, advanced from last year's reserve team to a varsity berth this season. He is a consistent sniper but his love life seems to be somewhat lacking.

Ray Speaker, tap-dancing forward, is the shortest member of this year's team, standing only 5 feet 5½ inches. Only a freshman, he is shifty and fast but his lack of height somewhat hinders him against tall opponents.

Bud Lee, who has shown the greatest improvement on the squad this season, stands 5 feet 10½ inches, and is probably the spearhead of the South

Gala Tourney-Time Here Again-Senior Writes Of Memories

Once more South Side is to participate in one of those gala basketball tournaments which are held annually. Does it not give you a tingle of real pleasure to have high spots of "a year ago tonight" come back for you to enjoy once again? You "fresh" are only beginning and have much pleasure to which you may look forward, but we seniors are in a rather different position, a reminiscent one. We envy you!

Last year's games are, of course, the most fresh in our minds. How well we remember Brower George and Robert Nelson putting up a fine battle on the floor, and Jean Creighton and Virginia Gardner putting up an equally fine moral fight from their "grand stand" seats. That is not entirely of a joke, for those loyal girls actually did stand during those tourney battles.

Our team, as well as our school, displayed some admirable sportsmanship. The friendliness, too, shown by the yell leaders, who led schools other than their own in yells, permeated through the entire crowd. Some years, we were not quite so "flush" as in others; so those times found some of us hugging our respective radios. The joy even carried through that mechanism, for each team had many enthusiastic supporters spurring them on with hearty cheers. The bands from various schools added to that gay atmosphere; even the Coca Cola and candy sellers are a part of our fond memories.

However, the feeling which it gives us is that we are fortunate to have had so much fun out of high school life, for coupled with the work, we have had play, and together they have given each one of us an indescribable treasure which "time cannot take nor thief purloin. Oh better than the mounting of a gold-crowned king is the safe-kept memory of a lovely thing."

On To The Regional

Side attack. His one-handed shots are unusually effective and he is an excellent defensive player. Bud "gets around" with the girls and as a consequence is much admired by the fair sex.

These are the fellows who will see the bulk of the action for South Side in the tournament. They may be lacking in girl friends but they certainly aren't in basketball ability.

Yea, Archers

We, the undersigned, solemnly swear to boost South Side in the Tournament

Warriors Established As A Team To Watch In Sectional

Blue And White Close Schedule With Triumph

Great Improvement Shown In Play At Harlan Tilt Over Other 17 Contests.

Sectional Marks Last Games For 3 Players

Next Year's Chances Are Good From Looks Of Present Second Team

Woodburn's Warriors brought to a wonderful finish a not-so-wonderful season when they easily whipped the Harlan quintet two weeks ago. However, their '35-'36 season did not come out as happily as did this game, and the Warriors finished on the long end of the score only seven times in seventeen starts. On the basis of the season record, the Woodburn five, therefore, is not expected to go too far in the sectional, but on the basis of the play in this last game, this team is established as one to watch.

The team, coached by Norbert Fuelling, is built around Captain Mervil Lowden, a senior; Lawrence Pabst, also a senior; and Ed McCarthy, high-scoring junior. Chances for a good season received a severe set-back this winter with the ineligibility of Roger Hannenratt. Next season holds much promise for the Blue and White, as Lowden, Pabst, and Dolan Cramer will be the only members lost by graduation. Ed McCarthy and Roger Hannenratt will be the nucleus, with several promising youngsters also available for next year's team, as Woodburn has an up and coming second team. They have won fifty percent of their games to date, and are rapidly improving. When some of them step into the first place next year, they are going to be plenty tough to defeat. Next year's team will consist of McCarthy, Steinman, Hetrick, Knoblauch, Schaff, Yerks, Schaper, and Hannenratt.

In winning their seven tilts this season, the Warriors downed Monroeville twice and Harlan, Hamilton, Paulding, Arcola, and Coesee once each. The Blue squad in turn fell before the onslaughts of Leo, Elmhurst, and Hoagland twice, and once each before Pleasant Lake, Harlan, Berne, and Hunt-ertown. Last year Woodburn fared better, emerging victorious in ten out of twenty tilts. The graduation of four of the first five last June is greatly responsible for this season's record. Blue and White netters competed in one tourney this year, the county tourney. Their luck was against them in the draw, however, and they drew Lafayette Central as their first round opponent. The strong Lafayette Central quintet emerged victorious.

Strange, But True

The Woodburn School is not the Woodburn School at all; it is officially The Maumee Township High School. Neither is the school located in Woodburn—it is located in Shirley City at the Woodburn postoffice. So when asked where he is from, a student from this high school answers, "From the Maumee Township High School in Shirley City, at Woodburn."

Shirley City is really a city, it has a mayor and other "city officials."

Look closely,—two of the boys on the team have black hair and blue eyes. There is only one blond on the team and there are no "red heads" in high school.

There are four Moser families in the vicinity of Woodburn, and none of them is related.

Three of the teachers in the school at Woodburn are members of the graduating class of 1921. The other two members of that class are teaching elsewhere.

If all the players on the Woodburn team were one player, what a big player he would be! He would measure 58 feet 1 inch and tip the scales at 1485 pounds and he would be something like 164 years old!

Seniors Graduate Selves The senior class of Central High School, Tulsa, Oklahoma, have voted to use senior talent to provide the program for the graduation exercises.

Improvements At Woodburn High

Electric Scoreboard, Public Address System, Typing Equipment Are Newest Features

Although it has only eighty-five students enrolled in the high school division of the combined grade and high school, Woodburn has good reason to be proud of the three latest additions to the school, a public address system, an electric scoreboard in the gym, and completely modern typing equipment.

The public address system, built by Principal Glenn C. Henderson and Coach Norbert Fuelling, with the aid of the Pan-American Engineering Company, consists of a speaker in each room connected to a microphone in the principal's office. A buzzer signal is used to tell the teachers when to turn on the speakers in their individual rooms. A radio in the office may be tuned in on a certain program, silenced so it will not disturb those in the office, and turned on in the room or rooms to which it will serve as an educational device. The speaker system, however the result of over a month's work, is not quite finished.

The microphone is moved into the gym on the nights Woodburn plays basketball, and is used to announce through speakers there the starting lineups, substitutions, and other helpful information throughout the game. The speakers in the gym thus go together with the new electric scoreboard to make it one of the best-equipped gyms in this part of the state. The scoreboard, also made by the principal and the coach, is complete with remote controls operating electrically the numerals, showing the score, the number of minutes left to play, the number of the quarter; and a scorekeeper's horn. The principal usually will operate both at games, but during his illness of two weeks, the two new systems were initiated in the Harlan game by Mr. Wilmer Rekeeweg.

W. W. Schubert, commercial head, can well be proud of the equipment in his typing room. Seventeen new Woodstock machines rest on new desk and chair combinations. The chair, connected to the desk, holds the typer in good posture at the correct distance from the typewriter.

Now Let Us Turn For A Minute To View Woodburn Warriresses

Lavina Messman, captain and forward on the girls' team, is a senior and has played for three years. She is an excellent shot and always gets her share of the points.

Cathleen Cairns, senior, has played three years for the Warriresses. Having made good as a forward, Fuelling saw better possibilities as a guard, and now she holds her own with the best of guards.

Edith Knoblauch, also a senior, has played three years and developed into an excellent guard. She is always in the game with plenty of scrap.

Marg Moser, forward and guard, is a senior and has been playing four years. She can play two positions very well, and also has scrap.

Marie Moser, freshman sister to Marg, also plays regular at forward and guard, and shows promises of being an all sniper next year.

Laurabelle Steinman, a sophomore forward on the girls' team, has plenty of speed, and will be a future star for the Warriresses.

Clara Yarrington, a sophomore guard, has been playing a good game, in spite of many injuries.

Fern Stauffer, a junior forward, sees much action and is usually relied upon to pull the game out of the fire.

The seasons results follow: Woodburn 24, Coesee 32. Woodburn 31, Monmouth 17. Woodburn 36, Elmhurst 42. Woodburn 16, Huntertown 21. Woodburn 23, Monmouth 18. Woodburn 29, Arcola 47. Woodburn 8, Paulding 14. Woodburn 33, Elmhurst 39.

Warrior Highlights

Mervil Lowden, the Warriors' flashy six-foot captain, will be seen in action again this year at the sectional tourney. Because of his drive, aggressiveness, and basket sniping ability, he is expected to add much color to the Warrior team.

"Eddie" McCarthy, who stars continually at guard position, hails from North Side, and although this is the first year he has played basketball, he is the backbone of the Warrior squad. He specializes in leading the attack, and is a wizard at left handed shots. He is also an ex-football player.

"Doe" Kroemer, another first year man, and also a former Redskin, fits perfectly into the Warrior lineup. He is a clever forward, possesses a wicked left, and is better known as the Warriors' basket artist.

"Buck" Steinmann, a remarkably fast forward, with plenty of fight and stamina, supplies the Warriors with plenty of inspiration, and has the wonderful ability of pulling close games out of the fire.

Lawrence Pabst, the 6 foot 4 inch center, is playing his third year in the Warrior lineup. His height is a great advantage in recovering the rebounds, and he scores an average of five or six points in each game.

Junior Hetrick, only a sophomore, but fast and clever enough to hold his own, sees considerable action, and is an expert at long shots.

Albert Schaff, of medium height and build, is a junior capable of keeping pace with the rest.

Herman Knoblauch, another junior, has plenty of speed and scrap, and is swiftly developing into a star.

Norman Koch, a senior and husky forward, is frequently seen in the lineup.

Carl Schaper, a junior with plenty of pep, will be rewarded with a regular position next year.

Woodburn Coach Versatile Person

Beside Teaching Variety Of Subjects He Is Handy Man At Electrical Work

Versatility is the keynote of the personality of Norbert Fuelling, who has coached the Woodburn Warriors for the past eight seasons or so. Himself a former star center on the Woodburn five of not so long ago, Coach Fuelling feels quite at home in scenes of his former glory.

But getting back to versatility: the coach likes variety in basketball and teaching. In the latter capacity at Woodburn High he partakes in physical education, German, physics, and chemistry, besides spending much time on his true love—basketball. In basketball, too, he shows his dislikes of the same old things in the offensive tactics of his teams. Although on the defense he sticks to the man-to-man style, when his team has the ball anything can happen, the boys play fast-break or slow-break ball as the situation warrants.

Mr. Fuelling reached his position as most teachers do, by teaching in the winter and getting additional credits in summer school. When he finished his high school career at Woodburn, he went to Notre Dame for his freshman year, enjoying freshman basketball. From then on Indiana was the school for him, where, however, he neglected his basketball to burn midnight oil over his studies. Next we see Mr. Fuelling teaching in the grades, as the first rung in his ascent of the ladder of success. He followed the practice of going to school in summer and teaching in winter, until he reached his present position.

One of Coach Fuelling's most engaging spare-time hobbies is electrical work. His most recent accomplishment along this line, shared with Woodburn's principal, Mr. Glenn C. Henderson, is the construction of an electric scoreboard and of a public address system for use in school rooms and in the gym during games. With these recent additions by Mr. Fuelling, Woodburn has the jump on most of the schools in this part of the state.

Woodburn Is "Tops" In "Brain" Tourneys

Woodburn not only boasts of a good basketball team but the school is well represented in the scholastic field. For three years Woodburn has been represented in the state Latin Contest and has finished among the first ten each year. Last year two representatives, Norman Brenneke and Leroy Rediger, went to Bloomington to compete in the contest. The two years before that Alma Lanzer carried the school colors to near victory. Edna Brenneke took regional honors in the State Algebra Contest and finished well among the first ten.

School To Enter Contest

Columbia City High School is planning in connection with the annual district band and orchestra contest to be held the first part of April at Peru, Indiana, to send twenty-four soloists and senior ensembles.

Woodburn High School's Beehive Of Varied Activity

The appearance of the Woodburn High School is indeed a surprise to one who would judge the size of the school by the size of the town in which it is located. The school is a big brick building, which at one time was much smaller. There have been additions at various times so that now the school has many of the conveniences and attractions that one would expect to find in a city school. Among the additions have been a gym, new class rooms, and a new commercial department.

Upon our arrival, your reporters noticed that there was an unusual air of hospitality. Everyone was eager to help us scribes find the information that we wanted. Lem C. Henderson, the principal of the school, was at hand to give all helpful information.

The school houses both the first eight grades and the high school. There are approximately two hundred fifty students in the school. Of these, only one hundred are high school students. The faculty consists of twelve members, including the principal and the coach.

Among the social activities are the Junior and Senior plays and the Senior Reception. The Junior play is held each year so that the junior class can finance the reception. The Junior play for this year has already been presented. It was entitled, "Perfect Getaway." The Senior class play has not yet been presented, but the name of the farce is "Meet Uncle Sally."

North Side lost one of their students to Woodburn High School. This gave the high school a break in that Bob McCarthy, the former North Sider, is an excellent basketball player. In turn, Fort Wayne gained one of Woodburn's faculty. Miss Carrie Crabbs, head of the English department, resigned her position there to take one at Harrison Hill School of this city.

The school colors are blue and white. The colors of the suits are royal blue and burnt orange. The nickname for the team is the Woodburn Warriors. One very noticeable thing is the unanimous backing of the team, whether they be winning or losing. One great evidence of the backing given the school by outsiders is the attendance at the games. The gymnasium is always packed and many times the crowds are compelled to stand. The gymnasium has no gallery on.

Indiana University Will Hold Festival

Hoosier Music Fete Scheduled April 16, 17, 18; Bloomington Chamber Of Commerce To Aid

Music patrons of the Bloomington Chamber of Commerce in conjunction with Indiana University will sponsor a Hoosier Music Festival in Bloomington, Indiana, on Thursday, Friday, and Saturday, April 16, 17, and 18.

Each spring the extension divisions, along with the School of Music of Indiana University, conducts a state music contest in order to discover and to encourage the musical talent of high school students in Indiana. This year the solo event of that contest will be held in conjunction with the Hoosier Music Festival.

No registration fee is charged; but entrance blanks for bands, orchestras, glee clubs, and for individuals must be filled in and mailed before April 1. Entrance blanks for soloists, however, must be in by March 1.

The solo auditions include piano, violin, cello, voice, cornet, snare drum, trombone, baritone, French horn, tuba, saxophone, flute, oboe, bassoon, and twirlers' exhibitions. Solo selections must be played from memory. They may be no longer than eight minutes nor shorter than three minutes in length.

District meets will be held March 28 and April 4, according to the location of the district. The meet for this district will be held here in Fort Wayne at the Indiana University Extension Center. Mr. Floyd R. Neff will be the officer in charge.

Judges of the sectional and state auditions will be members of the School of Music of Indiana University. The Hoosier Music Festival is entirely separate from the regular state contest which will come later, except that the solo event of the state contest will be held in conjunction with the festival.

Fads are continually changing the modes throughout the years. Whether one notices it or not, the comics of the leading newspapers effect fads. The comic which influences fads most is Harold Teen. Whenever Harold, or one of his chums, wears something very different, many high school students adopt that thing. One of the fads is the Harold Teen way of tying a tie. Wide bottom pants, peculiar hats, suspenders, sweaters, shoes, and slang expressions are also copied and used by the younger set.

Frosh, Soph Speakers Preparing For Finals

The winners in the semi-finals of the freshman-sophomore speech contest are working on their speeches for the final contest, according to Miss Benner.

The students who won places in the freshman contest are Carl Goebel, Joe Bex, Frieda Schubert, and Janice Cross. Dalton McAllister, Allen Garrison, Leslie Johnson, and Kathleen Witmer La Verne De Keel, Oscar Eggers, were winners in the sophomore contest.

against South Side, scoring 14 points to help Central win the city championship. Riddle is one of the few men, who have made the team as freshman, and will enter his fourth year of varsity competition next season. If he continues at his present pace, he should have his best year next season.

Lloyd Altekruze—The Central basketball squad is infested with a wealth of center material, as well as a great number of juniors. Lloyd is both a center and a member of the junior class. He towers 6 feet 1 inch in height and weighs 180 pounds. He has not seen much action this season, due to the large amount of center material, but he is probably the roughest player on the team. He is a good man under the basket, getting many rebounds, and is also an excellent long shot. Lloyd is also a football man. He played at a tackle position on the first eleven of the Tiger grid team last year and was one of the mainstays of the Blue line. Lloyd still has a year of competition in both football and basketball and should add many laurels to his athletic name during the next year.

Dan Bourne—Dan is yet another member of that junior class. He is more commonly known as "Hungry" due to his huge appetite. However, "Hungry" does not let his love for food hinder his athletic ambitions, and he has a fine record in athletics thus far. He is six foot tall, weighs 165 pounds, and performs at a guard post. This is his second year on the varsity squad, but he has not seen much action thus far, as he was unable to start practice until the middle of January, due to a broken arm suffered in football practice. "Hungry" held down a halfback post on the varsity grid team last year. He has developed rapidly and plays good defensive ball and an excellent floor game. He has one more year of football and basketball competition, and should add much to his achievements.

Bob Brown—Bob is one of the three seniors on this year's squad. He is one of the team's many centers, but is rather small for the position, being only 5 feet 10 inches in height and weighing 158 pounds. However, he has a very springy pair of legs, and can outjump many of the six footers. He is one of the best dribblers on the squad, and is an excellent shot, both from out and from under the basket. His outstanding performance of the year was against the strong Berne team, when he outjumped Dro, the Bears' center, and also outscored him from the field. Bob also played football. He played at a halfback post on the varsity eleven last season. He will end his athletic career at Central this spring as a member of the track team.

"Tony" Stanizewski—"Tony" is the smallest member of the varsity squad and is completing his second year as a varsity man. He is only 5 feet 6 inches in height and weighs only 122 pounds. However, he makes up for his lack of size by his speed, ability, and fighting spirit, as was depicted in his football career. Tony has failed to see much action during the regular season due to this lack of size, but can be counted upon to turn in a good performance whenever he does play. He is only a junior and has a year of competition ahead of him in football and basketball. With his ability already a proved fact, there should be no end of his value in both these sports next year. "Tony" plays both guard and forward on the basketball team, and has had experience at the center, quarterback and halfback positions in football.

Ladeez and gentlemen of our vast audience... this is Crank Took talking thru radio station We Only Work Once about to give you a thrilling play by play account of that Snort Side Redskins and Pennyral Tigers basketball conflict. We are sorry we can't give you your favorite hardwood announcer, Bob Enuuff, but instead you can have Burly Fiddle, Fort Yawne's Green coach.

Now the game, the ball is tossed up at center and the Red's radical defense springs up. Oh what a game... you ought to see it. Bacon Ryan shoots over Fred Cabbage's head and scores, oh that was the toughest shot pounds. However, he makes up for his lack of size by his speed, ability, and fighting spirit, as was depicted in his football career. Tony has failed to see much action during the regular season due to this lack of size, but can be counted upon to turn in a good performance whenever he does play. of the game, as it was in and out five times and rolled all over the rim before rolling off. Well, there's the end of Dickardson's hand as the gun goes off. Now I'll let you hear the Blues band, while "Dub" Mane and "Two Penny" Netty, local sport scribes, give you the statistics.

Well, here we are back again, but to continue the broadcast you must set dials at our associate station the World Greatest Fibbers. Now, only three minutes have been played in this second half and oh... my that was thrilling and unique. Moonshine has scored in the wrong basket, hm! that reminds me of the Monroeville game two years ago; Moonshine trying to steal Ginn's thunder. The Pennyral's fans are about to give a yell—here it comes—sh! they're asleep. I often wondered why Pennyral's rooters never had any pep, it must be because the older ladies—look next time and find out—are all sitting in their cheering section and that motherly, gentle atmosphere puts the other rooters to sleep. There leaves Pennyral's cheerleader, ex-Gaspardated Huff in a huff. Well, I don't blame him. Gosh, this game is interesting, I hope you're enjoying this game as much as I am. Sticko, Tiger star, seems to have his eyes glued on the basket as he pastes his third fielder thru the hoop and the crowd is m ad, in fact, so angry are the Snorter fans, that they are yelling "Hold that Tiger" when they know darned well that holding isn't allowed. Well, the new gun fires, but a much talked about zone defense loomed up to assail the Blue, but Central was the victor, 31-14. Washington of East Chicago then fell before Coach Murray Mendenhall's boys to a 28-23 count. Central's "B" team was forced to obtain a win over the Hunt-ertown varsity, 29-24. Bedford tripped the Tigers, 34-19, in their worst defeat of the season. Central then met South Side in their third encounter of the season to triumph in easy fashion, 32-21. Elkhart, title holder of the eastern division of the Northern Indiana Conference, fell before the Tigers' sharpened claws at the upstate floor, 20-17. A terrific thrashing was administered the Morton of Richmond netters when the Central squad turned on the heat and pulled out a 51-19 victory. In the final game of the season, "Fighting Central" engaged the Bears from Central of South Bend and walked over them unmercifully by a score of 49-27, a fitting conclusion to a very successful season.

Miler was next with a brilliant answer, "If we get enough points, we'll win."

Ever quiet and nicely mannered, "Dead-Pan" Rupel had something to say, "If the draw is with us we'll win."

The rest of the managers all had something to add to the already too long list of statements.

John Walley, "With the new men on the team, we've got a very good chance."

Bob Tone said, "If we keep on going as we have in the last few games, we will win."

The informed and statistically-minded Phil Olafson said that if we got 24 points per game we will win.

Thus, friends, you see that we have the sectional tournament "in the bag." If all these things mean anything, we will celebrate our third sectional win.

don't you worry, already Snorter tears have put it out. Pennyral's Blue and White are walking off the floor with the ball game in their hip pocket, and smacking their lips for those good Wheyties, they so well deserve.

Well, the game is over and the Red eyes, the victorious team, is going to the showers, which appears they too will soon "shower."

Well, now I give you Crank Took, who shall proceed to tell you all about those luscious Fheyties... take it away Crank... Well, here we are at the site of the game and I know the team that won ate the most Wheyties. You too can play basketball like Jack Paul Armstrong, All-American Boy, who was a factor in Pennyral's success.

well satisfied with her work and very much wants to continue in that field.

Likes Dictation Best

She replied that though many of the girls she works with are more experienced and practiced, she finds herself able to keep up with them. This she considers due to the careful training she received in South Side and her own hard work. Her type of duties includes shorthand, typing, bookkeeping, and general clerical work.

The phase she likes best in her work is taking dictation and then transcribing it. That, apparently, is the least of her worries. One part of shorthand, which she now wishes that she had spent more time and consideration on, is phrasing. She now phrases, but had to spend quite a lot of practice hours on it before she could do it fluently. Tabulating, also, needed more study in school.

Satisfied With Work

In studies, her favorite subject was shorthand; her hardest, algebra; and her easiest she considered commercial law. She aspires to be a private secretary. At one time she had ambitions to go to college but has rather forgotten this urge in the satisfaction of her position. Advice to up-and-coming commercial students is always to be regular in your study of shorthand; do not be content with letting a chapter slip by without having properly studied it.

Also, be regular in your work; try to have a definite goal to accomplish every night. A closing statement was, "Business seemed so technical, at first, that I was rather scared; But I didn't want to fail in my first attempt, so I kept my eyes open and pitched in. I finally learned these terms and now I am quite happy. As you first enter the business world, you will find a great many changes and difficulties which will have to be surmounted and set aside. It's not so hard, however, if one has the courage to meet them squarely."

This year the question is not, "Are you going to state?", but, "Are you going to the semi-finals and then to state?" Throughout Indiana, regional contenders are anxious to have the ball tossed at center and fight to the final gun in an attempt to capture the coveted Indiana State High School Basketball Championship trophy. What the results will be cannot be precisely prognosticated.

The most outstanding candidates for state supremacy seem to be Frankfort, Tipton, and Newcastle. But there are other formidable contenders which may upset the apple cart such as Anderson, Central of Fort Wayne, Logansport, Wabash, Martinsville, Bedford, New Albany, Goshen, and Vincennes.

The price of witnessing the regional contests is 75 cents for a season ticket and fifty cents per single admission. The semi-final tournament prices are $1 per season pass and 60 cents per single session. There will be 500 reserved seats for each of the four participating schools in each center. The Muncie Field House, to which the Fort Wayne regional winner is delegated, seats 7,000 people, a capacity house being expected. The admission price at the state finals is $1.25 per season booklet and 75 cents for single session. The Butler Field House, seating 16,000 persons, is entirely reserved, 500 tickets going to each of the four entrants and 200 to each of the twelve other semi-finalists.

Central, South Side, North Side, Decatur Win Sectional Crowns

Every March marching brings another sectional champion—sometimes throning them—with Central, South Side, N. Side, and Decatur holding six, five, two, and one victories, respectively.

In 1923, South Side won the first of the sectional meets held here, wrestling a close game from Central. The Archers repeated in 1924, downing Columbia City in a sensational game, winning only after a double overtime.

The 1925 sectional gave the Central Tigers their first crown at the expense of the South Side Archers. The Tigers repeated in 1926 at the expense of Harlan. Central repeated in 1927 again defeating Harlan. In 1928 the Bengals gained their fourth straight sectional crown by dropping North Side, who entered a team in the sectional for the first time.

The Archers came back in 1929 to cop the final game from Lafayette Central. The Tigers took away the title from the southern school the following year, 1930, in a close game. In 1931 North Side dropped Decatur to win their first sectional. South Side fell before Decatur in 1932, allowing the title to leave the city for the first

Balloons To Be Theme Of Regional Hop

North Side Legend To Be Sponsor

Jimmy Sanford And Orchestra To Be Engaged; Attendance Prize Drawing Is Novel

Plans have been completed for the big dance which is to be held in the North Side Cafeteria following the regional tournament games Saturday, March 14. Balloons have been chosen as the theme and will be featured in the decorations. The dance is being sponsored by the North Side Legend, with Harry Smenner, business manager of the annual, as general chairman.

Jimmy Sanford and his orchestra have been engaged to play for the dancing which will start at 9:30.

Unique programs have been prepared, and will be given to those attending the dance. They will also be used in the drawings for attendance prizes.

Assisting the chairman are various committees composed of staff members. They are as follows: decorations, Helen Meier, chairman, Ruth Goebel, Jeanette Welker, Corky Ryan, and Alvin Bullerman; orchestra, Jeanette Welker; news, publicity, Virginia Blakley and Virginia Bell; posters, Alvin Bullerman and Phyllis Janorschke; and checkroom, Alan Bauer.

Hosts and hostesses for the dance are Helen Meier, Ruth Goebel, Norma Rae Woolver, Betty Barth, Jeanette Welker, Corky Ryan, Harry Smenner, Alvin Bullerman, and Franklin Peddie.

In keeping with the theme, the orchestra will play from the basket of an observation balloon. Music concerning the air and upper regions will be featured; the orchestra will play current hit tunes, such as "I Feel Like a Feather in the Breeze," "I'm Shootin' High," and others.

Chaperones have been chosen from the faculty and parents of the committee members. They are as follows: Miss Judith Bowen, Miss Victoria Gross, Miss Katherine Rothenberger, Mr. Darn Hartley, Mr. Leslie Reeves, Mr. Varner Chance, Mr. Rollo Mosher, Mr. and Mrs. Milton H. Northrop, Mr. and Mrs. Robert Nulf, Mr. and Mrs. Ellison Meier, Mr. and Mrs. Harry Smenner, and Dr. and Mrs. Paul Goebel.

City Schools Publish News On Tourney

Tournament News Will Serve As Telephone Directory To Readers

Just as a system of telephones must have its directory, a city its street guide, and a state its map, so must the sectional and regional tournaments have its directory or encyclopedia. This encyclopedia comes to the tournament fans in the form of the Tournament News.

The Tournament News is put out by the three high schools. J. Wilbur Haley of Central and Miss Harvey of North Side and South Side are the sponsors. Central had charge of the tournament news this year. Each year one of the schools has charge of the issuance of the paper and North Side will have the honor next year, with South Side taking charge the year following.

The sports writers from the three city schools go to the school participating in the tournament and get all the news they can about each school. For this paper, Central sent representatives to Ridgeville, North Side to Roanoke, and South Side went to Union Center. This is usually a very pleasant task for the representatives as no end of exciting and humorous incidents are encountered. However, there is a lot of hard work connected with the publishing of the paper. A large number of stories must be written, advertisements solicited, and the paper arranged. This is valuable experience and more than makes up for the time spent on the project.

Sports writers from the three local schools also cover the tournament games. The paper is given to subscribers free of charge and is sold to all non-subscribers for 10 cents each.

and last time up to date. In 1933, North Side stopped Decatur from a repetition of this feat. The Archers captured the crown in 1934 at the expense of Monroeville in an overtime battle. The Green repeated in 1935 at the expense of the Central Tigers. This was the Archers' fifth sectional championship. However, Central once again gained their revenge as well as their sixth sectional crown only last week by downing the Archers by an overwhelming score of 50 to 23 in the final game.

Sectional Tournament Sees Packed House Before Game

Central, South Side, North Side, Decatur, Monroeville, New Haven, Lafayette Central Score At Least One Win In Fort Wayne Sectional Tourney

Central High School, by virtue of wins over Leo, Monroeville, North Side, and South Side, assured herself of participation in the regional tournament at the North Side gym tomorrow.

The final game started out to be a tight battle but after the second half it proved to be a runaway, the Tigers winning 50-23.

Final Game

The Tigers and the Archers met in the final contest last Saturday night to see who would win the right to advance to the regional tourney.

Fully one-half hour before the game started, a packed house waited in suspense to witness the crucial tilt. Lee scored the first point of the game, Hines following with two more charity tosses to give South Side a 3-0 lead. Paul then hit on two beautiful side-angle shots to put his team in the lead, 4-3. Hall dumped one in from the pivot position to again give his team the lead but Schaefer retaliated by going under and raised the count one more when he converted the foul received on the play. From there one the Bengals were never headed although they were tied several times.

At the quarter mark the score was 11-9 in favor of Central. The score was tied four times in the second period but the Tigers were again on the long end of a 19-16 score at the half. The fans at this time were expecting a real battle for the remainder of the tilt but on resumption of play the Tigers turned on the power, scoring eleven points to the Archers' five at the end of the third canto. The next and final period was a massacre, nothing seeming to daunt the valiant Blue. The Tigers amassed a total of twenty points in this quarter while holding the Green and White to two foul shots.

Monroeville vs. New Haven
The game was a close one until well into the third quarter when the Bulldogs spurred to win the game decisively. The scores at the end of the first, second, and third quarters were 8-3, 15-13, and 24-16 respectively.

Arcola vs. Monroeville
Monroeville finally came through with a win over Arcola when the Cubs defeated the Greyhounds, 26-22, in the opening game of the Friday morning session.

The score at the end of the half was 13-6, the first quarter score being 7-5. The score at the end of the third period was 20-16, the Arcola quintet threatening to overcome the Cubs' lead several times in the final minutes.

North Side High School's Gym Has Large Seating Capacity

Although Central High School of Fort Wayne is host to the regional tournament the gymnasium of North Side High School is used because it is the largest in the city and even it is packed tight. The layout of North Side may be very practical and beautiful, but is generally puzzling to new comers. It isn't very hard to get mixed up in the main part with its rotunda and four wings. But this part is closed and only the gymnasium in the back is open. So you literally must enter by the back door. The school is very inconsiderate in not lying north and south but is quite callowhoppus on account of the St. Joseph River. The school faces toward the southwest, which makes the corners of the gymnasium north, south, east, and west. It is the east door by which you enter. This door can be reached by going directly north behind the school from State Boulevard, which crosses the river.

When you go in the door you go up several flights of stairs passed the ticket window to the man who relieves you of your passport. The stairway turns and leads you toward one end of the gymnasium in a passageway that continues around the gymnasium underneath the seats. Entrance ways open up to a level halfway up the tiers of seats. There is another similar passageway on the floor level one story below flanked by numerous lockers, exercise shower, and store rooms. The score board and time lights are at the end of the gymnasium which you first enter. Refreshments can be purchased at either end of the gymnasium and on the south-east side on the first floor. If you go along the lower floor on the side of the gymnasium opposite the scoreboard you can enter the main part of the building and then if you go up the first stairway to your right you will come to the cafeteria in a wing of the building. Well, let's hope you don't get lost and starve in some corner of the building until Monday and here's to the fellow who can understand this explanation.

From The Center Principal

As center principal I appreciate all the work that was done by many individuals and groups to make the Sectional Tourney a success. To Mr. Haley and staff of our Spotlight and to Miss Harvey and her staff of the South Side Times and the Northern, for a splendid Tournament News, to Central Booster Club for decorations and sales, to the twenty and more Central teachers and pupils as helpers, to the fifteen schools that participated, to the friendly public for their attendance and interest, to the merchants for window displays, to the School Board and Superintendent Merle J. Abbett and Mr. Carlson for the use of the building and gymnasium.

We welcome the competing schools to our Regional and hope their stay with us will be as pleasant as anticipated.

Central High Band To Furnish Music

Band Wins Hearts Of Students By Playing Snappy Pieces

Central High School Band will play for the entertainment of fans at the session of the Regional Tourney Saturday. The band was outstanding in its rendition of music at the Sectional Tourney last Saturday. During the school year the band has won the hearts of Central students by playing snappy marches at the football games and by executing fancy maneuvers while marching across the field between halves. The band played at the Huntington-Central game and at each home game. Their playing of favorites at these games aroused much favorable comment from students and fans.

In addition to playing at athletic contests, the band has given two large concerts, the first being at the North Side auditorium and the second at the Catholic Community Center for a supper and dance given by the Fort Wayne Lions Club.

Last year at the Goshen District meet the band won an expensive drum major baton for its marching and flashy appearance and won the second division in playing.

The success the band has attained is due entirely to the excellent leadership and unselfish service of its instructor, Mr. Gaston Bailhe.

Super-Regional Centers Named

Indianapolis, Vincennes, Muncie, And Gary Are Appointed Places For Tourney

State Tourney, March 28

On March 14, the 64 sectional champions will meet in their respective regional centers to determine what teams will compete in the four super-regional centers on March 21. The following are the regional centers: Anderson, Auburn, Evansville, Fort Wayne, Greencastle, Lafayette, Logansport, Marion, Martinsville, Mitchell, Muncie, Nappanee, Rushville, Valparaiso, and Washington.

The 16 winners will compete in the super-regionals at Indianapolis, Vincennes, Muncie and Gary. The admission price to witness the regional clashes will be 75 cents for a season ticket and 50 cents for a single session.

The final tilts, which will decide the Indiana high school basketball championship for 1936, will be held on March 28 at the Butler fieldhouse in Indianapolis. The competing teams are limited to 12 certified men in the finals as is the case in sectional, regional, and super-regional tournaments, but two of these men must be scratched prior to the start of the tournament. These teams do not necessarily have to be composed of the same ten players that were used in the other tournaments. Each principal, having a team in the tournament, is requested to file a parents' and physicians' certificate in the I. H. S. A. A. for each of the players.

Gimbel Award Is Sought By Players

Prize Offered To Team Member With Highest Mental, Moral Qualities

In 1917, the boy showing the best attitude and proving the most valuable to his team was rewarded with "The Gimbel Award for Mental Attitude." This prize was originated by a Vincennes man who realized the terrific strain the players endured, yet receiving no reward. He made a proposal to the I. H. S. A. A. to give a prize each year to the boy showing the best qualities, mental and moral. This plea was taken into consideration, and in 1917 it was recognized as the "Gimbel Award." It proved a hard task to choose a boy worthy of the award as many boys proved to have the qualities meriting the award.

An only one boy can receive this award each year, it is valued very much by the receiver and the school which the fortunate boy attends feels complimented on having the "Gimbel Prize" winner as one of their students.

In 1931, Norman Cottom of Wiley of Terre Haute, and later a Purdue star, was awarded the prize. McAnally and Jim Seward won in '32 and '33, respectively. The award was given to "Jimmy" Lyboubt of Morton of Richmond last year.

Roanoke, Ridgeville, Union Center, and Central Enter Tourney At Fort Wayne.

Cossacks, Tigers In Initial Tilt

Central Probably Will Be Favorite; Union Center, The Dark Horse

With the shrill blast of a whistle, sixteen regional tournaments will get under way tomorrow afternoon in various centers throughout the state, one of which is in Fort Wayne.

In the Fort Wayne regional elimination tourney, Ridgeville, Portland sectional winner, will meet Central of Fort Wayne, sectional titlist of that city, in the initial conflict carded for 2 o'clock. At 3 o'clock, the sectionalist at Bluffton, Union Center, will do battle with Roanoke from the Huntington elementary tourney. The playoff for the regional crown is slated to start promptly at 8 o'clock that evening. Season tickets are sold at 75 cents and single sessions at fifty cents apiece.

Ridgeville An Enigma

What the Ridgeville quintet will show the Central Tigers as to their power is unknown since the Cossacks are not well known in this region. The Black and White netters won twelve of their regularly scheduled games and lost five, scoring 531 points to their opponents' 282. The Ridgeville five won their way to the regional by defeating Bryant, Montpelier, Hartford City, and Madison in the Portland sectional. This year's sectional win was the first since 1926, having previously competed for sectional honors at Lynn. The 1920-21 Cossack squad advanced to the state finals and this year's team has hopes for a similar achievement although Central is the favorite. Coach Herman Beckley is in his first year as mentor of the squad and his good start shows promise for the future.

Central Favorite

Central High School's Bengals have the odds as to winning the regional through their powerful brand of offensive and defensive playing. Central had not won a sectional crown since 1930 and this year's squad hopes to make amends for past inability. The Tigers have won eighteen tilts during their season and lost to Newcastle, Anderson, South Side of Fort Wayne, and Huntington by narrow margins and to Bedford decisively. In the sectional they were compelled to wade through Leo, Monroeville, North Side, and South Side, defeating all of them by margins of not less than fifteen points. The Blue employs a fast breaking, snap pass style of attack and along with good team marksmanship, the Tiger offensive is a menace to any team. A tight man-to-man defense is another strong point for the Battling Bengals. The fact that every member of the tourney squad is equally efficient is still another explanatory factor in the Tigers success. The Summit City entree is coached by Murray Mendenhall with Robert Dornie as his assistant, both of which are noted for their ingenuity in coaching all sports.

Union Center A Dark Horse

Over in Wells County, the fickle god of basketball seemed to hold special sway. Although pre-sectional favorites were Berne and Bluffton, the Wells County Tigers were eliminated in the first round by Rock Creek and Berne was upset in the second round by Liberty Center. After the final shot had echoed through the gym last Saturday night, Union Center was the sectional winner, having defeated Lancaster in the final tilt, 40-30. The Union Center quintet also downed Chester Center, Rock Creek, and Liberty Center, the latter two being the fives which upset the apple-basket. Little else is known of the Union Center squad and their style of play. Pence and Kreigh are most often seen at forward positions, Clark at center, and Dunn and Haifisch as guards.

Roanoke Repeats

Roanoke is the only team in this year's regional that advanced to the regional last year and Huntington is the team which they defeated in the finals both years. The Bryan-coached aggregation was frustrated in its ambitions for advancement last year by losing to Berne in the first game, 18-16.

Pairings for regional competition in other parts of the state is as follows:

At Anderson

Shortridge (Indianapolis) vs. Anderson.

Plainfield vs. Greenfield.

At Auburn

Columbia City vs. Auburn.

Ligonier vs. Warsaw.

At Evansville

Central of Evansville vs. Cannelton.

Princeton vs. Lynnville.

Welcome, visitors; welcome to Fort Wayne!

Mussolini's type at least live pretty long. The Kaiser is now 80 years old.

The only reason that any work at all is accomplished on WPA projects is that the shovel-leaners must have somebody to watch.

When one rooster is permitted to murder another for the enjoyment of the spectators it is barbarous; when two men are permitted to do so, that's wrestling.

All the ancient rulers didn't have such a bad job of looking kingly and dignified in the eyes of the people. Nowadays we have newspaper photographers.

A rich man is often the fellow who spends the best years of his life gathering gold, and, when he thinks he has enough and quits, he finds that he's too old to do the things he wanted to do with his money.

The queerness of human nature is often displayed in athletics. If your team wins it was because of superb, skillful playing and if your team loses it was because of the strokes of fate.

Sometimes the only difference between a so-called selfish and a so-called unselfish persons is that one has found that he can't get what he has wanted and therefore turns to being virtuous as the next best thing.

We would like to put in a good word for Jack Armstrong. He certainly is some traveler. One day he's fighting Indians in Mexico the next he's capturing gangsters in New York; and then the next he's digging treasure on a desert island. Whew!

Warning To All Students!

Do not play on any team outside of school if you wish to be eligible for high school athletic competition. It is a state ruling that any student who plays on a Y. M. C. A., church, or any other team after the basketball season closes will be ineligible for participation in sports.

It's a long, hard road to Butler Field House, Indianapolis, and a stop is being made at the regionals to push off three-fourths of the teams still in competition. The original 756 teams that entered competition shall be filtered down to one, the State Champ. It's the old rule of the survival of the fittest for only the team most fit will remain.

In the semi-finals of the sectional basketball tournament when Central was playing North Side, Steve Sitko, playing guard, after dribbling under and scoring a basket, unexpectedly fell to the floor. A gasp went up from the crowd; everyone held their breath as Dr. King, Central's trainer, rushed out onto the floor. The prevalent question: "Will he be able to get up and play?"

Yell leader Wilbur Kernen uttered the plea of the spectators when he beseeched, "Get him on his feet, Doc."

It was a moment when all were placing their entire hope in the Doc and all realized how much depended upon him.

It was noticed with satisfaction that the yell leaders of the various schools that participated in the sectional tournament made a serious effort to lessen the volume of booing during the games. It was a heroic, even if not successful, effort. The regrettable fact was that the crowd booed at all. It certainly shows a lack of thinking on the part of the individuals who did boo or else a lack of respect, and it does not display the proper spirit.

This act of exhibiting dissatisfaction notably occurs on two occasions, namely, when a decision that does not favor the team supported by the boosers is made and when an opposing team makes its initial appearance on the floor.

One should not boo at unfavorable decisions for a number of important reasons:

No referee or umpire is perfect because all call wrong decisions or fail to call decisions that should be made in just the course of one game. So even if a play is judged poorly display the right attitude by thinking of it as a mistake. The chances, however, are that you were wrong because the referee usually knows more about the technicalities of the game of basketball than the average spectator and is also more able to judge the actions of a player because of his position.

Booing does you no good and does the team no good, but on the other hand, it rather puts the insignia of unsportsmanlike acting upon you. And, as far as the team is concerned, the decision has been made and the only thing left to do is accept it as part of the game.

By the recognized law of averages if two unfair fouls are called against your team in a game, two will be called against the rival team. In the long run, at least, there tends to be a balance.

It would probably be better, also, if we remembered that the referee called 100 decisions correctly than to remember him for having called one or two wrong. We emphasize his errors too much and greatly minimize, if not entirely forget, his strong points.

When a team comes running out on the floor and starts warming up for the game, it has been noticed, especially in cases of intense rivalry, that again there has been the odious custom of booing.

It is truly regrettable.

The difference between Italy and other countries is that Italy caught on too late in the game.

The Japanese would be nice people if they didn't beat all the rest of us in trade and commerce.

Correct this sentence: "To show that I believe in my remedies," said the quack doctor, "I often rely on them for curing myself."

The "Hoosier Schoolmaster" Is Fine Reading, But Darn Poor Living

Thousands of people jam into gyms to watch schoolboy basketballers battle for the state diadem, the climax of the year's wars, the World Series of basketball.

Great numbers of those thousands are men and women who remember days when school was three R's and no basketball, no clubs, no extra-curricular activities. Days when school was a small red building, with no thought of swimming pools and giant gyms.

School was larnin', and little else.

Today school is also larnin', to be sure, but amply trimmed with fun and good times. Numerous clubs, athletics, and assemblies make school a privilege, not a duty.

But all too often an unappreciated privilege.

Three Aces Beat A Pair Of Kings, But Death Took The Jackpot

A bandit marches in on a poker game, becomes nervous at resistance and pumps lead wildly in a pleasant gathering of convivial souls.

The bandit, a young man of twenty-seven, is captured, which is bad luck for him, one of his victims having died from his wounds.

Now the criminal, a paroled convict, does not face merely an armed robbery charge.

He must answer to a charge of murder.

Murder was not his intention when he took a hand in the game, but murder is now his crime.

Perhaps he shall die in the electric chair for this crime, a young man of twenty-seven sped prematurely on his way to the Great Reckoning.

And every day petty crimes occur which never pass the police blotter, for no resistance was offered, and the criminal did not become nervous.

But the borderline is shadowy, and any trivial happening can transform the robbery of the police blotter into the Page One murder.

The proceeds from a poker party are not always worth a life.

Every one of us at one time or another has been told that there is no such word as can't. This statement has been made so often that unfortunately some of us may begin to doubt the truth of it and believe it is an impractical maxim. The more experience you have the more you will believe in it and know that the reason of its repetition is in its sound truth. There are many other sayings like it such as: "You can do anything if you have desire to do it," "The world is yours if you want it."

To sum it all up, they mean that where there is a will there is a way. Endless numbers of examples shows this can be sighted. Beethoven, the great composer, was deaf. Glenn Cunningham, the great runner, couldn't run or even walk when he was younger. Einstein, the world's greatest mathematician, failed in mathematics when he was a boy. Demosthenes, the greatest orator of the world, was booed down the first time he tried to speak. These examples just point out clearly the fact that you can do anything you want if you really want enough that you are willing to work and sacrifice to accomplish it.

What is the power behind everything that has ever been accomplished? What is the moving force behind every good cause? What makes it possible to convert ideas into action? What makes projects successful? The answer to these questions in a word is enthusiasm. It is the quality in people and organizations that makes them really achieve their desired ends. Without it thoughts and plans never advance beyond that stage; with it thoughts and plans are carried out. In other words, enthusiasm does things.

However, extremes of anything are usually harmful. So it is with enthusiasm. If there is too little, nothing is accomplished. If there is too much, the cause or prospect may begin to fight against itself and ruin its own chances of success. If there is the right amount of good enthusiasm things are accomplished. And we all want to accomplish things.

When the crowds roar, the pennants wave, the baskets swish, the basketballs fly through the air, and when the players struggle for victory, please remember the other fellow. Be thoughtful of the people around you. Politeness is a necessary human virtue if people must get along together. If politeness is necessary every place, it would be even more necessary when hundreds of excited people are jammed up against each other in a gymnasium. Courtesy is considered the marking of a gentleman or a lady. Could you then be called a gentleman or a lady if you are selfishly discourteous to the people seated near you. When you stand up obstructing someone else's view, when you disturb those around you by talking loud and long, when you wave your arms in someone's face, or when you yell out at something or other, you immediately mark yourself as a public enemy. People who selfishly make themselves obnoxious to others are to be despised. Be a sportsman as a spectator and remember the golden rule: "Not that you won or lost but how you played the game."

The above quotation exemplifies the ideal of high school athletics. In fact, it shows the ideal of all true sportsmanship. High schools aim, not especially at turning out good players, but at turning out fine sportsmen. The big thing is to teach students sportsmanship. When a boy has graduated from high school, he will not be remembered by how many points he happened to score, but by whether or not he showed himself to be a true sportsman. If being in athletics only enables the boy to be successful in winning games, the purpose has been defeated; but if being in athletics has helped to develop his sportsmanship, it has influenced his character to such a degree that it will never be forgotten. A boy's winning games has effect only on the present, but his learning sportsmanship affects his future. Just remember as you cheer for your team in the future that what is really important is how your team played the game.

Scribe Finds Tear In Seat Of His Trousers, So What!

"Henry! how in the world did you get that awful tear in the back of your coat?" Henry slowly twisted his cranium for a back view, closely resembling the feat performed by the double jointed monstrosity in the circus, and gazed at the place where the tear should have been. He was greeted with loud "Ha, ha's" and "April Fool!" Slowly it came to him that today was the day when fools the world over submit to the whims of their more agile minded fellowmen.

How well do you remember of reaching for a well-filled pocketbook only to have it vanish behind the tall board fence; or kicking a hat on the sidewalk, only to cry out in pain as your foot collided with the piece of masonry concealed beneath it; and finally do you remember "biting" for the "gag" pulled by the fun loving person on April 2, only to be called "April Fool's" Day is past, and you're the biggest fool at last. These are all familiar pranks that are abundant on the first day of April, and whether you "bite" depends upon your mental faculties.

April Fool's Day has long been celebrated in America and still longer in some European countries. The custom of sending a person on some fruitless errand or making him the victim of some practical joke on April Fool's Day seems to have been unknown to German antiquity. It is thought to have been introduced into Germany from France in comparatively recent times. Some trace its origin to the miracle play, formerly represented at Easter, which sometimes showed the sending of Christ from Annias to Caiaphas and from Pilate to Hood; another finds the origin in some ancient pagan festival, such as the Huli festival held by the Hindus on March 31, or the Feast of Fools, celebrated by the Romans on February 17, at which simple tricks were played. In France the victim is called "un poisson d'Avril," an April fish, possibly from the reopening of the fisheries at that season. In Scotland a person who is tricked by the prankster on April Fool's Day, is called a "gowk" or cuckoo.

Ye scribe urges all ye fellow Redskins to keep your wits about you on that fateful first of April or some practical prankster will trip you up.

STUFF

By Gaspard Huff

What happens while the crowd roars? Is that all that happens at one of those great big basketball tournaments? Huhuh! It takes more than just a dozen basketball teams to make a tournament. It even takes more than jamming a couple crowds in a gymnasium. Yes, there's another bunch of people necessary to a tournament. This bunch is quite various. It includes the refreshment sellers, and the poor men teachers that have to sit in the black corners under the stadium lending a sanctified atmosphere to those subterranean passages and wondering what the kids are yelling about. It also includes the referees, and that group of brave protectors of society, the policemen, who aside from watching the boys mix it up out there on the floor, devote their time to keeping the exits clear of everyone except some great big fellows with gold buttoned blue coats and guns on their hips.

Behind every great thing there's a small something or other that makes it great. Behind every great man is a woman. Perhaps she's way behind him but she's back there somewhere right after him. But she can't help it. Poor thing, she's made that way. Always way behind the man. So there is that group of workers behind the tournament because there's something behind everything.

The first of these are the referees. If it wasn't for them there wouldn't be anything on which to blame the loss of a game. They're fine fellows and they wear pretty shirts and waddle. They run around like a dog looking for a place to bite and if they see someone touch someone else they leap at him like a fencer. They ought to read Emily Post and learn not to point so strenuously. It's really not good manners, Mr. Referee.

Well, besides the officials there's the poor refreshment sellers who don't get to see any of the game between halves. They have to slop ice cream and Coca Cola to customers except when there's a game on. A couple dumbbells took the bottoms out of some of the paper cups. During the games there's nothing to do but sit in the pop coolers unless you watch the game. They find intelligent people surprisingly dumb. Anne Habit, a school official's darling daughter, trots in for four cokes which she proudly admits she can carry all by herself. She offers three quarters to pay for them and says she wants forty cents change. Four of which must be in five-cent pieces and the other twenty cents not in twenty-cent but in ten-cent pieces. She runs off very satisfied only to be called back to take the rest of her change. Such people.

Next let us consider those unfortunate teachers who have to sit in the dusky subterranean corridors under all the jolly and not jolly children who are packed in the bright gymnasium. They might be guarding something or other or they may be just lending a sanctified atmosphere to those dark passages. At any rate those poor

The Professor On Love

This week, Professor O. Howitt-Hertz Fussbujat, Dean of the Peach Blossom Institute for Learning Stuff, returns to present some choice bits on love and stuff.

Love—something which, if you have, you wish you didn't, and if you don't, you wish you did.

Yes, it is better to be broke than to have never loved at all.

Love is sweet
But, oh, how bitter
To love a girl
And then not gitter.

A broken heart
Does hurt a bit
But oh the fun
Acquiring it.

Lovely Geometry
Given: I love you.
To prove: You love me.
Proof:
1. I love you.
2. Therefore, I am a lover.
3. All the world loves a lover (old stuff).
4. You're one in the world.
5. Therefore, you love me.

Athletes seem to have a fatal attraction for you of the fairer sex, but take a little advice from the Professor anyway and avoid—

The trackman—he's usually fast.
The wrestler—he'll take you for a fall.

The tennis player—it's just a racket with him.

The baseball player—he hits and runs.

The golfer—he goes around with sticks.

The gridster—he's quick to go into a huddle.

gentlemen must spend their scant vacation like moles and wonder what the kids are yelling about. I imagine however they learn some funny stories or at least learn their neighbor's old ones better.

Besides these who protect the helpless lambs who so innocently bleat at the games from cramped bleachers, there is a detachment of policemen whose duty it is also to do somewhat the same. But the policemen know lots better how to do it. Instead of lurking in the corridors they come right out in the open. In fact they get right down where they can see the game best.

Well, in closing, there are several other men who complete the picture from behind. There are the janitors who never can be found when something happens like the pop cooler flood. Mr. Sweepslow, when asked what he thought of the tournament said, "This tournament was the most exciting to sweep up after that I've shook a broom at for years, and the teachers in the halls knew better jokes than the ones last year."

Sectional Tourney Colorful, Exciting Elaborate Event

Once again the yearly tournament has aroused enthusiasm. As far as school work is concerned, the student mind is again dormant for the great occasion again arouses interest. For a short period of two days our minds are totally absorbed with the basketball festivity which comes only once a year. And what an occasion it is. The glamour, color, excitement, and feeling of the whole thing goes over big with the student body and elders. It is the great event of the high school year awaited with great anxiety and enthusiasm by all. The tournament spirit has been as vividly exemplified this year as ever before, perhaps even more. What a celebration it has been, glamorous, glorious, glittering.

The color of the tournament with all its intensely and predominance was certainly attractive and conspicuous for we all love the art of blending different hues. The attractive color prevailed in abundance and really presented a magnificent sight.

The basketball suits were very conspicuous. One team had green shorts with green and white stripes. Another team had its participants clothed in suits composed of beautiful blue shorts with white belts. The white shirts had engraved upon them purple numbers which had a red outline. This particular outfit with its harmonious blending of colors was very conspicuous and appealing; it was perhaps, the most beautiful of all the suits. Another team had entirely red shirts and shorts. Accompanied with this outfit was white socks with red stripes and black gym shoes.

Still another team was attired in blue shorts trimmed in yellow—yellow shirts with black numbers. Variety in the selection of color added to the great beauty of the suits, in fact, to the entire color of the tournament.

The yell leaders' attire presented appealing colors and combinations of colors. One team had two leaders, a boy and a girl dressed in shiny black suits. In white letters the words "Yellow Cubs" were found on the backs of the suits. A white stripe ran down the pants side. Another school was represented by two girl yell leaders who were attired in purple trousers with white stripe down the sides. The sweaters were white and on them were purple initials of the particular school they represented. Then there were from one school four yell leaders of the same size, clothed in bright glittering green.

One band exhibited a beautiful display of colors. The members were dressed in white shirts and trousers, and the trousers had a green stripe running down the side of each leg. They also wore black bow ties and, curiously, they had no caps. To supplement the beauty was some gold wind instruments. Still another band had suits composed of a vivid combination of blue and white colors and it presented a very beautiful sight.

The girl sellers of candy, ice cream, etc., presented a striking and appealing array. They were all dressed in white skirts and blue sweaters, on the left side of the sweater was a white velvet banner on which the word Booster was presented in blue. A white neckerchief with a blue "C" engraved upon it was worn about the neck. White shoes also accompanied this outfit.

Much other appealing color was indeed conspicuous. Upon a high bill-

NOTES OF A BASKETBALL-WEARY COLUMNIST:

After sitting through many (it seems like a hundred) games last week-end, it is doubtful whether this humble writer will be able to endure the sessions this week. Thinking we were smarter than our informing friends, we laughed off the idea of taking an air cushion last Thursday, Friday and Saturday upon which to situate ourselves. . . . The result was quite distressing.

We have often wondered just what basketball games would be without the refreshments peddled during, and at the half of the game. It's a cinch that a lot of the "game atmosphere" would be lost, at least for many of us! That reminds us of a situation noticed last summer at a baseball game: Two gentlemen entered the grand stand, purchased a few sacks of peanuts, and during the entire game sat talking apparently about some hilarious experiences of theirs, while munching on those distracting nuts! Our party finally figured out that the men had adopted this as a new way to conduct a business conference, thus getting away from the humdrum of secretaries, ringing telephones, or pestering agents!

When basketball season ends, it seems like the bottom has dropped out of school activity. Many of the week-end nights occupied by these games provided a thrilling, safe, and entertaining pastime for us. . . . and to see them being suddenly brushed away is, indeed, a thing which we hate to witness. However, our days in the coming spring will not remain idle. Outdoor activity, dances, club work, and other outstanding pastimes will hold our attention while new movies of merit are presented at our theatres constantly for our consideration. Popular stage shows have, in their country-wide tours, been stopping off in Fort Wayne during the past winter. These will continue throughout spring, the next of which to be witnessed being Walter Huston in "Dodsworth." One more artist, Carola Goya, is to be presented on the Community Concert series. These, in addition to other diversified educational entertainments, will prevail during spring.

Things one might expect to see and hear at the Regional Tourney: Lovebirds sitting high in the back row. . . . Guys throwing beans or rolled up paper into the poor cheer-leaders' megaphones. . . . Paper airplanes sailing at referees. . . . Not one paper cup in one piece on the floor (having felt the pressure of the owner's feet). . . . The baskets torn to shreds by the winning rosters. . . . The pop supply "fresh-out". . . . Blaring bands getting caught in the middle of a selection by the tip-off. . . . A flock of stags at the dance after the game in North Side Cafeteria. . . . Also crashers, mad as wet hens that their team lost!

board colorful symbols of all the teams were found. These showed a beautiful combination of blending colors. Decorations were also hanging down from the rafters. Then there were the vast multitudes attired in their personal clothes and presenting a great variety. To supplement it, many had small banners which they waved and displayed quite freely.

Whatever goal you're shooting you'll make better with keen sight.

Bengals Enter Regional Competition As Top Favorites

Central Tigers Gain Crown By Downing S. S.

North Side, South Side, Central, and Decatur In Semi-Final Tilts At Sectional.

Final Game Is Thrilling One

Tigers Defeat Leo, Monroeville, And North Side To Get Right To Enter Finals

Fort Wayne Central, host school of the local regional center, defeated the South Side Archers, enabling the Bengals to represent the Fort Wayne sectional district for the first time since 1930. Other sectional winners competing here include Roanoke, Union Center, and Ridgeville, Central's first opponent.

Central had little trouble throughout the tourney, running up high totals over Leo, Monroeville, North Side and South Side.

The Championship Tilt
After a closely contested first half, Central's strong scoring machine bombarded the basket for 31 points in the last half to completely outclass the Green and White cagers, in the final game of the local sectional by the score of 50 to 23.

South Side assumed a short lived lead in the opening minutes of play, but the Tigers came back to forge into a 19 to 16 lead at the half. With the opening minutes of the second half, Sitko and Schaefer furnished the offensive explosive needed to run the count up to 30 to 21 at the termination of the third canto.

With the opening minutes of the final stanza, Central built a 40 to 21 lead, turning the game into a rout. The Friddlemen were able to garner only two more points in the final eight minutes, while the Bengals tallied 10 more markers.

Central Downs North Side
Central's Tigers eliminated North Side's Redskins from the sectional tourney in the semi-finals by the score of 42 to 26. The game resembled the South Side-Central clash in the respect that the first half was closely contested only to have the last half turn into all Central.

The Tigers started early in the contest and built up a 6 to 1 lead, but the Redskins came back to two fielders to make the count 6 to 5. Then Sitko dropped one in from underneath as the quarter ended.

As the second quarter opened, North Side spurred to a 9 to 8 lead, but the Tigers rallied and held a 16 to 14 lead at the half. The Red and White retrieved the lead, 17 to 16, but the Mendymen started hitting and held a 31 to 21 lead at the conclusion of the third quarter. The Tigers gradually increased their margin of victory during the last quarter.

Bojinoff led the North Side offense with 10 points, while Sitko and Armstrong paced the Tigers with 19 points and very clever floor work, respectively.

Tigers Defeat Monroeville
Central's Bengals advanced into the semi-finals by running rough shod over the Monroeville Cubs in a high scoring tilt by the score of 45 to 30. The Tigers were ahead the entire game, but had to battle hard all the way.

The Tigers led 18 to 6 at the end of the first canto, and was in front 24 to 13 at the conclusion of the half. As the fourth period opened, Central led 38 to 22. Bourne and Brown paced the Tigers with 12 points each, while Richards led the Cubs.

Leo Falls Before Tigers
Leo's small but mighty Lions failed to cope with the Tigers drive, height, and scoring ability and lost by a score of 45 to 24.

The Bengals started fast to lead by a 10 to 7 score at the termination of the first quarter, and kept right on going to obtain a 25-12 advantage at halftime. The two teams battled on even terms during the third quarter with the count standing at 33 to 23, but in the final canto the Tigers held the Lions to one point while garnering 11 of their own. Sitko was high for Central with 11 points, while Bender paced Leo with 14.

Tigers Score Total Of 182 Markers

Steve Sitko Scores Largest Number Of Points In Tourney

Central's powerful band of Tigers displayed a strong brand of basketball throughout the Fort Wayne Sectional. The Bengals scored a total of 182 points in four games and held their opponents to 103 tallies for an average winning margin of 19 1/2 points per game. The Tigers scored an average of 45 1/2 points per game, while their opponents averaged 25 3/4 points. Central made 71 field goals and 40 free tosses during the tournament.

"Steve" Sitko led the Tiger band in scoring with a total of 43 markers, chalking up 15 field goals and 13 free throws. This was the largest number of points scored by any player in the tournament.

Braden was next on the Bengal scoring list with 24 tallies, making 11 from the field and converting 2 from the free throw line. Braden played a fine game throughout the tournament.

Schaefer, playing a "bang-up" game against South Side, brought his total up to 21 to hold down third position in the Bengal scoring. His playing was a feature of the South Side game.

Armstrong, playing fine ball for the Tigers, came through with 19 points, 8 field goals and 3 free tosses, to hold fourth place in the scoring for the Bengals.

Motter scored a total of 18 markers for the Tigers, making 8 field goals and 2 free tosses. However, being a center, Motter shared much of the playing time with the other two Tiger centers.

Brown, who also plays center, closely followed Motter with 17 tallies. He scored 7 fielders and converted 3 charity tosses to capture sixth position on the Bengal scoring roster.

Riddle, the Tigers other center, chalked up 13 points to place seventh on the Tiger scoring roll. All three centers scored approximately the same number of points and played about an equal part of the time. Riddle secured his points on 4 fielders and 5 free tosses.

"Dan" Bourne was next on the Tiger roster with 12 points, 3 fielders and 6 charity tosses. "Dan" scored all of his points in the Monroeville game.

Jack Paul scored only 11 points in the tournament games, scoring five fielders and 1 foul throw. However, Jack made up for this by his fine floor play and under-the-basket work.

Kabisch pulled up in last place on the scoring list of the Tigers, making 2 fielders for a total of 4 markers. However, Fred did not see much action in tournament games, and he is also a more conservative player, being valuable to the team through his fine floor play.

Central's Rifle Team Defeats South Side But Drops Match To North

Central High School maintains a wide variety of extra curricular activities. Besides basketball, football, and track teams, Central maintains a rifle team under the supervision of Harry Veatch, who also teaches physics. The rifle team met South Side and North Side in their two latest matches and broke even, winning from South Side while dropping their match to North Side.

The Tigers met the Archer team on February 26, and defeated them by a score of 483 to 468.

Crance and Mann led the Tigers with scores of 98 and 97 respectively, while Cook made an almost perfect score of 99 for the Green.

North Side's powerful rifle team proved to be too strong for the Bengals. The Redskins were shooting with great precision, and down Central by a score of 496 to 480. Benninghoff, Heine, and Miller made perfect scores for the lead, and Bates, Buckner, and Grogg made scores of 98. Dickinson and Crance were best for the Blue with scores of 98 and 97 respectively.

Summaries of both matches:
Central—Crance 98, Mann 97, Magnuson 96, Ostman 96, Westernman 96, Scott 95, Lieman 92, Patterson 91.
South Side—Cook 99, Goddard 94, Goebel 93, Howell 91, Spencer 91, Mickerson 89, Glenn 88.

Intra-Mural Sport Leagues Have Meet

All Teams Of Central Permitted To Enter; Deadline March 9

Intramural basketball at Central covers a wide scope, with nearly 200 boys participating in basketball leagues. "Bob" Dornte, assistant coach, manager of all the activities and segregated all teams into three divisions, namely, All-Star Division, Senior League, and Midget class. All of the three league schedules were completed recently.

During the league season, the All-Star League was comprised of the strongest players in school. The league was comprised of four teams of boys who have played in that league in past years, and of those who are promising future varsity players.

The All-Star League championship was won by the Panthers, the Senior League by the Goons, and the Five Aces captured the Midget loop.

All-Star League results are as follows:

- December 9—Panthers 11, Bluebirds 7; Crescents 16, Birdmen 11; Wildcats 22, Cubs 6.

Girls' Classes Begin Tumbling

Great Number Of Girls Start Tumbling This Year At First Practice

After school tumbling started in the girls' gym at Central last Monday night. Approximately 100 girls came out for the first practice. Tumbling is composed of forward rolls, backward rolls, chest rolls, head stand, elbow stand, diving through hoop, diving over pyramids, distant diving, walking on hands, flip, dive over chair, novelty roll, hand walk, double knee bend walk, cartwheels, elephant walk, rocking chair, andy over, upstart, rolling rocking chair, head stand between knees with arms out, standing on hand balance, stomach and hand balance, hand stand into forward rolls, eskimo rolls forward and backward, novelty dive, triple roll, and knee and head stand balance.

Some of the outstanding tumblers are Maxine Larimore, Mary Kelley, Jean Teagarden, Margaret Hess, Geraldine Uhl, Bonabelle Sutton, Jean Junk, Mary Lebrato, Laura Isaacs, Geraldine Lipp, and Joyce Lord. In order to get points it is necessary to have six practices and be able to do at least three couple stunts and two individual stunts.

Junior and Senior life saving started this week at North Side pool. The requirements for senior life saving are a 200-word essay on resuscitation, tread water for 30 seconds, float motionless for one minute, disrobe in water and swim 100 yards, carry someone for one minute, freeman or saddle back carry from shallow water, front and back strangle hold, surface dive, front, back, and under water approach, head carry 60 feet, cross-chest carry 60 feet, hair carry 60 feet, and tired swimmer's carry 60 feet. The requirements for junior life saving are a 100 word essay on resuscitation, disrobe and swim 50 yards, release front strangle hold, release double grip on one wrist, release back strangle hold, resuscitation 1 1/2 minutes, surface dive, head carry 30 feet, cross-chest 30 feet, head carry 30 feet, and tired swimmer's carry 30 feet. Life saving is held every Tuesday after school at the North Side pool under the direction of Miss Meribah Ingham of Central, and Mr. Ivy of North Side.

Cossacks Defeat Airdales In Feature Tilt Of Sectional

Ridgeville High Wins Sectional At Portland

Black And White Gain First Right To Enter Regionals Since Crowned In 1926.

Cossacks Defeat Madison, 24-21

Cope Brothers Play Heads-Up Basketball Despite Death Of Sister And Brother-in-Law

Ridgeville High School came out of the final game of the Portland sectional to win the championship by defeating Madison in a close, exciting tilt by a score of 24-21.

The Cossacks won the right to compete in the finals by downing Hartford City in one of the major upsets in this region, the score being 25-21. Madison trounced Roll in the other semifinal tilt, 27-24, to assure herself of being admitted to the playoff.

The Black and White were eliminated last year in the first round by Parker and this year's victory was the first sectional title since 1926. It is generally believed in their section that this year's team is more powerful than the 1926-27 squad which advanced to the state finals.

Defeat Madison
Paced by the Cope brothers, who played heads-up ball despite the fact that their sister and brother-in-law had been killed in an automobile accident on Friday, the Beckleymen maintained a margin throughout the entire game to win 24-21. The score at the half was 16-12.

Hartford City, highly vaunted quintet and pre-sectional favorite, proved to be no barrier to the inspired Ridgevillers who defeated the Airdales in another close tilt, 25-21. Addington, able Black and White center, controlled the tipoff most of the time against the lengthy Risinger, this being one of the major causes for their triumph.

Roll Downs Gray in Opener
Roll's Red Rollers enjoyed a hot streak in the opening game of the tournament to win from a flock of Red Birds from Gray, 32-19.

The Gray five seemed slightly nervous, missing several easy shots in the opening minutes, being on the insignificant end of a 5-0 count at the end of the first quarter. Roll increased the margin to 9-0 before the Birds rallied. At the half-time marks the score stood 18-6 in favor of the Red Rollers. Gray outscored the Roll aggregation in the third canto 3 to 2, the score being 20-9 at its culmination. The Red Birds pulled within seven points of the leading Gray quintet twice in the final quarter, but further scoring threats were disbanded by the victors, the final count being 32-19.

In the second game of the Thursday session, Ridgeville, ultimate champs, won in a one-sided contest over the Bryant Owls, 34-17.

The Owls threw a scare into the Cossack fans in the first period by amassing a 5-0 lead. However, in the second canto the Black and White went on a scoring spree to lead at the half, 14-8. The husky Ridgevillers increased their margin in the next quarter to 11 points, leading 23-12. The final canto was a repetition of the second and third, Ridgeville scoring 11 more points while holding the Owls to 5. Cope paced the winners with 14 points while Butcher tallied 6 points for the losers.

Montpelier's Pacers were forced to extend themselves to produce a win over the Poling Yellowjackets, the final score being 28-21.

The Poling quintet paced the field in the first three quarters, the score being knotted at the termination of the half at 10-all, and holding a lead of 18-17 at the end of the third period. The last quarter was decidedly Montpelier, the Pacers scoring 10 points to the Yellowjackets' 4. Considerable fouling was seen in this tilt and the conversion of the charity tosses was a little factor in the scoring of the game. Poling converted 13 of 25 free throws while the Pacers tallied on 8 of 22.

Pennville, defending champs, went down fighting before a scrappy Redkey squad, 30-27.

The first half gave a general impres-

Ridgeville Gym Seats 500 Persons

Gym Used For Auditorium As Well As For Home Basketball Games

Considering that the town of Ridgeville has a population of only 500 persons, the Cossacks have an excellent gym and good facilities for their home games.

The gym is also used as an auditorium where all plays, assemblies, etc., presented by the school, are held. A rather small stage is located at one end of the gym and folding chairs are set up on the playing floor whenever they are needed.

The gym was built in 1922 and is a part of the regular school building, which was built by funds raised from a bond issue of Franklin township, the total cost of the building being $90,000. The playing floor is 68 feet long, 37 feet wide, and the gym has a seating capacity of 400 people. An average crowd per game during the past basketball season has been around 300 persons.

The gym hasn't any of the more modern basketball equipment, but this does not greatly handicap any team or individual player. The backboards are made of wood but are very solidly built. There is no electric scoreboard and the one now in use is of the type that demands manual operation. The playing floor is very solid and the ceiling is high enough so as to enable a player to arch the ball in the manner he desires.

The school colors of the Ridgeville High School are black and white, and the uniforms of the Cossacks five conform with these colors. The jerseys are black with white numbers and the pants are all white. Wherever the occasion demands, due to the conflicting colors of the visiting team, they wear all white uniforms with black numerals.

Ridgeville's Cossacks have received excellent support from both the students and townspeople all year and the cheering at the games is directed by two seventh grade students. These two boys dress in white and wear black and white neckties, conforming with the school colors. Ridgeville is sending a large delegation to the regional and these two lads will lead the Cossack fans in cheering their team on to a possible regional title.

sion to the onwatching fans that the Redkey aggregation was too much of a match for last year's titlists, the score standing at 21-7 in favor of the Redkey men. In the third canto, however, Reid, on the sick list for the past few weeks, proved to be a sparkplug for the Bulldogs and paced his teammates to pull within 11 points of the leading Reds, the score being 22-16. The Bulldogs sent the fans into hysterics in the final canto to take a lead of 24-22, but Redkey was not to be outdone finally capturing the contest, 30-27.

The Hartford City netters led at the end of the first quarter by a score of 14-3, and at the half time intermission 19-8. The final half was played on a more even basis but the Airdales were never seriously threatened.

Madison automatically advanced to the semi-finals by defeating the host school, Portland, in a first round battle, 46-34.

The Panthers were demoralized by Madison's uncanny marksmanship in the first half, the Tomcats tallying on six consecutive long shots. Portland outplayed the Madison band in the next half but of no avail, the Tomcats still continuing to hit.

Roll's Red Raiders advanced to the semi-finals by downing Jefferson in a listless game, 40-21.

Neither team was exceptional in scoring the first half, the Reds enjoying a lead of 7-4 at the quarter and 17-7 at the half. In the third canto, however, the Roll five piled up a lead of 30-15. Coach Young substituted freely in the final quarter, the reserves increasing the count to subsequently win.

Ridgeville triumphed over the Montpelier quintet to win her way into the semi-finals by a score of 32-26.

The Craig coached aggregation was weakened by the loss of Speece who was ruled from the game by Referee Shine on a disqualifying foul. Mr. Shine maintained that the offender deliberately fouled an opponent in such a way as might have resulted in a serious injury. The Ridgevillers held a comfortable margin at the end of the half, 23-13. The Pacers came back in the final half but were never able to come within three points of the Cossacks.

The Redkey Wolves worried a pack of Hartford City Airdales but were finally disbursed to a tune of 34-27, thus admitting the winners to the semi-finals.

The Airdales led at the end of the first quarter 13-3 and at the end of the half 21-10. The Goodmen increased their margin 25-11 before the Redkey Wolves began hitting. The score at the end of the third period was 29-18. Redkey's Landon brothers co-operated to bring their team within five points of the leading Airdales but that was as close as they were ever to come.

Ridgeville Personality Sketches

Charles Addington—Addington holds down the center position on the Cossack squad. He is 6 feet 2 inches in height and weighs 195 pounds, being well adapted for his position. He is 18 years old and is one of the two seniors on the squad. His ability to jump greatly aided the Cossacks to compile their fine record, and he has been able to get the tip from any center he has run up against at least half of the time. Addington is one of his teams leading scorers, holding down third position. He scored a total of 92 points during the regular season in 17 games. Concerning their victory at the Portland sectional, Addington said, "We were not over-confident, but we went in there with the determination to win." When informed of Central's wealth of material, he said that Central's ten men would have to be in fine condition to compete against the Cossack five.

Orville Kiser—Kiser holds down a guard position on the Ridgeville team. He is only a junior and is 5 feet, 8 inches in height, weighing 165 pounds. He holds down the fourth position in team scoring for the season with 70 points in 17 games. Quoting Kiser's version of the outcome of the regional: "I think we have just as good a chance as anybody. If we get to playing together we should win." He also stated that Coach Herman Beckley was well liked by all the players, as he knows how to handle boys. The team has been given excellent support all year by the student body.

Bill Mitchell—Bill holds down the center position on the second five, and also plays floor guard at times. He is 16 years old and is only a sophomore. Bill is only 5 feet, 10 inches in height, weighing 142 pounds, being very small for the center position. He scored 19 points during the regular season. Quoting Bill's opinion of the Cossack's chances in the regional: "We have a good chance to win."

Bob Byrd—Bob takes care of a guard position on the Cossack five, and is 5 feet, 11 inches in height, and weighs 150 pounds. He is only a junior and is 17 years old. He got his biggest thrill of the year when the Cossacks defeated Hartford City in the sectional, but he considers Muncie their bitterest rival and would like to meet the Bearcats. However, Hartford City beat Muncie during the season, so the victory over the Airdales somewhat atoned for his failure to play against the Bearcats. Bob is the leading scorer for Ridgeville, and he scored a total of 139 points during the regular season. Concerning the regional outcome he stated, "We have all the chance in the world to win."

Don Byrd—Don is a younger brother of Bob Byrd and is only a freshman of 14 years of age. He is 5 feet, 7 inches in height, weighing 135 pounds, and plays a forward post. As yet, Don has not developed the scoring ability of his brother Bob, but he tallied 6 points in the only game he played on the varsity. Don says that the Cossacks have a good chance to win the regional title.

Charles Stewart—Stewart takes care of a guard position and is only a sophomore. He is 5 feet, 9 inches in height, weighing 157 pounds, and is only 16 years old. Stewart has not been much of a scoring threat during the past season and scored only 19 points in the regular scheduled games. He stated that he enjoyed the Hartford City victory more than any others, as the Airdales claimed that the Cossacks were only a wide place in the road to the sectional title.

323 Enrolled At Ridgeville High

High School In Randolph County Legally Known As Franklin Township Public School

Ridgeville High School is located in Randolph County and is an imposing and attractive structure consisting of 14 rooms, well lighted and ventilated. Although it is generally known as Ridgeville High School it is legally acknowledged as the Franklin Township Public School. The grades run from 1 to 12, six years of grade school, two of junior high, and four of senior high.

The enrollment is as follows: grades one to six, 187; grades seven to eight, 51; grades nine to twelve, 85. It is an eight months school and thus can not be classed as a first class school.

Mr. Forrest Jack is principal of this scholastic institution and also teaches mathematics and science along with his executive duties. Herman Beckley, coach of the Cossacks, teaches science, physical education, and industrial arts. Mary Alice Belshaw is an able instructor of English, science, and girl's physical education. Vocational home economics and English are the subjects taught by Florence E. Brown another member of the teaching staff. Kenneth Long is in charge of the music department and also teaches Latin. Floyd Stalker teaches math and history. Social studies and commerce are taken care of by Madeline Thromburg.

In the grade school division, Cedric May instructs grade six. Grade five has as its teacher, Donna Huber. Mary Current has charge of grade four. Pauline Houser and Genevieve La Follette instruct grade three and two, respectively. Mildred Giest has charge of the beginners in grade one and William Walker is the janitor of the entire building including the industrial arts department.

The county commissioner has in mind a plan of remodeling the halls of the building, the completion of which will make it one of the most attractive schools in the state.

The school has no library, but the public library in the city building is decidedly adequate and exceptionally good for a town of Ridgeville's size, containing approximately 5,000 volumes.

Not Many Clubs At Ridgeville H.S.

Vocational And Home Economics Only Two Clubs Which The High School Has

The only clubs which the high school curriculum supports are the vocational and home economics clubs. However, the Parent-Teachers Association is strongly organized and presents many distinct activities.

The high school has an orchestra of 42 pieces and has a music room which is very well equipped. The organization plans to enter the Ball State Music contest this coming spring and hopes to walk off with honors.

Ridgeville Cossacks Have Chalked Up 531 Points Against Opponents' 292

Beckley, New Coach

Ridgeville's Cossack's, representing the Portland sectional district, in the Fort Wayne regional, have tallied 12 victories to 5 setbacks and have registered 531 points to the opposition's 292 during the 1935-36 campaign, to wind up one of the toughest schedules ever confronting a Ridgeville quintet.

The Cossacks opened their season with a new coach, Herman Beckley, at the helm. Previous to coming to Ridgeville, Mr. Beckley coached at Gaston of Delaware County for four years, turning out strong teams.

Coach Beckley's charges began their first four engagements by a large majority of points over Green, Bryant, Gray, and Huntsville. But on the fifth contest, Madison measured the Cossacks by a 28-14 count. Then Jefferson fell by the wayside, but Redkey, seventh on the schedule, set up a defense that the Cossacks were unable to penetrate, which accounted for the second loss.

The Cossacks bounced back into the win column by downing Poling, 23-7. But on the following week Lincoln surprised the Ridgevillers. Then Parker took its toll to hand the Randolph County five their fourth defeat.

After losing to Parker, the Black and White compiled four consecutive victories over Gray, Farmland, and McKinley before losing a two point decision to Albany.

In concluding their definitely scheduled season, Ridgeville chalked up impressive victories over Saratoga, 35-31, and Green 62-10, respectively.

During the season Coach Beckley's most formidable aggregation appeared to be O. Cope and S. Cope at forwards, Addington at center, and R. Byrd and Kiser at guards. Byrd led the offensive thrusts with a total of 139 points, while O. Cope tallied a total of 123 markers.

Tabulated seasonal record:
Ridgeville 48, Green 15.
Ridgeville 22, Bryant 7.
Ridgeville 46, Gray 10.

Sixteen Wins Scored By Outstanding Badger Squad

Darkhorses Of Union Center Meets Roanoke

Black And Whites To Contend For Title For First Time In History Of School

Union Is Favored To Win First Tilt

Naabmen Are Expected To Have Strong Offense Plays; Use Man-To-Man Defense

Entering the Fort Wayne Regional tourney as the "darkhorse," the Badgers of Union Center will attempt to carry back to Wells County the coveted Regional crown. Entered in the Bluffton Sectional, which produced three startling upsets, the Badgers took advantage of all the "breaks" and emerged victorious by defeating the Lancaster Bobcats in the final game of the tourney. This marks the first time in the thirty-one years of the school's existence that a Union Center squad has won the Sectional title.

Coach Oscar Naab, a product of Union Center High School, led his charges through a very successful season, winning sixteen tilts and dropping seven, three by one-point margins. With six members of his last year's varsity squad to build on, Coach Naab found a combination which could work smoothly and effectively. With two good reserve men always available to step into action if one of the starting five faltered, the Badgers played a powerful brand of ball throughout the season. Pence and Kreigh combine their scoring abilities in the forward positions. Clark takes care of the tip-off job. Dunn and Seamon carry the defensive burden. Haiflich and Miller are the utility men who see the most action.

Union Center's strength in comparison with the teams it will meet in the Regional tourney is very difficult to judge in as much as the Naabmen have not been meeting net squads of the caliber which Central, Roanoke, and Ridgeville have opposed.

In their twenty-three tilts this season the Black and Whites have amassed a total of 738 points to their opponents' 527. This gives them the high average of 32 points per game while their defense held their opposition to an average of less than 23 markers per tilt, giving them an average margin of a win of nine points.

Little is known of the type of offense the Union Center combination will employ. They have varied their offensive tactics throughout the season although they have shown a tendency to use a fast break as much as possible. Their defense is of the man-to-man type with a shift being used against teams using block plays.

Gym Of Badgers Seats 800 Fans

Court Games; Junior, Senior Plays Are Given In Union Center Auditorium

Much of the success of the Union Center basketball team this season has been due to the many long hours of practice which they put in at their fine gymnasium located in front of their school. The gymnasium is housed in a building whose dimensions are approximately 100 feet by 75 feet. The building is sided with green shingles and has a tin roof. The playing floor is 74 feet long and 44 feet wide and the backboards are of wood. On both sides of the floor are bleachers which will seat approximately 800 persons. At the one end of the playing floor is located the school stage on which are presented the junior and senior class plays each year. All assemblies of the school are held in this building as well as many of the public assemblies of the immediate locality.

The gymnasium is now two years old. It was constructed under the auspices of the federal government with the work being done by C. W. A. workmen. The gym is used for all the physical education work at Union Center. It is also the home gym for the Lafayette Central team. Schedules are so arranged that the Lafayette Central team plays its home tilts at Union Center gym when the Badgers are playing their games on foreign courts. Before the construction of the gym the Union Center squad was forced to do all of its practicing at the Markle gym.

Coach Oscar Naab Played Basketball At Hanover College

Many times we hear of the young man who left his home town and went out into the world and made good. But Coach Oscar Naab of Union Center was not content to do only what other men did so he went out into the world and then returned to his own home "town" to make good. Coach Naab is a very quiet young fellow who is contented to keep what he knows to himself and let his accomplishments speak for themselves.

Coach Naab lives with his parents on a splendid farm on the Indianapolis Road approximately two miles from Union Center. His home was very ably described by one observer possessing much skill in word picturing as being "A beautiful weathered two-story house of gray stucco surrounded by several barns painted in a fascinating shade of sky-blue. Other entrancing features were white and black chickens which lent a homely (cluck) touch."

Mr. Naab was born about two miles from the Union Center School. His grade and high school education was completed at this school. After leaving high school he decided to make teaching his profession and took up his studies at Hanover College. While at Hanover he specialized in physical education work and received his A. B. degree in this department. After graduation he taught for a period of two years at Otwell in Pike County. During his stay here he enjoyed going to Washington to witness the games in which the teams of Burl Friddle, now coach at South Side, instructed. His personal athletic career consists of four years as a member of the Union Center varsity team and four years of varsity play at Hanover College. He has always held down a guard position.

Coach Naab took up his duties at Union Center High School three years ago. In his first year as coach of the Badgers he turned out one of the best teams ever developed at Union Center. His squad won 19 of the 22 games it played during that season. In the Sectional tourney this squad advanced to the finals only to be handed a setback by Ossian. The Badgers had had two tough games earlier in the day and were almost exhausted when they ran up against the Ossian aggregation. In the 1933-34 season Coach Naab had very little material with which to work and as a result the Badgers won only about half of their games.

Union Centerwrites

The basketball fans at Union Center very much appreciate the efforts of the Home Economics Club to make attendance at the net games as much fun as possible. This club sells ice cream, candy, pop, and sandwiches at all of the games. The net receipts of their efforts averages about eight dollars per game. Miss Fluck, the English instructor, is the faculty adviser of this group.

Union Center points with pride to its fine orchestra. This organization now has 40 pieces with its members ranging in age from seven to eighteen. The orchestra plays at all the basketball games and the junior and senior class receptions.

Pupils of the Union Center High School have it over on the large city high schools in that they are driven to school each morning and taken home each evening by a "chauffeur." All students at Union Center come to school in school hacks. Some of them are forced to ride twenty miles each morning before finally reaching the "big red schoolhouse."

Principal

Mr. W. J. McNeely

Mr. W. J. McNeely is the young man who supervises the activities of Union Center High School and grade school. Upon his shoulders falls the task of conducting the primary and secondary education of the three hundred students attending this township school. In addition to supervising the operation of the school he finds time to instruct the high school students in mathematics. Mr. McNeely attended Patriot High School and then entered Hanover College where he obtained his A. B. degree in mathematics and social science. He continued his pursuit of education at Indiana University where he received his master's degree. He served six years as an instructor at the Union Center High School before being promoted to the position of principal in 1932.

Union Center High Edits Publication

"Union Center Flashes" Is Monthly Six-Page Mimeographed Paper

Journalistically-inclined minds at the Union Center High School readily find employment on the school's publication, the Union News Flashes. This mimeographed paper really does credit to the school publishing it considering the conditions under which the students work. The paper ranges in size from six to eight pages and is published on a monthly schedule.

The Union News Flashes has been published for the last three years with Miss Fluck acting in the capacity of faculty adviser. Lucille Fahl is now the editor-in-chief of the paper.

Union Center High is very proud of its excellent library. This library contains about eight hundred volumes and is sponsored by the members of the faculty.

Union Center Wins Sixteen Season Games

Black And Whites Lose Seven Out Of Twenty-three Net Clashes

Complete Record Is Given

Coach Oscar Naab has brought his charges through a very successful season, with sixteen triumphs being chalked up in the twenty-three tilts the Black and White have participated in this season. Starting the season with rather discouraging prospects, Coach Naab brought his squad along slowly until just before the Yuletide season. From then on, the Badgers have been bearing down in every game, and dropped but one tilt during the remainder of the playing schedule. The Badgers added four more victories to their fine record in the Bluffton sectionals. The Naabmen hit the skids midway in November, and did not snap out of their losing streak until it had totaled four straight setbacks.

The Badgers lost but two series of games with their opponents this season, Roanoke's netters winning two close engagements, and Warren taking another close one. The Naabmen split even with Petroleum, winning their second tilt by a sixteen-point margin after dropping a one-point decision earlier in the season. The Badgers carried off two games and dropped one to the Lancaster Bobcats, the Rock Creek Dodgers, and the Liberty Center Lions. The Badgers dropped their initial tilts with each of this trio of teams and then handed them a brace of setbacks later in the season.

The Union Center cagers have handed pairs of defeats to Lafayette Central and Ossian Bears. The wins over Lafayette Central were of special significance, in as much as these teams are engaged in a hotly-contested rivalry which has extended over a long period of time. The West Union aggregation went down in dismal defeat before the Badgers on three occasions, the Naab outfit holding thirty-six point margins of victory in two tilts and a thirty-point victory in the other game. Monroe likewise suffered a humiliating setback at the hands of the Union Center cagers, bowing under a thirty-four point margin. Chester likewise lost its only encounter with the Badgers, dropping a seven-point decision.

Absentees Increase

A new high mark was reached in the number of students absent from Roosevelt High School, Seattle, Washington, because of flu. The total number of students absent amounted to two hundred ninety-five with twenty-six tardy.

Roanoke Enters Regional For Second Consecutive Year

Roanoke Won 14 Of 20 Tilts During Season

Take Measure Of Huntington Five, 21 To 18, In Sectional In Clean Style.

Coach Bryan Has Unusual Success

His Team Has Won Three Sectional Crowns During His Four Years At Roanoke

With fourteen wins and six losses the quintet from Roanoke went into the sectional tournament at Huntington and carried through to the finals where they took the favored Huntington team by a score of 21 to 18. The Red and White basketballers have had a comparatively good season this year and are expected to go far in the regionals at North Side this week end.

The boys are of average height, the tallest being only six foot two, the shortest coming up to the five and a half marker. The shamrock-colored team is made up of rather muscular fellows with only a minimum of weight. They play a fast smooth game of ball utilizing a zone defense that has held most all the teams this season in check.

Sectional championships have been in evidence at the Roanoke High School for in the last four years of the present coach's administration, there have been three sectional victories. The aggregation from last year was defeated in the first game of the regional by the Berne Bears by one point. This year they meet the quintet from Union Center in their first game at the Northerner's gym.

The Stonewalls are coached by William V. Bryan, who has been with the Jackson Township school for only four years. In that time, however, he has produced four unusually fine teams that have been rated in the Huntington Sectional as one of the cleanest playing teams that have entered the tournaments. Coach Bryan played varsity basketball with the North Manchester five.

John Schoeff is the only boy back from last year's first five. John holds down the center post and is hailed as the captain of the five. Most of the team's plays and organization are built around this boy who is a tall and rangy player. He does only a small amount of scoring. Louis Zent does much of the scoring for the five, with a total of 129 points in twenty games. The other players are not assigned to any one post but play in most any assignment given to them. The reason for this can be laid to the fact that the players have been hit pretty hard by injuries. However there will be no players that will be kept from playing Saturday.

This year's team is a well-seasoned quintet having played on most of the larger floors in the district. They have had experience with the glass backboards and should experience no trouble getting the "feel" of the hardwood at North Side. The team is known for excellent handling of themselves under pressure.

The games that they have won and lost and their scores are as follows:

Sense Of Humor? Principal Has It

H. R. Brunegruff, Head Of Roanoke High, Ranks High As "Wiseracker"

An excellent sense of humor is the predominant characteristic of Mr. H. R. Brunegruff, principal of the Roanoke High School. He has been a teacher for the last twenty-two years and laughingly remarked that during that time he has been associated with twenty-eight schools, which to our limited knowledge, is quite a record. Although this is Mr. Brunegruff's first year as principal of the Roanoke school, he has been a principal for eighteen years. In addition to his executive duties at the school, he teaches mathematics and English and coaches wrestling.

Mr. Brunegruff

When questioned about his personal life, Mr. Brunegruff stated that he was born on a farm, as many school teachers have been. His hobbies are those which seem to be the favorite among men teachers, namely, hunting and fishing. Mr. Brunegruff served in the army and also worked as an ironworker, earning his diploma in this field with the loss of a fingertip.

Upon being asked if he was married, he answered emphatically, "I'll say," and Mrs. Brunegruff was ushered into the room. Like her husband, Mrs. Brunegruff is a teacher, acting as instructor of English in one of the nearby consolidated schools.

Mr. Brunegruff's only comment on the Stonewalls' chances in the regional tournament was, "The team's chances are as good as any of the others entered, and if they can win two games they should take the regional title." When asked the sentiment of the public in regards to basketball he replied, "Son, in this neighborhood they put a basketball in front of the boys when they are three days of age and if they don't grab for it, the parents drown 'em."

Roanoke Has Broad Athletic Program; Covers All Seasons

Many sports besides the state-wide and world-famous game of basketball are played at Roanoke. Baseball, wrestling, and track are the other sports that play an important part in their school curriculum.

The Jackson Township Stonewalls baseball team won the county title last fall, and finished in the inter-school league undefeated. The only game they dropped was to the Berne Bears. This game, however, was not on the league schedule. The Great Steiner was doing the hurling for the Bears. William Bryan does the coaching for the Green and White team, and stands for just as clean playing in this sport as on the hardwood.

These "Stonewalls" Are Chips Off Old Block In Battle Array

Stonewalls in speech as well as defense, Roanoke's players afforded poor material for a columnist, but anyway our chief interest is in their shot-sinking rather than their scandal-scattering propensities.

Captain John Schoeff, four-year man, and current center, is the biggest and heaviest of the Walls, which generally start contests, reaching 11 feet, 2 inches and weighing 170 pounds at present, his main interest is basketball, and why not? When he folds his suit up, he pursues miscellaneous good times with alacrity.

To introduce versatility in our tale, we next scrutinize Eddie Schaffner, the smallest of the Walls, being a wire fence, as it were. Circumstances removed him from South Side in Fort Wayne, long ago. Anyway, his school colors are still Green and White.

Last in the telephone directory, but first in points scored for the Stonewalls was Louie Zent, who piled up a season's total of 129. He also did well by himself in the sectional.

Again versatile, we zip from Zent to Ayers. Bob Ayers is highly rescribed. Perhaps he prefers the wonderfully tired feeling one can acquire by exuberant bouncing up and down and off a hardwood.

Hoot mon! It's Bill McPherron, stellar backguard, who divides his valuable time between basketball and Dizzy Deane's baseball.

The Stonewalls boast another tall center, too. Bill Koontz, 6 feet, 3 inches, who is also mightily interested in roller skating. On roller skates, he towers above lesser humans. Oh, to be a tall center on a sectional champ!

Up again, down again to Ernie Schoeff, smallest on the squad, and, ironically enough, brother to the varsity center. But perhaps in time—

Now quiet please, Hospital Zone—We enter the wards of crippled players, broken-down Walls. There are two, Melvin "Mad" Hatter, victim of flu and girls, but regardless, a good ball hawk.

Charles Richey, strangely enough, also is afflicted with girls, and a sprained ankle. How can he choose 'em? Probably like he chases a basketball, so start running, gal.

Stonewall Coach Has Good Record

William V. Bryan Believes In Clean Playing, Win Or Lose

William V. Bryan has coached the Roanoke Stonewalls through four successful seasons, three of which resulted in sectional titles. Bryan, himself played varsity basketball on the North Manchester quintet.

Coach Bryan stands for and coaches one of the cleanest playing ball clubs in the state. He states that his hobby is basketball and his highest aim in coaching is to have his team play the cleanest game possible, whether they win or not.

Coach Bryan

The coach himself is a very clean-cut individual who does not do much talking, being the strong, silent type of person. He has brown eyes that seem to stare off into space while he is talking. His hair is dark and some of it is missing on the back of his head.

In his stocking feet he stands five feet six and weighs 160 pounds.

Bryan received an A.B. degree from North Manchester. Besides his coaching duties, he teaches physical education and history.

So we have the man with the pleasing personality, who coaches a fast, clever, sectional-winning team, who says, "We'll win if the team plays basketball as I have seen them do at times."

agers, include Ed "Stooge" Merck and Paul Souder. Paul is also a two-sport man, being an expert ping-pong player, and junior title-holder in that sport. Two guesses as to Ed's occupation, outside of refusing another pair of sweat socks.

Roanoke Gym Has Capacity Of 450

Is Large In Proportion To Number Of Students Attending Consolidated School

During the era of the urge for better gyms in township schools, and before the depression knocked the pins from under the finances of the townships of Indiana, the Roanoke Consolidated School's gym, the home of the Stonewalls, was built.

The gym, which is one of the finest in Huntington County, excluding Huntington High School's gym, holds 450 people, which is larger in proportion to the number of students in the school than North Side's gym because there are only 387 students in the entire twelve grades of the consolidated school.

The gym has a very fine playing floor of sixty by forty feet with three-foot out-of-bounds margin. Although the gym is modern in every way, it still has the old-fashioned wooden backboards and the old-fashioned scoreboard, which is operated by placing cardboard numbers on it.

The school also has a wrestling team, which is coached by the principal, Mr. Brunegruff, and when the gym is not in use as a basketball court it is transformed into a wrestling arena by placing in the center of the gym a large amount of sawdust, covered over by a large, heavy rug. Wrestling is one of the most popular sports in Roanoke.

Englishment Will Take Over Dude Ranch for Big Show, Replacing Former Owner.

Affair To Portray Western Activities

Acts Will Include Magician, Square And Indian Dances, Imitations By Joe Bex

"Oh, I say," gurgled the two English men who own the Dude Ranch, "but we're going to have a bally time here!" When you assemble a group of Indians from a reservation, a party of cinema stars from Hollywood and a bunch of cowboys from the range, all together in one grand and glorious spectacle of song and dance, every one is bound to have a "bally time," using the words of the enthusiastic Englishmen.

Since the owner of the ranch, and, incidentally, the master of ceremonies, John Bex, was compelled to travel over the prairie to the Big City of New York, he sold out to two Englishmen, Vernon Gregory and Don Sparkman. Since, as everyone knows, second sons have no chance for property in their own country, these two enterprising Britons decided to come to the west instead of going to dear old Canada. And it's a good thing they did, too, because they got not only a bang-up Dude Ranch but they got in just in time for the big show.

In other words, the musical and physical education departments of South Side will present the first annual vaudeville, Friday, March 13, on the gymnasium stage. Miss Alice Patterson and Miss Gretchen A. Smith, of the girls' gym department; and Mr. Jack Wainwright of the music department, are in charge of arrangements for the performances.

The admission price for the performance is one quarter of that good old Western silver dollar. Tickets are on sale and may be purchased from any member of the music department or in the gym office. Students will be excused from Friday afternoon classes to attend the vaudeville if they wish. The evening performance will begin at 8 o'clock.

The two versatile Englishmen, Don Sparkman and Vernon Gregory, will act as joint masters of ceremonies. Besides this change several additions and corrections have been made to the program. One of the additions is the Jones Accordion Orchestra, composed of eighteen accordions and led by Georgianna Jane Jones. Another attraction is the great magician, Jack Brazy, who has a big act all his own. Joe Bex will be introduced in a new role, that of an impersonator. Benny Woodhull will replace Bill Bonsh in the Two Step and Polka. The educated horse, which was to be on the program cannot be secured. The rope twirler's wife died, and, as he will not be back for a month, he will be unable to appear.

The complete program follows: Cowboy songs—Boys' Glee Club. Equestrian number—Pony Ballet—Girls' department.

Western Yarns—Members of Boys' Glee Club.

Square Dance—Boys and girls.

Songs—Boys' Glee Club.

Accordion Orchestra—Led by Georgianna Jane Jones.

Dance of Indians from neighboring reservation.

Tap Dance—Billy Korte and Peggy Kilpatrick.

Magician act—Jack Brazy.

Impersonations—Joe Bex.

Hollywood Troupe—Novelty act.

"Top Hat"—Velma Lehman and Marguerite Hitzeman.

Two Step and Polka—Boys and girls.

Accordian Duo—Special number.

Tail Stories—Members of Boys' Glee Club.

Musical Stairs—Girls' department.

Finale—Entire cast.

Members of girls' physical education department who are featured in the Pony Ballet are Marjorie Clapp, Janet Hartman, Peggy Kilpatrick, Helen DeGregory, Bernadette Shearer, Barbara Scheele, Peggy Woodhull, Marian Patterson, Julia Crabill, Ann Hull, Marjorie Mitten, and Olive Zahn.

The Indian dancers are: Teddy Conner, Frances Craig, Lila Patton, Eva Allison, Kathryn Cook, Marjorie Hower, Lubadelle Jughans, Rafida Lau-ladio, Betty McKown, Betty Jane Griffith, Dorothy Karnap, and Marjorie Quackenbush. Members of the square dance ensemble are Marjorie Mitten, Marian Patterson, Julia Crabill, Olive Zahn, Dwight Frost, Joe Faulkner, Glen and Vernon Gregory.

All these scenes will take place in the recreation room of the imaginative dude ranch and will offer a distinctive different type of entertainment.

The songs which will be featured are "Home on the Range," "Carry Me Back to the Lone Prairie," "Boots and Saddle," and "The Last Round-Up," to be featured by the Boys' Glee Club.

Inter-Club Group Plans Campaign

Get-Acquainted Day, Clean-Up Week Are Main Activities

The coming clean-up campaign to be sponsored by the Inter-Club Congress of South Side from April 13 to 20, was the chief topic of discussion at the meeting held Monday in room 138. Members of the clean-up campaign bulletin committee gave reports as to the progress being made with regard to the bulletins that were sent to each home room. The majority of the reports were favorable, although there were a few exceptions. Teachers are especially urged to cooperate with the congress in selecting students to check up on these bulletins if they have not already done so.

Posters, bulletins, and pep talks were methods suggested for arousing interest in the campaign. Members of the club decided that one bulletin a week would be sufficient to send to the home rooms. A committee to write this weekly bulletin was appointed by Charles Stone, chairman. It includes Rosemary Lehman, Peggy Kilpatrick, and Helen Meyer. Martha Franz, and Ruth Roadcap were also appointed to make arrangements with the two art instructors, Miss Ley and Miss Dochterman, to have their students make posters which will help to carry out the idea of the clean-up campaign. An Arbor Day celebration will also be held during the week of the clean-up campaign.

The Get-Acquainted Day, better known, perhaps, as "Hello" day, is a coming event which will be looked forward to with much enthusiasm on the part of the student body. The date of this event will be kept secret. John Thackery, Julia Crabill, and Miles Frisinger were appointed to take care of the arrangements for this event.

The three faculty advisers, Miss Kiefer, Mr. Bex, and Mr. Flint, and the following representatives were present for this meeting: Verna Holtman, Martha Franz, Peggy Kilpatrick, Ruth Reitz, Jane Loomis, Julia Crabill, Rosemary Lehman, James Derr, Virginia Gross, Theo Schurenberg, John Edwards, Robert Shimel, John Thackery, Miles Frisinger, Jean Weaver, Helen Meyer, Charles Stone, Ruth Roadcap, and Francine Shelper.

A checker tournament was held at Ganley Bridge High School to raise money for a staff room for the student paper. The contest drew twenty-two participants.

Philaethian Girls Honor Leap Year

Fourteenth Annual Banquet Is To Be Held At Woman's Club

Price To Be Fifty Cents

"Leap Year" is to be the theme of the annual South Side Philaethian St. Patrick's Day banquet to be held on Tuesday, March 17, at the Woman's Club. Plans have been completed and all final arrangements have been made. This year will mark the fourteenth annual Philo banquet. Since the club was organized in 1921, a banquet has been held every year.

Very novel decorations have been arranged under the direction of Sonia Velfok, chairman of the decoration's committee. The programs are indeed a very clever arrangement.

Others who are assisting in the planning for the banquet are: Dorothy Crabill, place committee chairman; Betty Rose Lehman, typing chairman; Miss Demaree, program; and Ruth Adler, reception.

The club decided to hold the banquet at the Woman's Club. The price will be fifty cents.

All Philo alumni are invited to attend. Reservations should be made with Ruth Adler, A-96201; Mary Martha Hobrock, H-35383; or Verna Holtman, H-37021. Seventy-five people are expected to attend the banquet.

The last meeting of the Philo Club was a joint meeting with the Meterite Club; this was held on Tuesday of last week in the Greeley Room. The Meterites presented a little skit, which was written and directed by Margaret Null.

There was an Amateur Hour Program. Graham MacNamee was played by Gwendolyn De Wees, and Major Bowes by Margaret Null. First on the amateur program was an accordian selection by Velma Schman. This was followed by a violin solo by Dorothy Hall; negro trio, Betty Neeb, Helen Paux, and Doris Siebold; whistler, Janice Dyer; an impersonation by Peggy Bacon and a piano solo by Ruth Baade.

The Philo part of the program consisted of a monologue by Gwen Horn, a piano solo by Kathleen Witter, and a play entitled "A Dish of China."

The play was of the Revolutionary period and the characters all wore colonial costumes, which were very colorful. Verna Holtman acted Lady Augusta Clive; Eva Allison, Mrs. Wynne; Peggy Kilpatrick, Clarissa Courtayne; Martha Zelt, Janitzy; La Verne De Keel, Marcy; Marian Wolf, Mrs. Ravenscroft; and Theo Schurenberg, Mrs. Throckmorton.

Scribe Reveals Unknown Facts About Sectional Tournament

With no apologies to the Wizard of any of his clan I am writing this to give you a few previously unknown facts about the Fort Wayne Sectional tournament. To make it easier for both the writer and the reader I am putting my surprising facts in a column form.

Although South Side won from Hoagland by a six-point margin the Archers actually controlled the ball just one minute more than the Wild-cats. The leather pill was held for 11 minutes by the Green and White team and 10 minutes by the Hoagland five. Another interesting fact concerning the Hoagland-South Side engagement is that the Archers won the game underneath the bucket, hitting on 9 out of 13 shots in that way.

Elmhurst Played Well

Elmhurst can gain some satisfaction from their loss to Decatur for they held on to the ball two minutes longer than the Yellow Jackets did. In controlling the ball twelve minutes, the longest period of time the Trojans could keep it, moving was only 25 seconds in the second quarter. Neither Decatur nor Elmhurst could make its under-the-basket shots stick consistently. Decatur hit on 5 of 23 and Elmhurst failed to score on 7 of these chances.

New Haven made their win over Monmouth look even more convincing by controlling the leather sphere 12 minutes while Monmouth had it only 7 minutes. New Haven at one time held the ball for 52 seconds. New Haven looked best on their angle shots by scoring on 6 of 22 opportunities, while Monmouth failed to hit consistently on any kind of shots.

Arcola-Monroeville

In the Arcola-Monroeville game, which was marked by numerous fumbles and bad ball handling, the Monroeville Cubs kept the ball for 10 minutes, just three minutes longer than Arcola who could hang onto it for only seven minutes. Arcola's longest Decatur's margin of minutes over New Haven was not quite so large but held the ball 10 minutes to New Haven's 8. Decatur, however, had trouble in getting the tip nosing out New Haven 13-12 on center tips. Other jump balls went to Decatur by a 8-5 margin.

Central having the ball in their possession 72 times during the game could only out-time Monroeville 9 minutes to 7. Central's fast breaking offense continued to click scoring 11 of their 18 field goals on fast breaks for the hoop.

North Side had a good three-minute margin of time over Lafayette Central, the Redskins having the ball 11 minutes to the Pirates' 8. North Side also did well on center jumps getting the tip 23 times to Lafayette's 8.

South Side again proved themselves high in ball controlling for they had the ball 14 minutes in their semi-final game with Decatur. The Yellow Jack-ets were in possession of the ball for only eight minutes. The Archers won the game on long shots sinking nine of them. The center jump was held well in hand by the Green and White five but of the numerous other jump balls South Side could get the tip on only 11 of 21.

Although Central controlled the ball 14 minutes to North Side's 8, the Redskins gained some satisfaction from the fact that not one of the Tigers' field goals was scored on a fast break play.

Redskins Have Jump Balls

North Side's passing gave them a 10-8 minute margin over Huntetown in keeping possession of the ball. North Side failed to hold the ball over 20 seconds at any time while Huntetown's best was 25 seconds. North Side had all jump balls well in hand taking 18 out of 20 tips at center and 9 of 16 other jump balls.

Harlan, stinging under a 41-19 defeat by Lafayette Central, proved themselves to be something of a ball club for they controlled the ball nine minutes to the Pirates' 11 and gave Lafayette Central a fight for tip-off honors. Lafayette got 12 center jumps while Harlan got only 8, but Harlan took 11 out of 19 of all other jump balls.

South Side in their second tourney appearance made a decided impression on the Woodburn squad for the 20 minutes that the ball was actually in action South Side controlled it during 13 of them having but seven minutes for Woodburn. The Archers however did not control the tip consistently, the Warriors garnering 7 of the 21 center jumps and 8 of 9 other tips.

March 27, Date Of Senior Funfest

Students, Teachers, Parents Plan Stunts For Event Of Social Calendar

Theme Is Dark Secret

Plans are now being made for the annual South Side High School Senior Funfest to be held at 8 p. m. on Friday, March 27, in the school gymnasium. A theme for the funfest has been decided upon but will be kept secret until some future date.

The pupil committee met the early part of this week to select their various helpers which will also be announced at a later time. This pupil committee is comprised of the senior class officers who are Fred Nye, president; Dorothy Crabill, vice-president; Ruth Adler, secretary; and Virginia Greiner, Robert Adams, and Richard Helm, members of the Social Council. Miss Adelaide Fiedler and J. Henry Cappel are the faculty advisers for the senior class.

The committees named to direct the other affairs were announced last week by Principal R. Nelson Snider.

The faculty committee is composed of Dorothy Magley, chairman, assisted by Wilburn Wilson, Alda Jane Woodward, Paul Sidell, and Alice Patterson.

The Parent-Teacher Association committee is: Mrs. Horace C. Horn, chairman, Mrs. Merle J. Abbott, and Mrs. George M. Knudson.

The funfest is one of the featured activities of the senior class social calendar. It is composed of entertainment made up of stunts presented by the pupils, members of the teaching staff and parents of the students. The affair will be climaxed by the serving of suitable refreshments.

Admitted To 1500 Club

Don Helm and Helen Cox, both sophomores, are the newest additions to 1500 Club. Don and Helen have been members of the Times staff since September. Don earned his points as a sports writer and columnist and Helen worked as a reporter and proof reader.

Central High School Hardwood Performers Chalk Up Impressive Record In 35-36 Season

Win 18 Out Of 23 Games

Central High School's evenly-balanced roster of hardwood performers chalked up an impressive record during the 1935-36 net campaign, by winning 18 engagements out of a possible 23. During this time the Tigers gained undisputed possession of the N. E. I. C. crown with eight victories and no setbacks, and city series supremacy with four triumphs and one setback.

Through the course of the pre-tourney season, the Summit City five scored 793 points to the opposition's 560 markers, the average summing up at 34-24. Of 23 games played, the Tigers have scored more than 25 points in all but two of their engagements.

The Tigers started their season very early—one week after the close of football—by meeting Newcastle's highly touted Trojans. The Trojans flashed a powerful offense to annex the inaugural tilt by the close score of 35 to 31. Anderson, last year's state champs, encountered the Tigers in the next tilt, and staged a rally that offset the 16-point advantage held by the Blue in the early stages of play.

North Side was the first to fall before the Tigers claws in a city series tilt by the score of 33-25, and on the following evening Laporte succumbed by 29-21 count. Two N. E. I. C. teams, Columbia City and Kendallville confronted the Bengals, but fell by scores of 40-16, and 39-13, respectively. Then in the following game, the Blue and White avenged the unexpected victory of the preceding year, administered by Central Catholic. The Tigers set their offensive guns toward the hoop and bombarded the cords for a 40 to 23 triumph.

During the Christmas vacation Mendy's charges participated in a four-team tourney along with North Side, South Side, and Berne. In the opening game of the tourney, the Tigers downed their Southern rivals, 27-18, after a very closely contested first half. Berne easily defeated North Side, allotting the Ermenen the right to do battle with Central. Both teams started strong, but the Tigers pulled away to an advantage, and held it for the remainder of the tilt.

Gathering momentum with every tilt, Central downed Auburn, 51-37, Hartford City 49-26, Decatur 34-25, and Bluffton 39-22. With the ship sailing high and prospects glowing bright, South Side submerged the Bengals' ship with an undeniable rally at the close of the final period, 29-25. Then for good measure Huntington scored a 33-31 decision over the Blue.

At this point the Tigers surprised their followers with a strong comeback, trouncing North Side 31-14, and East Chicago 28-23. Then Central's "B" team downed Huntington's varsity, 29-24, at the Bengal lair. With the ship once more following a straight course, Coach Mendenhall took seven men to Bedford, and was sent back home with a stinging 34-19 loss. On the following night with the city series crown at stake, Murray utilized the boys who did not make the trip to Bedford, and downed the South Siders 32-21.

Then with the N. E. I. C. crown tucked away, the Mendymen engaged strong Elkhart five, Eastern Indiana Conference champs, and brought back another victory. With only two games left to play the Tigers turned on the power and registered impressive victories over Morton of Richmond, 51-19, and South Bend Central, 49-27.

The tabulated record is as follows: Central 31, Newcastle 35, Central 27, Anderson 29, Central 33, North Side 25, Central 29, Laporte 21, Central 40, Columbia City 16, Central 39, Kendallville 13, Central 40, Central Catholic 23.

It May Be Possible That He Does Not Blow His Own Horn!

Ah! Ha! At last girls, it has happened. Yes, I know it might be a very great surprise, but be ready to take the consequences. A new prospect has appeared on the scene. The name of this person is Bob Horn. We were informed that he's a very scrappy basketball player. So we judge he even knows how to manage the women. All the better Bob, the harder to conquer the better. People just naturally desire those things that are the most difficult to obtain.

Just one surprise after another! Kenny Landon is really a fine gentleman after all is said and done. One of our freshman girls had a bit of trouble in keeping her equilibrium in the vicinity of her locker. Somnia may have been the immediate cause; yet it did seem odd that she should lose her balance just as Kenny (the handsome brute) Landon was passing by. Shyly, indeed quite shyly, he lifted her up to her former position of stability.

Ever since our friend, James Work, enlightened the halls of North Side by his striking appearance, a certain senior boy in this school decided that the quickest, surest, and safest way to get and hold your woman is to appear in a "smooth" military uniform with all the trimmings. We wonder just who this boy would like to charm upon his return. For full particulars ask Helen Lee Pletcher for he sits on her right the seventh period in French class.

In one of the lower East Side schools in New York, children complain of not wanting to sit next to a certain boy because he smelled very badly. The teacher also became aware

TROY FAMILY WASHINGS

Boosters Garbed In School Colors Serve Athletic Fans

Booster boys and girls, cleverly garbed in blue and white, flitted gayly around the North Side gymnasium throughout the Sectional Tournament. Although everyone of them seemed carefree and gay, each was carrying out a specific duty which was carefully planned and assigned to them a week before the three-day basketball spree.

The three Coca-Cola stands were managed at different quarters of the games, under the direction of Laurence Lauer, by Robert Nathan, Alfred Falk, Jack Crane, Frank Hibbins, Herschel O'Shaughnessy, Frank Gard, Edwin Stumpf, Howard Cantwell, Jim Koegel, Irving Latz, Charles Rothschild, Bill and Bob Spackman, Victor Boerger, Bob Kaag, and Morton Meier. These boys sold cake in the crowds, carried ice to fill the stands, sold at the stands and a few had to go to the extreme by mopping the floor when the coke stands overflowed. These white jacketed, white capped, blue bow tied boys saved many an over exerted throat from complete hoarseness by carrying a soothing, refreshing drink to them. The bow ties they wore were white and blue felt with a small white felt "C" fastened on in front.

The Booster girls, wearing white skirts, "Central blue" sweaters, white scarves with blue "C's" on them, white shoes with blue ankle socks, and a blue ribbon in their hair, made a pretty picture as they ran back and forth through the crowded gym between intermissions of the games. Ever faithful they remained at the candy stands and at the popcorn machine even through exceptionally exciting games. The candy stands were in charge of Cecelia Bolson, Mabel Springer, Dorthea Prange, Mildred Hawkins, Dorothy Masursky, Vivian Rider, Kathryn Simon, Bea Call, Isabelle Raymond, and Ida May Dager. Besides taking care of the stands these girls, when needed, sold through the crowds before and after various games. Also selling through the gym in handsome blue and white outfits were Lillian Hartman, Clara Bente, Jane Bash, Elizabeth Lanier, Mary Farrell, Ruth Peck, Margaret Nichols, Mary Martha Rabus, Betty Bratt, Esther Henrick, Helen Long, and Jean Beiersdorfer.

The popcorn machine, the unofficial director to the main Booster stand, was taken care of by Marion Cabler, Catherine McKay, Mary Hattersley, Virginia Heller, Anne Boehm, Mary McAnlis, and John Davies. Not to be outdone, the yell leaders, Howard Cantwell, Wilbur Kernen, Bob Smith and Byron Leith, helped to sell coca-cola when they did not have to lead yells.

The name cards in the scoreboard were taken care of by Morton Meier, the ever on-pouring crowds were directed to their respective sections by Bob Kutsch, Ward Beers, P. Schwehn, and John Collias; programs were distributed by Jeff Mitchell and Ed Timmis. They also put up the signs around the gym floor.

Orville Mertz took care of the locker room, admitting the contesting teams for showers and so forth before and between the games. Orel Sprunger, sports editor for the Spotlight, wrote up a number of games for the school paper. Harold Battenburg spent his time playing in the band.

Miss Brigham, whose work cannot be enumerated in print, repeatedly marvels at the spirit in which every Booster worked at all times. She is quite satisfied with everyone for co-operating with the chairmen and sub-chairmen who successfully carried out their respective duties with their committee members. There were millions of errands to be run and these were of the fact and had told him repeatedly to take a bath, but with no effect. Finally, the teacher wrote his mother the following letter:

My dear Mrs. Cohen:
I wish you would please give Abie a bath as he smells very badly.

Very truly yours,
My dear teacher,
Learn him, don't smell him. Abie is no scented rose.

Plan Self-Governing Study Hall

Pupils of Washington Park High School, Racine, Wisconsin, have drawn up plans for a self governing study hall. A volunteer committee conferred with the teacher in charge and students. This new system will be the first of its kind to be used at Park High School.

carried out particularly by Byron Leith, Ed Timmis, and Jeff Mitchell. On top of all the decorations worn by the Boosters the thing that held the most influence with the crowds and the firemen and police who patroled the gym for public safety, were the white satin badges, printed with a blue tiger head and the words, "Central Booster" on them. "Dollar seats" were termed by officials at the games, were obtained by a flash of a Booster badge. The Booster Club, under the direction of Miss Mildred Brigham, were important factors in making the three day contest a huge success.

Cheer Leaders Provide Plenty Of Pep, Color At Tournament Games

No basketball team is ever complete without several cheer leaders on the floor with plenty of pep, vim, and vigor urging each spectator to do his share in supporting his team. Plenty of pep was shown during every game of the sectional tournament.

Hoagland high school brought three peppy students with them to the tournament. There was one boy dressed in dark blue corduroy trousers and a white shirt and two girls with white satin blouses and dark blue corduroy trousers.

South Side's Archers, as we know quite well, had four high-spirited boys dressed in green satin suits trimmed in white with two white "S's" on the front of their jacket with yell on the back. They did their share in making the South Siders yell.

The Trojans from Elmhurst high school were led in their yells by a boy dressed in red corduroy trousers and a red sweater with red letter E outlined in red on the front of his sweater.

An outstanding outfit was chosen by the students from Woodburn High School for their cheer leaders. A boy and a girl dressed in white shirts and dark blue corduroys with dark blue suspenders proved quite admirable by the other schools.

The New Haven Bulldogs, whose colors are purple and gold, brought two boy cheer leaders. They were dressed in white sweaters and trousers and a gold letter N outlined in purple on their sweaters.

The cheer leaders from Monmouth numbered four. Two girls were dressed in street clothes and gym shoes and two girls were dressed in black trousers and yellow satin blouses with black ties on them.

The colors of Lafayette Central are black and red. One girl was dressed in a black skirt and sweater with red sleeves. Two boys were dressed in gray trousers and red sweaters with black sleeves.

Two girls with yellow satin blouses and gray trousers were the two peppy persons leading the yells for the students of Harlan.

Quite striking were the outfits worn by the cheer leaders of the Monroeville Cubs. A boy and girl were dressed in black satin suits with white stripes down the sides of the trousers. The letter M was on the jackets in front in white and Yell was on the back.

Arcola brought a boy dressed in white sweater and trousers and a green A trimmed in white on the front of his sweater.

Quite prominent were the two girls from Leo whose outfits were of lavender trousers and white sweaters with white stripes down the side of the trousers and the letters L. H. S. in lavender on the sweater.

North Side's Redskins as we know had three cheer leaders dressed in red suits trimmed in white. Quite outstanding were these suits and quite peppy were the cheer leaders.

The cheer leading from Huntington numbered two. The girls' outfit was a black skirt and sweater with a gold collar and black tie. Also they had a mascot who was quite the center of attraction.

Decatur rooters were led by two boys dressed in dark tan corduroy trousers with a yellow jacket and lavender tie.

Last but not least were the cheer leaders from Central High. The three boys were dressed in white trousers and white and blue jackets with the letter C on them. They, along with others, displayed their quota of pep, vim and vigor. Also everyone cooperated with their cheer leaders for each school and tried their best to support their team.

Is Milk Kind to You?

At last there is a message of hope for those—infants or adults—who have trouble digesting good ordinary milk.

The leaders of the dairy industry, scientists of the Department of Agriculture, research departments of many state institutions and heads of college laboratories working toward a common end have accomplished a noteworthy improvement in milk.

Homogenized Milk (pronounced: Ho-modge-en-ized) is a better milk... because it has a more pleasing taste... because of its more uniform distribution of food elements... No bottle shaking is necessary... the contents are permanently mixed... making the last spoonful as rich as the first.

ESKAY Homogenized Milk

Is choice Grade A Milk—from inspected farms... laboratory tested... pasteurized... clarified... made more easily digestible by a simple mechanical process—like the grinding of kernels of wheat. Under this process—application of pressure of from 2,000 to 3,000 pounds per cubic inch—the solids—including the butterfat—are broken down smaller, resulting in a soft curd milk.

Eskay Homogenized milk is not a medical preparation... nothing has been added... nothing taken away. Those who have not found milk "kind" to their digestive system will be agreeably surprised at the ease with which they can assimilate this modern and scientifically processed milk.

Eskay Homogenized milk can be procured at the best markets or delivered direct to your home through our retail service. Call A-6133 for service and ask for a copy of the pamphlet—"Facts About Homogenized Milk."

Advance High, College Math Tests Planned

Plans For College Entrance Exams In Math Given By Miss Adelaide Fiedler.

A recent announcement by Miss Adelaide Fiedler, head of South Side's mathematics department, in regard to a new ruling of the College Entrance Examination Board, should be of interest to every senior who is contemplating taking the general college entrance examinations soon. The announcement includes the plan of a new series of examinations in college and advanced high school mathematics. The new series is to include material testing mathematical aptitude as well as mathematical knowledge and shall be similar in character to the examinations designated by the commission as Examination Alpha, Beta, and Gamma.

By means of this revised plan the college entrance examination board aims to examine the candidates more comprehensively and efficiently. The new tests are intended to measure the candidates' fitness for college more specifically than can be done by any other type of examination.

Three Groups Recognized
Three groups of candidates are recognized: 1. Those who are not prepared to continue the study of mathematics or natural science in college, but who base their claim to be admitted to college in part upon the study of mathematics in secondary schools. 2. Those who are ready to fulfill the minimum college requirements in mathematics or natural science. 3. Those who look forward to more advanced undergraduate work in mathematics and science.

Alpha, Beta, and Gamma examinations will be of such a nature as to enable the colleges to judge of the competency of candidates in math and to determine in which of the three above groups the candidate belongs. All three of these examinations will be such as to determine: a. The candidate's understanding and appreciation of the fundamentals, principles, and characteristic modes of approach of mathematics; b. his technical equipment and his knowledge of mathematical facts; and c. his ability to apply his understanding of principles and his technical knowledge to new situations.

List Examinations
Examination Alpha will be arithmetic and the simpler concepts and techniques of algebra, numerical trigonometry, and plane geometry. Examination Beta will be concerned with algebra, plane geometry, and numerical trigonometry. It may include questions from solid geometry and more advanced parts of algebra and trigonometry, and from elementary statistics. Examination Gamma will measure the equipment of candidates for admission to technical schools and the degree of development attained by students who have an interest in and an aptitude for mathematics and the natural sciences such as would lead them to pursue more advanced study of these subjects in college. The main body of the examination will be concerned with trigonometry, solid geometry, and advanced algebra. The examination may include questions from analytic geometry and the calculus in order to measure candidates who have been able to assimilate a wider mathematical training.

X, Y, Z's For Training
If there are any seniors in South Side who are planning to take the College Entrance Examination and who do not belong to the XYZ group, Miss Fiedler has announced that they are welcome to come to room 16 every Thursday evening at 3:30 where demonstrations in trigonometry, college algebra, and the analytic geometry of straight lines and circles are being given. These demonstrations are followed by drill work on the part of the students. Later on, if there are to be Examination Gamma candidates, the required amount of the calculus will be taken up for discussion and drill. One-third of the examinations will deal with trigonometry, one-fourth with solid geometry, one-fourth with advanced algebra, and the rest with analytic geometry and the calculus together.

Friddle Thanks Team

Burl Friddle

Mr. Burl Friddle, coach of the South Side Archers, made the following statement in showing his appreciation of the team's work:

"I wish at this time to express my utmost appreciation to the members of the team for the splendid effort they put forth during the basketball season. It was a pleasure to work with this fine group of fellows. Altogether, I believe we had a very profitable season. Every player has shown much improvement. The one characteristic I admire most about this team is that they never lost their courage. This fact was never more evident than in the game with Central. Those boys stayed in there and kept fighting all the time. They never gave up. I am indeed very sorry to be losing Ellenwood, Close, and Lee. Jim was always a very dependable player and would have been a regular if he had not been ill and lost very valuable practice. Joe was consistent throughout the season. His play at center was one of the outstanding factors of the team's play. Bud showed more improvement than any player I have ever coached at any school."

Hi-Y, Torch Clubs Hold "Jamboree"

Howard Haag Displays Moving Pictures Of Japan And Nipponese Army At Recent Meet.

Mr. H. L. Haag was the main speaker at the big Hi-Y jamboree held last Tuesday, March 10, at the Y. M. C. A. at 6:30 o'clock. He has lived about twenty years in Manchuria and Japan with the "white" immigrants from Russia. He is very well informed on the Japanese situation, and his subject was, "Japan and the Japanese Army." He illustrated his talk with moving pictures taken in Japan.

The jamboree was in the form of a potluck supper, and it was very well attended. Although not an annual affair, it is hoped that it will be in the future. All Hi-Y and Torch Clubs in the city were in attendance.

The program was closed with several songs and yells which were done with much gusto. The affair was in charge of the advisors and presidents of the clubs. The advisors are: Ward Gilbert, South Side; Mr. M. M. Ashley, Central; Mr. Ralph Virts, Wheatley Center; and Mr. Rollo Mosher and Mr. E. Pennington, North Side. Miller, Hart Beat Opposing Debaters Negative Debating Team Wins; Knudson And Helm Defeated; Ben Speaker Is Critic Judge.

Charles Hart and Vernon Miller won the Wranglers' Honor Debate Monday afternoon at South Side. The proposition was, "Resolved, that the several states should adopt the unicameral form of legislature." The winners took the negative side of the proposition. Sybil Knudson and Dick Helm spoke on the affirmative.

These debate teams were elected from a number of contestants in an earlier tryout.

Benton Speaker, graduate of South Side, was the judge of the debate. Mr. Speaker was a member of a former South Side debate team that went to state. He was also on the varsity debate team of Purdue University for two years. He gave the negative the decision on the basis of the case, but he stated that the losers possessed better delivery.

The debate was held in the Greeley Room at a regular meeting of the Wranglers' Club. The refreshments were ice cream bars. Piano music was furnished by Jean Creighton.

Alpha Lambda Delta Selects Ex-South Sider

Mr. R. Nelson Snider recently received word that Betty Wainwright, a member of last year's graduating class, has been elected a member of Alpha Lambda Delta, freshman honor society for women, at Louisiana State University. Miss Wainwright, for the work that she accomplished last semester, attained a rating of "two point five plus," which entitles her to the distinction of Honor Student, Cum Laude.

While in South Side Miss Wainwright, the daughter of Jack Wainwright, our music instructor, was very active in the Glee Club and orchestra; she was the originator of the Harp Ensemble.

Location Of Former Latin Pupils Desired

Several people from South Side participated in some of the annual Latin contests which have been sponsored by Indiana University the past years, and at present their whereabouts is unknown. They are Hilma Hixon, Pauline Baumgartner, Esther Hanning, Olive Prine, Franklin Smith, Harold Morris, Frances Newby, and Lawrence Roop. If anyone knows anything about any of these people, please notify Mr. Rothert in room 30, or see Robert Harruff. Indiana University wishes to send out a questionnaire and is eager to locate them.

Meterites Discuss Plans For Skate

Girls To Wear Official Colors Of Club; Those Not Doing So Must Do A Stunt At Meeting.

Definite plans for the forthcoming skating party will be discussed at the next Meterite meeting. It has already been planned that the skating party be held in the Spring, but no definite date has been named. It has also been announced that the Meterite girls are to wear the club colors, rose and gray, for one week. Those girls who do not constantly wear them for that length of time will be forced to do a stunt at one of the meetings.

As the club is making a study of motion pictures, the following pictures have been chosen to be reviewed, "Follow the Fleet" and "Little Lord Fauntleroy." From "Follow the Fleet" the following girls will report on the various points mentioned: the story and songs, Janice Dyer; characters, Betty Daniels; and costumes and settings, Eileen Hoffman. Anna Lou Kowalski will give a talk on the story of "Little Lord Fauntleroy." Mary Lee Hines will report on the costumes and settings, and Mary Lou Moffat will report on the good and bad points of the story. In addition to this Betty Neeb will talk on the stories of Famous Film Children.

Original Band Contained Six; Now It's Eighty

Roland Schafer Instructor Until Jack Wainwright Came Three Years Ago.

When South Side opened it had one music teacher, Mr. Roland Schafer, who divided his time between South Side and Central. Shortly, however, Mr. Sur, former teacher at North Side was hired to teach at Central, and Mr. Schafer spent all his efforts at South Side. This was true up until three years ago, at which time Mr. Jack Wainwright, the present instructor, came here to teach.

The first band consisted of six boys. The present band consists of about eighty boys and girls. No uniforms were provided. When they played at games and such, the student body hooted and laughed at them. But the band soon began to grow. Uniforms were bought. Students now are proud to become members of the band.

The orchestra was slow in developing, for vocal work grew more rapidly than instrumental. Perhaps this was because Mr. Schafer was more interested in singing.

He began to put on three major performances a year, consisting of a minstrel show, an operetta, and sometimes a large Christmas program. All of these were held at Harrison Hill, up until a year ago, at which time a portable stage was erected at South Side. Room 38, now Miss Rehors's room, used to be the band room. Room 40 was the recreation room for harmony and music history classes. When Mr. Wainwright came, a band room was fixed up in what had formerly been the forging room and machine shop.

Poor Speaking Camp Founded To Help Youth

Site At Leelanau Peninsula Northport, Mich.; Plan Period To Last 10 Weeks.

Shady Trails, composed of eighty acres of well-wooded land with a mile of beach on Grand Traverse Bay, is a camp and clinic for speech-handicapped boys and girls. It is located on the Leelanau Peninsula at Northport, Michigan, and has a lodge and cottages with modern conveniences. This summer the camp will last for ten weeks.

This camp clinic is definitely restricted to a small enrollment so that the utmost benefits of individual understanding and instruction may be had. The boys' division is limited to an enrollment of twenty-eight boys between the ages of ten and twenty years, inclusive. Only eight girls between the ages of ten and twenty years, inclusive, will be accepted. This group of girls, with its own speech correctionist, physical instructor, and housekeeper, occupies its own cottage remote from the boys' quarters.

The purpose of Shady Trails, as a speech clinic is to provide individual help for curable cases of stuttering, lisping, nasality, articulation, retardation, and slovenly speech. Its purpose as a camp is to provide normal out-of-class activities. Its health-giving, body-building efforts combine physical training with a vigorous outdoor life. Counselors are Richard A. Davis, student, University of Wisconsin; and William S. Rusk, student, Ohio State University.

The fee of $360 includes board, room, tuition, and all expenses of the season except personal laundry and spending money. Early contact of parents and educators so that case histories may be studied and other details conveniently arranged, will be to mutual advantage.

Several Scholarships Offered For Students

Our school has to offer to the graduating seniors a number of college scholarships. Among these are: Stevens Institute of Technology; the American University; University of Redlands; and the National College of Education.

The Stevens Institute of Technology offers their scholarships for young men entering college in September, 1936. Five full tuition scholarships for the freshman year, each the value of $480 will be awarded by the Committee on Matriculation to students selected from among those who have fulfilled the requirements for admission.

The American University offers five college honor scholarships for men—full tuition—four years. Fifty scholarships for men and women—half tuition—four years. For application forms and information address: The Committee on Scholarships, The American University Campus, Washington, D. C.

The University of Redlands says: At the end of the freshman year the five men and the five women who rank highest in their respective groups as a result of their first year of college work will be awarded these scholarships.

National College of Education offers a number of $100 scholarships (or fifty dollars half semester) to high ranking girls graduating this June and chosen from certain selected schools, who desire to attend that institution, but are prevented from doing so because of expenses.

Cafeteria Not Opened During Fourth Period

Many students have been inquiring if lunches will be served in the cafeteria during the fourth period. In answer to this, it has been announced that meals will not be served this period, but during the fifth period. This is due to the fact that very few students ask for their meals this period. Those who bring their lunches the fourth period are invited to eat them in the cafeteria, as has been the custom in former years.

Scholarships Offered For All Senior Grads

Two scholarships have been offered students of South Side. One is from St. Theresa, which is a Catholic school, although it accepts non-Catholic students. The other is from The Women's College of New Haven, Connecticut. The latter is just a new school, rather small. South Side has been offered scholarships to St. Theresa for several years. If anyone is interested in a scholarship to either one of these schools, he or she should see Mr. Snider.

Education Is Vital To Big Industries

Financial Committee Has Plans Essential To Good Education And Higher American Culture

Important industries recognize the fact that education is vital to their greater success. Large industrial concerns in Fort Wayne offer various kinds of educational courses to their employees for their own benefit and that of their workers. These play an important part in the educational development of the community.

Night Classes Held
Major industries in Fort Wayne offer to their employees any class in which enough are interested. Only a nominal charge is made for this great service. The classes are held in a night school and are directed by experts in the lines that they teach. Some of the teachers are professors from the university extension centers in the district. These and factory men, experts in their particular field, join in conducting these classes. Some of these classes may be in shorthand, typing, and blueprint reading. Others are in arithmetic as applied to practical conditions, progressing up to college algebra and trigonometry. The girls are given gym work, sewing, and related instructions. All types of English are taught. Salesmanship is one of the most highly developed courses.

The supervisory forces in the manufacturing departments are required to attend classes in industrial management. These deal with cost problems and methods of paying the employees. Day rates and piece rates are studied. The bonus proposition to reward employees for their production is especially discussed.

Apprentice Work Helpful
The apprentice departments are extremely important in training younger employees in both practical and theoretical problems. The apprentices work part time and attend regular classes at times. While working, they are supervised by efficient managers. The classes deal with such theoretical subjects as algebra and other higher mathematics. More practical subjects are also taught, which are shop math, descriptive geometry, gear drawing, and other such topics. Student graduates from college may be placed in the factory in various positions for the first two years to give them the practical training which they must have.

In the past ten or fifteen years, industrial workers have learned that the only way to get ahead is to increase their fund of knowledge. The industries themselves help their employees an infinite amount in this purpose. They do this not only by the aforesaid means, but also by recommending certain highly favored correspondence courses provided by many universities. Certainly the community benefits to a great extent by these endeavors of industry to raise the educational standard of its workers. Therefore these progressive industries should be highly commended for their efforts and accomplishments.

Mary Smeltzly Gives Talk At Philo Banquet

Leap Year Speeches Given By. R. Garton, V. Montgomery, And M. Michaels.

Seventy-five Philanthropians, alumni, and guests attended the annual Philo St. Patrick's Day banquet held Tuesday evening at 6:15 o'clock at the Port Wayne Woman's Club. Good speeches and food, as well as pretty decorations, made the affair an unusually successful one.

Ruth Adler, the president, presided as toastmistress. The theme of the banquet was "Leap Year." All the decorations carried out this theme. The place cards and programs, which were very beautiful, were designed by Sonia Velkoff. The other decorations were made by her committee.

Miss Mary K. Smeltzly of Central High School was the main speaker for the affair. She spoke on Ireland as she regarded it. Roberta Garton, a former member who was the Port Laureate of Philo, read an original poem. This was followed by a speech by Miss Virginia Montgomery. Miss Montgomery represented the alumni of Philo and she spoke on the subject "Leaps Back."

Mary Michaels represented the present class of Philanthropians and her subject was "Still Leaping." Impromptu speeches were given by Mr. Morrie I. Abbett, Mr. N. Nelson Snider, and Mr. Benjamin Null. During the evening's program Helen Potter gave an Irish reading. The title was "Mamie By the Day" by Lily Cartheuws. Helen did this in a very interesting and entertaining manner. A harp duet was also included in the evening's program. This was by Meriam Lickert and Helen Flaig. They played, "The Minstrel Boy" and "Dancey Boy." Helen Flaig also played a harp solo, "Watching the Queen."

Selma Liff, who is the program chairman of Philo, arranged yells and songs which were presented between courses. Among these was a new song written for Philo by Bernadette Dygert. Besides the songs and yells some clever stunts were also arranged by Selma Liff.

The reception committee for the affair was Ruth Adler, the president; Miss Demaree, the faculty adviser; and Mary Martha Hobrock, Virginia (Continued on page 6)

German Olympic Meet Discussed

Marjorie Meyer, Eliza B. Lucas Finish Reports; "Wiegand," Song Introduced At Meeting.

The last of the programs featuring the Olympic games which are being held in Germany was given at the German Club meeting, Wednesday, March 11. Two speakers, Marjorie Meyer and Eliza B. Lucas, gave interesting reports of various phases of the Olympics.

Synopses of the contests held in figure skating, skating races, bob sledding, skiing, and hockey was given by Marjorie Meyer. The most outstanding event in these last phases of winter sports was the skating races. The last report of this year, "The Olympic Zug," was given by Eliza B. Lucas. "The Olympic Zug" (train) is a caravan made up of different booths which goes from one German town and city to another in order to give all the people an idea of the Olympics. The admission is twenty cents, but people who cannot afford even this amount are given an opportunity to see this display free. Movies are also shown in connection with these displays. The German Olympic is to have a deeper motive than merely one of a sport festival. It is to have a spiritual motive which characterized the early Grecian Olympics."

A new song, "Wiegand," was introduced at this meeting. The members were familiar with the melody as that of "The Cradle Song." This was sung instead of the regular club song, "Die Lorelei."

Beatrice Fudge, a junior, recently was made a member of 1500 Club. She earned part of her points by being a room agent.

Vaudeville Troupers Enjoyed Practicing For Performances

South Side's recent vaudeville brought a strange reaction to its participants, different from the one which was shown by the matineers and stay-up-laters who also observed it; however, the latter did not enjoy the fun of practicing and the "back-stage dirt." The students all had ideas as to the time and effort spent to produce the show, but they all had the same main thought, that it was "well!" The col- umnist's girl Friday received some curious answers when she asked a few of the actors their attitude toward practicing and what the show did to and for them.

Shirley Neff: I had a swell time, but I lost three pounds practicing.

Helen DiGregory: I think the show went off with a bang, but practicing increased my appetite and I'm trying to reduce.

Dolly Scheele: I had a sprained ankle, but I think the heel-toe work cured it.

Marjorie Clapp: I enjoyed it, although I had a hard time making my boots for the pony ballet.

Gretchen Smith: I'm always surprised at the ability of South Side students—good troupers always!

Dolores Cleaver: I had a grand time practicing for and giving the vaudeville. I wish we could give one every month.

Janet Hartman: Had a grand time. Sorry it's over, especially all that fun

Seniors Must Place Cap, Gown Orders

March 27 Date Of Senior Funfest

Three Acts To Be Sponsored By Faculty, P.T.A. Committees, And Senior Class Officers.

Another chapter in the history of the class of 1936 will be written next Friday evening, March 27, when faculty members, parents, and seniors will attend the annual Senior Fun Fest, which will be staged in the school gym.

The program, as always, will be divided into three acts sponsored by a faculty committee, a Parent-Teacher Association committee, and the officers of the senior class. These acts will consist of stunts presented by chosen persons.

The faculty committee, which is comprised of Miss Dorothy A. Magley, chairman, Wilburn Wilson, Paul Sidell, Alice J. Patterson, and Alda Jane Woodward, will present an unusually comical skit about teacher trials and tribulations.

The Parent-Teacher Association committee is comprised of Mrs. Horace C. Horn, chairman, Mrs. Merle J. Abbett, and Mrs. George M. Knudsen. This committee's part of the Fun Fest program will be enacted by a large group of senior parents.

Four Senior Committees
Four committees of senior class members will have charge of the presentation of the seniors' part of the program. The committee heads, which were announced this week by J. Henry Chappell, one of the class sponsors, are Dick Helm and Robert Adams, group one; Fred Nye, group two; Virginia Greiner, group three; and Ruth Adler and Dorothy Crabill, group four.

The members of these four student committees were chosen at a meeting of the class officers and faculty advisers on Tuesday evening in room 16 and will be announced next week.

Manuel Rothberg, a prominent member of the class of 1936, and who is especially well known for his public speaking ability, will act as announcer for the entire program.

The entire program was run just as Fred Allen conducts his program. One of the two skits that were presented by the "Mighty Allen Art Players" depicted the school room in the twenty-first century. The other reviewed what went on inside the log walls of the pioneer school house.

At the conclusion of the program refreshments were served.

Flu Epidemic Causes Increase In Absentees

The epidemic of flu and possibly some cases of "spring fever" have caused quite a few absentees during the past weeks. Miss Virginia Montgomery, attendance clerk at South Side, may be seen nearly every morning surrounded by about one hundred fifty to two hundred students who are obtaining their absent slips. She believes that most of them really have been ill because they were out for several days. This record exceeds the number of that during the recent cold spell. The tardiness is just about average; in fact, it is somewhat lower.

Eight students have been absent because of serious illness. Martha Ad- amson, who is quite active in commercial work, has been confined to her home with scarlet fever. James Botz, a 10A, has had an appendicitis operation. Pneumonia has been the cause of Marjorie Bowser's absence. Another junior, Violet Porter, also had an appendicitis operation. Lillian Warren, a senior, has scarlet fever. Although they were not ill, Doris and Betty Williamson were out for a week because of a quarantine. Fred Thomas, a junior, left school Monday to have an appendicitis operation. We wish them all a speedy recovery.

An Easter program, to be built around the theme "The Lighthouse," will be presented as the feature of So-Si-Y's next meeting on Tuesday, March 24, in the Greeley Room.

Anna Bremer, who is the chairman of the program committee for the Easter observance, has planned to present the members of her group in several responsive readings. The Greeley Room will probably be redecorated with palms and lilies, and the program committee members will wear long choral robes.

Preceding the responses, Virginia Baker will sing several Easter selections and also lead the club members in especially chosen songs. A harp soloist will be featured during the service. "How Easter Is Celebrated in Other Countries" is the topic of a short talk which will be given by one of the committee members. The meeting will be closed by the singing of the Girl Reserve Quetz.

Since the program, which is to be presented will be a rather lengthy one, Helen Anderson, president of the club, has announced that there will be no business meeting.

The girls in charge of the program are Anna Bremer, Evelyn Kruse, Virginia Baker, Ruth Reitz, Mary Michaels, Marie Engle, Phyllis Barrows, Marjorie Meyer, Ruth Berning, Betty Kaade, Marjorie Schumann, Martha Newell, Jay Bechtold, Virginia Blass, and Betty Muntzinger.

Physical Ed., Music Pupils Present Show

Scenes Centered Around Recreational Life Of Ranch Men; Orchestra Accompanies Show.

Friday evening before a large audience, the music and physical education departments presented South Side's first annual vaudeville.

The scenes were centered around the recreational life of the men on a ranch and they took place in the recreation room of a dude ranch of which Don Sparkman played the part of the proprietor.

The following dances were given by the members of the girls' physical education department: A pony ballet by the girls of the neighboring ranch, and an Indian dance by Indians from a nearby reservation. The Dance Club members presented a ballet to the song "I Dream Too Much." Two other dances, a two-step polka and a square dance were given by both boys and girls.

The boys' glee club featured the cowboy songs, "Home On the Range," "Barry Me Back to the Lone Prairie," "Coots and Saddle," and the "Last Round-Up." Various members of the glee club gave some western stories and told several tall stories.

Several songs and a novelty number were presented by the accordion band of which Georgianna Jane Jones is the leader.

An outstanding and unusual act was given by Virginia Baumgartner, Martha Franz, Betty Kreischer, and Betty Broderick, on a musical stairway. The girls moved up and down on the stairs playing the pieces "Bells of Avalon" and "The Bells of Saint Mary's."

The final number was the song "Home on the Range," given by the entire cast.

The school orchestra accompanied all of the songs.

There is much activity going on in the public speaking department at this time. The annual Rotary public speaking contest is now the main interest of South Side's public speakers. This contest is for boys only.

Dalton McAlister, a sophomore, won the South Side division of the Rotary city-wide public speaking contest held in the Greeley Room last Monday, the sixth period.

The contestants spoke on the "Rotary's Fourth Object," which is "The advancement of international understanding, goodwill, and peace through a world fellowship of business and professional men united in the ideal of service." The speeches were six minutes in length. The audience was composed of Miss Benner's public speaking class and Miss Magley's English class. Selma Liff presided over the meeting. The other contestants were Bob Adams, Bob Storm, Bob Brazy, and Myron Jones. Myron entered the contest but did not appear.

Seniors Win First In Poster Contest

Ralph Jones, Georgianna Jacobs Receive Prizes In Safety Poster Competition Here.

Ralph Jones and Georgianna Jacobs, seniors and advanced students of Miss Ley, won first and second prize respectively in the safety poster contest. Mary Martha Hobrock, also a senior and a student of Miss Dochterman, won third prize.

The poster contest, held in connection with the "Safety Week," was open to all art students of the school. Ralph Jones' poster, which was cut from beaver board, showed the head of a small boy, and across the top was printed "Would you kill him?" and in just as impressive letters at the bottom, "Drive Safely." Georgianna Jacobs' poster was in three panels, and featured a traffic officer effective in blue shadows on a light cream back- ground. The words on the center panel were "Stop Accidents," and "Do your bit for Public Safety." The one side had a picture of Experience, with the words, "Don't increase his list." Mary Martha Hobrock's poster featured a cleverly attired duck, with the words, "Don't duck between cars."

There were 150 posters entered from the two rooms.

Miss Magley was chairman of a committee of South Side teachers who selected the fifteen best posters. These in turn were judged by a committee from the Art School. This final committee was composed of Mr. McBride, director of the school, Mr. Davison, and Miss Blossom. Prizes for the winning posters will be awarded at a later date.

Mary Paxton, John Bex To Address Math-Science

Members of the Math-Science Club will hold their second meeting of the semester in the Greeley Room Friday night at 7:30 o'clock with Miss Mary Paxton, South Side mathematics teacher, as guest speaker.

"Insectivorous Plants" will be discussed by John Bex. This topic deals with animal-eating plants.

Business will consist of a report from John Bex, the newly elected Inter-Club Congress representative.

Miss Paxton, who visited Mexico during the past summer, may illus- trate her talk with blankets and baskets from that country.

The program chairman, Ruth Gar- rison, and her committee, Richard Bridges and Selma Liff, are assisted by Mr. Gould, the club adviser for this semester, in planning the program.

Students Are Penalized For Offense By Eighths

Eight periods are now being given out to guilty students, as many have painfully learned by experience. An average of thirty pupils take the eighth periods each day. The smallest num- ber of eighths to be given out this year was approximately twenty. The greatest number was fifty. That amount was accounted for by a late street car.

Offenses for which eighth periods are the penalty are: being late to class or home room, talking in assembly, and being in hall halls during periods without a hall pass.

Formerly two eighth periods were assigned as a penalty for skipping an eighth period. However, beginning next week, three eighth periods will be the penalty.

Those whose jobs, such as paper car- rying, prohibit them from taking eighth periods are exempted from their first eighth and are put on probation. But if they offend again, they are given five eighth periods for each offense.

Hi-Y Guest Uses Movies In Speech

City-Wide Potluck Held March 12; Mr. Howard Haag Speaks On Japan And The Chinese.

Mr. Howard Haag was the principal speaker at the last meeting of Hi-Y held at the Y. M. C. A. in the form of a city-wide potluck on Thursday, March 12. Mr. Haag, who was general secretary of the Y. M. C. A. at Harbin, Manchuria, from 1921 to 1929, has traveled extensively in the Orient and has taken many moving pictures.

The first part of Mr. Haag's program was a talk about the Orient, especially the newly-formed republic of Manchukuo. The second part of his program consisted of the showing of various interesting moving pictures. The most interesting of these were those showing the China defense of Harbin and its eventual surrender to the Japanese invaders. Mr. Haag stated that these pictures were taken without any danger to the photog- rapher because no shots were fired during the filming of the pictures. Pictures were also shown of fishing and hunting in the Chinese interior, the Japanese army from a reviewing stand, and the life of the exiled from Russia.

The potluck was attended by about one hundred members and advisers of Torch and Hi-Y clubs from North Side, Central, and South Side. At the last business meeting plans for a scavenger hunt were discussed. After the business meeting a pantomime dram- atization of the poem "The Shooting of Dan McGrew," was presented. The cast included Allen Faux, Bill Hoblet, Ed Leitz, Herman Makey, Jr., Dick Dochterman, Morgan Harrison, and Fred Meyers.

The initiation of the new officers will be held at the next meeting. The meeting will be held in the form of a potluck. A scavenger hunt and a continuation of the series of talks on "Choosing a College," which were so well received at the last meetings, will also be held.

Potluck, Initiation For French Club

Initiates At Informal Affair Present Skits In Dialogue, Give Imitations Of Animals.

A potluck supper and informal initiation services for new members were the main features of the French Club meeting held on Thursday, March 12, at 4:30 o'clock in the Voorhees Room. The initiates presented impromptu skits given in French dialogue and gave imitations of animals. The list of new members who participated in the initiation ceremonies is as follows:

Marjorie Mitten, Margaret Mon- ning, Mary Lou Mowatt, Elizabeth Simpson, Virginia Porter, Jean Boll- man, Jerry Zehr, Dorothy Herbst, Shirley Corman, and Elaine Bernstein.

The program for the meeting con- sisted of a discussion of French food by Dorothy Herbst. Virginia Porter gave a French recipe for bonee tur- key, which is a favorite food of the French people.

After the potluck, which was held in the cafeteria at 5:30 o'clock, consisted of meat loaf, kidney bean salad, macaroni and cheese, potato chips, pickles, olives, sandwiches, fruit salad, cookies, milk, and cocoa. To conclude the meeting the club mem- bers sang several French songs.

Eight Kids From Fort Wayne Play About City Of New York

"They're off"—not the horses at Churchill Downs, rather a group of eight students from South Side and North Side High Schools with their adviser of publications, Miss Rowena Harvey,—off for New York and points East.

Leaving Fort Wayne at 1:26 o'clock Tuesday, March 10, the delegates were off to a grand start as Bryce Minier and John Bex rushed breath- lessly into the station as the train started to pull out. Followed an event- less train ride which was broken only by the consumption of delicious train fare. (No they didn't eat the tickets.)

Pulling into the large metropolis, the group rushed to their hotel, the McAlpin, where fortunately they were not required to ascend to their 17th- floor rooms under their own power. The elevator men evidently were sat- isfied with conditions at the McAlpin although strike pickets were pacing in front of every other building throughout the city.

See The Sights
The initial venture of the trip was in the form of a tour through the borough of Manhattan. Some points of interest were Central Park, River- side Drive, Grant's Tomb, the Acqua- rium, and the Ghetto. All of which served further to baffle the already bewildered minds of the students.

Following this, a general survey of New York came the intensive tour of the city's finer points. First on the list of places visited was the New York Planetarium, which was very en- lightening in regard to the stars of the Northern and Southern hemis- phere. Next visited was the Rocke- feller Music Hall which featured the movie "Follow the Fleet," Erno Rapee, and the Rockefeller Rockettes, a famous dancing group.

The RCA Building was then given the inspection of the group and there they found how the broadcasting game is run. The next point of interest was the tour of the steamer Ile de France, which is a magnificent sea castle.

The mecca of American tourists, the Statue of Liberty, was visited and during the ascent of the gigantic statue many were the tired souls who dropped out.

Attend Sessions
These tours were sandwiched be- tween the sessions of the convention at Columbia University, which featured Robert Ripley and the First Lady of the Land. The convention was climaxed at a magnificent banquet at the Hotel Commodore at which Mrs. Roosevelt spoke. The convention speakers were of various positions of which some were: foreign correspond- ent from King Feature Syndicate at Ethiopia, representative of "America Speaks," and vice-president of the New York Herald-Tribune.

The trip was concluded by the mag- nificent spectacle of Bizet's "Carmen" at the Metropolitan Opera House in which Rosa Ponselle carried the lead. Here's the opinion of the delegates to New York:

John Bex: Some dump!

Miss Harvey (seasoned veteran of many trips to New York): Fine place for eight kids to root around in.

Ann Abbett: Perfect.

Janitors Work Day And Night For Improvement Of School

Indispensable to the inner workings of our little community known to the outside world as South Side High School, are the janitors, first in the shoveling of snow, first in the cleaning of classrooms, and last on the pay roll.

Their duties find them, from sunrise to sunset, busily engaged in their various occupations evolved for the betterment of our school. The janitorial staff consists of seven members, tried and true, who are veterans of many years of warfare with brooms, dirt, and snow shovels. When snow envelops our community, the janitors' work is greatly enhanced and they may be observed vigorously plying snow shovels in an attempt to clear the way for the industrious students who will soon be making their way to resume their daily lessons as well as for the idle wayfarers who are foolish enough to venture out on foot. Incidentally, our energetic shovellers have no less a territory than one mile on which to display their talents, which they have had ample opportunity to demonstrate this winter.

Dennis Gerlock Is Newcomer
The latest acquisition to the janitorial staff is one Dennis Gerlock, who seems to have made an instantaneous hit with the students. The domain over which Dennis rules is the gymnasium, which he sweeps, dusts, and polishes with loving care.

Bill: "Where's Mother?"
Mr. Brown: "Oh—some one had a tea— But, look here! Is anything wrong?"
Bill: (Sinking onto the davenport and holding his head in his hands). "I've killed a child!"
Mr. Brown: (Jumping up excitedly). "Killed a child—Bill!"

Bill: (Interrupting). "No—no, I tell you, she's dead! They called the ambulance. They couldn't feel her pulse. They took her to the hospital. She's—dead, all right!"
Mr. Brown: (Very excited). "Did you go to the hospital, Bill? Did you find out for sure?"
Bill: "No. I—I didn't follow because—I knew she was dead. And I killed her—I—oh!" (Breaks down completely.)
Mr. Brown: (Taking wraps from the wardrobe closet in hall). "Come on—you come with me, Bill. We're going to the hospital! Why that girl just can't die!"

Bill: "No, mother. I'm not hurt—but I injured a little girl."
Mr. Brown: "You see, mother, Bill

Only 57 Days Left Till Grade Issuance

There are only 57 school days left until the end of the term! Because of the long vacation which we received at Christmas, an extra week will be added to the regular school year. Thus the term will last until Friday, June 12, instead of until Friday, June 5.

That extra week won't seem so long, however, because there will be a week's vacation in April. It will be our annual spring vacation and will take place during the week of April 6-10.

There are three grade periods left in the present semester. The next grades, which will be those of the mid-semester, will be issued on March 31. That grade period ends March 27. The third grade period ends May 1, and the grades will be issued on May 5. The fourth period will terminate on June 10, and grades will be issued also on June 10.

One of the biggest events of the semester will be Recognition Day, which will take place on May 29. At this time worthy students who have been outstanding in any department or event will be given due honor.

Students Overjoyed With New Change To Spring Weather

Spring is here! And with it comes a welcome change from the bitter cold weather and snow of several weeks ago to the balmy, warm, spring weather of this week. Along with this exhilarating spring weather comes a funny feeling in the hearts of everyone, sometimes described as spring fever. When asked by a Times reporter, "How does spring make you feel?" several students with a peculiar look on their faces described their feelings in the following ways.

Kenny Scott—"It makes me feel like dancing and throwing anything in the air I can get hold of and catching it again. I also like to walk along and feel the air with my hands."

Betty Pugh—"Like a feather in the breeze."

Virginia McNamara—"The spring weather gave me quite a dose of spring fever."

Lillian Gunzenhauser—"Wishy-washy inside."

Barbara Raymond—"Like I'm walking on air."

Carl Hall—"With my fingers."

Dick Frazell—"Lazy."

John Jackson—"Hey! Hey! Hey! Martha Zelt—Hot."

Maxine Greiner—"Like I want to go home and go to bed."

Rodney Stair—"Sleepy."

Elizabeth Neff—"Droopy."

Martha Ann Bacon—"Dippy. (That's natural)."

Marjorie Turner—"Sleepy."

Ray Ballweg—"I don't know."

Virginia Worden—"Like a fairy."

Beulah Horstmeier—"Like a butterfly."

Grace Collins—"Like dancing."

Billie Mauk—"Like the birds and flowers and grass."

Treasure Hunt Is Lettergirl Feature

Mary A. Fark Speaks On History Of Baseball; Evelyn Kruse Is Head Of Group; Plays Given.

A treasure hunt was the main feature of the meeting of the Lettergirls' Club, which was held Monday in the handball court. The theme of baseball was carried out in the entertainment and the refreshments.

Doris Rindchen gave a reading entitled, "Casey at the Bat." Mary Ann Fark gave the history of baseball, and Marjory Ruhl gave interesting facts about this game. A treasure hunt was then played, adapted in form to baseball. The teams went from first base to home in order to find the treasure, which turned out to be some kind of entertainment given by each group.

Evelyn Kruse was chairman of this entertainment committee. The committees were appointed for the "play day" and the skating party. Enita Snively and Ruth Berning are captains of the two teams which will vie with each other to sell the most tickets for the skating party, which will be held April 3.

Basis Of U. S. A. Meet Will Be Lenten Season

Games and singing were the main features of the last U. S. A. meeting which was held Thursday, March 12. Because of a sore throat, Mrs. Snider, who was to be the main speaker, was unable to attend.

The next meeting, which will be held on March 26, will be based upon spring and particularly the Lenten season. Some former members of the U. S. A. will be asked to play spring classics. The different kinds of crosses pertaining to Lent will be drawn and explained.

Central Five Prepare For Muncie Super-Regional Meet

Bengals Meet Kokomo Kats In First Game

If Winner, Will Meet Victor Warsaw - Newcastle Tilt; Many Favor Central Five.

Union Center Win Promotes Tigers

Local Five Has High Total Of Forty-One Points Per Game In Tournament Play

Central's vaunted band of Tigers will attempt to advance to the final state basketball tournament when they take on the Kokomo Kats at the Muncie Field House Saturday afternoon. The Bengals will play in the second tilt of the super-regional; and, if they are successful in turning back the Kokomo outfit, they will meet the winner of the Newcastle-Warsaw tilt in the evening game.

The Mendenhall combination is favored by many to capture the meet because of its fine showing in the sectional and regional tournaments here. The Tigers eliminated South Side's Archers in the final tilt of the sectional tournament. They have scored at least 41 points in each of their six tournament games thus far.

Emergence As Victors
Continuing to display the same masterful brand of ball that enabled them to win the sectional title last week, the Central Tigers emerged the victor of the regional tournament that was held in the North Side gym last Saturday. The Tigers swept through the field with the ease of champions, which they appear to be at the present time. The Tigers seemed invincible as they bombarded the basket from every angle; after the first game got into progress, it was obvious that they were playing the brand of ball that would assure them of the title.

In the first game the Tigers played the Ridgeville Cossacks. In this game Central had everything its own way all the way, and they won by the score of 41 to 21. The Cossacks started the scoring, but Central ran up a score of 15 to 5 at the quarter. The Bengals then began to hit with fine consistency, and led at the end of the half by the margin of 23 to 10. In the third quarter the Bengals outscored the Cossacks by nine points to three, to lead at the third quarter by the score of 32 to 13. At this point Central began to substitute, and coasted to an easy victory, making nine points to Ridgeville's eight to win by the count of 41 to 21.

In the second game the Roanoke Stonewalls and the Union Center Badgers met in the most interesting game of the tournament. This game was considered a minor upset as Union City took the contest by the score of 32 to 15. The Stonewalls were picked to win from the Badgers because of the two previous defeats that the Badgers suffered at their hands earlier in the season. The first two quarters were evenly played and the score at the end of the first quarter was 11 to 4 in favor of the Badgers.

The score at the end of the half was 12 to 11, giving the Stonewalls the advantage. In the third quarter the Badgers opened an attack the Stonewalls were unable to stop, and they ran the score up to 22 to 13 at the end of the third quarter. In the fourth quarter the team from Union Center continued their drive, and the score stood at 32 to 13 as the game was ended by the gun.

Tigers Defeat Badgers
The final game of the tournament was played between the two winners, Central and Union Center. This game proved to be much of a practice tilt for the Bengals from Central. The Central team defeated the Badgers by the score of 51 to 23. The game started as though it would be a thriller with the Badgers keeping pace with the Bengals for the first five minutes. After this the Badgers wilted before the strong offense of the Bengals, and the boys from Central led 15 to 5 at the end of the quarter.

Then Central really began to hit as they ran the score up to 25 to 8. In the third quarter the Bengals went well, and the score stood at 41 to 10 at the end of the period. Central then coasted to the championship in the re-

Violation Of Athletic Regulation Endangers School's Standing

Mr. R. Nelson Snider asks that all students observe the bulletin of the Indiana High School Athletic Association concerning basketball playing: "No basketball games shall be played by players or schools after the State Final Tourney. This rule has been interpreted by the Board of Control to apply to inter-school games and not to intra-school games. Within-the-school basketball playing is permitted at any time, but students who play basketball on any team other than in within-the-school games after the State Final Tourney or after the season has closed in their high school make themselves ineligible for all athletics until January 1 following, and also jeopardize the standing of their high school in the I. H. S. A. A."

"The basketball season closes for all players and all teams in the I. H. S. A. A. on the evening of the final day of the State Final Tourney, and the basketball season closes for all players and all teams in individual schools on the evening of the day closing the season for inter-school games in the school. The interim between the sectional tourneys and the final tourney is not a period of time for violations by players or teams in schools that have been eliminated or whose seasons have closed. Neither is it a period for violations by players and teams in schools that have not been eliminated or whose seasons have not closed."

In South Side High School, the basketball season closes on the evening of the final day of the Sectional Tournament. Any player—boy or girl—who plays in a game of basketball after that date outside our school will be ineligible for all athletics until January 1 following, and will also endanger the standing of the school in the State Association.

This notice is given you to call to your attention the rules that govern basketball playing, and to ask you to refrain from any playing which might have serious consequences for the entire student body.

South Siders Say Central's Chances To Win Are Good

Central's roaring Tigers will plunge into the super-regional tournament that is to be held at Muncie this Saturday with a good chance to come out still roaring. The Tigers romped their way through the regionals by beating Ridgeville and Union Center.

Throughout both the sectional and regional tournaments no team presented a defense tight enough to prevent the Bengals from scoring at least forty points.

In most people's opinion the Tigers' chances of winning the super-regional are good. Here are the views of twenty people:
Coach Mendenhall: As there will be only four teams competing, anything can happen.
Bill McLeish: I think Central has a plenty good chance.

Carl Hall: They have a good chance to win the state tournament if they hit like they did in the regional.
Jean Bollman: Central will bend 'em to the wood hull.

Marjorie Rohrer: I think their chances are good. I really do.
Pearl Elbersson: I don't think they can do it.

Marjorie Turner: My home room teacher says that they will win. And as I consider him an authority, that is my opinion too.
Fred Eakin: Good chance, at least an even break.

Mr. Hull: Chances look good. I believe they will win.
Dorothy Golden: Chances are best ever.

Kay Green: Their chances look plenty good to me.
Barbara Noble: Chances are swell.
Louis Squires: I think they'll take it.

Joe Reickert: They have as good a chance as any other team.
Bill Bundy: They have a pretty good chance.
Bud Mahurin: Should win now that Tipton is eliminated.

Allen Garrison: Fish for the Tigers.
Bob Harfuff: If they continue their present pace, they'll win.
Jim Roth: If they beat Kokomo, they'll win.

Notre Dame again regained the intercollegiate conference indoor track and field championship today with a big score in the shot put and points scored in almost every other event. Their nearest rival in the meet was Marquette.

At last the 20-game winning streak of the Central Normal College, Danville, Indiana, was broken by DePaul University, Chicago, by the score of 41 to 36 in the Olympic basketball tryouts. As a result of its victory, DePaul plays Minnesota, winner of the Sixth district trials, with the winner of that game going to New York for the final trials.

With baseball's opening day not more than a month away six teams have holdouts. The National League has four teams which have not settled their troubles, while there are only two teams with the blues in the American League. Hank Greenberg, of the World Champion Detroit Tigers, is considered the most important holdout.

Glenn Cunningham, world record holder, made a comeback last week by defeating his two old rivals, Venzke and Mangan. Instead of taking the customary lead to set the pace he held back and let the other two boys do the pacing, but when the beginning of the last two laps came, he put on the steam and finished three yards ahead of Venzke and four yards in front of Mangan.

Archer Squad Prepares For Successful Track Season

“Lundy” Starts Track Season; Seeks Material

Track And Field Rapidly Becoming Dry; Coach Has Hopes Of A Good Season.

Green Strongest In Dashes, Runs

Much New Equipment Being Distributed; Squad Will Have New Track Sweaters

Coach Lundy Welborn will officially open the 1936 track season at South Side this week as the track squad participates in its first full week of practice. With the track in fine shape and the field rapidly becoming drier, it is hoped that the Archer thin-clads may get in a full week of practice. In case of bad weather the Green will work out in the dressing rooms. At the present time the Archers seem rather certain to have a strong squad on the cinders this season. With about fifteen track and field men returning to competition, it is thought that South Side is headed for a successful season.

The Green will be especially strong in the dashes and middle distance runs. Red Stone and Bud Feichter will handle the century run very efficiently. These fellows are veterans in this event. They will also probably hold down the one-two positions in the 220-yard dash, and will be members of the relay teams. Miller Makey will be back in the 440-yard dash and should make the relay team. Jim Dern and Al Hinton seem doomed to battle it out between themselves to decide who will represent the Green in the half-mile event.

In the field events Ed Kruse is out again this year to hold down the pole vaulting job. Nelson Miller will be out for the shot-put with Ed Leitz. Leitz also is slated to take care of the broad jumping activities of the Green.

“Pop” Tudor, athletic equipment manager, is now distributing school equipment to the cinder aspirants. Much new equipment is being secured. The squad will have new gray sweat shirts and white track suits with a large green Archer emblem on the backs of the shirts.

Girls Start Work On Principles Of Tumbling

Approximately one hundred, sixty beginners are working on fundamentals in tumbling. Some of the stunts which each girl is required to be able to do are as follows: the shuttle roll, rocking chair, sheep roll, elephant walk, cartwheel, shoulder stand, hand stand, head stand, and the forward and backward rolls.

Some other stunts which the girls enjoy doing but which are not required are as follows: the human rocker, back bend, monkey walk, handstand, sitting balance, stomach balance, forearm stand, human ball, bobbing ahead, front over, and the shoulder-knee stand.

Some of these stunts will be used for the annual exhibition which is to be held in April. Emphasis will be placed on rhythm and design on the part of the beginners.

The advanced tumblers have a more difficult series of stunts to do. In the advanced division the tumbling is taken more for individuals instead of a group as in the beginners' section.

Boys Complete Training Rules In Manly Art

Elimination Tourney Held To Decide Best Wrestler And Boxer Of Each Class.

Winding up a training session begun early in the fall, Mr. Louis Briner's charges in the boxing and wrestling departments have finished an entirely successful season. As a climax to the season, an elimination tournament was held to decide the best in all weight divisions.

A large squad of boys have spent a long period of hard and tedious training of evenings after school. Their work consisted of learning the various fundamentals of boxing and wrestling and exercising the necessary body-building calisthenics that go to make a well-developed all around boxer or wrestler. This, along with the careful tutelage and capable direction of Mr. Briner, has produced a squad of boys well trained in the art of self-defense.

Competition Stiff

The boys who did not reach the top in the final tournament provided stiff competition for the winners and every bout was tough and went to the finish.

Several fast and interesting bouts featured the wrestling tourney. In the finals of the middleweight division, the bout between Louis Squires and Kenny Miller proved to be the most interesting and hard-fought exhibition. This bout, however, proved to be an upset, Miller defeating Squires, who was last year's champion, by the fall route in four minutes and fifty two seconds. In the featherweight division Griffin and Durbin, two veterans of last year's tournament, provided a snappy bout, Griffin winning by a fall in one minute and thirty-two seconds.

The boxing tournament also showed a number of interesting fights with a plentitude of action and hard punching in every fight. Bosserman and Griffin, two lightweights well-matched in both weight and ability, fought to a draw. Robert Feichter, by virtue of his victory over Bud Feichter proceeded to the finals to gain a close decision over Ned Henslee and win the crown in the welterweight division. All of the boxing matches were of six minutes duration, three two-minute rounds with a one-minute rest period between each round.

Following are the results of both the wrestling and boxing tournaments in all weights:

Boxing
100 pounds and under—Fred Knight.

101 to 109 pounds—Robert Blanks, W. Daily; Blanks, decision.
110 to 120 pounds—No entries.
120 to 129 pounds—C. Durbin, Griffin; Durbin, K. O.
130 to 140 pounds—Bosserman, Griffin; draw.

141 to 151 pounds—Robert Feichter, Ned Henslee; Feichter, decision.
151 to 159 pounds—No entries.
160 pounds and over—Jerome Zehr, Louis Squires; Zehr, decision.

Wrestling

100 pounds and under—Fred Knight.
101 to 109 pounds—Knight, Campbell; Knight, by fall. Time—5 minutes, 41 seconds.

110 to 119 pounds—D. Gerig, Bill Hargan; Hargan, by advantage. Time—1 minute, 37 seconds.
120 to 129 pounds—Durbin, Griffin; Griffin, by fall. Time—1 minute, 32 seconds.

130 to 140 pounds—Johnson, Bosserman; Bosserman, by fall. Time—4 minutes, 58 seconds.

141 to 151 pounds—Hinton, R. Feichter; Feichter, by fall. Time—1 minute, 38 seconds.

151 to 159 pounds—K. Miller, L. Squires; Miller, by fall. Time—4 minutes, 52 seconds.
160 pounds and over—Robert Miller, Shilder; Miller, by fall. Time—2 minutes, 15 seconds.

Intramural Basketball Arouses New Interest

The annual intramural basketball has again aroused much interest and undoubtedly will prove to be very interesting. Not all the teams have entered, but those that have entered will play tonight at 3:30 o'clock. They will play fifteen-minute games.

The first teams that play are the Times and Tip-Tops. The Times gets its name from the fact that the players are made up entirely of Times staff members. The next teams to tangle are the Skunks and Hawkers. This game will be immediately followed by the Redskins and Clodhoppers. The Greenhorns and Chiefs will then mix it up. The Tish-Tashes and Shorts then tangle horns to decide the victor. In the last game the Archers and Five Horsemen battle, with the Archers expected to come out on top. They are pre-tourney favorites, but as in a sectional or state tourney, anything can happen.

Tourney Points Archers Show Good Success In Ball Season

Central's Tigers have really been playing a beautiful brand of ball during the past two week-ends. Any ball club which can score more than forty points in each of six consecutive sectional and regional tourney tilts must be handling the leather with plenty of zip. Come on, Tigers, give those Kokomo niggers an eyeful of your scoring ability. Then, ON TO STATE AND THE TITLE.

Tipton must have been a very quiet little hamlet as its inhabitants recovered from the daze caused by the defeat of the Tipton Red Devils by the Kokomo Kats. Tipton, favorite for state title, seemingly was a sure bet to breeze through the regional tourney. The Tipton team held a meeting before the end of the season to decide whether or not they would attempt to win all their remaining scheduled games. No team has ever won all its scheduled games and captured the state title. The Red Devils decided to defy the “jinx”. Now look at them!

Frankfort's Hotdogs played consistent ball throughout their regional tournament and scored at least four times as much as both of their opponents. Coach Everett Case, Frankfort mentor, is taking no chances. He wants another state banner hanging from the rafters in the Frankfort gym.

There will be plenty of discouraged fans who have been unsuccessful in obtaining ducats for the Muncie super-regional. Only five hundred tickets have been allotted to Summit City fans and the Bengal followers readily took them. The Muncie Field House has a seating capacity of approximately 7,500 persons.

Fans at the Mitchell tourney undoubtedly witnessed the most tightly-contested regional tilt in the state. Paoli finally dropped the Bedford Stonecutters after three exhausting overtimes by a one-point margin. However, the Paoli netters battled in vain since their strenuous play in the afternoon tilt left them in an exhausted condition. In their evening clash with New Albany, they bowed out of tourney competition by a three-point margin.

Auburn, favorite at the auto city meet, could not match the scoring spree of the Columbia City Eagles and succumbed to the Eagles by a 48 to 37 count. However, the Eagles faltered in the title tilt with Warsaw as Shinbeckler, star Eagle center, left the game on personals near the end of the initial half. Stamm, the clever Eagle forward who scores thirteen points against the Archers, received a broken finger in the afternoon game, but played in the evening encounter and scored eight markers. Some boy!

We wonder what the Berne High School netters were thinking as they watched Union Center take a wallop at the hands of Central's Tigers. It is a safe bet that they would have given about anything to have been down on the hardwood against the Tigers. The Ernemen dropped their initial sectional tourney tilt. Over-confidence and the absence of Neuen-schwander seem to have been the factors which caused the Bears to lose.

Archers Show Good Success In Ball Season

Win 13 Victories, Lose 11; Central Tigers, Redskins, Irish Fall Before Team.

South Side's Archers have enjoyed a fairly successful season during the 1935-36 campaign by winning thirteen games out of twenty-four. They have scored a total of 659 points to their opponents' 571, or an average of 27½ points per game to 23½ points per game for their rivals.

The first game for the Archers, under the tutoring of the new coach, Burl Friddle, saw Butler defeated 38-17. Although ten boys played, the combination of Hall and Reichert at forwards, Close at center, and Hines and Ellenwood at guard proved most effective. The next night the Archers traveled to Michigan City where they were handed a 22-27 setback. A week later Bluffton's Tigers came to the southern hardwood and defeated South Side by the score of 16 to 28. A week later the Auburn Red Devils were sent back home with a 44-to-25 defeat at the hands of the Archers. The following night saw the Friddlemen defeat Pierceton 39 to 25.

Defeat Irish

In the first city series game for South Side, they defeated the Irish 29 to 20. In this game, Bud Lee was beginning to show signs of improvement. After this game the boys seemed to have had a losing streak, as they lost the next six out of seven games. The first was in the city series battle with North Side. The Archers outplayed the Redskins in every department of the game except one, that was the ability to hit the basket. The next week Kendallville defeated the Archers by one point, 34-35. The Comets made this possible by a very freak shot that turned out to be lucky in the last few seconds of play. The next night Decatur's Yellow Jackets handed the Archers a 22-25 setback. A week later Columbia City defeated the Archers 25-26.

Archers Beat Tigers

South Side was to play Central a few days later, and Central had beaten Columbia City by twelve points. South Side's hopes looked very dim. After losing five points with three minutes to go, Carl Hall started a rally that couldn't be stopped and the Archers won 29 to 25. By this time Bud Lee was becoming a serious threat in scoring. Two days later the Archers lost to Berne's Bears by one point, 25 to 26. A powerful quintet from the Calumet district, Froebel, defeated the Archers 23 to 25. In the next game the Vikings from Huntington were handed a 20-point setback, 33-13. Hartford City then tried to defeat the Archers, but left here with a 28-to-20 defeat for their record.

The next game the Archers played was another city series tilt. Central was leading the city series race, but if South Side won, it would be tied up. The Archers tied it up by defeating North Side 26 to 10.

Decides City Champion

The next game would decide the

Skirts and Sports

Did you ever see Ada Schuelke in a traditional piece of baby's clothing, Virginia Busse as a dorkie, or Evelyn Kruse as a boy with his clothes on backwards? A group of girls at Vivian Hickman's home recently had this enjoyable experience.

It's too bad that Leona Menze had to be ill when the finals of the G. A. A. honor tourney were played. Leona was a large factor in the victory of the juniors over the seniors.

So the juniors won the honor tourney! Congratulations, and may you keep up the fine playing! Among the excellent players on the junior team were Edna Disler, Betty Beyrau, and Barbara Scheele.

Lois Wyneken gives forth sounds similar to those of a hungry porker every time she tries to do either a hand stand or a head stand. Her arms do not seem quite developed as yet, because every attempt ends up with Lois in a shapeless pile.

Anita Affolder had a most embarrassing experience during the honor tourney which cannot be put on black and white. However, if you want to hear something funny, just ask her about it.

Thanks to Dorothy Bremer, a “grad” of a few years ago, who came to school again to referee the games in the honor tourney.

city champion. Central and South Side were going to battle it out again and the Friddlemen were given an even chance. For three quarters the game was played on even terms, but in the last period the Tigers put on a spurt that gave them an eleven-point lead when the final gun sounded. The score was 21 to 32. The Archers then traveled to Goshen. The size of the gym was a big handicap to the Archers, and they lost 26 to 30. The next night the Friddlemen engaged Central Catholic for the second time and won. The Archers finished their regular playing schedule a week later by defeating Central of South Bend 22 to 8 in a listless game.

In the sectional tournament, the Archers had the honor of playing the first game. It was with Hoagland, the county champions. The Friddlemen breezed through with ease and won 27 to 21. The Archers were expected to have trouble with Woodburn, but defeated them 30 to 18. In the semi-final round South Side played Decatur. The Yellow Jackets were expected to put the Archers out of the way, but the boys from South Side breezed through to a 37-25 victory.

In the final game, South Side met Central for the fourth time in the season. The boys from uptown were held to a three-point lead at the half, but in the second half they turned on the heat and gave South Side the worst beating in the history of both schools. The final score was 50 to 23.

Pick Winners In Intra-Mural Basketball Tilt

Two Best Teams Will Enter Elimination Tourney from Each Represented League.

With the regular intramural basketball schedule rapidly nearing its completion, the teams eligible for entrance into tournament competition are now being named. The two outstanding teams in each league will enter this elimination tourney. Mr. Briner hopes to finish the schedule this week.

Resuming activities in the leagues after a week's layoff the Tails led by Augsburgers with six points, defeated the Nameless by a 9 to 6 count, while Feichlet headed the Tip Hops in their 8 to 5 triumph over the Horsemen. The Times outfit entered the tournament as they swamped the “400” by a 15 to 4 score. Helm led the Times with seven markers while Procise garnered the four points tallied by the “400.” The Shorts headed the Alibis a 26 to 4 wallop with Kenny Miller getting five baskets during the tilt.

More Results Listed
Through their 10 to 3 victory over the Jags the Skunks, led by Bennett with four points, entered the elimination tourney. The Hawkes broke the offense of the Juniors and emerged victorious by a 12 to 4 count. Keyser led the Hawkes to their triumph with four points. The Tish Tashes, minus Van Boring, gained an 11 to 7 decision over the P. S. S. crew. Rarick scored six tallies for the victors while Miller made a like number for the losers.

By reason of their 10 to 2 decision over the Riff Ruffs the Chiefs are now entered in the tourney. Faux scored four markers for the Chiefs and Clymer and Bennigan each dropped charity tosses in for the losers. The Redskins won out in their tight defensive battle with the Aces when King connected for the only score of the tilt. The Hellers dropped a 11 to 2 decision to the Oranges. Blanks and McKay scored four points each for the Oranges.

Scoring a 22 to 7 decision over the Hotshots the Green Horns entered into the championship flight. Springer hit the hoop on five occasions to lead the Green Horns in their victory while Carbaugh got six markers for the Hotshots. Concluding the play for the session the Clodhoppers gained a 9 to 3 decision over the Ex-Varsity.

Review Western Literature

Philaethians at their meeting on Monday evening reviewed the Western Literature. Selma Liff, program chairman, had charge of the meeting.

Hazel Kuttler gave the history and background of western literature, and this was followed by a review of the life of F. B. Hart, one of the most prominent western writers. Ina Claire Chappell followed this report with one in which she gave the life sketch of two other famous western writers. Speeches by Fay Bechtold and Virginia Fathaur on the same subject were also given. Virginia Fathaur gave a very interesting review of the life of Kathleen Norris.

Students To Be Sent To State Math Test

South Side will enter three students in the state algebra contest, for which the sectional tests will be given on April 4, at Central High School, and the finals at Bloomington on April 24. These students won the honor of being able to compete in the contest by making the highest grade on a test given to students who were selected as the best from each algebra 2 class. Two of them are Max Wagner and William Schueler. Ruth Henline and Mary Moffat tied in the tests, and they will be given another test soon to determine which will enter as the third contestant from South Side.

Latin Club To Review "Mars," God Of War

"Mars," the god of war, will be the topic of the Latin Club meeting today. The main speaker of the program will be Mr. Wilson of the social science department, who will talk on "War," which is threatening the nation today.

Margaret Dickmeyer and her committee, composed of Don Schaefer and Robert Haruff, are planning the program. Don Schaefer will talk on Mars, the god in the ancient world. "Mars in the World Today" is the topic to be discussed by Robert Haruff. Refreshments fitting to the occasion will be served.

Sickness Is Cause Of Much Absence

Influenza, Severe Colds Force Absence Of Four Teachers; Substitutes Are Necessary.

Several teachers have been absent from school in the last week with influenza.

Mr. Jack Wainwright, music director, has been confined to his home in Lagrange, Indiana, since Thursday. He is suffering from a bad cold and a slight attack of pneumonia. He was unable to attend either performance of the vaudeville which he helped to direct. Mr. Wainwright will not be able to return to his teaching until next week; and while he is absent Ursula Morton, his secretary, has charge of the music department.

Miss George Anna Hodgson, mathematics instructor, was unable to be at school Monday because of illness. Mrs. O. M. Davis substituted for her.

Influenza also kept Miss Emma Keifer, English teacher, from school on Monday. Miss A. Foster took her place.

Miss Mary McCloskey, English instructor, was also confined to her home on Monday. Mrs. C. A. Bex substituted for her.

Inter-Club Congress Gives Out Offenses Which Mar School

If the students look on the bulletin boards, they will find some of the traits that ruin the looks of our school. The boys seemed to have the majority when the reporter observed the different lists in the rooms. The points found were:

1. Throwing paper under lockers.
2. Washing soap and towels in washrooms.
3. Disposing of chewing gum in drinking fountains.
4. Scratching names on lockers.
5. Resting feet on back of chairs.
6. Loosening the screws in seats.
7. Walking on seats in gymnasium.
8. Smoking on school grounds.
9. Meddling with other pupils' lockers.
10. Running and pushing in halls.
11. Carrying pens with points out.
12. Marking in library books.
13. Writing on locker room walls.
14. Boys or girls in groups standing around between periods.
15. Tearing paper in small pieces and strewing it in halls.

Russia has superseded Italy as the land of stamps for every occasion, all highly attractive and interesting, but printed more for the benefit of collectors than for the postal use. The most unusual in design and treatment is the latest issue of ten stamps printed in connection with an international athletic met in Moscow.

Each of the ten designs has a different illustration of some sports activity, and all are framed in the same sort of border.

The silent snow-clad height of Mount Ranier at Tacoma is one of the scenic wonders of the northwest. However, in its beginning, it was the terror of the Pacific. This famous mountain, which rises 14,408 feet above sea level and covers 100 square miles in area, once was a raging volcano, a veritable "fire mountain," which later "blew itself out," although small jets of steam still come from cracks in the summit.

A tremendous explosion blew away about 2000 feet of the peak and left a ragged stump. Cold, moist winds from the Pacific deposited layers of ice and snow, rivers formed, and a glacial octopus stretched its icy tentacles downward.

The three-cent stamp issued in 1934 by the United States shows this ice-capped mountain as a striking background for the enchanting Mirror Lake in front.

Stamp collecting has a greater following than any other hobby.

Thomas A. Sperry originated trading stamps in 1891. He put his trading stamp plan into effect in 1896. The most famous hobby now has a volume of several million dollars a year.

Four Girls Are Librarians Of Three Social Science Tutors

As a means of gaining experience, giving service to the school, and saving the school money, four girls have voluntarily offered their services to three of the social science teachers at South Side. These girls are in the rooms before and after school, at which time they check in and out books that are kept by the teachers as references to be used during the class period.

Virginia Woods, the assistant of Mr. Wilson, begins at 7:45 o'clock in the morning. All books are to be kept over-night only, though sometimes students keep books out until Virginia has to remind them about their mistake. The penalty for keeping books out longer than the allotted time is that one is not able to take any more out for the remainder of the week.

Light Books Preferred

An average of 25 books are loaned per day; of these the civic classes favor Young and Wright, and Magruder; while the economics classes prefer Thompson, and Klein and Colvin. As would be expected, light books are taken out more often than heavy ones. Sometimes students forget that they have books out; this was proved by the recent locker clean-up, when many books which had been in the lockers for a long time were returned.

"It is a lot of fun, but there is plenty of grief at times," said Mildred Rudig when we found her posting a long list of names of persons who had evidently mislaid some of the books. Mildred, who helps Mr. Murphy, has about the same procedure as Mr. Wilburn Wilson's librarian. She finds that Thompsons are most popular because Mr. Murphy rates them second to the class text.

Chairmen Announced, And Acts Decided Upon; Refreshments To Be Served.

South Side's annual Senior Fun Fest, which each year is sponsored by the faculty members, Parent-Teacher Association, and senior class officers, will be held this evening at 8 o'clock in the gymnasium.

The program, which will be divided into three main divisions, will be under the direct supervision of the class sponsors, a faculty committee, and a picked group of faculty members. Manuel Rothberg, a prominent member of the senior class and especially well known for his public speaking ability, will act as master of ceremonies for the whole event.

The faculty part of the program, which is headed by Miss Dorothy A. Magley, will consist of several skits and parodies on interesting phases of teacher life. Miss Magley's committee members are the Misses Alice Jane Patterson and Alda Jane Woodward, and the Messrs. Wilburn Wilson and Paul M. Siddell.

Square Dance A Feature

The Parent-Teacher Association's act is being planned under the direction of Mrs. Horace C. Horn as chairman, and Mrs. George M. Knudson, and Mrs. Merle J. Abbott. This part of the program will consist of a square dance by several senior class mothers and a short play.

The students' part of the program will be divided into four short skits under the chairmanship of Virginia Greiner, Dick Helm, and Bob Adams. Ruth Adler and Dorothy Crabill, and Fred Nye. These chairmen are all officers of the senior class and are being directed by Mr. J. H. Chappell and Miss Adelaide Fiedler, who are the advisers of the class.

Students Are Named

Three of the student chairmen have announced the members of their committees; these are Virginia Greiner, Dorothy Crabill, Ruth Adler, and Bob Adams and Dick Helm. The members of the first named group are George, Jeanette Jacobs, Fred Nye, Morgan Harrison, Mary Martha Hobrock, Phil Green, Marjorie Hower, Allan Faux, Albert Weinman, and Vernon Gregory. The second group is composed of Verna Holtman, Louis Bonisib, Gwen Horn, Dave Steger, Eliza Bess Lucas, Theron King, Jim Sweet, Bud Jones, Walter Weaver, Robert Altevogt, Bill Heber, Bill Fries, Tom Janickie, Mary Martha Hobrock, Dorothy Douglas and Jack Cartwright. The last named group's members are Rosemary Chappell, Earle Paxton, Myron Jones, Virginia Gardner, Selma Liff, Herman Makey, Bryce Minier, Ruth Wolfcale, Jo-Anne Smith, and Vernon Gregory. Fred Nye, chairman of the fourth committee, has not announced his cast.

Senior students have had opportunity this week to pay their dimes for admission to home room chairmen; those who have not already done so are requested to pay this morning in home room or at the office this noon or after school. Only members of the class and their parents are to be admitted to the affair. After the program, suitable refreshments will be served by the members of the cast.

Easter Play Given At So-Si-Y Meeting

Talks, Music, Other Features; Anna Bremer Heads Program; New Committee Is Announced.

The dramatization of the garden scene on the first Easter morning by a program group headed by Anna Bremer was the feature of So-Si-Y regular meeting which was held on Tuesday evening in the Greeley Room. The garden scene called "Easter Morn," depicted the occurrences after Christ arose from the tomb and when Mary Magdalene and Salome told the disciples of what had occurred. Members of the cast were Mary Magdalene, Fay Beebe; Salome, Marjorie Schuerman; Mary, Mary Michaels; Peter, Helen Meese; and soloist, Virginia Baker.

Preceding the play, several members of the club have been taking a song leadership course at the Y. W. C. A., led the group in singing two Easter songs, "Christ Arose" and "The Lord Hath Arisen." Ruth Reitz and Martha Newell, two members of the program committee, followed the play with an Easter duet. Mary Jo Allen then played several violin selections, which were followed by a responsive reading by Phyllis Barrows and Betty Muntzinger. The members present responded to the readings in unison.

"Easter the World Over" in four short talks was the subject of the last number on the program. The girls who presented the Easter customs of various countries are Evelyn Kruse, Switzerland; Jeanette Braun, Moravia; Marie Engle, Azores; and Marjorie Meyer, Russia.

The next meeting, which will be held on April 21, will be planned by Miriam Lickert. Her committee is composed of Lorraine Meyer, Dorothy Young, Janet Fish, Irene Becker, Mary Anne Park, Margie Boerger, Virginia Wave, Mary Brannon, Jane Worthington, Virginia Greiner, Ruth Fowler, Catherine Allendorph, and Virginia Baumgardner.

Beginners, Advanced Tumblers Begin Drills

At the last meeting of the advanced tumbling section, held on Wednesday, part of the time was spent in drill work and practice, with Miss Patterson in charge. The tumblers were reviewed on back rolls with the extension, right cartwheels, handstands, walking on hands, and head stand with lay-out.

The other part of the meeting was spent in practicing whatever the members desired. Handsprings, dives, flips, back-handsprings, bronchos, head-stands on knees, and fish-flips were among the stunts that were practiced.

In the beginners' groups, practice was held in the form of a whole squad performing at once, while the others watched. Miss Smith drilled them on the forward and backward rolls, the head stand, and the hand-stand.

Miss Paxton Tells Club About Mexico

Math Science Members Hear Talks; John Bex Is Speaker; Insectivorous Plants, Subject.

"Contrasts in dress, transportation, and scenery are one of the outstanding interests to a visitor of Mexico," said Miss Mary Paxton when she spoke to the members of the Math Science Club last Friday evening. "Land of Contrasts" was the main topic which she discussed, but she also told some interesting facts about the early history of the native people and their calendar.

John Bex, a former botany student, illustrated his talk on insectivorous plants with some slides. He explained that there were about five thousand species which live off of the blood of insects which are drawn to the flower. In the absence of the president, Ruth Garrison, the vice-president took charge of the meeting.

Jim Dorn, Inter-Club Congress representative, told the progress that is being made in the Clean-up Campaign and also that they are planning to have a Get-Acquainted Day in the very near future.

Miss Paxton, who toured Mexico during the past summer, showed pictures taken on the trip, models of the natives, dishes, linen, money, etc. Games, under the direction of Ruth Boring, were played in the Greeley Room. Refreshments were served at the end of the meeting.

North Side Vod-Vil To Be On March 27

North Side's annual Vod-Vil will be held Friday, March 27, in the school auditorium. The theme is, "Sweethearts on Parade." Eliminations were held to see who would contribute to the program. The following organizations will participate: the freshmen, sophomore, junior, and senior classes, the Red Cross, Polar-Y, Boosters, and Phy-Chem.

Jimmy Sanford's orchestra will play before the first act, which will begin at 8 p. m. The judges for the Vod-Vil are Miss Virginia Hockney, Miss Helen Hilgeman, and Miss Jane McBride.

Annual Event, Get-Acquainted Day, Is Today

Freshmen Will Have Red Cards, Sophs Blue, Juniors Green, Seniors White.

Mr. A. Verne Flint

"Hello, again!" No, it isn't Jack Benny—it's Hello Day in South Side High School.

Today has been selected as "Hello Day," a general get-acquainted day for students of South Side High. Each student will be provided with a card for autographing.

The class standing of each student will be indicated by the color of his card. When you see red, look for a freshman. The sophomores will be blue—that is, their cards will be blue; the juniors, green; and the seniors, white. It has been suggested that the students provide themselves with ink or pencil to match their cards. This will make them more effective. Each student should also bring a piece of string by which to attach the card to his person.

Ten-minute intervals between periods on Thursday will be set for forming and renewing friendships.

The purpose of Hello Day is to promote good-fellowship and courtesy among the students of South Side High. Hello Day was first started last year under the sponsorship of Inter-Club Congress.

All Photos Of Clubs Underclasses Taken

$2.00 Must Be Paid By April 13; Work On Totem Advances; Covers To Be Announced.

All club and underclassmen pictures have now been taken for the Totem. Type is being set up, and on section is being printed already. Covers for this year's Totem have been decided upon, but will not be announced until later. The total sum of two dollars must be paid on the Totem by April 15, or a twenty-five cent fine will be charged. After this date it will no longer be possible to purchase a Totem for two dollars.

Class Sees Play
Members of the dramatics class of Central High School, Trenton, New Jersey, recently saw Helen Hayes in the stage play, "Victoria Regina."

Former Graduate Is Singing His Way To A Successful Career

Howard Ropa, former South Side student, is now making quite a name for himself over the local broadcasting stations. His baritone voice is heard, with Fred Tangeman at the piano, over a local station every Tuesday and Saturday. Howard's voice goes very well with what the women call "tall, dark, and handsome."

It was not long ago that he made a very peculiar appearance while singing on the twice-weekly program. A spectator would have wondered at the bandaged face of this singer. It seems that Howard had been in an automobile accident a few days before and still possessed a few souvenirs. Despite his many bandages, the program was heard with pleasure. Upon talking with one of the announcers for the program, I learned that Mr. Ropa has a very promising career; and with his present intention of singing on one of the chains, this hope will someday be realized. If you desire conversation with this young man, he can be found at the broadcasting station.

Indiana Writers Theme For Year

"Hoosierwrites" Novels, Poems Reviewed By Library Club; Celebrate Members' Birthdays.

Present-day Indiana authors were the subject of discussion at the March Library Club meeting held in the Voorhes Room Tuesday afternoon. The theme of the club for the year is "Literature in Indiana." The lives of several Hoosier writers were discussed.

The lives of three famous people whose birthdays fall in March were related. Besides this instructive part of the program, the birthdays of three of the library members were celebrated. Hazel Kuttler's birthday fell on March 14. Arlin Grieser, March 16, and Maxine Mariotte's March 30. Humorous talks were given about each of these members.

Preceding the program, a short business meeting was held with Bill Fries, president, presiding. Plans for a skating party and for a theatre party were discussed. The members expect to attend the motion picture of some well-known novel. The date for these events has not yet been announced. Rosemary Lehman, Inter-Club Congress representative, gave a short report on the activities of this organization.

The committee in charge of this meeting was headed by George Anna Martin, vice-president, who was assisted by Maxine Mariotte, Helen Potter, Ruth Fritz, and Martha Franz.

Eleanor Vesey Better After Pneumonia Siege

Eleanor Vesey, South Side sophomore who has been ill with pneumonia for the last few weeks, is now able to see visitors. The doctor announced that Eleanor is on the road to recovery and will be able to come back to school after spring vacation. Eleanor spent most of her time listening to famous orchestras that played over the radio; but one day, as she was listening to her favorite piece of music, her ears closed up. Now she reads and answers letters that are sent to her. Her favorite pastime is sleeping.

Direct Campaign

Miss Dorothy Benner

Mr. Wilburn Wilson

Marionette Members Work On Production

Marionette Club held a regular meeting on Thursday afternoon in the workshop for the purpose of completing puppet bodies and papier mache heads.

Kenny Scott, president of the club, was in charge of the meeting. Violet Garton and LaVerne Boyce, members of the costume committee, directed the work on the beginning of the costumes for "Chu Chin Chow," the planned production.

The club picture was taken for the Totem, on Friday evening in the study hall.

Members of the club who are interested in working tonight on the marionettes may do so in the club's workshop, Miss Dorothy A. Magley, club adviser, announced this week.

Extempore Contest Planned
The extempore speech contest which is an annual event in the speech calendar is to be held soon after the spring vacation. It is open to all students in South Side.

Mules, Goats To Be Coached By Gen. Wilburn Wilson, Admiral Dorothy Benner. Assembly Friday, Start Of Contest

M. Rothberg, B. Minier, Sea Lieutenants; Bob Adams, M. Jones, Land-Lubbers.

Reviving that famous football tradition, the contest between the Army mule and the Navy goat, the Social Science Club of South Side will open on Friday, March 27, a magazine subscription campaign in which the members of the club expect to obtain enough money to purchase a new Victor talking picture machine for the school. The goal for subscriptions has been set at six hundred dollars worth.

The teams will be headed by "Admiral" Dorothy Benner of the Navy, and by "General" Wilburn Wilson of the Army, each trying to outdo the other in the sale of the magazines of the Crowell Publishing Company.

In an assembly to be held Friday, Mr. R. Nelson Snider, principal of South Side, will explain in detail the plan of selling. Following Mr. Snider's explanatory speech, Miss Benner and subsequently Mr. Wilson will deliver "pep" talks to their respective teams.

This year the contest will be held between two teams, with prizes to be awarded to individuals selling certain required numbers of subscriptions, in addition to a contest between the home rooms of the school. Prizes for individual sales will be shown on display in the Calhoun entrance show case during the campaign. There will be a cash prize awarded the student who sells the greatest number of subscriptions, and an Eversharp pencil will be given to each member of the home room selling the most subscriptions.

The talking picture machine is definitely a new development not only in the moving picture machine field, but also in the field of education and instruction. More and more, talking picture machines are coming into active use in high schools and colleges throughout the country. "Its value to South Side High School is thought to be, by those students sponsoring the campaign, beyond calculation," so stated Manuel Rothberg, president of the club. He continued, "Through the use of the many libraries of talking pictures available in great quantities, the machine should prove to be both entertaining and enjoyable to the school."

The members of the committee in charge of the arrangements for the campaign are as follows: Bryce Minier and Manuel Rothberg will be aides to "Admiral" Benner. Myron Jones and Robert Adams will be aides to "General" Wilson. The publicity committee is headed by Louis Bonisib with Bob Locke, Bob Harruff, Catherine Allendorph, and Verna Holtman. The auditing and typing committee is directed by Betty Wolf with Eliza Bess Lucas, June Haeger, and Ruth Rose assisting her.

The Victor machine, which the students expect to purchase, will be on display during the entire day Monday; and pictures are to be shown during a number of periods on that day. This demonstration will be free to all students.

The campaign is expected to last one week and will be closed when the quota is reached. The magazines which will be on sale during the campaign include "The Woman's Home Companion," "The American Home," "Colliers," and "The Country Gentleman."

The school will receive fifty percent of the gross receipts for subscriptions. Six hundred dollars worth of subscriptions will need to be sold to purchase the machine.

Kiwanis Club To Sponsor Course

Types Of Professions Will Be Discussed By Club Members; Henry Meyer Is In Charge.

The Kiwanis Club of Fort Wayne plans to conduct a six weeks' course of vocational guidance for the seniors of South Side High School.

This course of guidance will start during the week of April 20, and will be opened with an assembly period for the seniors on Monday at 8:10 a. m. At this time, Judge Clarence McNabb will speak on "Preparing for Life." Talks will be given to the seniors of South Side High School on various professions by members of the Fort Wayne Kiwanis Club every Tuesday and Thursday afternoons at 2:50 p. m. Seniors who wish to listen to these talks will be excused for that purpose at this time.

Certain types of professions will be discussed during each week of the six weeks course. Professional Arts will be the topic of discussion of the first week's program at South Side. This will include such professions as lawyer, school teacher, and coach. A detailed program for each week will be announced later.

Mr. Henry Meyer, supervisor of physical education, has again been appointed as chairman of the committee on vocational guidance of the Fort Wayne Kiwanis Club. Other members of the committee are Earl Cunningham, Oscar Clem, Oswald Jones, John Slater, Willis Richardson, W. T. Shively, and Herman W. Sigrist.

The first week's program at South Side will be in charge of Oswald Jones.

The White Elephant Of Cochrane High

By Eleanor White and Laverne Boyce

CHAPTER I

Coach Gregory Jackson resumed his easy chair by the open fireplace, relit his pipe, and began to read a detective story. For many minutes, only the occasional rustle of a turning page and the steady rhythm of the clock disturbed the pleasant silence. As the clock struck nine, he glanced up with a start.

His first thought was one of annoyance that the quarterback was so late; however, as the seconds lengthened into minutes, and the minutes into nearly an hour, he became vaguely worried. It was not like Dick, he reflected, to keep him waiting.

As he listened to the tick-tock of the clock, his mind returned to the problem he had already discussed that evening.

In the cozy, firelit living room of his home, the coach, lounging in a deep leather chair, had smoked his well-seasoned old pipe and discussed football with Cary Phillips, a fellow teacher at Cochrane High School. With satisfaction, he watched the careworn appearance fade from the other's lean, dark face in the comfortable atmosphere of his abode.

Game Depends on Hamilton

"Cary, we're in a tough spot this time," confided the brawny coach. "This is the game which will decide which of the city schools will get the Morgan cup for good. Unless we come out of this slump, we're bound to lose this game; and the Dragons will get it. I've asked Dick Hamilton to come over tonight. I hope we can do up a winning play before Saturday."

"Well, Dick Hamilton is one of the best quarterbacks we've ever had here, Greg. I hope he comes through with the stuff. We'd sure hate to lose the cup, especially to the Dragons!" Cary Phillips replied in a grave tone.

As he finished speaking, the young history teacher lifted his long, muscular body out of the big chair, yawned and donned his hat and coat. After a brief goodnight and a word of encouragement, he went out into the brisk autumn evening.

Returning to the present, the coach pondered a short time. Then, abruptly, he crossed the room; and, picking up the telephone, he dialed the Hamilton residence.

"Hello, is that you, Dick?" inquired a pleasant, boyish voice.

"No, this is Coach Jackson," the man replied. "I was just calling about Dick. I expected him to come over tonight for a council of war!"

"Well, I'll be—!" ejaculated the voice at the other end of the wire. "This is Peter Grant, sir; I'm staying with Dick until Saturday, when his parents are returning from Hawaii to watch us win! He started over to your house, Mr. Jackson; I don't know why he didn't arrive."

"Are you sure he meant to come here?" the coach queried.

"Oh, yes! He was quite excited about some play he was figuring out. He wanted to see you immediately. He left about seven-thirty. I went as far as Fisher Avenue with him. Then he went on with Fay Sanders and two other girls. I can't think of any reason why he has not arrived. It sure is funny!"

Coach Worried
Silently the coach echoed the boyish vernacular. "It sure is funny." He knew Dick was very punctual and felt a great deal of responsibility as the coach's right-hand man. After arguing with himself a short time, he gave in to anxiety and soon was speaking over the telephone to Fay Sanders herself.

In response to his terse question, the girl said, "No, Mr. Jackson, I haven't seen Dick since about seven-thirty."

Then the coach asked, "Where did you see him last, Fay?"

"Well, it was at school. He had walked along to school with me. I was going to a club meeting, and he had to get something from his locker. My friends waited at the north entrance; and we both went to our lockers, which are near each other. Dick left first, muttering something about being in a hurry to find something and to see you; I left soon after that and met my friends. That's all I know about it, Mr. Jackson," she concluded.

Mulling the facts gleaned from this conversation in his mind, the coach stared into the fire and chewed the stem of his pipe reflectively. Suddenly he turned again to the little maple table bearing the telephone, and once more he was speaking to Fay.

In quick, sharp tones he asked, "Fay, was there any way for Dick to leave the building besides the north entrance; and, if there wasn't, did your friends actually see Dick leave the building?"

Two Students Write Mystery Novlette

This thrilling mystery novlette entitled "White Elephant of Cochrane High" has just been completed by the Writers' Club of South Side. This story was written under the supervision of Mr. Herman Makey, English instructor, by the two members of the Writers' Club, Elinor White, a junior, and Laverne Boyce, a senior.

Each girl wrote approximately one-half of the novlette, one chapter being added at each club meeting.

The story concerns Dick Hamilton, a football hero, who is being held a captive by four smugglers. To discover the fate of the hero, read the remaining six chapters of the story which will be printed weekly in story form. The novlette will also be printed in "Singing Arrows," a student publication.

The members of the club are now working on vignettes and short short stories.

the building?" Slowly, and with some surprise, the girl answered, "No, there wasn't any way for Dick to leave the school, except by the north entrance,—why, how strange!—I don't believe they did see Dick leave the building! Where could he have gone?"

Coach Hastens To School

The coach stared at the dying embers of the fire with growing suspicions. At last, he decided to walk over to Cochrane High in the hope of seeing Dick. As he hastened toward the school, he weighed the possibilities of victory for Cochrane High grimly.

As he mounted the steps to the north entrance, he encountered the burly, slow-moving janitor, Edward Schmitt, looking up for the night.

After exchanging a pleasant good evening with him, Gregory inquired, "Have you seen Dick Hamilton around here this evening, Mr. Schmitt?"

"No," replied the heavy man with small show of cordiality. Then as the coach stared at him, he said hesitantly,

"Wal, now, maybe I did. I seen a boy down in the basement at the foot of the stairs around seven-thirty. I guess it musta been him. I reckon he's the only one that wears a mackinaw like this here boy had on. But, mind, I ain't saying it was him!"

Reflecting on this turn of events, the coach decided to look around in the basement. Acting on the janitor's surmise that the boy was headed for the rifle range, the coach searched the place for a hint of the boy's identity. However, neither the range nor the adjoining compartments of the nether regions gave him a clue. At last, he turned reluctantly toward home.

Anxiety for Dick Increases

In the early morning, the last vestiges of his fitful sleep were destroyed by the jangling of the telephone. The anxious voice of Peter Grant came to his ears as he picked up the receiver. "Mr. Jackson, Dick has not come home yet. Frankly, I'm worried! He's never done anything like this before; and, since he was so excited about seeing you and yet never got clues that did the dark and silent classrooms, denuded of their cheery, daytime populace."

The principal finally dispatched a telegram to the missing lad's parents. Then he called a detective agency. Detective-sergeant William T. Collins took charge with a competent hand. He called in everyone having anything to do with the popular quarterback, and even the hospitals and police station without one hint as to his whereabouts. Baffled, they traced Dick's journey of the preceding evening.

The honey-combed basement, the north end of which was shaped like a gigantic cross with the range at its top, with its dim, dusty subterranean passages and blind alleys gave no more clues than did the dark and silent classrooms, denuded of their cheery, daytime populace.

People Are Cross-Examined

After examining the coach, Fay Sanders, and Peter Grant, he decided to call in the janitor, Edward Schmitt. For nearly fifteen minutes, the round florid detective fidgeted in the principal's office until the heavy-treading janitor shuffled in.

"What kept you so long?" demanded Mr. Milton impatiently.

"The furnace is actin' up today," grumbled Schmitt. "I don't reckon I kin stay here too long!"

"Well, I guess you can stay long enough to answer a few questions," Mr. Milton said sharply.

Mr. Schmitt looked uneasily at the detective and mumbled, "Wal, hurry up, I can't wait long."

"You know Dick Hamilton?" asked the detective, carefully noting the expression on the sullen face before him.

"Wal, I don't reckon I know many of the students by name; but I guess maybe I know him. He's always a meddlin' around down on the rifle range," muttered the German.

"When did you see him last?" asked the detective.

"Mr. Schmitt said as he glanced uneasily around, 'I don't jes' remember as how I seen him or not.'"

"Did you know he had disappeared?" queried the other.

"Disappeared—wal, I reckon I didn't know about that, either," the janitor replied.

"Hm," murmured the inquisitor. "Do you stay here all the time?"

"Yep, that is, exceptin' breakfast, supper, and sleepin'. I sometimes stay here to sleep when I think the furnace is goin' to act up," was the answer.

In reply to whether or not he was to stay that night, he answered, "Wal—er—I jes' don't know yet. If I get that furnace fixed—"

"Never mind about that," interrupted Mr. Milton. "We'll have a service man out immediately to fix it. You should have reported it to me long ago."

Mr. Schmitt Started

Mr. Schmitt was visibly startled. "Oh," he said, "I don't reckon as how you'll have to do that. The trouble ain't bad. I can fix it right now if I can go."

A man 128 years old just died. Could it have been from old age?

Love is that emotion which is natural by instinct, taught by movies, and encouraged by pulp paper magazines.

The cold spell may have its purpose. We've gotten cooled off for a scorching spell in the summer, like last year's.

We have just heard that a crooner was almost murdered during this winter's cold spell. He was singing "June in January."

Self-confidence is the thing that makes or breaks a man. If he has too little of it, he never succeeds; if he has just enough, he is a Mussolini.

Leisure—Asset Or Liability?

A man's success or failure often depends on how he uses his spare time. Although this has been stated thousands of times, it never loses its plain truth. A man's regular work, or the duties that form the main portion of his day, are often assigned to him, but he can choose his own way of spending his spare time. His use of this spare time is a good measurement of him, because it shows what his own character and taste are, and what he would of his own accord do if there were no one to boss him. If he spends his spare time loafing, he would probably spend all his time loafing if there were no person to order him to do something. If he spends his spare time accomplishing or creating things, he is probably that kind of a person all around, no matter how fate may have dealt with him in the way of a job. Thus the kind of persons we are is shown by how we use or misuse our spare time.

Shouldering A Gun Is More

Patriotic Than Waving A Flag

Schools are often judged by their school spirit. School spirit is that loyalty and patriotism that the students and teachers have for their school. If any school desires to "go places and do things," it must first of all have school spirit. As patriotism is essential to the success of any nation, so is school spirit essential to the success of any school. By school spirit, we do not altogether mean the waving of pennants and rooting at games for our team to win. These, of course, are conducive to a hearty school spirit, but what is just as necessary is the attitude of the groups of teachers and students who spend hours each week in performing their services for the school: workers in the Booster Club, those who lead the various clubs, students who work in the school offices. No person can exhibit his loyalty for his school better than by serving it. As has been shown by our past record, this school has always had an excellent school spirit. May we always continue in this manner.

Moving Pictures In Students' Education—A Steady Influence

It is generally agreed that education is that institution of society dedicated to the preparation of youth "for action in accordance with the ideals of the times." Education's basic aim is to keep in step with the modern concepts of living. Here, visual instruction enters the picture. How can education keep in step with modern times on a restricted diet of purely verbal instruction? Statistical evidence shows that the average student goes to a movie at least once each week. Movies are a part of every student's life. But here another question arises. Isn't the student prone to accept all of the propaganda and one-sided exaggeration of facts witnessed at the cinema as the truth, if there has been no background of reliable facts under the conservative, steady influence of the classroom? Visual education, by providing a reliable background under directed influence, prepares the student to make a clear discrimination between fact and fancy. It helps the student to achieve a sane and even balance between conservative ideas and behavior, and new radical inclinations that may be seen and heard on the screen outside of school. Because it fulfills this need and because the modern concepts of thinking and living demand it, visual instruction must eventually become an integral part of formal education.

Carrying On

With Jean Creighton and Mary Louise Helms

Noah Webster says that dirt in the reference to a paper is any hard embedded particles forming blemishes in a finished paper. We, the authors, now beg to inform our readers that the dirt which we have put in this finished paper does not form blemishes...well, not so you could notice it.

THE NOO YORCHIDS... Bonsib and Crabill dancing South Side style in the Marine Room of the Hotel McAlpine to the music of Enoch Light's orchestra... Minier and Bex going slumming when they were supposed to be playing shut eye... Bonsib skipping meals to buy "his" Dougie a gorgeous bracelet at Saks 34th St.... Anybody wanting to hear the latest ear-burners, listen to those heard at the Scandals and the Ziegfeld Follies... Bex getting caught on the subway and being carried to Harlem, so he had to hoof it back to the Hotel.... And then the seven little small-town hicks sitting in their box at the opera surrounded by diamonds, ermines, and beautiful women—see Bonsib for details on the latter... To make everything tip-top, they played truth and consequences in their "nighties," sitting in the aisle on the way home at one o'clock in the morning!!

SWINGING CORPORATIONS... Here's a new one... Gwen Horn and Terry King... Vera Crise and Dick Dhiel... but Kenny has Dhiel's Bonsie's ring back to her... Nelson and Gardner claimed they got caught in the mud from 12 to 3 a. m. (now don't dispute their word!)... Sue Wallace and Ed Leitz doing okay in their reunion... John Grandy and Polly Borton looking grand with each other—but here's a hint John, there's plenty of guys planning competition so be careful.

IN SOME PEOPLE'S OPINION... Juanita Wolford, the gal with the gorgeous eyes... Virginia Gardner, lovely to look at, delightful to know... Marty Hobrock, rhapsody in orange... Bob Bosely, sweetie pie... Bob Gargett, marvelous dancer... Dorothy Douglas, not an enemy in a carload... Dorothy Crabill, perfect model of a girl... Bob Brazey, need we mention it... Maxine Roth, indeed a friend in need... Ruth Adler, stately.

ADDED LAUGHS... Joan Lohman wittingly asking Fritz if he would like to join a girls' club, and Fritz replying, he believed he would accept... Joan Bonsib falling hook, line and sinker for the Ouiga board... Bob Bacon telling a tipsy customer at Gardner's he wasn't home or some other dirty place... Overheard—some burly male in the hall saying he would like to boot some of those cowboys in the saddle in the recent vaudeville... Risher Hall throwing a party with all his old flames there... This is a long story—it seems as though a couple gals in Winona, Minnesota, read our S. S. Times and saw Morgan Harrison's picture; so they wrote him a letter. They wanted another boy-friend to write too, so "Martin Hobrock" is going to fill the bill... Are we going to get a kick out of this!

IN CONCLUSION... we, the authors, are now congratulating ourselves upon the fact that we were able to write this whole column without mentioning those men among men Bob Locke and Brower George.

Scribnibbles

ON EIGHTH PERIODS

Ah, my friends* One of the famous and certainly most interesting institutions within our fair portals. We are referring to that inexorable leftover from the Inquisition—the eighth period. Yours truly is thoroughly enjoying one for the sake of that good old game of basketball. You see we played overtime during lunch period. We find that it is quite impossible to walk into Mr. Gilbert's class undetected.

As one enters Room 8, he sees groups of victims lolling around here and there trying to convince themselves it's funny and all a big joke. But by the time "Cerberus" Heine calls the roll, most of the expressions of hilarity and mirth have vanished, and a hushed and meek atmosphere prevails the place. Actually, the only person who seems to enjoy himself is Harold "Tarzan" Roberts. You ought to know why! He is surrounded by a couple of girls—what a chance to strut his stuff! He does seem to be getting a few laughs from them.

Well, well, well, who do we see next but that prominent exponent of fun and mischief, "Mandy" Adams. At this time Mr. Adams has his beautiful proboscis inserted between the pages of a very popular magazine. On my left, two comely members of the fair sex try their darndest to pass a note way back to that handsome impresario, Dick Orr. After much turning around and worrying on their part, it reaches the aforementioned young gentleman.

Oh, we almost forgot! "Jake" McClure is the other watchdog. "Jake" works at history assignments. Even Miss Montgomery has deserted her rostrum by this time. It must be awfully late. Will the bell never ring? In the front seat on my left one young man has solved the problem of how to spend an hour. He is busily engaged playing that game of kings-solitaire. He seems to be holding a winning hand by the look on his pan. I have it from very reliable sources that Dale Busse has become as much a part of the eighth period scenery as Mr. Heine himself. It seems that he is in no great hurry to reach school in the morning.

However repulsive the eighth period may be, it has one benefit. It enables me to spend one evening at home without the thought of home work staring me in the face. This only goes to prove that there is good, however small, in everything. Well, folks, the grand finale of this one-reel drama will occur most any time now. There it goes! The bell just rang. So long!

Chatter

There was Adonis Kenny Hess standing in an oratorical pose holding a bunch of posies (violets to be sure) in his tiny hands. No, this wasn't a recent picture, but one taken when he was knee-high to a grasshopper. Guess who was his little playmate? None other than Vivian Hickman.

Guess where our little friend, Audrey, is now? She is in the darkest jungle of Ethiopia. Oh dear! Here comes a big bomb from the Spaghetti Eaters. It didn't go off yet, so little Audrey went over and picked it up and laughed and laughed because she knew Italian Balm is good for the hands.

Oscar Eggers' new flame is Doreen Russell, and her pet name for him is "my tootsie wootsie" or some other absurd name. (Could I stand it?)

Rosemary Chappell's dress (the green and yellow one) is really choice, chic, smart, intriguing, and clever. (We want a better position.)

Ask Dorothy Schwer anything you want to know about organic chemistry cause she's a regular wizard at it. Second joke.

Personal: Max Roth is tough over the piece in one of the dirt columns which stated that she had been going steady for two years. We were blamed for this error, but we're totally innocent. No kidding. Little prevaricator that said we told Blackie Durbin this: please refrain from any more unjust accusations.

Twenty-one will be Ruth Eyleneberg's most important year of her life. Why? Because it is then that she will march to the tune of "Here Comes the Bride." I think his hair is red.

Modern Generalship
 "Keep awake, men," said General Grey,
 But he had been sleeping all that day.

"Over the top, boys!" said General Hines,
 But he was careful to stay back of the lines.

"Up and at 'em, men," said General Solo,
 And he was talking to them over the radio.

"I'm with you, boys," said General Giles,
 But he was away from them by twenty miles.

"We'll fight for the right today," said General McKay.
 The reason he worked was for his pay.

Secrets to Seventeens

Boys, it's here!—Leap Year is no longer one of those desired things which is "just around the corner." Thus we say, "Now is the time for all girls to come to the aid of their party." But confidentially, boys, although girls enjoy joking about this time of an inverted state of affairs, they still prefer that the attention should come from you. They still appreciate being called for by your ringing the doorbell, instead of your raucous honking from a car. They still value your using manners and politeness every day: at school, on the street, at parties, and particularly when you are along with them. A girl would rather stay at home than be seen out with a bore, for it is little to her credit.

Just as you have undoubtedly observed things about girls that annoy you, girls, too, have some pet peeves. One of their main ones is to have a date with a boy who seems to need only a dog collar and a chain to top off his new haircut job. Try thinking twice, as we girls do, concerning what would be a becoming haircut as far as style, length, and the way it personally makes you look. Please do get over the idea that, because you have just come from the barber's, you are all dolled up and ready for anything grand.

We really do have many other things we are bubbling over to say, but we adjourn this week to say, "Hello Again" next time. These "Secrets to Seventeens" are going to help us to be ideal "Twenty-threes." We would greatly appreciate some of your suggestions through the mail box. Is it a date for next week, boys?

CURRENT COMMENT

Strike Violence in New York
 The Duce—A Bad Example
 Communists Revolt In China

STRIKE ONE—The hotel and apartment workers' strike in New York has done much to defeat its purpose. Violence on the part of the strikers has flared up everywhere, and additional men on the police force have been added to hold striking workmen in check. This public display of violence serves to work against the desired effects of the strike.

A strike is often an effective and respectful method for workers to gain their ends; but, when force is employed by the strikers, the strike not only becomes totally disgusting, but also very ineffective. A strike is called to help make employers come to settlement on the workers' terms. When violence is used by the strikers, the gap between the employer and the employee widens even more and makes reconciliation even harder.

ITALY'S SUCCESS—From various reports of late and from self-evident facts, it is clear that Mussolini's campaign in Ethiopia is turning out successfully. What effect this success may have on the Duce, Italy, Europe, and the world is difficult to forecast. However, the effects can never be for the peace and good will of this sphere.

The significance of this bad influence is even greater than one might believe at first examination. If Mussolini finds himself the conqueror of Ethiopia, his "Caesar" ambitions may develop to such a degree as to be extremely dangerous to the peace of the world. As bad as this reaction would be on Italy, we can be sure that it would have even a worse effect on other ambitious nations.

Japan has become even bolder in Manchuria since the Ethiopian War has been on. Germany derived so much encouragement in seeing Italy "get away with it" that Hitler broke the Locarno Peace Pact and sent troops into the Rhineland. Russia has spent years in preparation and development, and is now exposed to the idea that, since Italy is getting territory, she too could follow a like course. All these countries see Italy get away with it. What then? What will they try? Will international morale drop once again to the level they held at the time of the World War? Let's hope not!

RED REVOLT—When a man is killed, it is important news. When one hundred men are killed, it is a sensational massacre. When one thousand men are killed, it is a terrible war. But when three thousand men are killed in China, it is a Communist revolution. The curse of Communism has been felt by every country on the globe, but when heretofore have three thousand men been murdered because of it? When has this dreadful thing reached such menacing proportions?

Three thousand loyal troops of the Chinese, without ammunition, were completely annihilated by ten thousand red soldiers last week. When Communism comes to such terrible heights, it is indeed time for the entire world to wake up. Communism cannot be laughed off.

lective said, "If I can help, I'll go with you; I know something about furnaces."

"I don't need no help. I guess I can earn my own pay. You'll only be in my way," Schmitt muttered abruptly, scowling at Collins.

"Hm," the detective murmured reflectively as the burly fellow slammed the door resoundingly.

In addition to the complete testimonials of the coach, Fay Sanders, Peter Grant, and the janitor, the detective set down in a scrawling hand notations on other interviews.

This is what he wrote concerning the information gleaned from Cary Phillips: "Missing boy, although able to make up work if present, is not up in history; needs about two hours' work to be eligible for Saturday's game."

This from Principal Milton: "Missing boy has a good record. He is liked and respected by nearly everyone; although having a good record, he isn't a 'sissy.'"

From Katherine Norris, English teacher: "Dick Hamilton is a very dependable student, although not brilliant. He realizes responsibility."

From Susan Mercer, attendance teacher: "Dick is rarely absent from school."

From Jim Carter, teammate: "Dick tries his best to be an example for the team and to keep it in shape. Although he enjoys a good joke, he doesn't believe in practical jokes. He doesn't seek applause."

Missing Boy Threatened
 From Bill Williams: "Missing boy was threatened by members of the opposing team, especially Brick Harkness, who swore Dick would never be in Saturday's game if he had his way about it. The general opinion of the team is that the Dragons or some member of the team put Dick Hamilton out of the way."

From Bill Hayes, another janitor: "The basement is shaped like a big cross in the north end. The rifle range is farthest north; south about fifty feet on the west is the entrance to the storage room for unused school property. Across from this, on the west side of the passage, is an entrance to a room housing the unused heating appliances connected with the showers for football players, which were planned but never built under the bleachers of the stadium."

"The heating appliances were connected with the stadium, and a subterranean passage goes under the street to the stadium."

As the detective went through the corridors on his way down to the furnace, he was swamped with eager questions from the students. It was between classes just then; and knots of students were gathered around the halls, exclaiming about the disappearance. Teachers, too, were affected by the prominent student's disappearance.

Bits of exclamations came to the detective's keen ears, and he was satisfied.

Super-Regional Opponents Fall Before Tigers

Blue Defeat Kokomo Kats And Newcastle Trojans In Muncie Tourney Saturday

Evansville Central Is Next Opponent

Bengals To Play First Game In Final Series At Butler Field House On Saturday.

Hitting the net with deadly accuracy and completely smothering the offense of their opponents, Central's Bengals advanced to the semi-final round of the Indiana scholastic basketball tourney when they defeated the Newcastle Trojans and the Kokomo Kats in the super-regional meet held at Muncie last Saturday. The Tigers showed that they are really one of the strongest contenders for the state title as they polished off two of the toughest teams in the state.

The Tigers are scheduled to meet Central of Evansville at 2 p. m. in the initial tilt of the semi-finals to be held at Butler fieldhouse this Saturday afternoon. Coach Casca's Frankfort Hotdogs will meet the Anderson Indians in the second contest of the afternoon, with the victors in the afternoon matches meeting at 8 o'clock in the evening to decide the championship net quintet of Indiana for the 1935-36 season.

Frankfort Favorite

Frankfort, by reason of its splendid record piled up during the season in which it lost only one tilt, is favored to come out on top. However, none of the teams at this tournament can be counted out. Anderson has been coming along slowly all season and has really opened up in the tournaments. This team will be meeting the Hotdogs for the third time this season. In both of the other contests the Hotdogs came out on top, in one by a 6-point margin and in the other by a 4-point advantage.

Coach Murray Mendenhall plans to put his charges through several strenuous practice periods during this week as he prepares them for their invasion of the Butler fieldhouse. The Bengal mentor had scouts covering all of the other super-regional meets, and he will undoubtedly glean plenty of information from their reports. All of the players seem to be in the best of condition; all that Mendenhall really needs to feel is that his boys may go "stale." Stretching the basketball tournament over a period of four weeks greatly increases the work of the average coach. The Tigers will leave Fort Wayne on Friday and will stay at a hotel in Indianapolis until game time on Saturday.

Central Struggles Hard

Central won the afternoon game in the super-regional meet from the Kokomo Kats after a very hard struggle. The ability of the Tigers to come through and win in the fourth quarter again was the deciding factor. The game turned into a see-saw battle from the very first, with neither team being able to gain more than a 4-point advantage until the final period. The Tigers were forced to set their defense in such a manner that it would smother the scoring attempts of Kokomo's big center, Heckman. In doing this, the Tigers were put at a disadvantage. Kokomo took a 19-10 lead at the half. In the third period the Tigers held the Kats scoreless while they tied the score at 19-all as the final quarter began. In the opening minute of the final period, both teams threw caution to the winds as they both attempted to get into the lead. The Kats finally gained a 22-20 margin. Faced with a possible defeat, the Tigers put forth everything they had to give and soon were into a safe lead. Curly Armstrong and Steve Sitko led the Tigers with ten points each.

In the evening tilt, the Tigers played an inspired brand of ball as they sensed the possibility of their representing this region in the state finals. The Trojans put up a swell battle for over three quarters, but their spirit was definitely broken as they watched the Tigers turn on the steam in the final period. At the end of the first period the score was knotted at 6-all. The Trojans went into the lead for the last time as the second quarter started. However, Schaefer, playing a beautiful brand of ball, soon put the Tigers back in the lead and they were out in front by a 12-to-11 count at the half. Opening the third period, the Bengals increased their lead only to have the Trojans come back and press them all the way.

Trojans Change Offense

The Central netters held a 19-to-15 lead as the final period began. At this point the Green and White wearers changed their offense from a stall-type of play to a fast break in an effort to overtake the Blue. However, the Bengals found this change of style more to their liking; and soon bore through the Trojan defense for four more points and the ball game. With a 7-point lead and but three minutes of play left, Coach Mendenhall gave his five orders to stall away the game. Newcastle, being unable to break up this stall, was forced to commit intentional fouls in an effort to get control of the ball. The Tigers took advantage of this situation and cinched the ball game.

Summary of the games:

Tourney News

"What a ball club!" was the most popular phrase used to describe Central's Tigers as they mowed down the Kokomo Kats and the Newcastle Trojans at the Muncie fieldhouse last Saturday. The Blue never looked better. Their accuracy was not quite as excellent as it was in the sectional and regional tourneys here, but their defense was almost impregnable.

Any team which can hold two squads with the scoring power of Kokomo and Newcastle must have a real defense. Coach Mendenhall was faced with the problem of playing two teams with much greater height than his team possessed. He readily met this disadvantage by shifting his defense constantly so that no opponent could ever get set near the basket.

We wonder if Coach Mendenhall has been studying his psychology lately. Before each game, the Tiger squad divided up into two teams and went through a few practice plays. On almost every set and block play, the fellow taking the shot swished the net cleanly. The thought of facing a five with the accuracy displayed by the Tigers in these practice periods must have been a dismal one for the members of the opposing teams.

What a "whale" of a team a coach could make out of the four squads which played at the Muncie fieldhouse last Saturday! For our choice we would include Sitko of Central and Parker of Warsaw as guards. Then we would put M. Huffman of Newcastle in the center position. Our first five would be completed with Wagner of Kokomo and Schaefer of Central in the forward posts.

Sitko was probably the outstanding player on the Muncie hardwood last Saturday. His ability to keep driving in and his excellent defense play made him stand out among the tourney players. Parker looked very awkward at times, but how that boy could block shots! Towering above the other players, Parker repeatedly batted down what were almost positive baskets for the Newcastle aggregation. On the tip-off he played the key position. M. Huffman played a very consistent game for his team. He captured the tip from all the players jumping against him and handled the ball very well at all times. Wagner is one of the best one-handed shots we have ever seen. His beautiful driving and tricky dribbling made him a constant scoring threat. Schaefer won the first-string post over Armstrong because of his consistent play during the three tourneys just completed. Either of these boys would fit in well into this combination. Both are great scoring threats, and both are about the acme of defensive players.

This Central of Evansville squad is no setup for any team. Any aggregation which can hand setbacks to the Washington Hatchets and the New Albany Bulldogs in one day must be plenty good. Bosse, star forward on the Central squad, hit the net from mid-floor six times in the tilt against Washington and dropped in two more long shots and a foul to beat the Hatchets. Bosse is only five and one-half feet tall and weighs about 130 pounds. Herschelmann, Bear guard, contributed fourteen points toward the defeat of the Washington squad. The Central Tigers will be forced to tie these "scoring twins" up, or the Bengals will be watching the evening tilt from the sidelines.

If Fort Wayne ever decides to build a large community gym, it would do well to inspect the Muncie fieldhouse before making any other plans. With basketball constantly coming to the front and Fort Wayne being in the middle of the "basketball country," it does not seem entirely unreasonable to consider that this city may need a building with a seating capacity of at least six or seven thousand for scholastic and professional basketball. The Muncie gym can seat six thousand persons with ease and every person has excellent observation with no steel girders and posts to hinder his seeing everything that is happening on the floor.

It seemed very peculiar to see students from South Side and North Side completely wrecking their vocal mechanism as they vociferously yelled for Central's Tigers to gain some much-needed points. We have known the time when these same persons fervently prayed that the Tigers would melt the entire backboard. But, ah, this is an entirely different situation. Some game, this thing called basketball!

112 Freshmen Begin New Baseball Season

Spring surely has got the freshmen, because approximately 112 freshmen turned out for the second baseball practice this season, which was held last Monday. This was their last practice before the regular tournament games are played.

The teams were drilled on pitching, catching, batting, and other fundamentals of the game. Miss Smith gave them the general instructions, while the student leaders and other volunteer helpers aided the freshmen personally. After this a short practice game was played.

Archer Track Squad Begins Initial Practice

Team Lose Kessler, Eshcoff, Domer, Bremer, Wiemer Through Last Graduation.

Scheduled Strong In Field Activities

All Football And Basketball Aspirants Are To Report; Produce New Competition

With the track in good shape, the field rapidly becoming dry, and the track team participating in its first full week of practice outside, Coach Lundy Welborn predicts a fairly successful season for the Archers on the cinder path.

Graduation, which did not hit the Green squad as hard as in former years, caused the loss of Kessler, Eshcoff, Domer, Beemer, and Wiemer. Kessler, a versatile runner who was a good quarter-miler and also could show his heels to opponents in the mile, will be hard to replace. The loss of Eshcoff, Domer, and Beemer will be greatly felt by the squad, but the Green coach has dash men to fill their positions.

Loss Is Blow

The greatest blow to the Archers this year was the loss of Norris and Ostermeyer. Norris, a middle-distance man who turned in some fine work in the 440 and 880 and proved to be a consistent point-winner last year in both of these events, will be missed, as he has found employment at one of our local factories. Fred Ostermeyer also has found employment at the Harvester and will be unable to compete for the Green.

The 100 and 220 will be efficiently handled by Stone and Feichter. The latter, who is a junior this year, ran on the 880 relay team which placed first at the state meet in 1934. Stone had a bad season last year, but hopes to be back in his prime this year.

Archers To Be Strong

Miller Makey and Aaron Schoenfeldt will be the supporting cast for the quarter-mile. These men will also hold down the one-two positions in the mile relay. The battle between Jim Dern and Al Hinton is certain to produce some points for the Green in the half-mile.

The Archers are expected to be stronger in the field events this year than for many years.

With Ed Kruse out again this year holding down the pole-vaulting job, the Green should receive many points in this event. With his experience and height, Ned Alexander should clear the bar many times for the Archers and prove to be a great obstacle in the path of the Green opponents.

New Stars Wanted

In the weight throwing competition, the Green will be represented by Nelson Miller, big football tackle, and Ed Leitz, who was the most improved man on last year's squad. By hard work, Ed raised his shot-put figure to forty-three and one-half feet for a new school record, bettering Herb Banet's old record by four feet. Leitz and Stone are slated to take care of the broad jumping activities of the Green.

The order by Coach Lundy Welborn and Coach Friddle to report for track is certain to produce competition for the old track veterans and uncover some new track stars for the Green.

Play First Games In I-M Net Meet

Tip-Tops, Skunks, Greenhorns, Archers, Shorts, And Redskins Win Opening Games.

In the first game of the intramural basketball tournament last Thursday the Tip-Tops defeated the Times by the score of 6-4. Brandt and Feichter stood out for the winners with two points apiece, and Helm and Ballweg scored the same number of points for the losers.

The tourney favorites, the Archers, continued to display their usual good form by defeating the Five Horsemen by the score of 22-4. For a few minutes it looked as though the game was going to be closely contested, but the Archers finally found their stride and went ahead to win. Stalter was high-point man for the Archers, scoring ten points; Babcock tallied the Five Horsemen's lone marker. The Skunks upset the highly-touted Hawkers by the score of 4-3. Bell and Bly each scored two points apiece; Bell, getting his from the field, and Bly scoring his on charity tosses. Hinton scored the Hawkers' lone field goal and Zehr dropped in a free throw.

In the battle between the Shorts and the Tish-Tash, the former came out on the long end of a 4-2 count. Woodhull and Benz stood out for the winners with each scoring two points; Rarick was the only one to score for the Tish-Tash's. The game was exceedingly rough, but the referees let most of the personals go by.

And now the baseball season is starting! The first games were played last Friday night, and it was very evident that nearly everyone was rusty on rules. Better get to work, everyone, so that the games will pep up.

What does Lois Wyneken do in a baseball game? It looked as if she was carrying on a conversation with her fellow fielders; and when the ball did come her way, she was so surprised that she nearly did a backward somersault (which she cannot do under ordinary circumstances).

Irene Niemeyer and Betty Eisenacher were two ambitious players who hit home runs in the games Friday. Of course, a great deal of this luck (?) was due to blundering on the part of the outfielders. Come on, fielders, do your stuff!

Shhh! Don't talk to her. It'll get her nervous. What's all the mystery about? Miss Smith has lost her voice and doesn't know where to find it.

Barbara Raymond caught one of the first flies of this season, while playing at first base. Is that girl just naturally good?

They say spring is well on its way; and from the looks of the up-and-coming baseball season in G. A. A., we have reason to believe that that is a sure sign of spring. The freshies have started practicing already.

You can surely tell that some of the freshies are having their first try at baseball, especially when they try to play football with a baseball. Isn't that right, Mildred Franz?

We have been hearing a lot about the sweater that Ada Schuelke is knitting. Another sign of spring!

With all the "swell" weather we have been having, and which we hope will continue, there should be a lot of hiking and skating. So get busy, girls, and make use of every opportunity you get to turn in points for these activities.

Overheard from a freshie in the gym office the other day: "Did you sign up yet for tennis yet?" Still another sign of spring!

Judging by the quantity of noise that came out of the handball court last Monday, the Lettergirls must have had a rollicking time at their meeting. One could also hear (at times) the sound of a quartet rendering a few Southern numbers. Members of this charming group included: Marjorie Hower, Paulette Steinbarger, Betty Lou Linderberg, and Ruth Berning.

Beginning Tumblers Hold Stunt Practices

Continuing with the regular routine of stunts, the beginning tumblers again held their Tuesday and Thursday practices. The routine includes a number of required and extra stunts, upon which they are working hard in order to perfect them in time for the annual G. A. A. exhibition.

The stunts required of the beginners are as follows: forward and backward rolls, head stand, hand stand, shoulder stand, cartwheel, elephant walk, double roll, sheep roll, rocking chair, and the shuttle roll. Extra stunts which may be worked out when the required stunts are perfected are: human rocker, back bend, monkey walk, shoulder hand stand, sitting balance, stomach balance, forearm stand, human ball, bobber head, front over, and the shoulder knee stand.

In the advanced section, which meets on Wednesdays, the tumblers have not as yet started on their stunts which will be used in the exhibition. At the last meeting, the tumblers worked mostly on the single and double stunts. As soon as they have perfected these stunts, they report to their captains in order to receive points.

Sport Carnival Planned Again By Intramural

Louis Briner, Burl Friddle Head Gym Events; Entries Limited To 4 Groups.

Once again the intramural sports department and the gym class schedules will be revised as spring sports forge into the front of the activities of those in South Side who are athletically minded. Under the capable direction of Mr. Louis Briner and Mr. Burl Friddle the gym classes will direct their efforts for the next two weeks to learning and mastering the intricacies of the art of tumbling.

In collaboration with this type of work, marching and body-building exercises and calisthenics will also be stressed. When weather permits, however, classes will be held outside with softball, horseshoes, and other outdoor games being played. At the end of this period the annual gym class carnival will be held. This is a banner event on the gym class and intramural sports calendar because it opens competition in many and different contests which test muscular precision and skill.

Entries in the carnival are limited to participation in only four events, and at the end of the carnival the winners are decided in relation to the number of points the individual has garnered for himself in all of his events. There are many records at which to shoot; and if the carnival achieves the success it has had in former years, the competition will be strong and records will fall. Following are the events of the gym class carnival: standing broad jump, baseball throw, relay, volleyball serve, balancing test, running broad jump, thirty-yard dash, high jump, chinning, rope climb, medicine ball push, head stand, walking on hands, backward jump, Indian wrestle, and hand wrestle.

Later in the spring, the intramural golf, tennis, and horseshoe elimination tourneys will be held. The spring season will then be climaxed by an outdoor track meet.

Sportlights

With the advent of spring, major league baseball has taken over the reins of sport leadership; all sport lovers are focusing their eyes on the sixteen ball clubs which are training prodigiously in the South with an eye toward April 15, when their regular campaigns get under way.

A great many rookies have been taken to the training camps this year; a number of the clubs are depending on these youngsters to fill places vacated last year by veterans who found their aging limbs unable to carry them about the base paths.

Most promising among the new crop of first-year men are Joe Di Maggio, sensational Yankee outfielder; Jim Oglesby, Philadelphia Athletics' first sacker, who has been given the tremendous job of filling the shoes of Jimmy Fox; Claude Passena, left-handed finger with the Phillies who struck out 279 batsmen in the Western League last year; and Rudy York, hard-hitting infielder with the Detroit Tigers, who threatens to appropriate holdout Hank Greenberg's first base berth. These are a few of the most prominent of the new names you can expect to see in the box scores this season.

The Boston Red Sox, on whom Tom Yawkey has spent some $5,000,000, forms the big question mark in the American League this year. The question is whether a group of individual stars like Jimmy Fox, Doc Cramer, Lefty Grove, Eric McNair, Joe Cronin, and Heinie Manush can co-operate well enough to produce the pennant which Mr. Yawkey so ardently desires. If the aging Grove and Wes Farrell can obtain some much-needed support from Johnny Marcum and other junior members of the Sox pitching staff, it looks as if the Yawkey dream will at last come true.

Jr. Math Club To Stage Skate At Bell's Rink

Norm Budde, Dick Woehr, Clarence Helmsing Make Arrangements For Affair.

Party To Be Held Tomorrow Night

Twenty-five Cent Tickets
May Be Purchased From Any Member Or Adviser.

The Junior Math Club will hold its annual skating party, which was originally scheduled for last month, tomorrow evening at Bell's Rink on the Lincoln Highway at 7:45 o'clock.

Allen Garrison, president of the club, has announced that the same general committee will be in charge of the arrangements for this affair that made plans last month. This committee is composed of Norman Budde, Clarence Helmsing, and Richard Woehr. The club officers are also assisting with the plans, which were completed at a meeting of the committee on Monday evening in room 146.

The party was postponed from the February date because of a death in the family of the proprietor and director of the rink.

May Go In Bus

A skaters' bus will leave the main Calhoun Street entrance of the school at 7:30 o'clock to accommodate all the skating enthusiasts who have no means of transportation to and from the rink. Ten cents a round trip will be charged for this service. During the party, an attractive attendance prize will be awarded. The donor of the prize is being kept a secret until the gift is given. Favors will also be given to everyone who attends.

Tickets, which are priced at twenty-five cents, may be purchased from any member of the club or from Miss Mary Paxton in room 146. Any member who succeeds in selling five tickets will be presented a free admission pass.

Chaperones, Officers Named

Chaperones for the affair will be Miss Paxton, who has been the club's adviser since its organization, and Miss Crissie E. Mott, home economics teacher.

The officers of the club are Allen Garrison, president; Marian Roehrs, vice-president; Mary Jane Klomp, secretary; Dorothy Richter, treasurer; Helen E. Meyer, Inter-Club Congress representative, and Edward Wallace, sergeant-at-arms.

Jack Wainwright Back At School After Week's Illness

"Jack is back!" and students again trip the fantastic toe to good old room 50. As you know, "Jack" is none other than our own music instructor, Mr. Jack Wainwright, who has been confined to his home in Lagrange for more than a week. During his absence the activities of the department has been under the care of Mr. Wainwright's secretary, Ursula Morton, while the larger organizations have been discontinued. However this week he has been able to return to his duties as head of the music department.

As the columnist's "Grid Friday" toured the music room asking the pupils what they thought of the musical department without Jack, she received various answers, but they all missed his tall stories and original jokes, as well as his ability as their leader. Let the music-lovers tell you for themselves:

Eileen Meyer: "Everyone ran around like a chicken with his head cut off while Mr. Wainwright was gone."

Dick Rastetter: "Ain't worth a darn without him."

Olive Zahn: "No fun when Jack doesn't get mad and blow up."

Beverly Jane Bond: "The music department isn't worth a cent without Jack."

Georgianna Jane Jones: "The absence of music and Jack made South Side almost uninteresting."

Glenn Gregory: "The music department is a lot of fun as well as educational, but without Jack it seems dull and uninteresting."

Richard Dingley: "Some fun."

Margaret Rehm: "The old place wasn't the same without the maestro."

Jean Meyer: "Nice vacation."

Dick Snook: "Blank!"

T-Bone: "Without Jack here my musical idiosyncrasy Jack ability." (We think so, too.)

Vernon Gregory: "It was like a machine with a cog missing."

Thelma Pifer: "Peace and quiet, but it also gets lonesome without him."

Don Hickman: "Good vacation, but I could have used the practice."

Marielle Bantel: "There isn't much doing without Jack, in fact it didn't seem like school with him gone."

James Kelso: "Excellent."

William Nickerson: "Without music school is dead and without Jack there is no music."

Earle Paxton: "Blank."

Rodney Diehl: "The music department isn't worth anything without Jack."

Miss Ursula Morton (who seemed to show the most reaction as to Mr. Wainwright's absence): "It was terrible. I think I was the happiest person in the school when he came back."

UP AND DOWN OUR INCLINES

The boys in Mr. Chappell's Industrial Arts 4 classes have finished the equipment to be used at the school exhibit which is to be given at the Indiana Industrial Education Association Convention Friday and Saturday.

Boys in Mr. Chappell's drawing 6 classes are working on drawings which show the pipe layouts, connections, parts, and heating and water systems.

In Mr. Rothert's home room, the pupils were given a twenty-five word spelling exercise. The words were selected from cards that the pupils had filled out. June Wyland and Don Van Buskirk each received 96 percent, the highest grades in the class. The class average was 76 percent.

Home room 44 has completed programs in courses for next semester.

Mr. Rothert's home room has a new student, Dorothy Zetlitz, who comes from Tuley-Bancroft High School in Chicago.

The typing 2 students of Miss Covalt who made the big ten this week are: Helen Allen, who wrote for ten minutes at a rate of 54.5; Elizabeth Stoltz, 53.6; Verna Holtman, 47.4; Betty Jeanne Bond, 46.3; Wilma Butler, 45.7; Virginia Fathauer, 44.3; Margaret Smith, 44; Leona Menze, 43.5; Kathryn Shuminger, 43; and Francis Rygowski, 41.6.

The 12B and 11A home room pupils of Miss Oppelt are giving reports on different colleges to acquaint students with the requirements and fees. Charles Hart gave a report on Indiana University, and Ruth Eysenberg gave one on Purdue.

Miss Covalt has four students who have made a perfect ten-minute test since the last grading period. These are: Jeannette Braun, 26.4; Don Schaefer, 38.6; Hillis Weary, 35.7; and Phyllis Barrows, 38.7.

On a recent test held in Mr. Furst's junior business training class, Virginia Menze made 98; Dixie Hanna, 98; Della Rauner, 96; Marian Ehle, 94; Mildred Sephel, 94; Virginia Schiedler, 94; Edna Folz, 96; and Luella Liff, 94.

Miss Woodward's 10B Latin classes are studying the derivation of a list of eighty English words at the end of Part I of the Second Year Latin book.

Miss Perkins' fourth period French 4 class has been making maps of France to illustrate a story it has been reading.

The fact has been disclosed that Mr. Heine has just discovered a chart on bananas that has been hanging on the wall of his room for just ages!

Lonnie Kirts was the only person to make a grade above 90 in a sixth period, French 2 test given by Miss Perkins. Wilma Butler and Mary Michaels made 99 in a French 1 test the seventh period.

In a recent vocabulary test in Miss Schmidt's German 4 classes the following made a grade of 100 percent: Robert Brown, Gertrude Dannenfeldt, Frederick Meyers, Eric Beyer, and Verna Holtman.

Marjorie Suter Is Excellent As Lead Of "Ladies Of The Jury"

Marjorie Suter, instructor of drama at North Side, Central, and South Side, gave evidence of her skill in her portrayal of Mrs. Livingston Baldwin Crane in the play, "Ladies of the Jury." The play, which was produced by the Old Fort Players, was given Thursday, Friday, and Saturday nights.

All high school students, because of Miss Suter's having the lead, were given a special price of twenty-five cents for tickets.

Trials and deliberations of juries are sometimes boring, sometimes mildly interesting, and sometimes exciting. "Ladies of the Jury" due to the cleverness, patience, and convincing manner of Mrs. Livingston Baldwin Crane, gave the play a humor and enjoyment entirely all its own.

Miss Suter's ability to throw herself into the role she is portraying gave the play much zest and sparkle. The role of Mrs. Livingston Baldwin Crane was no easy one to act.

Consists of Two Acts
Being the society type, completely uneducated in the customs of the jury her portrayal might have been exaggerated, and overdone; but Miss Suter's acting was done without either of these.

The play consisted of two acts. The first act took place in the court room, where a Mrs. Gordon, who had been a chorus girl known as Yvette Yvet before her marriage, was being tried for the murder of her husband. Humorous and the entire act by the questions and various actions of Mrs. Crane. The second and third acts took place in the jury room. At the beginning of the jury session, the vote was 1-1 "guilty." Mrs. Crane being the only one to vote "not guilty."

Through her cleverness, tactfulness, patience, and understanding of human nature, Mrs. Crane succeeds in changing the opinions of all the jurors. Around this persuasion is based almost the entire play.

Characters Are Named
Mary Ebersole, who took the part of Mrs. Gordon, (Yvette Yvet) gave a fine portrayal of a woman brought to trial for murder.

Jay J. Presley, the obstinate foreman of the jury, added much to the play. In fact, each member of the large cast contributed in a commendable manner to the success of the play.

Although the actors gave an excellent portrayal of their own various parts, praise must also go to James Lewis Casady of South Bend, who competently directed the play. Appropriate settings were furnished by Merrill M. Matthews and his assistants.

Potluck Feature Of Service Club Meet

The newly organized Service Club held a potluck Tuesday at 5:30. The club is not fully organized, but Rosemary Lohman was chosen the chairman for this meeting.

Any student who is giving service to the school by working in the study hall or locker room, or by assisting the dean, principal, or some other teacher, is eligible for membership.

The menu for the potluck included potato salad, sandwiches, olives, fruit salad, pickles, and cake.

The group is now called the Service Club, but the members have decided to find a new name for it.

Harold Windmiller Vows He'll Devour Pork-Bean Dinners

Belles and wedding bells—March 5 was an eventful day for one of our well-known pedagogues, Mr. Harold Windmiller. The attractive young bride is Miss Genevieve Lynn of Bluffton, Indiana. Most hearty congratulations are due this newly-wedded couple.

But hear what the blushing groom replied to the inquiries of a nosey reporter. To the question as to how he liked married life he replied, "I think it's all right; that is, I just don't know what to say. I hardly realize I'm married. Maybe he was asked too soon. However, he regrets being a bachelor as long as he was. He continued, "I just didn't realize what happiness was ahead." As Mr. Windmiller seemed a little backward toward imparting knowledge on the subject, some of his friends were interviewed and proved very informative.

Mr. Friddle, with a solemn look that slowly changed to a broad grin, is responsible for the following: "It seems that Mr. Windmiller looks rather worn and haggard from the trials and tribulations of married life. At the wedding, he passed out a few two-for-a-nickel cigars and then almost died of a broken heart (or pocket-book) when something was said about dinner."

"Cowboy" Friddle sadly announced an invitation to a home-cooked dinner of pork and beans.

Mr. Walborn seemed eager to compliment his pal on the improvement recently shown in the latter's cooking ability, especially in making coffee. He related an incident previous to the marriage, when the groom desired to make coffee. Quite unconsciously pouring the water in the wrong place, thus clogging the percolator temporarily, he decided the percolator was no good. In a fit of anger, he proceeded to throw the meekly good coffee-maker in the ash-can. But he's learning, thanks to the new Mrs. Windmiller.

Mr. McClure says Mr. Windmiller is more jubilant and less depressed in these times of depression.

The students claim that Mr. Windmiller is less nervous and much more capable of imparting knowledge to them. All of which proves that a bird in the hand is worth two in a bush.

American University Proffers Scholarships

The American University, which is located in Washington, D. C., is offering to senior boys five honor college scholarships with full tuition for four years and fifty scholarships for men and women with half tuition for four years.

Anyone desiring information on either of these scholarships may write to the Committee on Scholarships at the American University Campus in Washington, D. C.

"Chu Chin Chow" Cast Work On Production

A regular meeting of Marionette Club will be held this evening at 3:20 in the workshop. At the meeting the members of the cast of "Chu Chin Chow" will resume their rehearsals for the production.

Work on the costumes, which are being planned by Laverne Boyce and Violet Garton, who comprise the wardrobe committee, will be begun by the club members who do not have parts in the play. The paper mache heads which are being made by club members will also probably be finished at the meeting.

A called meeting of the organization was held on Tuesday evening of this week to arrange financing of the club's Totem page. Kenneth Scott, president, presided.

Radio Pool Conducted
"Inklings," the school publication of Staples High School, Westport, Connecticut, conducted a radio pool. The Lucky Strike program was voted the most popular. Jack Benny's program was second, and Major Bowes' amateur hour was third.

Fifty Cent Campaign Is Now Under Way

The fifty-cent campaign was formally opened at the room agents' meeting held last Thursday afternoon. This meeting was in charge of the circulation manager. It was called for the purpose of making the final plans and notifying the room agents of the procedure to be gone through during the whole campaign.

The campaign will run for a period of two weeks and will be operated on the same basis of promissory notes and down payments, with the exception that the price for the rest of the semester is 50 cents.

South Side Latin Department Ties For First Honors In State

South Side's Latin department was informed recently that South Side had tied for first place in the total of contestants in the state Latin contest finals. These contests have been held for the past twelve years; however, South Side has enrolled in only six of them.

This is the highest honor the Latin department can receive, and South Side is very much honored to be so recognized in one of its departments. Dean S. E. Stout, head of the Latin department at Indiana University, remarked after the awards had been made, "This is certainly a most unusual occurrence to have one school send down four winners and to have each winner receive a medal. It is a great distinction and an honor for South Side High School."

Following are the groups of contestants and their successes when they went to the finals:

1924—Helen Clapesattle—Placed third in Cicero division.

Vivian Crates, Hilma Hixon, and Harriet Scott were the other three contestants for South Side.

1925—Pauline Baumgartner—Placed second in Cicero division.

Franklin Smith—Placed first in Caesar division.

Helen Clapesattle, Esther Hanning, and Olive Prime composed the remainder of this group.

1926—In this year no medals were won.

Pauline Baumgartner, Olive Prime, William Danneier, and Harold Morris were the contestants.

1927—Lawrence Rood—Placed third in advanced freshman division.

Marjorie Woolver—Placed third in Caesar division.

Dorothy Davenport, Francis Newby, and Esther Smith completed this squad.

Leaders' Club Holds Interesting Programs

At a recent meeting of the Leaders' Club, held at Plymouth Congregational church, an amateur program was held. Bruce Hunt of Central was introduced as a master musician.

Sally Reck and Gwen Horn rendered Chop-sticks in all its various tunes and tempos with pep and spirit. The names of three people were then called at random. They were required to give one-minute speeches on topics given them by the master of ceremonies, Bob Haruff. The three people were the president, Raymond Bixby, who spoke on mud; Robert Imadel who spoke on the moon; and Dorothy Wilson, who spoke on boots.

Gwen Horn then gave a monologue entitled, "When Will We Get to Stayville?"

The members of Leaders' Club have witnessed some other very interesting programs recently. Among the speakers were James Dern, a student at South Side, who talked on his trip to Labrador, and Miss Eleanor Smeltz, who talked on her travels of the past summer. Mr. Russell Earle, who is one of the advisers of Leaders' Club and is well known in Kiwanis circles, has been giving a series of lectures on Vocational Guidance.

Mr. Groetsema, a friend of Rev. Houser, pastor of Plymouth church, will speak next Sunday evening. The meeting will be held as usual in Plymouth Hall, Plymouth Congregational church at 8:30.

All boys and girls of high school age or over are cordially invited to attend. You need not be a member of Plymouth church to be a member of Leaders' Club. All young people are urged especially to attend the meeting next Sunday evening.

Good Reading Books Displayed In Library

The book selection committee of the South Side library each week chooses some book which they are sure the students will enjoy and puts it on display on top of the front book shelf. It is placed on a holder on which "You Will Enjoy This Book" is printed in large letters. This selection is made for the students benefit and they should take advantage of it.

April Fool Issue To Fake "Tank" Weekly

At the staff meeting held Tuesday afternoon, it was announced that the theme of the annual April Fool issue would be a burlesque of a small town paper. An international controversy has arisen over the issuance of a stamp by Argentina showing the Falkland Islands as a part of that country, although Great Britain has claimed the islands for more than a century. England has protested, but Argentina still contends these islands belong to her.

No man in the history of the United States had a more varied and illustrious career than Benjamin Franklin. No man, other than George Washington, is portrayed more often on U. S. postage stamps than Franklin.

Diplomat, scientist, author, inventor, and philosopher, this humble Philadelphia appears on the one-cent denomination of almost every issue of United States postage stamps, some twenty-five in all. Known best as one of the framers and signers of the Constitution and as the man who assured the success of the Revolution by enlisting the aid of France, he should be remembered by stamp collectors for one other thing.

This is his work as the first postmaster general for the Confederation, in organizing the American postal service. Of all the Franklin stamps ever issued, probably the most familiar is the type of 1902-03, which gives the dates of his birth and death, 1706 and 1790.

Last year was probably the greatest in postage history. A British dealer recorded 2,168 new issues throughout the world. A great many of these issues were commemorative. The silver jubilee of King George's reign accounted for nearly ten percent of the total.

Great Britain soon will have a new set of stamps commemorating the accession of Edward VIII to the throne. But this series will not be the first to illustrate the features of the new king. Newfoundland, as early as 1899, issued a series of stamps on one of which King Edward, then a stripling prince, was portrayed. Later his picture appeared three more times on Newfoundland stamps as the Prince of Wales.

Canada showed the present king's portrait first in 1932 in the issue commemorating the conference of Great Britain and its dominions in Ottawa and again in the Silver Jubilee series of 1935. But only the reigning king's head appeared on the two-cent stamps, which were in most common use.

Now Great Britain will issue a new King Edward stamp, probably for all denominations, as it is wont to do when a new ruler succeeds to the throne. A new two-cent King Edward stamp may also be produced by Canada and Newfoundland.

Leading collectors are preparing for the International Philatelic Exhibition to be held in Grand Central Palace, New York, from May 9 to May 17. Some of the greatest and costliest collections of the world will be represented.

Eleven Senior Students Have Roles In Play

"Skidding" Is 3-Act Comedy
By Aurania Rouverol To Be Given By 1936 Class.

Ann Abbott, Robert
Adams Are Leads

M. Crankshaw, T. Schuren-berg, Bob Harruff, Kenny
Scott Take Main Parts.

The annual senior play will be presented on April 17 and 18, Miss Marjorie Suter, dramatics teacher for the three high schools, recently announced. This year a clever three-act comedy called "Skidding" by Aurania Rouverol will be presented.

The play has eleven characters. Bob Harruff will play Judge James Hardy; Margaret Crankshaw, Mrs. Hardy; Kenny Scott, Grandpa Hardy; Clifford Schrom, Andy; Theo Schurenberg, Aunt Milly. Ann Abbott, who is the leading lady, will play the part of Marion Hardy; Bob Adams, who is the leading man, will play the part of Wayne Cranton III; Max, Martha Hobrock, Estelle Hardy Campbell; Louis Bonish, Mr. Stubbins; Gwendolyn Horn, a neighbor; and Ruth Adler, Myra Hardy Wilcox.

A rather odd coincidence occurred this year in the senior play. For the first senior play that Miss Suter directed, "A Prince There Was," she chose a Bob Adams as the leading man. This year her leading man is also a Bob Adams.

Bryce Minier will be business manager and Dorothy Crabill will be in charge of the ticket sale.

Dick Helm is stage manager. He will be assisted by Luther Prociase, Myron Jones, and Bryce Minier.

Helen Doenges is chairman of publicity.

Jo-Anne Smith, Maxine Mariotte, Helen Flaig, and Selma Liff will help with the prompting.

Due to the fact that spring vacation always comes before the play, Miss Suter says that the plays always go off more rapidly and well, since the most practices daily during spring vacation.

Philo Discusses Midwest Writers

Lillian Gunzenhauser, Miriam
McIntire, Helen Cox, Ruth Garrison, Martha Zelt Talk.

The poets and fiction writers of the Middle West were discussed at a regular meeting of the Philaletheian Club which was held Monday in the Greeley Room. Selma Liff, program chairman, related a few interesting facts about the literature and authors of the Middle West and then introduced Helen Cox, who gave biographies of James Whitcomb Riley and Eugene Field. One of Riley's poems "The Little Town of Tailholt" was then read by Lillian Gunzenhauser. Ruth Garrison discussed the younger poets of the Middle West, who include Carl Sandburg, Vachel Lindsay, and Edgar Lee Masters. All of these poets are well known and their writings are admired by many readers.

The writers of fiction were then discussed. Martha Zelt gave a very interesting biography of a fiction writer, Lewis Wallace, better known perhaps as Lew Wallace. The program was concluded when Miriam McIntire told about the lives of Hamlin Garland and Edward Eggleston.

The members of the club voted to have a certain amount of money drawn from the treasury to be given to the Red Cross fund. The nominating committee consisting of Betty Anne Davenport, Ann Hull, and Dorothy Crabill was announced by the president, Ruth Adler. These members will decide upon the candidates for next semester. Peggy Kilpatrick gave the Inter-Club Congress report and announced that the clean-up week will be held the week following spring vacation. Refreshments consisting of candy were served at the conclusion of the meeting.

Famous Historical Characters Came Into World In March

March may come in like a lion and go out like a lamb, but many famous dates are contained within that changeable month. Some of these had to do directly or indirectly with the history of the United States and some with international affairs.

We start the month with the birth of William Dean Howells, one of the greatest authors of his time. On March 3, 1848, Alexander Graham Bell was born. Where would we be now without the telephone and telegraph which his ingenious brain worked out? One day later, but one century earlier on March 4, 1789, the American Constitution went into effect. Events of March 5, 1816, added a famous figure to the literary world; for on that day Elizabeth Barrett was born. She became a famous woman poet and later married Robert Browning, the great English poet.

Came Michael Angelo
Another great figure was added to the Hall of Fame in the form of Michael Angelo, one of the greatest painters of the Renaissance. He was born on March 6, 1475.

Moving the hands of time up two centuries we come to that famous date, March 7, 1912, the day on which it was announced that Ronald Amundsen had discovered the South Pole. On the same date, March 7, but a century earlier, 1849, Luther Burbank, the famous horticulturist, was born. The Stamp Act, which caused such a stir in the British colonies in America, was passed on March 8, 1765.

On March 9, 1451 was born Americus Vesputius, the man for whom our continent was named. On the same fateful day of the month, but four centuries later, March 9, 1862, the famous battle between the Monitor and the Merrimack took place.

Also Andrew Jackson
One of the framers of our government, Andrew Jackson, was born on March 15, 1767. Another famous figure, one who became president of the United States was born March 16, 1751. He was James Madison. On March 19, 1860, William Jennings Bryan, one-time candidate for the presidency, was born.

One of the old masters, the great musician, Johann Bach, was born on March 21, 1685. On March 3, 1775, was made the famous oration of which every American boy and girl knows at least one line. The cast of characters included Mary Michaels as Evelyn DeVeer; Muriel Wetzel as Mrs. DeVeer; Janet Fish as Ralph Grayson; and Elaine Berstein as Herbert Van Der Slice. The stage managers included Arno Schelper and Richard Strassburg.

Travel Group Lends Support To Red Cross

Answers Flood Relief Call;
Girls Dressed As Nurses
Get Money From Students

Travel Club answered to the Red Cross distress call from the flood area by sending out girls, dressed as Red Cross nurses, to collect contributions from the South Side students. This money is to be used in aiding and feeding the stricken people in the flood area.

Miss Thorne appointed Eliza Bess Lucas to head the following Red Cross helpers: Anna Bremer, Betty Broxon, Helen Walbert, Helen Doenges, Ruth Roadcap, Laverne Boyce, Betty Rison, Lorraine Meyer, Martha Franz, and Lorraine Greiner. These girls wore a white head band falling down the back with a red cross about the forehead. Also these girls carried a white money can with the red cross symbol on the side and top. Miss Thorne asked the girl collectors to take the money no matter how small or how large.

The South Side Red Cross helpers started out with the grim determination to bring in no less than twenty dollars by 3:15 Tuesday. When the girls met that evening they had nineteen dollars and fifty-one cents. The girls did not want to carry this sad tale to Miss Thorne since they all had promised to bring in twenty dollars. One of the girls said that she would make up the rest of the quota by contributing forty-nine cents more. This campaign continued through Tuesday and Wednesday. The girls hoped to have forty dollars in by Wednesday evening.

Societas Romana Discusses Mars

Mr. Wilburn Wilson Gives Talk
On War; Don Schafer, Robert Harruff Speak About Mars.

Mr. Wilburn Wilson of the social science department was the featured speaker at the last meeting of Societas Romana. His topic was "War," which was in keeping with the subject of the meeting, "Mars," who was the god of war of the ancient Greeks and Romans.

Mr. Wilson gave various statistics to show how closely war is connected with the word Mars, which originated from this Greek god. He said that the five most important wars of the United States started in the spring.

Worship Mars
"How much does it cost to worship Mars?" Mr. Wilson asked. He stated that this business of worshipping the god has become a very costly one. Using some very convincing illustrations, he then took time to enumerate just how much it costs to undertake a war. He also told of the effect of wars on the people of a country. In closing he discussed the impending war of annihilation.

In addition to Mr. Wilson's topic, Don Schafer told about Mars in general and the weapons of war. In this he told about the weapons of war which Mars used. He also told of the various gods of Mars to the other gods. This god was especially hated by Jupiter, the king of the gods. Minerva was also very hateful toward Mars, doing everything in her power to harm him.

Others Speak
Bob Harruff's subject was "Mars in the World Today." Bob enumerated all the terms of English which originated from the name Mars. Margaret Dickover, chairman of the program, introduced the various speakers. Refreshments consisting of Mars candy bars were then served.

Announcement was made of the committees for the next meeting. The chairman of the program will be Walter Weaver. The members of his committee are: Mac Persing, Catherine Hause, Grace Nelson, Virginia Pat-hauer, Louise Gerding, and Virginia Greiner.

Puppets Of Wood Are Completed At Meeting

Marionette Club will hold another regular meeting this evening in its workshop for the purpose of completing its puppets for the annual production, "Chu Chin Chow," which will be presented in the study hall within the next month or two.

The puppets, which this year are being manufactured from wood composition material, were finished at the special work meeting of the organization which was held on last Thursday evening in the workshop. Heads, which are being constructed from papier mache, will be completed at the next meeting, according to Kenneth Scott, chairman of the art committee.

Laverne Boyce, who is in charge of the costumes for the committee, stated that all of the wardrobe for the play will be completed within the next few weeks. Rehearsals, which were started several weeks ago, will be continued at the meeting tonight.

Committee Will Select New N. H. S. Members

Mr. Herman Makey has announced that the National Honor Society committee, of which he is chairman, will meet on April 15, to select the new members. Although no definite date has been set, Mr. Makey said that Tag Day will probably be two weeks later.

Bonish Sprains Ankle
Louis Bonish, Jr., is using a crutch, because he sprained his foot playing basketball in the back yard. We can't tell you exactly how it happened, but they say he was trying Sitko's stunt of "throwing them off his ear."

We think he must have been showing some feats of skill to Dorothy Douglas. Whatever it was, it will forever remain a deep, dark secret. A speedy recovery,

Senior Girls Get College Awards

Virginia Greiner, Ruth Fowler,
JoAnne Smith Have Received Scholarships To MacMurray.

Virginia Greiner, Ruth Fowler, and JoAnne Smith, three prominent seniors, were recently informed that they had been offered scholarships to MacMurray College which is the Illinois Women's College at Jacksonville. Virginia's scholarship is for art, while Ruth's and JoAnne's are for a regular liberal arts course. All of the scholarships are for $200, which covers the tuition for one year.

These girls were chosen from a list given the college by Mr. Snider; then they were interviewed; and the successful ones were announced. There was no test taken. While in South Side, Virginia Greiner was a member of G. A. A., U. S. A. president, and vice-president, Latin vice-president, So-Si-Y, Travel, Philo, Art, Booster, Totem, Times, 1500. She won first in the Latin county contest. She is on the Senior social council. Ruth Fowler was a member of So-Si-Y, Philo, Math-Science, Social Science, Travel secretary, and Junior Math. Students Favorably Impressed With Idea Of Picture Camera

Students were asked for their opinions about the sound motion picture camera to be purchased with money received from the sale of magazines published by the Crowell Publishing Company.

The following replies were given:
Ruth Goeglein: I think visual education will be very helpful, but I don't see how it could help everybody.
Reginald Gerig: I think it will be an educational help to the school.

Ruth Blue: I think it will be swell; and it will be so different that it can be effective.
Ruth Garrison: Since most people can get an idea more easily through their eyes than their ears, it will make studying less work and more effective.

Don Helm: I think it will be very beneficial to the student body and it will tend to increase the students' interest in school work.
Charlotte Kern: I think it's a pretty nice idea.

Mary Louise Helms: Now they're really talking.
Lillian Gunzenhauser: I think it

Victor Talking Machine Is Award Offered To School
If Campaign Is Success.

Subscription Drive
Begun On Friday

Fleet, Army Team Names;
Admiral Benner Is Navy
Head; Gen. Wilson, Army.

Social Science's magazine campaign started off with a bang! The campaign was officially begun with an assembly last Friday morning. Manuel Rothberg, president of Social Science introduced the speakers.

Miss Dorothy Benner, representing the Navy, gave an excellent pep talk to her fleet. Mr. Wilburn Wilson, representing the Army, gave a pep talk to his legions. Mr. Snider told about the display of prizes which are to be found in the front hall, and how essential it was to the school to have the victor talking machine. Mr. Albert J. of the Crowell Publishing Company, told about the many worthy features of the magazines.

Club Participating
All of the Social Science members are helping to make the campaign a success. Committees which are helping are: Louis Bonish, chairman of publicity; with Bob Locke, Bob Harruff, Catherine Allendorph, and Verna Holtman assisting him. Betty Wolf, chairman of the auditing and typing committee, is assisted by Eliza Bess Lucas, June Haeger, and Ruth Rose. Bryce Minier and Manuel Rothberg are aides to "Admiral" Benner; and Myron Jones and Robert Adams are aides to "General" Wilson.

The talk-moving picture machine which will be purchased by South Side if the magazine campaign is successful, was demonstrated to several hundred students Monday and Tuesday in the Voorhees Room. All of the students who were not pepped up about the campaign formerly, came out of the room very enthusiastic, and thoroughly convinced that South Side's most urgent need is a talking picture machine.

Machine Is Wonderful Opportunity
It should be very easy for South Side to get the machine, for if each student gets only one subscription the goal of six hundred dollars worth of subscriptions will be reached. In a special bulletin on Tuesday morning, Mr. Snider stated that the Crowell Publishing Company has given the school a wonderful opportunity to secure the machine, and that this opportunity should not be lost. It was also pointed out in the bulletin that without the magazine campaign the project of securing the machine would be an almost impossible task. Besides helping the school to get a picture machine, if you get more than two subscriptions, you will receive valuable additional prizes.

In addition to the prizes listed in your subscription book, the following cash prizes will be awarded: $5 to the senior who sells the most subscriptions, $5 to the student who sells the most in the school, $3 to the next highest student, $2 to the third highest individual. Also, season tickets will be given to the highest student in each junior, sophomore, and freshman class, and an ice cream treat to the highest home room. Remember that renewals count as much as new subscriptions. Turn in your money to your home room captains, who in turn should turn in the money to their respective team headquarters. The Army headquarters is the men's rest room and the Navy headquarters is the lady's rest room.

The girls who will have charge of the program are Lorraine Meyer, Dorothy Young, Janet Fish, Irene Becker, Mary Anne Park, Margie Boerger, Virginia Wood, Mary Brannon, Jane Warming, Virginia Greiner, Ruth Fowler, Catherine Allendorph, and Virginia Baumgartner.

A Sad, Sad Fable About A Dog's Life, With A Moral

Once upon a time there was a little dog named Fido. Fido lived a very happy life, with always enough good food and a nice warm bed; for he belonged to a rich master, named Mr. Jones.

One day Mr. Jones decided to reward Fido for his loyalty, so he gave him a platinum collar to replace Fido's old leather neckpiece. Fido obediently wore the collar for a few weeks.

Then one day Mr. Jones noticed that Fido no longer wore the collar. He found the collar down in the coal bin with some of Fido's bones. Moved by curiosity, Mr. Jones offered Fido his choice of a nice juicy ham bone and the platinum collar. To his immense surprise, the dog immediately and without hesitation took the bone.

The moral of this fable, dear children, is that the precious things in life are for those who can treasure them.

"Now We Are Engaged In A Great Civil War"—Anyhow, We Want Movies!

South Side, the war is on!
 "Admiral" Benner and "General" Wilson have touched it off with enthusiastic pep talks to their respective teams, the Navy and the Army. The Social Science Club, as sponsor, has succeeded in its efforts to procure Mr. Albert Gray's and the Crowell Publishing Company's backing in the project. Now the fate of the subscription campaign lies in your laps, students. Do you want the Victor talking picture machine for your enjoyment and pleasure? If you do, get out and stack up those magazine subscriptions. The goal of six hundred dollars worth of subscriptions is not a large one, but it will demand all of your loyalty and support. South Side's reputation for heartedly backing and successfully propagating such campaigns as this is at stake. You are the Atlas of this campaign. Its support lies upon your shoulders.

If You Are To Succeed, Each Defeat Will Make You Wiser, As Well As Sadder

When a man undertakes a task, he naturally enough hopes to succeed. Yet perhaps he little realizes that he might profit more if he failed. The word "might" fits in that sentence because whether or not failure is profitable depends on the individual. Certainly success is glorious, and defeat means shattered dreams and unhappiness. Yet in many cases it would be better to fail, because success is often a drug that swells the ego and gives a false sense of self-satisfaction and security; while failure has a leveling influence, tending to counteract conceit and bring the individual down to earth again.

It is as natural to fail as it is to succeed, because wherever there are two sides, only one can win. So it's not so much whether you win or lose; but that if you lose, you analyze and remove the cause. The successful man, instead of crying or alibi-ing when he fails, reasons back to the cause of the failure and then isn't content until the cause is removed.

A wise man is he who originated the saying, "Profit by your mistakes."

Carrying On

With Peggy Kilpatrick and Bill Korte

"Gangway neighbor, here comes the Camel Caravan once again, brought to you with the good will of the Ladies' Aid Society for kindness to Dumb Animals.

"With the scent of spring we open our show with the lovely voices of our own Dean Janis (Billie Mauk) and Kenny Sargent (Bill Schaffer) singing 'Red Sails in the Sunset' (Dick Snook's ears), accompanied by Glen Grey (Jack Wainwright) and his Casa Loma Band. Next is the knitting quartette: Hobrock, Bennett, Chappell, and Turner, who not only make music with their needles, but are really knitting long red flannels for the poor, dear, Ethiopians.

"Ah, folks, the treat of your life, our own McGillicuddy (Cliffie Schromie) will turn time back and portray Caesar singing 'Goodie-Goody'—attired in a toga (we hope). Time out for Camel's star reporter Ted Husing (Warren Zeit) who will tell us his personal secret, how he washes his hair in the family washing machine.

"Relax now folks, for the final feature of our show, your bedtime story. Sit far back in your chair, Lights Out, and open all your ears to the highlights of this evening's performance. Mothers, fathers, brothers, sisters, aunts, uncles, friends, Romans, countrymen, and dear little children, our distinguished city of Fort Wayne has turned Chinese. We have just boarded a junk (boat) and are peacefully sailing down the Sainteg Josephi-kong River, which is very kwang (yellow) when we sight the king (town) of Fti. Wayneong. Ancient ancestors once built the pagoda (tower) of the Licolnang, placing in it, as its keeper, Johneg Bexoo, who with his flower maiden G. Martinwong, have been there for several hundred years.

"When we feel that we are once again on the terra, we decide to tour the highest place of learning, Southside Highbong Schoolie. Ah, wa, we are in luck for we recognize many of the shining faces. Connellai and Dickieong are still playing hido-go-seeko among the bam-ooo; Reangi and McConnellaig are playing with the ricksha (a fifty-fifty proposition, you push while I ride), and here are Stormego and Gunzenhausertong trying to handle their noonday meal with chop-sticks. Let us now enter the school under the direction of our coolie guides, B. Lockeiki, A. Kettleig, B. Millerwong, and J. Sweetwong, and the first thing that attracts our eye is the physical laboratoryea where we see B. Feichterag, E. Neffo, A. Hullo, and A. Abbetongwong hustling and bustling in their bright colored komonos.

"When we enter the music department we are enchanted by the beautiful noises on wood and we find B. Adamsa and M. Jonesong daintily playing with sticks between their toes on sacred cherry wood. Down the hall comes the pitter-patter of small Chinese feet—bound to be small—and R. Garrisonnang, H. Kelseytwog, D. Cleaverlphong, and E. Warrenjatzon perform for us their native dance. We are sorry we shall have to leave without having tea with the Honorable Principaleeg Sniderong, but since he has served as principal of the institution for several decades (and if he were to part, many would commit harikara) he often takes long vacations and now he is aboard his junk in the tropical waters of the Sainteg Maryseeg Kong.

"As we sail out of the harbor we notice that the heavens are getting dark and we close the porthole for tonight, hoping that our Chinese friends are as happy that spring is here as we are.

"Good night and g'wan to bed."

Scribnibbles

On Styles

Style is the trademark of society. It stamps itself upon almost every phase of life. The scribe writes of it; the poet sings about it; the orator speaks with it; grandfathers condemn it; and flappers have it. It is an element which has existed throughout all the generations of the past, and will exist as long as man lives.

How hard it is to live in our polished "world of styles." How it handicaps originality. The only ones who dare to be original are the designers and the other style mandarins (not mannequins). Nowadays one hardly dares to wiggle the little finger for fear that such an act will be considered "inharmonious with the customs of the time." Every day we cast many of our most brilliant ideas "into the gutter" simply because we're afraid they won't conform with "set standards." People won't do this or they won't do that because "it isn't a conventional thing to do" or "it really isn't being done, you know." Style is the millstone which hangs on the neck of originality!

At present the rapidity at which the style is going from the sublime to the ridiculous is breath-taking. Take the case of this season's new hats for instance. There are some of the dizziest looking creations ever seen. Looking at a girl wearing one of these hats from above, one feels that she's hiding under a manhole cover. The only difference is that the real thing (manhole cover) is not decorated with flowers. The other night at our house, a funny incident happened, which comes to my mind now. We were playing a new Ted Lewis record on the radio-phonograph and after it had finished, one of the men took it off and held it up where everybody could see it. Then he proceeded to balance it on his head. Assuming a suitable pose, he smiled and said, "Behold the newest thing in spring hats, now on sale at all leading milliners." This was quite exaggerated, but everybody agreed he had come pretty close to the real thing.

The Big Fight Is On

Drawn by Paul Kennedy

Thru The Wringer

Dorothy Voght has the conception that Dick Garton is a big handsome brute. It must be love, because no one could make an error as serious as that. ... Bob Strawbridge will have to pick less dangerous girls to date. Wanda Bauer surely is giving him the run-around. ... We wonder what the elaborate plans are that Delilah Shaffer and Kenneth Simmers have made for the coming summer. They must have the "green-eyed monster" living with them. ... Betty Lou Geake and Bob Hodell have been seeing a lot of each other on various occasions. And why not?

Alva Sholt has a new case. This time it is none other than Laura Floyd, and it is beginning to look serious. ... Helen Pape has been seen boxing a round with Bob Boxberger, but such is life. ... The cute couple of the week is the Terry King-Gwen Horn two-some. They seem to enjoy the company of each other, and who can blame them. ... June Close is putting it over on Mary Wagner, and George Castle seems willing. ... Jean Hinchman is getting quite friendly with Margaret Ream in German class. Now children, pay close attention to your lessons.

Someone must be on very friendly terms with Kenton Dickiey, because two notes came in stating that the author of them would like to see a fruit cake any nuttier than Kent. Maybe the unknown person deserves help on his helpless search. ... Dick Orr has forgotten his S. P. of the past, and now it is a fair damsel from Central. ... The Korte-Kilpatrick affair is still going on, but Bill didn't see Peg on St. Patrick's Day because he didn't want to Kilpatrick. But who can blame him?

CURRENT COMMENT

By Margaret Gross

They Kept Awake—And How War Dogs Still Grow Literature No Antitoxin

HEROES—In the recent flood perils in Pennsylvania and other eastern states, dozens of amateur radio operators, some of whom were high school boys, played an interesting and heroic part in directing rescue and relief. Hour after hour these operators, "standing by" without sleep or rest, sent minute-by-minute messages to an anxious nation, while newspapers were unable to function, and telephone, telegraph, and commercial radio equipment was out of commission.

TREATY—A new international naval treaty has been signed by representatives of the United States, Great Britain, and France. This treaty is far less restrictive than either the Washington treaty of 1922 or the London naval agreement of 1930. It contains several "escape clauses," whereby those who have signed it may be released from its provisions in the event of "exceptional circumstances." Unlike certain previous naval agreements, two important world powers, Japan and Italy, do not participate in this new "understanding," while Japan has signified her dissatisfaction with the new pact's terms. However, it may be viewed hopefully in that it seems to have introduced a "breathing spell" in the current alarming drift toward a new warship-building "race."

ANTIDOTE—Justice Panken, of Brooklyn, has been in the habit of administering "doses of literature" as an antidote for crime in cases of offenders brought before him in that city's Children's Court. His far-fetched idea has been that compulsory reading would somehow benefit wayward boys. The Brooklyn Public Library sensibly criticizes the magistrate for his "amateurish prescription," and, while believing that good books do tend to counteract criminal tendencies, nevertheless protests against the idea of "punishment through books." The chief librarian is right when he says that "reading profits when it pleases." To impose reading as a "penalty" in court is to gain nothing more than publicity for the judge making the assignment.

Our Gift From Rome

Some of the English words that we use daily are derived from cor, cordis, the Latin word for heart. Many such words are made up with various prefixes. For example, we have accord, from ad+cor, meaning to bring to agree; discord from dis+cor, meaning to disagree; and record from re+cor, meaning to preserve in heart.

An accordian is a musical instrument having a set of bellows, which force wind upon metallic reeds to produce heart (harmonious) tones.

Cordate, meaning heart shaped, and correspond, meaning to answer in character or heart, are formed from the same root.

FANMAIL—The postman is kept busy delivering two letters daily to Billie Mauk's domicile. One travels all the way from Purdue, the other trips happily from I. U.

COMPOSER—Listen, you guys! If you get stuck writing a missive of love to "her," let Bill Schaffer write it for you. His are really angelic. Yow-suh, yow-suh!

DARN THEM—Just think, the "Reader's Digest" had an article in their delightful book headed Ships and Shoes. The copy cats!

GOO-GOO—Oh, here come those darling, itsy-itsy Dionne quintuplets. Wait a minute, they're rather big for two year olds. Oh! my mistake, this is the fun fest. Just the faculty in its second childhood.

PLEASE permit one pun: If you want to find Bob Miller, X Mauks the spot. That's twice she's in this week. Can it be those "doe eyes"?

LOVE?—Charles Worden casts soulful eyes at June Rupert. See Boll-man, what are you in his young life?

GRRRR—Walter Weaver gazed jealously at Allen Faux and Margie Howell while they were dancing so gracefully (need we say when?) He was remembering the times he and she Harrison Hill. Them was the days!

Waggin' Tongues

Oh hum, another day, and we sit diligently thinking, or trying to think, of some dirt. As we gaze about the Times Room at all of the bright and shining faces, it makes us think that with such goodly faces there could be no dirt. But even the best of us can be wrong, because it seems that Vera Ellinger and Neal Ruppert's budding romance is never going to bloom. They have decided that going steady is not the life for them.

Clifford Schrom and Phil Green tell us that congratulations are in order. They have joined the ranks of those going steady. Such a business! Even our younger generation is becoming tangled in this horrible net. (Yes, Margie Lou Wickes, that means you.)

The two Scheele girls ought to go out for track, because it seems that all of the track men have gone out for them. Ed Miller is leading the chase. Robert Adams tells us that walking is his favorite sport. Maybe that's why he walks home every night with Helen Kelsey. How about it, Bob?

Mildred Hoff loves music, and she beats time to it. That does not seem to be the only thing that she is beating time to. We are told that she is beating Crabill's time with Wilson.

Dick Helm has been studying the life of Casanova. He has tried every other way to get Forestine Valentine and in desperation thinks the ways of Casanova might do. Don't be discouraged, Helm. If you don't succeed the first time, try, try, again.

The beat joke of the week which was submitted by Ray Ballweg:

Student: "Potassium cyanide, because you're dead as soon as it touches you."

Wise Guy: "Wrong; embalming fluid because you're dead before it touches you."

The White Elephant Of Cochrane High

By Eleanor White and Laverne Boyce

CHAPTER II

Dick Hamilton, gazing at the floor intently, strode down the long, half-lit corridors of Cochrane High. Each time his searching eyes caught sight of a stray piece of paper, his heart leaped joyfully; but, after scrutinizing each piece, he sank into a sea of despair.

"How could I have been so darned careless," he upbraided himself. "To lose a paper with the plan for winning the game from the Dragons is the height of imbecility!"

Then, as he approached the last turn in the corridor, he stopped abruptly and cried, "Hurrah, I know where it is! I'll bet I dropped it on the rifle range when I was going through my pockets for shells this afternoon. I sure hope it's there!"

He covered the territory between the hall and the basement almost as quickly as if he were wearing seven-league boots; then, groping his way to the light switch, he turned on the light.

In his anxiety to find the paper, he did not even seem to notice that the door to the room housing the heating apparatus for the showers in the stadium swung stealthily shut as he neared it. Dick hurried to the rifle range and began to search for his paper.

Soon he had the paper and tucked it away carefully in his pocket. Then, he picked up several of his used shells, thinking he would examine them under a microscope to see the markings from his rifle, and turned out the light in the rifle range. Then whistling a merry tune, he proceeded along the passageway.

As he reached the basement stairs, he had a peculiar feeling that he was being watched; so he decreased the volume of his whistling until it seemed to fade away in the distance. Silently, he stole back within a few feet of the heating-room for the unused showers (Continued on page 3)

Jabbercadabra

Ink Splashes

"So you are the fancy-signer-of-names, eh?"

"Yeah, that's me, all right (write). Get the pun?"

"Sure, I get it. But tell me, Mr. Pentwirler, how is it that you started signing your name the way you do?"

"Well, you see, it was like this.

When I was a little scribbler, I saw my great uncle sign his name as they always used to do. (You see, our family has been fancy-signing for years back.) He picked up the pen, raised his arm over the paper, calculated about a minute for the correct position over the paper, paused for a deep breath, and, suddenly releasing his arm, began to write a series of swift dashes, loops, etc. And say—it was beautiful the way he did it, for in a while the paper was so full of confusing lines that you could hardly see the printing underneath it. From then on, it became my life ambition to sign my name like that. Why, I've practiced for hours going through those very movements he did. I even changed my name, which was Joe Henry Blot, to Cornelius Alexander Pentwirler, because I wanted something longer to sign."

Did any of those fellows ever beat you?"

"Nope, they never did. You see they never had the right technique. They never had the ole ink to come through. I was blots ahead of them."

"Just what is your method?"

"Well, first I get a large quill pen to make it look good; then I clear a large space for elbow room—no, I don't write with my elbows but—to continue, I then put my pen down to a little preliminary swirling, and, after I'm going good, I start in on my name. I go through all the dizzy loops and turns I can think of while doing it and then after I am through, which is about ten minutes later, I underline it a half dozen times."

"What's your chief pleasure in doing this fancy signing, anyway?"

"Oh, I get the biggest thrill when, after I'm through, everybody asks me what my name is. I consider that I have triumphed when nobody can read my name."

"Well, now to end this splotchy interview, tell me what has been the biggest disaster ever to befall you."

"Disaster? Ah, yes! There was one that happened that was terrible and horrible. Cruel fate! It was like this: once after I had signed my name, a young man looked down at the paper for a moment and then said, 'Oh, I see you are Mr. Pentwirler.'"

Cooking Classes Take Up Food Study, Home Management

Importance Of Home Ec Course Is Emphasized By Miss Lucy Mellen

The following comments on one phase of home economics, cooking, was written by Miss Lucy Mellen, who teaches that subject and also has charge of South Side's efficient cafeteria:

"We may live without poetry, music, and art;
 We may live without conscience and live without heart;
 We may live without friends;
 We may live without books;
 But civilized man cannot live without cooks."
 —Owen Meredith.

"Perhaps no subjects of high school work are needed or used longer than those concerned with food study and household management. Our girls and boys are the future homemakers. Home economics subjects must be planned to create interest and arouse a desire in these pupils to establish homes of which the community may be proud.

"The rearing of children, the responsibility of the family's nutrition, the management of home duties, the care when illness comes—all are the heritage of the woman in the home; and to her also falls that great task of handling and spending wisely 86 percent of the family income.

"In teaching the work to fit pupils somewhat for the foregoing duties, the first essentials stressed in home economics classes are cleanliness and sanitation; secondly, the necessity for order—to have a place for everything and everything in its place; and third, to train pupils to cooperate and work with others. Then, nutrition study must be directed toward the fact that one must have a healthy body to have a good mind; therefore planning of and preparation of balanced meals are an important part of the laboratory activity. We know that one learns by doing; thus an attempt is made to develop some skill by having the girls plan, cook, and serve simple family meals. This work calls for the use and care of much equipment and leads to such related house duties as the care of the home, laundry, and buying. While the class work is teaching this manipulative content; it consequently brings out the intellectual, cultural, and social content of home studies. The training develops character qualities as: to teach pupils to think, to be dependable, unselfish, fair and courteous, and to have initiative in doing.

"Finally, these courses in home economics are planned to follow the vocational trend of education. Because of the many phases of this part of the curriculum, pupils could well choose from the many fields of occupations that one for which a knowledge of home economics, in its wide range, will fit them. Besides the natural role of homemaker, the following related occupations are interesting and worthwhile as a means of making a living: nurse, dietitian, cafeteria or tea-room manager, nursery manager, food demonstrator, food chemist, household equipment demonstrator, house decorator, food advertiser, food statistician, manager of hotel and club dining rooms, chef, cateress, and home rooms, chef, cateress."

Topic Of French Meeting Is Foods

French Cooking Art Discussed By Natalie Brennan; Two Recipes Given By Members.

The second meeting on French foods was held by the French Club on Thursday, March 26, in the Voorhees room. The program was in charge of Maria Haven. Natalie Brennan discussed the art of French cooking, naming the various types of eating places popular in France today, and giving several recipes which showed the great patience of the French chefs in their cooking. At the conclusion of her talk, she passed a number of menu cards which had been collected from famous French restaurants and from French eating places in New Orleans.

The recipes for several French foods were then given. Lillian Gable gave the recipe for pecan brioches, which is a delicious French cookie. Violet Garton presented the recipe for Louisiana orange wine, very inexpensive to make, but very delicious. Facts about creole candies were also told. Marion McAttee and Marjorie Mitten then presented a little French playlet which portrayed a typical scene in a French restaurant.

Miss Olive Perkins, club adviser, related some of the experiences she has had in New Orleans and told of several French dishes which she had eaten there. She told about the balloon potatoes and the baked Alaskan, two dishes for which the chefs in New Orleans are famous. As a conclusion to the meeting, several French songs were sung.

Portraits of Abraham Lincoln appear on seven different issues of United States stamps. There also appears on the 1922-26, $1.00 value stamp, a picture of the famous Lincoln Memorial in Washington.

This is not quite one sixth as many as were issued for George Washington, or a little better than one fourth the number issued for Benjamin Franklin. It so happens that these eight stamps are more or less of a memorial to the Civil War President.

The first of these Lincoln stamps came out less than a year after his death in 1866. Another was issued three years later and was reissued in 1875. A third issue came out in 1870-71, and three years later in 1874, another Lincoln stamp was printed. It wasn't until twenty years later that a fifth stamp was printed.

In 1909, on the centennial of Lincoln's birth, a 2-cent carnation stamp was issued in his honor, and in 1922-26, on the regular issue, a 3-cent stamp carried Lincoln's portrait, and on the $1.00 issue was the Lincoln Memorial.

Last new issues portraying the late King George V are expected from Nigeria and the island of St. Lucia, British Colonies. On the new pictorial series planned for Bermuda may appear the first King Edward VIII stamp.

If you go fishing in the dark waters of Liberia, you will very likely get scared out of your wits if you are not prepared for the most odd "mud-skipper" that inhabits the waters of this part of Africa. It's a fish all right, but it can get up out of the water and skip along over the mud and wet sands as agile as a lizard.

This peculiar fish can be found in other parts of the world, in Asia especially. The "mud-skipper" is classed with the goby, its eyes are raised, its fins are very strong, and its body is built like an airplane fuselage. It can skim over the surface of the water with great speed, and chases its prey of insects among rocks, leaves and weeds. If you place the "mud-skipper" in clear water it will drown itself.

The stamp showing this strange fish was issued by Liberia in 1918 as one of a series portraying the countries resources.

The new Czechoslovakian issue is to have portraits of both Thomas G. Masaryk, retired president, and Dr. Eduard Benes, new chief executive. The "Czechs" are planning another pictorial series for this summer.

Millions of years ago, a large mass of molten rock forced its way up through the interior of the earth, cooled slowly just below the surface, and crystallized into a hard and mineral-dotted granite. This harder surface was revealed when rivers cut away the much softer surface.

Thus arose the mighty canyon of the Yosemite Valley. Many years later, glaciers born of the ice age chiseled deeper into this rock, until now the valley digs its way more than 3,000 feet below the top of the original stone.

Standing majestically as on guard over this steep canyon is "El Captain," stalwart rock of granite rising a sheer 3600 feet above the Merced river, its summit 7,664 feet above sea level. This stately cliff was the first natural masterpiece to be pictured on the series of stamps issued in 1934 by the United States to publicize the beauty of America's national parks. It is on the one cent denomination.

in the stadium, which the students called "the White Elephant," and stood waiting tensely.

Just as he began to feel that he was making a fool of himself, he stiffened again. A light was plainly visible under the door, and a low but coarse voice was issuing orders in the room.

Not knowing quite what he was doing, the boy impulsively stooped and arranged three empty shells close to the wall about six inches south of the door. Then, squaring his shoulders, he took a step forward; but someone lunged at him out of the darkness and caused him to fall heavily to the floor.

For a moment the two, clutching each other, rolled over and over on the floor. Then the door to the heating room swung open; and a group of strange, foreign-looking men peered out at the fight with interest. Dick, managing to free himself from the other's grasp, jumped to his feet and saw, to his amazement, that his opponent was Schmitt, the janitor, who was crouching for another lunge at Dick. In self-defense, Dick swung his arm to give his opponent a good blow on the chin; but one of the strange men intercepted the blow and tripped Dick, so that he fell once more to the floor, striking his head on a sharp corner of the heating room door and losing consciousness.

A splitting headache heralded Dick's return to his senses; and, as he looked inquiringly about him, he saw that he was in an underground way of the cave "Well for Pete's sake," he ejaculated. "By the looks of this place, it's part of the basement of the school. But—surely I've never been here before—Now I wonder—Say! could this be—why it must be the shower room in the stadium!—It's the White Elephant!"

As he glanced about him, he could remember that, when the school board had started to build the high school just before the depression, the plans called for a shower room under the seats in the stadium for the football and track teams. It was to be a very spacious and convenient place with showers, dressing rooms, storage space, and all sorts of other unusual features. There were two entrances, one just a few yards from the track, and the other, by way of the rifle range in the school, through a tunnel running under the street to the stadium.

He remembered, too, that the depression had caused the school board to cut down on the cost of the school and so this shower room had never been finished.

His eyes grew wide as he saw the huge piles of heavy crates piled up all around the room. He saw two men sitting on empty boxes in the middle of the room under a glaring, unshaded light. They were leaning over a sheet of paper covered with figures and were arguing in harsh tones.

Silently, Dick began to edge closer to them; but, as he rose to his feet, his head encountered a sharp corner; and he dropped to the floor with a howl of pain.

The shorter of the two men turned his flat, ugly dark face toward Dick and said, "Look here, kid; you'd better be quiet and stay put if you want to keep healthy. I get annoyed easy, see?" he added, thumping his suspiciously bulging pocket.

Dick stared at him silently, taking a mental note of his appearance. The man was quite short, about five feet three, and had piglike little brown eyes, a partially bald head and cauliflower ears. He wore a very expensive-looking tan suit.

Slowly Dick rose and said, "Why are you keeping me here? Who are you, anyway?"

"Never mind, buddy; and don't get too inquisitive. You're just on a little visit; so sit down and make yourself comfortable."

Dick sat down again and began to digest those terse words. He reflected on the situation as clearly as he could with a sickening headache.

After a long time, the short man rose; and, with a meaning nod toward Dick, he vanished behind a pile of boxes.

The other man turned his dark face toward Dick. He was a negro of medium height, thin but muscular, and with deep-set crafty eyes in a long narrow face.

Dick ventured a question. "Say, mister, how about a little water for my head. It's kinda bloody and hurts like the dickens."

The man grinned and said, "Sure, you can have some water; but I'll have to tie you up. We can't leave a smart kid like you to mess up our business."

When he had tied Dick's arms behind him securely and fastened the other end of the rope to a strong hook, he too disappeared behind the pile of boxes on the west side of the room. However, in a few moments, he came back with a pan of water and a rag.

As the hours wore on toward midnight, Dick pondered on his dilemma. Every question he put to the man was ignored, and his eyes told him nothing more than they had at the first moment of consciousness. He tried to make plans of escape but discarded them as preposterous.

At midnight, a dozen men straggled in and lounged around for nearly half an hour. Then the short man returned and issued a stream of orders. For an hour, the men worked feverishly, piling crates and carrying them away behind the pile on the west side. It was nearly two o'clock when the leader came in for final orders. Then, the crowd departed but left one of their number to guard Dick.

When all was quiet, Dick looked over his new guard. He was evidently not much older than Dick, himself; but, in appearance, he was quite different. The other boy was a narrow-chested, scrawny-faced, hollow-cheeked lad of less than medium height. From the corner of his loose lips hung a cigarette, and he coughed intermittently as he regarded Dick enviously.

"Gee, I wish I looked like that," he muttered as he regarded the husky quarterback. "Down there in the mines, I never had a chance. Gee—"

Dick decided to try to make the boy talk; so he began to ask him questions. "Listen—what's this all about?" he asked. "Honest, I don't know what I'm doing here. I was just walking along, and—here I am. Can you tell me anything about this?"

"Naw," answered the other suspiciously. "I ain't allowed to talk to you."

But, whether he was allowed to talk or not, he began to ask Dick questions, admiring the quarterback with his whole cramped heart.

To while away the chill dreary hours until morning, Dick told the boy, whose name was "Buzz," all about himself, his school, and the big game. The boy listened to the story with intense interest and exclaimed, "Gosh, Dick, I'd sure like to help you get out for the game. I sure don't like this here smug—er—this here job, I mean; either; but I can't get out of it on account of I'm in too deep—er—I've been with it too long. I sure wish I could have went to school though like you. I never had a chance—"

"Smuggling, huh?" Dick said under his breath. "Well, for—"

At last, the dial of Dick's watch showed eight o'clock. However, in the damp underground room, there was little change. The naked bulb glared on over the snoring Buzz.

Dick stirred and sat up, thinking hard about the game. All through the interminable day, Dick, left alone even by Buzz, puzzled over his problems. The situation would have amused him if it had not been so serious. He was right in the school; and probably at the very heart of the matter, someone was within a few feet hunting for him. He was sore and cramped from the damp ground and his head ached spitefully. His discomfort was getting the best of him when the short boss came in.

Dick stood up and shouted, "I'm sick of this place. Let me out, or you'll have the police on you!" The man stared at him unpleasantly and then said with a laugh: "Well, young fella, you won't have to stand this much longer. You're leaving this place for Canada at midnight tonight. I'm afraid you know too much to go free!"

Will Issue Grades Tuesday, April 14

The time of chattering teeth and quaking knees is surely drawing nigh. The days may drag slowly onward, but too soon will we stare face to face with that eventful date, April 14. Then it is when doubtless sons and daughters will meekly carry home the declaration of their ability and work. But students can worry about that date later, for grade period ends on April 3, which is but a short time off. Students should put forth a great deal of effort immediately and avoid a great deal of sorrow later. Here, for once, there will be nothing wrong with burning the midnight oil. Spring vacation intervenes its pleasant hand and then back again to South Side and grades. These dates stand out in the crowd—April 3 and April 14.

South Side To Adopt Ivy Planting Tradition

Hoping that it will become a tradition at South Side, Miss Emma Kiefer and Mr. A. Verne Flint are advancing plans for an annual ivy planting day. They are assisted by a junior and a senior committee. The junior committee consists of James Dern, Robert Storm, Wade Theye, Ruth Garrison, and Richard Bastetter. The senior committee includes Ruth Rose, Ann Bremer, Richard Strasser, James Sweet, and Myron Jones.

The committees plan to follow the custom set by colleges; they will honor one junior and one senior by permitting each to give a speech. They also hope to have a parade and a ritual. The committees will meet Thursday, April 2, to further the plans. The meeting will be held in room 38 at 3:30.

Boys Tumbling Classes Begin Learning Stands

Now that the boys' gym classes have finished their team basketball schedules, they are turning to a back-breaking art, tumbling.

Before the boys could actually start to tumble they had to learn how to place the mats out on the gym floor. Eight boys out of each squad of twelve got the mats and returned them to the wrestling room, which is at the north of the gym floor. All the taking and replacing of mats was done in a strictly military manner.

After all of the things were finished, the actual tumbling started. So far, the ambitious athletes have learned the head stand, dive, forward and backward rolls, shoulder stand, and knee stand.

Students Have Hard Time Keeping Awake In Springish Weather

"Ho-hum. Am I ever tired. Oh, for a good night's sleep," were some of the various remarks heard last Friday from people who were trying in vain to keep awake. It seems that it was impossible for the students to keep away from the sand-man, and they were caught in some of the most embarrassing situations. Kenneth Eckart managed to doze off during one of Mr. Wilson's short talks, and was very much embarrassed when he was unable to repeat what Mr. Wilson had said. Ruth Garrison's head had the funny habit of bobbing back and forth while she tried vainly to keep awake. The spring vacation will be appreciated by these various students as well as the whole student body.

Easter Customs Are Derived From Popular Old Superstition

Religious and solemn in character, Easter is a holiday that appeals to everyone. Two theories are advanced concerning the origin of Easter. Wheatley says that Easter is in memory of the crucifixion and that the holiday is so called from the Saxon word,

"to rise." Easter, then, is in honor of Christ's resurrection. But he mentions also, as do various other authorities, that Easter may have been the name of an old Saxon goddess worshipped at the period which now corresponds with our Easter, usually in April.

The name Easter comes from an ancient Anglo-Saxon goddess of spring, Eastre, in whose honor a festival of spring is held in the month of April. Easter as a time of feasting and celebration goes back into great antiquity. No one seems to know precisely when it began, although many are inclined to believe that it is a relic of the ancient celebration of the Vernal Equinox—the time of the original New Year.

A popular superstition in ancient England was that the sun danced on Easter Day. It became a common custom for the people to rise early to witness this dance of the sun. There existed at one time an ingenious method of making an artificial sun-dance. A huge vessel of water was set out in the open and the rays of the sun permitted to play upon its trembling surface. The result, of course, was a dancing of the sun's reflection, which greatly impressed and delighted the masses.

The custom of coloring eggs appears to be exceedingly ancient. The Jews boiled their eggs hard and decorated the shells. Le Brun says that the Persians always color their eggs and have had the custom since ancient times. Father Carmile, in his "History of Customs," tells us that colored Easter eggs are to be found in Italy, Spain, and Provence; and that public sports with eggs were held during the Easter period.

It would seem that the original purpose in coloring eggs was to imitate the new colors of the earth, induced by the coming of spring and the blossoming of the flowers. But when the original custom was taken over by the Christian Church the eggs were decorated principally in red, to denote the blood of Christ.

Rabbits Fooled Teutons
The rabbit's art in Easter festivities originated with an old superstition that rabbits lay eggs on Easter Eve. This superstition is possibly Teutonic in origin, but no one knows precisely when it started or what was the original meaning or purpose behind it. The Negroes of the south, through some quirk of fancy believe that the "left hind foot of a graveyard rabbit killed in the dark of the moon" is a proverbial talisman and will protect them from all evil. It is barely possible that this superstition grew out of the old Easter idea that rabbits are given supernatural powers on Easter Eve which enable them to lay eggs.

The custom of discarding old, worn clothes and appearing in attractive new apparel at Easter is part of our primitive instinct to place the old year behind and step forth, fresh and clean, into a new year.

Frankfort Five Captures Title For 3rd Time

Hot Dogs Defeat Bengals In Final Game; Evansville, Indians Lose Other Tilts.

Hoosier sports fans will once again return to their normal lives with the state basketball title safely stowed away in the trophy case of Frankfort High School. After a four-weeks' period of basketball hysteria during which 784 teams bowed out of competition, the Hot Dogs of Frankfort, under the capable tutelage of Coach Everett Case, finally captured the coveted state title at the Butler Field House last Saturday evening. After playing the Central Tigers of Fort Wayne on even terms for the first half, the Hot Dogs turned on the steam and came back with a second-half rush which completely annihilated the Bengals. The final score was 50-26.

Curly Armstrong Stars

In the afternoon games of the state tourney Central's Tigers started the proceedings by staging a second quarter rally which gave them a ten-point lead in the trophy case of Evansville, which they held up until the final minutes of the tilt. After getting off to a bad start, the Bengals played steady ball and ran upon 11-9 lead at the conclusion of the initial quarter. Curly Armstrong, sensational Fort Wayne forward, started a one-man rally in the second period and put his team out in front. In the third quarter the teams battled on even terms and the period ended with the score standing at 31-21. Hoping to catch up with the Tigers, the Evansville netters opened a long shot barrage in the final canto and hit fairly consistently. However, they were forced to weaken their defense by this action and the Tigers were able to control the ball enough to protect their margin of victory and go on to a 36-31 win.

Frankfort Beats Anderson

Frankfort smashed all of Anderson's hopes for its second consecutive title in the last game of the afternoon when the Hot Dogs handed the defending champs a 34-18 shellacking. The Casemen started off very well and smothered the Anderson offense while they were collecting eleven points for themselves during the initial period. This period ended with the Indians trailing by an 11-2 count. The Indians came back in the second quarter and played a fairly good brand of ball but they were unable to hold the Hot Dogs and the half-time found the score standing 18-12 in favor of the Frankfort netters. Failure to connect at the foul stripe was the deciding factor in this tilt as the Indians missed ten charity opportunities. This fact became more and more evident in the final half. In the last quarter the Indians resorted to a barrage of long shots and their defense cracked, thus permitting the Hot Dogs to make the slaughter even more effective.

In the evening game the Frankfort team was quite confident of victory and played a beautiful game as they won the title. With a great advantage in height, the Casemen controlled the ball on nearly all of the tips and off the backboards. With Montgomery, towering center from Frankfort, playing one of the best games of his career, the Casemen executed their plays with the class of professional players. Making use of body-blocking tactics, the Hot Dogs were able to drive through the Tigers and once they got a shot at the basket it was almost impossible to stop them from scoring. With Montgomery taking the ball off the backboard and shooting very accurate pivot shots, the Hot Dogs forged into a lead and never relinquished it. The Central netters deserve all the credit in the world for the fighting spirit which they displayed for the entire tilt. Never once did they show any indication of giving up. They trained a steady barrage of shots on the Central hoop during the second period in a vain effort to overtake the Case aggregation.

Lots Of Time, Hard Work Is Necessary For All Track Men

Two hours or more of hard work every evening after school and on Saturdays is the lot of anyone who aspires to be a track man. Anyone who wants to be a strong contender in his particular event soon finds that it takes many hours of diligent and faithful practice to attain top form.

During the course of one training practice, a track man expends more energy than it takes to carry an average individual through a whole day's work. For instance, follow a hurdler through an evening's workout. After taking ten minutes or more of strenuous warm-up exercises he goes to the bulletin board to read his workout for the evening. At this time of the year it will be rather light and goes something like this: "Take two moderate warm-up laps with a walking lap in between. Do hurdle exercises. Take ten starts. Take three high hurdles, five times at full speed. Take seven low hurdles, five times at full speed. Take a lap of striding. Take another lap of alternate sprinting, high-knee action and striding. Practice high-jumping. Take a quarter-mile at full speed and go in.

If he specializes in more than one event, however, he moderates the hurdling program slightly and adds the workout of the other event or events. This all may seem moderately simple and easy, but to put all these things into practice and to work faithfully on each definite detail of the workout is far from an easy job. The object, after all, is to perfect form to the highest degree possible in order to work for a maximum of speed and endurance.

Hardwood Squad Is Awarded Free Trip To Tourney Finals

As a reward for their valiant services and hard work during the past hardwood season and during the sectional tourney, the ten members of the tourney squad were given a trip to the finals of the state basketball journey at Indianapolis.

All expenses were paid by the school. Seats were reserved for them in a choice section of the fieldhouse. Several of the boys went down Friday evening with Coach Burl Friddle, and the remaining members went Saturday morning with "Pop" Tudor.

The boys found time to take in a show and inspect the town. Those who made the trip expressed their gratification at seeing the Central Tigers go as far as they did in the tourney. Those who made the trip were Don Reichert, Joe Close, Dick Frazell, Bud Lee, Johnny Hines, Carl Hall, Ray Speaker, Jim Ellenwood, Robert Budde, and Harold Kitzmiller.

Skirts and Sports

During the last week, the handball court has been resounding with screeches and screams each fifth period and after school. Those skaters who wish to participate in the roller skating section of the exhibition have been showing just what they can do under the supervision of Miss Alice J. Patterson.

Anna Marie Baumgartner has one of the cutest pairs of roller skates of all the aspirants. They are white high-top shoes with the skates attached.

Ada Schuelke, she of the black hair, gets very easily aroused. While playing Monopoly the other evening, she bought one piece of property, and was so enthusiastic that she immediately proceeded to win the game. Those who fell before her vicious onslaught were Marjorie Hower, Marjorie Cartwright, Enita Snively, and Ida Mae Frazell.

Did any of you ever see Marjorie Hower try to give a serious speech? Yes? That's fine. But we'll bet you anything that no one ever saw her conclude it seriously.

Don't any of you dare miss the skating party to be given by the letter-girls tomorrow night. A rip-roaring time is promised every one who attends. You may also receive points for the skating.

Baseball Introduced Into Girl's Activities By Gladys Palme.

Baseball, favorite sport of many fans the world over, has been in existence in America since 1839. This game has its origin in the United States; the first scheme for playing it was devised by Abner Doubleday, at Cooperstown, New York, in 1839. From the very date of its introduction, the game advanced rapidly. It was taken up by the colleges in the late fifties, the first game on record being played in July, 1859, between Amherst and Williams.

Hancock Modifies Rules

In 1887, George W. Hancock originated indoor baseball by modifying the outdoor rules to suit indoor conditions. This game enjoys a great popularity during the winter months and was the first baseball game to be played extensively by girls and women. Another cause for the rapid increase of girls to participate in the game was the use of the soft ball and the shortening of the throwing distances.

Until 1926, there were no outdoor baseball rules to meet the particular requirements of girls and women. Gladys E. Palmer made the first set of outdoor baseball rules for men and women in 1926; and they were recommended to the committee on baseball on women's athletics in the American Physical Education Association. It is the purpose of this committee to create, adapt, and standardize rules and conditions of athletic games, wherever they are necessary, for the peculiar needs and abilities of girls and women and to give publicity to these as far as possible, to the end that they may be universally used.

The rules which here were submitted to the committee on baseball are the very same as those used in the baseball activities of the Girls' Athletic Association.

The baseball season of G. A. A. has already started, but the construction of our gym greatly hinders the play. However, as soon as better weather comes, these games will take place on the baseball diamonds; and a full nine innings will usually be played.

Dan Zehr Attains New Swim Heights

Former South Side Student Declared To Be Champion Of Backstroke Swimmers.

Danny Zehr, sophomore student at Northwestern University, continued to show his supremacy, one of the greatest backstroke artists in the world last week as he was declared to be the champion backstroke swimmer by the National Intercollegiate Swimming Association.

Dan's rapid rise into the eyes of the sporting world started while he was a student at South Side. Dan put in hundreds of hours of hard practice under his capable coach at the Y. M. C. A. pool and was a member of the "Y" swimming team as long as he was eligible to compete in the meets in which it engaged. After setting numerous meet records Dan advanced into setate competition and on to interstate meets. Soon he was recognized as one of the best backstroke artists in the country.

With the Olympic games being announced, Dan immediately started training for a position on the swimming team which was to represent the United States. He survived the early elimination trials and astounded the entire sporting world by capturing the backstroke position on the Olympic team. In the Olympic competition Dan faced the greatest array of backstroke exponents in the world. Like the rest of the United States team he was forced to bow to the superior ability of the Japanese representatives. Dan is looking forward to winning a place on the team which will represent this nation in the Olympic games to be held in Germany next year.

Intercollegiate Champion

Dan Zehr, South Side's representative in the aquatic world, has been declared champion of the 150-yard backstroke class by the National Intercollegiate Swimming Association.

"Best 1 Ever Had," Says Case Of Champion Hot-Dog Squad

While the town of Frankfort continues to celebrate the winning of the state basketball championship for the next several weeks, the person who probably gets the biggest thrill out of the fine playing of the Frankfort team is Coach Everett Case. This husky mentor whose hair is now turning gray has taken the Frankfort fives down to the Butler Field House for all thirteen of the tourneys held there while he has coached at Frankfort.

Won Twice Before

Twice before he has watched his boys come off the hardwood with their state title trophies glittering in the glare of the fieldhouse lights. It has often been said that his presence on the Frankfort bench gives his team a ten-point margin when they start a tilt. When one looks over his impressive victory one wonders if this statement can be much exaggerated. Under his tutelage Frankfort teams in 1925 and 1929 added state championship trophies to the Frankfort High trophy case. Coach Case seemingly never becomes excited. In the final game he seemed very little interested in the last half of the tilt as his boys rung up a decisive victory. Back in the dressing rooms he retired to a room adjoining the one occupied by the team and patiently waited for them to prepare themselves for their return trip to Frankfort where a jubilant multitude of basketball enthusiasts awaited their arrival.

Frankfort is a "natural" basketball center. Located in the middle of the net belt of Hoosierdom, the Hot Dogs play the toughest teams in the state each season. Basketball is practiced the year around since there is no high school football team. "It's the coolest and the best team I ever had," is the statement under which Coach Case sums up his championship squad. This year's starting five was the same five which Case used last season. In two seasons since his return to the Hot Dog camp Case developed a team of championship caliber. Last season the Hot Dogs won but half of their games but as usual they advanced to the state tournament. At the start of the present season Frankfort was mentioned as being the team to watch. As the season progressed it became evident that the early predictions were not entirely wrong. Tipton was the only five to succeed in defeating the Hot Dogs during the season although Tech of Indianapolis tied the Casemen at 31-all in a double overtime tilt in mid-season. In the sectional and regional tourneys the Hot Dogs limited their opponents to an average of about fourteen points per tilt. In the super-regional at Vincennes the Hot Dogs nosed out two very close victories over Froebel of Gary and Logansport. The entire season record of the Frankfort squad shows a total of twenty-nine wins, one loss, and a tie.

Don't Believe In Jinxes

Frankfort's squad, in addition to being declared the state champs might also be declared the holders of the "Jinx Breaking" title. The Hot Dogs won the state title on the thirteenth time that Case has taken his team to the state finals. During the season the team defied the proverbial jinx surrounding the number "3" when they defeated three teams three times each. The outfits handed these defeats were Lebanon, Logansport, and the Anderson Indians. Then they won the North Central Conference title for the third season in a row upsetting all precedent. In this year's race they won all of their eight conference games again upsetting the precedent so long considered unbreakable.

Y. M. Swimmers Present Pageant

Nine South Side Boys Appear In Father Neptune, Water Show, Given Friday and Saturday.

Father Neptune, a water pageant, will be presented Friday and Saturday evenings at 8 o'clock by the swimming team at the Y. M. C. A. in the Y pool. The following South Side boys will take part in it: Jerry Zehr, Herbert Myers, Albert Kelso, James Kelso, Max Goddard, Jack Hedden, Rodney Stain, Jack Edwards, and Eugene Schwan.

The pageant consists of three acts. The first is a boat ride in which one fellow takes another fellow's girl and the light is on! The second act is a water Olympic in which various strokes and water gymnastics will be demonstrated. The third act is a clown act in which the swimmers will do stunts in inner tubes. A rodeo will be presented and also a canoe act. Rhythm swimming accompanied by music will be given.

A very interesting conclusion to the pageant will be a pirate act in which an alligator hunt will be staged with six real live alligators procured from an alligator farm in Arkansas.

Tourney Shorts

Once again we have come to that period of the year when some 780-odd basketball managers supervise the smothering of approximately sixteen thousand basketball suits under tons of mothballs. Four weeks ago all of these teams entered into Indiana's big circus, the basketball tourneys, which culminated last weekend with Frankfort's Hotdogs giving a masterful exhibition in the center ring. But even the repugnant odor of the mothballs could cause the net fans of Hoosierdom to forget the 1935-36 season with its upsets, its new method of determining the state championship, and that grand squad, the Frankfort Hotdogs.

Frankfort, in our opinion, would rate high up in most college competition. The Hotdogs had a very well-balanced squad. It was blessed with worlds of height and some of the smoothest ball handlers who ever paced up and down the hardwood. The Hotdogs also had a great advantage in that the players seemed to all have great physical advantages over their opponents in the state tourney. The average weight of the team was in the neighborhood of 175 pounds. With every player having a very sturdy build, Coach Case readily adapted them to a body-block type of play in which, as the present season progressed, they became very proficient.

Fort Wayne can be justly proud of the fine group of fellows who represented this city on the Butler Fieldhouse hardwood. Not one of the Bengal players gave even the slightest indication of giving up even when it was quite evident that the Tigers were headed for a severe trouncing in the final half of the last tilt. The fighting Tigers were undoubtedly the favorites of the fans convened at the fieldhouse.

One of the most noticeable characteristics of the Frankfort squad was its self-confidence. Coach Case assured the Hotdogs before the final contest that they had the state title cinched. The Hotdogs evidently believed what their coach told them because they came out for the initial half with all the confidence in the world. Coach Case must have felt about equally confident if one were to judge him by his actions on the bench. He seemed to be very little concerned with the proceedings of the game in the second half, often seemingly being more interested in looking at the floor immediately before him than at watching the Hotdogs run up the score.

Central's team was a dejected-looking group of fellows after the game. They had given their all in a tilt in which they did not have a chance. However, after they had retired to the showers and got dressed they felt much better. Murray Mendenhall, although he had just watched his fondest dreams smashed into a thousand pieces, was very proud of the fight his boys had put up and he did not hesitate to tell them so.

Coach Case is a coach supreme if he goes to the Butler hardwood next March and retains the title. From this year's squad he will lose Vaughn, McCreary, Montgomery, Joseph, Street, and Livezey. He will retain but four of his tournament net. These four are all juniors and will conclude their scholastic careers next year.

Central of Evansville and Central of Fort Wayne will have a good chance to repeat next year with both of these teams losing but three men from their first twelve. Anderson will lose four men.

Junior 2, Soph 1, Soph 3 Victorious

All Three Games Are Captured By Shutout Scores; Neither Team Scores In Other Game.

In the first round of the upper classmen baseball games played last Friday, Sophomore 1, Sophomore 3, and Junior 2 were the only teams to score runs.

In the first game which was played, Sophomore 1 lashed Sophomore 2 by a score of 5-0. Marjorie Crago, Irene Niemeyer, Mary Jane Staley, Martha Crum, and Dorothy Elfrer made runs for team 1.

Although during the first inning, neither Sophomore team 3 or Junior team 3 made any runs, Sophomore 3 won by a score of 1-0. Joan Kennedy made the only run.

Junior 2 won over Sophomore 4 by a score of 3-0. Those girls who helped their team to victory in this game were Mildred Close, Betty Harnish, and Leona Menze.

Neither Junior 1 or the senior team could make any runs. This score of 0-0 was due to the fact that both teams had such excellent pitchers. Edna Disler pitched for the juniors while Betty Rison pitched for the seniors.

South Side Tracksters Drill Hard To Win Initial Meet

Archer Track Team Clashes With Goshen

Frazell, Stone, Feichter, Epmeier Form 880-Yard Relay Team, Best Hopes.

April 11 Is Date For Cinder Event

Bob Nulf, North Side Coach, Is To Officiate Affair At The South Side Stadium.

South Side's track forces have entered into their last two weeks of intensive practice before their initial meet with Goshen High School, to be held here on Saturday, April 11. This affair will be a dual meet.

Coach Welborn plans to put his charges through plenty of drill during the spring vacation in order to have a strong combination built up to oppose the Goshen Redskins. Little is known of the strength of the Crimson and White squad this season. Coach Bob Nulf, football mentor at North Side, will officiate this meet.

Material Is Good

Coach Welborn is rapidly developing a splendid squad to represent South Side this season. With all of the basketball and football aspirants for next year's teams ordered out for track, Lundy has a great many fellows with excellent material from which to develop a well balanced team.

During the past week Coach Welborn has uncovered much material of which he had no knowledge. During the trials to determine the fellows who are working for posts two new men have heartening performances. Dick Frazell, who is one of the most promising lads for next year's net squad, sprang a big surprise when he showed his heels to "Red" Stone and Bud Feichter in the century and the 220-yard dashes. Stone and Feichter are the varsity dash men from last season's squad. Epmeier has been combined with these three dash men to make up the 880-yard relay team. South Side has always been especially strong in the relay competition.

New Men Discovered

In the 880-yard event Coach Welborn discovered another new performer in Bob Miller, second-string center on the football squad. Miller broke the tape ahead of Jim Dern and F. Sutter, the favorites for this event. These three fellows will battle it out for the position during the next few weeks. Al Hinton, the lad who performed so capably in the 880-yard event last season, is back again trying for a position on the squad. At the present time he is leading all of the mile aspirants. "Porky" Schoenfeld and John Staley, gave him the best run during the trials held thus far.

In the field events, no definite places have been made since Coach Welborn held trials in these events as yet. However, several of the members of last season's squad seem to have the inside track on their respective events. Ed Leitz has the shot-put position fairly well sewed up. His toughest competition is coming from Nelson Miller. In the broad jump competition "Red" Stone and Ed Leitz seem headed for the one-two. Ed Kruse has the pole-vault practically cinched. He has developed very well during the past year and promises to be tough during the coming season. Precise and Bill Kruse are the outstanding candidates for the hurdle events but the stick events are considered wide open.

Student Body Sends Telegram To Central

Since most of South Side students could not go to Indianapolis to cheer for Central in the finals of the state basketball tournament, two hundred and forty-four fans from the Archer school sent a telegram to the Central team last Saturday. For a small fee anyone could have his name signed to this telegram. The six girls who worked in the halls getting these names were Vernal Meyers, Ruth Bormuth, Catherine Allendorph, Ruth Adler, Margaret Crankshaw, and Louise Closs.

The telegram read, "All South Side hopes that Central will bring home the State Championship."

Wrestling Tournaments Held

Wrestling tournaments are held each year at Central High School of Tulsa, Oklahoma. There are four districts where the actionals are held, and the finals are held at the University of Oklahoma.

Ex-Coach McClure Grins As Graduate Archers Win Title

Former Coach Jake McClure must have grinned very broadly when the Simpson M. E. basketball squad was declared to be the cream of the crop in the Y. M. Church Basketball League. All but one of the eight members of the teams are graduates of South Side and all have played basketball under the tutelage of Coach McClure.

Darwin Kessler played backfield on the Archer drill squad and was a member of the Trojan athletic group which captured so many intramural titles. Bob Bligh played both varsity basketball and football and probably would have become one of South Side's outstanding athletes had he not suffered a broken ankle in the latter part of his high school career. Alva Wehrmeister played intramural basketball and was out for the varsity team.

Paul Wehrman and George Diefendorfer were both strong candidates for the varsity team and played much reserve ball. Bob Schelper was one of the outstanding reserve players and would have made the varsity if he had not waited until his junior year to go out for the team. The South Side representation is concluded with Earl Roop, one of South Side's best football players. Earl also played intramural basketball during his high school career.

Awarded Gimbel Medal

Steve Sitko

Although Central's fighting band of Tigers failed in their cherished hope of capturing the coveted state net title, they received a considerable consolation as Steve Sitko, whose tournament play has been the pride and joy of Central fans, was awarded the highest honor Hoosierdom can bestow upon a net player, the Gimbel medal. Steve played a great game of ball throughout the season, climaxing his excellent athletic career with a hard-driving type of play in all of the four tournaments. He is a Polish lad and is a member of an athletic family, two of his brothers having starred for Central in previous years. Steve was awarded the quarterback position on the all-state football team last season. This marks the first time that a Fort Wayne player has won the Gimbel award, which is given to the lad displaying the best mental attitude during the state tourney.

Sportlights

Minute sketches of the American League ball clubs as they begin the homeward trek in preparation for the opening of the 1936 campaign which is just two weeks off:

Detroit Tigers—Mickey Cochrane will put the same team on the field as that which last year won the championship of the world, with the exception of Al Simmons, who was purchased from the White Sox to play left field for the Tigers. Alvin Crowder and Marvin Owen are the question marks but Cochrane has a wealth of young pitchers as well as several new infielders who are pressing Owen hard for his position. The most promising rookie is Rudy York, an infielder.

Cleveland Indians—The Indians, with Steve O'Neill beginning his first year as the helm, look to have a very much improved ball club this year. If Cleveland can steer clear of the injuries which wrecked the club last year, the Indians will definitely be the team to beat. Strengthened by the acquisition of Johnny Allen and the return to action of Bruce Campbell and Frank Pytlak, Cleveland will present a group of youngsters with speed and power. Cleveland is counting heavily on Pytlak and should he fail to come through, they will be in great need of a catcher. The most promising rookie is infielder Roy Hughes.

New York Yankees—The Yankees this year are a group of question marks. If Tony Lazzeri's aging limbs hold up, if Corsett's leg has healed properly, if Lefty Gomez and Lou Gehrig return to form, and if Joe Di Maggio lives up to expectations the Yankees will be real pennant contenders. Joe McCarthy is out after the pennant this year and he will spare nothing in his attempt to move his ball club, second for the last four years, into a pennant.

Boston Red Sox—The Red Sox this year are a million dollar team, a group of stars brought together with Tom Yawkey's millions. They have power, they have class and they have names. If Ferrell and Grove can keep up their pace of last season, the Red Sox are due to fulfill all of Tom Yawkey's hopes.

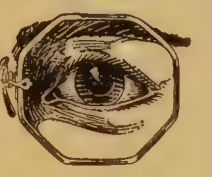

Washington Senators—With perhaps the largest group of promising rookies in the big leagues, the Senators are due to go places this year. Buddy Lewis, infielder, and Jake Powell, outfielder, have definite promise and the team, built around Buddy Myer and Joe Kuhel will be a push-over for no one.

Chicago White Sox—Take the White Sox of last year, subtract Al Simmons, add two rookie outfielders and you have this year's White Sox. Zeke Bonura is still a determined holdout, and contrary to the statements of Manager Dykes, the Sox are missing him sorely. Chicago has a good pitching staff but a weak-hitting ball club. Mike Kreevich is the most promising rookie.

St. Louis Browns—Roger Hornsby spent all last year collecting the team which he will put on the field this year. A group of shrewd deals gave him a ball club which boasts of no individual stars but which consistently knocked off the leaders late last season. The Browns this year will be an important factor in the American League pennant race.

Philadelphia Athletics—Connie Mack this year has a handful of money and a bunch of mediocre semi-pro's whom the baseball fans certainly won't pass through the turnstiles to see. With not even the foundation of his formerly great club left, Mack will be forced to face this season with a group of ball players who have no place on a major league diamond. The situation for the Athletics looks hopeless.

Redskins Lose To Archers In I.M. Basketball

Bowmen, Zippers, Waists, Tip Tops, Shorts, Take Other Tilts In Tourney.

In the final game of the intramural basketball tournament held last Wednesday, the Archers defeated the Redskins by the score of 12 to 8. The Archers, pre-tourney favorites, displayed the same flashy brand of ball that took them through to the championship. Nussbaum was high scorer for the Archers with eight points and on the losers, Allen, Alexander, and Craig scored one field goal apiece, and Lahrmann scored two free throws.

In the first game of the tournament, the Times bowed to the Tip Tops by the score of 6 to 4. Brandt and Feichter scored two points apiece, while Helm and Ballweg scored the same amount for the losers. Both teams were evenly matched, but the Tip Tops proved superior at the foul circle.

Archers Go To Town

The Archers ran roughshod over the 5-Horsemen, defeating them to the tune of 22 to 2. Stalter and Schmidt were high point men for the winners with the former scoring 10 points and the latter hitting the net for six. Babcock tallied the losers' lone marker. The highly-touted Hawkers were upset by the Skunks, 4 to 3. Bell scored a field goal and Bly tossed in two charity tosses for the winners, and Hinton scored from the field with Zehr getting a free throw. The Tish Tash's lost to the Shorts by the score of 4 to 2. Woodhull and Benz each scored from far out for the Shorts' points, while Rarick was the only one to score for the losers. The game was exceedingly rough, but the officials did not call them close. The Greenhorns came out on the long end of a 12 to 3 score with the Chiefs. Springer was outstanding for the winners in scoring six points, and Lake stood out for the losers with two points.

The Redskins were forced to go into an overtime to defeat the Clodhoppers 9 to 4. Lahrmann was high scorer for the Redskins with seven points and Ballinger was high for the losers with four points. The Redskins defeated the Tip Tops rather easily by the score of 9 to 4. Alexander was high point man scoring three charity tosses and one field goal for a total of five points. He made three out of four foul attempts. Brandt was high point man for the losers with three points. The Archers then administered the Greenhorns the worst defeat of the tourney by beating them 29 to 2. Reinking and Cochrane received high scoring honors with the former scoring eight points and the latter seven. Moeller was the only one able to come through for the Greenhorns as he scored their lone two markers.

Scores Are Top-Heavy

The Panthers were on the short end of a 17 to 3 score in a game with the Waists. Cunningham was outstanding for the winners by scoring eight points and Peters scored two markers for the losers. In the game with the Tornadoes, the Zippers came out on the long end of a 11 to 4 score. Strawbridge was high for the winners with four points and Forbing and Reichwage divided the honors for the losers. The Bowmen defeated the Dark Horses by the score of 27 to 3. Nye stood out for the winners with thirteen points and Greiser scored two for the losers.

In a game that was very amusing, the Zippers were defeated by the Whirlwinds in an overtime by the score of 10 to 14. Before the end of the regular playing time, all but one member on the Zippers were out on personals. The only remaining player was A. Koch, who made a valiant but vain stand against five men.

In the quarter-finals, the Bowmen

Varsity Track Members Enjoy Events Of Butler Relay Races

In hope that the track squad would gain some experience by seeing college competition, Coach Lundy Welborn took eight members of the varsity to the Butler relays last Saturday. The squad members' attentions in the meet varied because each man was interested in his own event. The following statements show the interest of the squad members in their events.

Red Stone: Owens is the smoothest and most perfect runner in the world. When he broad jumps, he flies with the greatest of ease. There is no comparison to him as he steps over the hurdles.

Praise Cunningham

Jim Dern: Maybe Cunningham's time was not fast but it was because of the lack of competition. He will be in good condition to win in the Olympics. Elser is a swell big Irishman.

Al Hinton: Cunningham has the most perfect form in the world. His title as the World's Greatest Miler does not exaggerate his ability.

"Porky" Schoenfeld: I was disappointed with Don Elser because he did not put the shot as far as I expected.

Bud Feichter: If any of you fellows go down to Butler, be sure and see the Men's Union House. As for the meet, I liked the tuxedos and formals. The starter was a little bow-legged and also held the fellows at the start a long time.

Dwell In "Mansion"

Chuck Geyer: Owens was all right. I was disappointed in Cunningham because he ran the mile in only 4:26, but I guess it was the lack of competition. We had a good time, and we stayed in the large wooden mansion on a hill called Men's Union House or The House of Slugs. The Union House has stained glass windows with a few Civil War newspapers stuck in the holes.

Miller Makey: Cunningham surely had perfect form. It seemed that the best runners ran erect. The 440's were run like the 60-yard dash.

Ed Leitz: Jesse Owens looks like Cavalcade. Elser looks like a race horse, and the judges in tuxedos looked silly shoveling sand.

defeated the Panthers 10 to 2. Nye was high for the winners with six points and Cunningham scored the lone marker for the losers. In the other game, the Whirlwinds defeated the Sardines 5 to 3. Rolf scored all of the winners' points and McKay scored all for the losers. The Archers then defeated the Bowmen 15 to 5. Nussbaum was high point man for the winners with eight points and Kruse was high for the losers with two points. The Redskins then defeated the Whirlwinds 8 to 4 in the last game of the semi-finals. Kemp was high for the winners with six points and O'Brien was high for the losers with four points.

Spring Hats Are Fashioned To Match With Various Costumes

We're warning you, don't choose a hat from a sitting view! After putting it on, stand up and walk around, glancing at yourself suddenly to get the effect. Does it look "in the picture" or like something clinging foolishly, perhaps, to the top of a picture frame?

But that's not all. If you are going to wear a 1936 spring model bonnet, don't wear it with a 1920 hair style or '25 or '30, even. Try to fit into the modern hats. If you are of the sleek haired style, you should wear your hat on the back of your head riding the waves. Next comes the type woman who tilts her hat jauntily at an angle so that it proves that it is the hat, not the woman herself, who makes the hat. After you have bought a hat and brought it home, don't cram it down on your head, but adjust it, getting the right angle for the particular face.

Hats for spring are featured with flowers, fruit and ribbons. They are styled to match the different types of costumes chosen. There are large brims with ribbons streaming down the back to fit the Gibson Girl styles. Included with these are small extreme hats for the full or ruffled dresses. These are mostly featured with flowers and ornamental fruit. The hats are of bright colors in warm felts and straws.

Contrasting with the hats are the gloves in kid, chamois and doekin. The lighter colored gloves are stitched with darker thread to give that hand tailored effect, so popular this season.

The shoes this spring are also featured in the matching colors. Most extraordinary are the shoes shown in suede for spring. The suede shoes have square toes and square heels. Shoes also shown with square toes and square heels are the patent leather pumps in navy, black, and brown, with clever bows on the front, giving them that neat appearance.

If you want to be one of the up-to-date dressers, buy some of those smart square toed shoes.

Heads "Skate"

Miss Rehorst

Miss Pearl Rehorst, domestic science teacher, is in general charge of the Wo-Ho-Mu Skate to be held at Bell's rink on April 8.

Linen, String, Crepe Or Lace Appropriate For Spring Dances

When he invites you to the Prom or Commencement dance, you spend several glorious days walking on air. Then you come down to earth and start thinking about clothes. What to wear? This spring you will choose linen, string, crepe, or lace. Gray seems to be the new color for girls in their teens. Gray with different colored accessories to go with it. A printed crepe with a gray background dotted in several different colors is another smart thought. Colors will predominate at the dances this season. Everything from soft pastel shades to bright, flashy ones will be seen. The smart formal this year is made on the straight line with a peplum at the waist and a skirt that swishes out below a slim hipline.

Ruffles may be found on almost every formal this season. They are the newest and latest thing out. There will even be capes of ruffles on the dresses. Formal coats will be three-quarter length. They will be made out of velvet, silk, linen, and many other fabric materials. The sleeves will be very full with a tight cuff on them. They will tie at the neck with a huge bow. Many ornaments may be worn in the hair, such as combs, feathers, stars, and other things. Small hats are also very good.

Two-Piece Dresses Of Silk Taffeta Are Choice For Spring

The term suit has great elasticity this spring. It can be a dress with a short-fitted jacket of the same print, single or double breasted. It can be two-piece; the coat with a peplum at the waist and flap pockets on it. Also, the inverted pleat in the center of the back of the skirt is the newest in a spring suit.

Still another kind of suit is seen this spring. This is a silk dress with a belted jacket of pure silk taffeta. Think of how perfect it will be for your vacation next summer! In a thin wool, with a jacket of flannel, it would be quite smart. Or the jacket could be plain, of the same color as the dress.

In the excitement of a new suit, don't forget your print dress. One color after another, and multicolored flowers or amusing designs are being shown. The smart dresses are designed with short sleeves, a shirred yoke, and a skirt with a panel in the back. The print dress with a plain silk coat is very fashionable this year.

Algebra Students Here Enter Math Sectionals

The sectionals of the mathematics contest, will be entered by three of South Side's foremost Algebra 2 students: Mary Moffat, Warren Schueler, and Max Wagner. These South Siders were selected first on the basis of their classroom work, and later by a series of elimination tests.

The sectional contest will be held at Central High School in Room 1 Saturday, April 4, at 9 o'clock.

The winners of this contest will participate in the state finals at Bloomington Friday, April 24.

Many tumblers enjoy trying to do some of the unusual stunts which are not required. Some of these stunts are the human rocker, back bend, monkey walk, shoulder hand stand, sitting balance, stomach balance, forearm stand, human ball, bobbing ahead, and the shoulder-knee stand. The advanced tumblers have not started their practice on the individual stunts which are to be used for the exhibition.

Leap Of Time, Wax Museum, Day Of 90's Feature Fun Fest

On Friday evening of last week, the first and only program of "The Leap of Time" was presented through the courtesy of the makers of Sally Rand typewriters by those whom the manufacturers consider to be the least able of the historians of the time, the senior class of South Side High.

No, it wasn't a radio program, it was the program of the thirteenth annual senior fun fest which was presented in the school gym at eight o'clock that evening for faculty members, senior class members' parents, and the graduates themselves. Nearly seven hundred persons attended the annual classic, which had as its announcer, Manuel Rothberg.

Seniors Perform

The first part of the program was under the direction of Miss Adelaide Fiedler and Mr. J. H. Chappell, senior class advisers, and was presented by about fifty members of the graduating class. The first group, which had as its joint chairmen Bob Adams and Dick Helm, portrayed the class of 1936 as five year old members of Miss Alice Patterson's kindergarten. The Makey boys, Herman and Miller, were sent off to school by Mrs. Makey, played by Jo Anne Smith. At school they joined about fifteen other prospective South Siders under the tutelage of Miss Patterson, played by Ann Abbott, and Jack Wainwright, played by Vernon Gregory. A day in the school life of the little tots and their teachers was enacted, even to Miss Patterson's dog Heather, and the music instructor's wild gesticulations.

Fred Nye, president of the class, presented his committee in a skit portraying the troubles the members of the present senior class encountered as freshmen. Ed Letz, and Bill Hoblet played the parts of observant senior boys who admired all the new freshman girls played by Betty Rose Lehman, Harriet Yapp, Betty Wolf, and Marjorie Cartwright. Albert Weinmann, Chuck Stone, and Herman Makey also took the parts of bashful freshman boys. Dick Dochterman and Fred Meyers were Lundy Welborn and Herman Makey, Sr.

They Act Natural

Virginia Greiner's group, which was third on the students' part of the program, portrayed the activities of the seniors as they are today. Marjorie Hower and Allen Faux presented one of the highlights of the entire program when they executed an inspiring spring dance. Georgianne Jacobs, dressed in a bright red formal gown, sang the little-known classic, "The Music Goes Round and Round," slightly out of tempo with Bob Gargett's accompanying piano and received as a reward a bunch of onions and a lively grey kitten. The finale for this part of the program was the adagio dance by Fred Nye dressed in a green silk dress taped with white and Morgan Harrison in white flannels and a blue coat.

Dorothy Crabill and Ruth Adler, co-chairmen of the last student group, conceived the brilliant idea of presenting Louis Bonis as a sight-seeing bus conductor who took Verna Holman and Gwen Horn in an imaginative tour of the city fifteen years from 1936. During the trip, it was found that Dave Sherman was running a barber shop; Jack Brazy, a department store; and several other seniors were circus performers. Dorothy Douglas and Mary Martha Hobrock were in charge of Brazy's advertising department and used a novel yell lead scheme to advertise the merchandise. Included in the ranks of the circus performers were Eliza Bess Lucas, the fat lady; Walter Weaver, the wrestler; and Jim Sweet, the sword swallower.

Teachers Present Wax Museum

The second principal division of the program consisted of the teachers' part in the production and was announced by R. Nelson Snider as curator of the wax museum. He proved that the conqueror of Napoleon was not Bleeker, but a bothersome pack of leas. Mr. Delivan F. Parks, dressed in what looked suspiciously like a band uniform, played Napoleon. Stepin Fetchit, the famous exponent of the correct use of leisure time, was played by Mr. Benjamin Null, head of the English department. Ginger Rogers and Fred Astaire were impersonated by Miss Erma Dochterman and Mr. Earl Sterner, both attired in formal wear. The famous team sang and danced to "I'm Putting All My Eggs in One Basket." The popular art of music was represented by Miss Pauline Van Gorder as Madame Jeritsky and Mr. Lloyd K. Whelan as Rubin-off, the violin virtuoso. "Pop" Tudor appeared as W. C. Fields, red nose, checked suit and all; and Mr. Paul Sidell enacted the famous Doctor Daffoe. The quintuplets appeared in the persons of the Misses Susan Peck, Alda Jane Woodward, Rosemary Deane, Lucy Melman, and Olive B. Perkins. Last on the teachers' part of the program was the appearance of a trained horse, whose tapping feet closely resembled those of two South Side gym teachers, Miss Gretchen Smith and Miss Alice Patterson. During this part of the program, Mr. Ora M. Davis and Mr. Louis Briner acted as the caretakers of the museum.

The parents' part of the program, which was under the direction of the Mesdames Horace C. Horn, Merle J. Abbott, and George Knudson, portrayed a typical day in the gay 90's. Beginning with the day's marketing, it proceeded to show an afternoon promenade and an evening party. About thirty-five parents took parts in the finale of the party which consisted of singing and an old-fashioned square dance. After this, scenes showing girls of the 90's at the retiring hour of ten o'clock were portrayed by some of the fathers of the 1936 seniors.

Fashionable To Wear Sandals This Season

Shoes always play an important part in completing an outfit. This year a square-toed, low-heeled sandal should be worn with your suit. For your afternoon dress, a fabric or a suede shoe in a pump is very fashionable. Another new style is a suede which ties in the middle with a large bow. For evening, sandals dyed a shade lighter or darker than your dress is very good looking.

Fashion Notes

To help complete your spring outfit, you just must have an Easter bonnet. Every year we find the problem of hats. This year despite being peculiar looking, they are very smart. To wear with your suit you should have a mannish felt hat or a straw with a small brim. For your dress a three-cornered crepe would be very smart, also a straw with a very large brim and a huge bouquet of flowers on it. For evening a small velvet cap would be just the thing.

"What to wear with what" always seems to be the question. Your accessories with navy blue may be British an, grey, and navy with colorful accents such as coral, pink, chamois, bright red, or green. With black you may wear black, white, or chamois. With grey, British tan is particularly new and navy is a conservative interpretation of accessory color contrast. With brown wear enamel blue, chamois, coral, and luggage tan. With beige, navy blue is popular and British tan is a varied contrast note, but brown is the staple accessory color.

A smart bag is always the finishing touch to a new outfit. You may find the new spring ones in silk, suede, leather, and fabric. They are in every color you can imagine. They will go with everything you may purchase. For evening wear, you may find bags just large enough for your handkerchief.

The jewelry this year is just perfect, different colored clips to go on everything, bracelets to match your latest afternoon dress. Chains have also become very smart in the past year. Quite a few rings are being worn to match different color costumes.

Copper Is Leading Shade For Spring Hose; Pastels Too

While we wonder just what the stylist will do next to keep women's apparel constantly on the go, we find hosiery taking the lead with a vivid array of gay colors.

Stylists have been dithering with pastels for some time, and now there are definite indications that pastels will be increasingly popular in accessories this summer for afternoon and evening wear.

These pastel hose are now available at the Neumode Hosiery Shop, in hyacinth, lilac, seaford, buttercup, and primrose, a shade that blends beautifully with rose or peach shades.

The big news of the season is the enticing copper shades. These shades are paprika, sunny (like summertan), burnt copper (a deep ruddy brown like that of an old copper kettle), and continental (the color like the glaze of a French bean pot). These new shades are very attractive with navy, black, brown, and can even be worn with gray.

Brunet Males Preferred

In a leap year census taken at Muhlenberg High School, Laureldale, Pennsylvania, the dark-haired males received the greater amount of votes from girls.

Show Case Exhibits Subscription Awards Of Magazine Drive

Have you noticed the prizes in the show case window? Wouldn't you like to be the owner of one of these? Of course you would! Well, all you need to do to earn one of these fine prizes is to sell a few magazine subscriptions to your friends, relatives, or some of your own customers. Just think, for only two subscriptions you can obtain one of these fine prizes from a choice of six different awards.

While looking at this fine display you will notice that one of the outstanding prizes is the bicycle lamp. What boy or girl wouldn't appreciate this fine gift to use on his bicycle? It has a very attractive chromium head with an aluminum finished case.

Some of the other fine prizes are roller skates, which are of very good make and appeal to everyone. The study lamp is another good article which is made so it can be adjusted. This has a very nice bronze finish and parchment shade. The zipper manicure set with the leather covering is also an attractive award. It contains four bottles of manicure preparations, orangewood stick, file, etc.

There are a number of pen and pencils you can get. There is one set for eleven subscriptions which you can also get separately. The pen has a transparent barrel, which indicates the amount of ink in the pen. The pen also comes in different colors, and has gold fittings on them. The pencils, which also come in various colors, usually have extra lead and erasers in them.

Also there are flashlights, vanity cases, billfolds, table tennis sets, five year diaries, and many other fine gifts. You can have any of these gifts by selling the number of subscriptions as indicated in your booklets. So get busy as you only have a few days left to get your subscriptions.

Many Different Styles Are Shown In New Spring Suits

Every woman can find her suit this season. This is the first year there has been such a variety of styles.

The most popular of these types seem to be the tailored or mannish suits. The lapels are high, the collars are close and the shoulders are straight and clipped square. The effect is what a good tailor or strives for in men's clothes.

If you want a blouse you can be proud of when you take off your jacket suit, choose a satin or crepe in the softly colored styles. An eggshell satin blouse with braided cords and shirings help to add smartness to your suit. A crepe over-blouse with neat stitched ties and collar comes in the newest spring shades.

The morning suits with two separate skirts have proven very practical. A smart combination is the pencil-striped oxford skirt with the substitution of the plain black skirt.

The afternoon suits are featured with full sleeves, three-quarter length coat, and a collar of fox. If the suit happens to be one of a gray tone, bright blue accessories make a combination that is definitely 1936.

Every silhouette from the masculine to the Gibson girl, every influence, and every fabric of any importance is here, there! The all-important man tailored suits, Gibson girl dressmakers suits, Bolero suits, Manderin suits, swager suits, Reifer suits, Chesterfield suits, morning and afternoon suits, Prince Albert three-quarter suits and the two, three, and four-piece suits are most becoming this season.

Spring Coats This Season Are Featured With Tailored Styles

The spring coats this year are without fur and are of the tailored style. They are made of soft wools in blue, red, green, and pink.

Watch your sleeves, or rather the new 1936 sleeves. They are featured with large inlaid pleats that give a dashing width to narrow shoulders or else the sleeves are covered by matching buttons set as close together as possible.

Navy blues are better than ever, especially when worn with sulphur yellow accessories; with handbag, gloves, and even hat of vivid hunters pink suede. They are also very stunning with colored flowers and fruit. Navy blues are used more for dress-up coats and are generally form-fitting.

If you are a person who wants to look slim, it is advisable for you to buy a fitted coat rather than a swager.

South Side Shorthand Class Takes Contest

Students of the second semester shorthand class have won first place in the state mass shorthand contest. This contest is even more important than the individual state contest, as it shows just how an entire class can stand up to all the others throughout the state. However, a class must be among the first fifteen in order to send a shorthand team to the state contest at Maize.

The contests were conducted throughout the entire state according to the medians of the classes. South Side's highest score was 166, the lowest score 151 and the median 158.5. This median was a great deal higher than that of the school which took second place.

The highest score in South Side was made by Virginia Fathauer, who scored 166 out of a possible 168. In the entire state, however, there were two people who had scores of 167, which places Virginia in second place as far as the individual scoring honors are concerned.

Mr. Murch is going to select three people from this class to represent South Side in the state contest at Maize, Saturday, April 16. The selections will be made Thursday night.

Fort Wayne Lion Cubs To Give Sports Award

Fort Wayne's chapter of Lion Cubs, a young people's branch of the Lion's Club, is planning to give a sports award in the form of a scholarship to the outstanding athlete of the four Fort Wayne high schools.

Steve Sitko, considered by many the city's outstanding star, will be ineligible for the scholarship because of a previous award. This leaves the field of competitors wide open; the award might be brought down by a varsity man in any of the schools.

Money for the award will be raised by the Lion Cub's early spring dance at the Catholic Community Center May 1. Admission will be $1.00.

A wise advertiser who knows human nature is the fellow who writes "free with 10c" down at the bottom of his advertisement.

The average car driver is the man, who, while driving, looks at the scenery, and listens to the radio and his wife. Why, then, are wrecks so extraordinary?

It's all the same. Each writer has his share of fame. If he writes skillfully about love, he will be famous in 1936. If he writes skillfully about life, he may be famous in 2036.

The Bragger Is The Loser

Several runners were preparing for a race. One fellow was talking much of the past races he had won and how fast a runner he was. Then the race began and the boastful fellow finished last.

You ask, why did he brag so if he had nothing to back it up? He bragged because he knew he was a poor runner, because he had no other way of showing that he was as good as he wanted others to think. He wished to make them believe he was a wonderful runner. He knew he couldn't do this by running, because he wasn't good enough. So he used the only way left to impress them, to show his prowess; telling them about it. He used his tongue because he knew his legs would fail him.

What A Blessing Spring Vacation Is!

"All work and no play makes John a dull boy," someone once said, the truth of which statement cannot be doubted. Following after this thought, students and teachers of South Side enjoyed their annual spring vacation last week. We venture the guess that the past week's vacation will do more to raise grades than if the students had spent the week in the classrooms; and so we coin the saying: "Part work and part play makes John a bright boy"—at least within his range of capabilities. Vacation has a stimulating effect, both mentally and physically. It replenishes worn out brain cells, it brings back a good physical condition, after many nights spent over school books.

Spring vacation this year came in an hour of need, after some ten weeks' diet of straight school, culminated in the past few weeks by frantic cramming as the grade period drew to a close. We hope the students and teachers have come back to school in better health, full of ambition, and determined to burn up the world between now and June, when the real vacation comes.

The Grass On The Other Side Of The Fence Looks Greener

It has been said that no one appreciates the things near to him. We go miles to see certain cities; yet we hardly know the interesting spots of our own. We make long trips to see the sights of other states but we never think of really exploring our own. We worry constantly about the problems of our national government; and still we give little thought to our city government, which consumes more of our tax dollar. We go other places to see and meet important people; but we never think of meeting the many interesting and important people in our own city.

In science, art, and literature, we borrow even more from far away. We visit museums and see scientists miles away, while right here in our own state there are numbers of both. We go to big cities to scan art galleries, while the competent artists of Indiana need greatly our support. We read almost entirely the works of distant authors, forgetting the Lew Wallaces, James Whitcomb Rileys, and Edward Egglestons of our native state.

This far-sightedness is also a fault of us high school students. We pay more attention to a movie or some such entertainment than to the numerous plays and performances given by South Side students. We read the daily paper with much enthusiasm; but we sometimes fail to read the important things in the Times, our own school paper, which concern us more.

All through life we must be careful to not miss the things near to us. "What seek ye abroad that is not to be found at home?" is a wise saying, worth heeding.

Carrying On

With Bob Locke and Bob Gargett

Good evening, Mr. and Mrs. South Side. Are you ready to go to press? This is Balter Hinchell and Son bringing you the latest news flashes of South Side (we hope). Well, here goes....

Shall we start with a flash or just a little flare? We just heard something that certainly should create a big flash. John (Borman Smiterwitte) Miller has been burning up the telephone this week trying to locate his mysterious "Dimples." Keep it up, John. You're not seeking in vain.

Some of the newly-budding romances of this spring (did we say spring—zero weather) are as follows: Harriett Yapp and Chuck Worden; Ray Ballweg vs. Barbara Raymond vs. (still another) Lillian Gunzenhauser—Ray can't make up his mind, the lucky boy. Tough to be such a woman-killer. Steger and Wolford still play hide and seek around the pillars on the front porch.

Flash—One of the cutest auburn-haired girls in our dear old alma mater has had her poor heart broken by that hard, cruel villain otherwise known as John Clancey (Problem Child) Grandy, Jr. It seems that Clancey is turning his attentions to a certain Redskin from North Side. Clancey has some competition from none other than Al Kettler, also seeking the favor of this certain North Side girl. At any time of day you might hear Grandy murmur, "Let's go to North Side"—he even thought of hitching it the other night.

We are very sorry to state that a certain handsome lad in our midst has resolved to become a hermit—(you know, those guys who live in the mountains, and eat goat's milk). None other than Virgil "Rat" Duncan. Mister Duncan states that he was jilted by Charlotte Kern.

We can't understand why these kids don't get together—they should be wows—Let's see? Hobrock and Schrom (Don't get sore, Schrom, you got your name in, didn't you?) Walter Weaver and Horn (Walter was that burly lad in the fun fest.) Lizzy Faulkner and Brazy. Nuff sed—

Candid Camera Flashes—Bob Bacon looking longingly after Lizzy Faulkner as she trips down the hall—(Tush, it's all in fun)....Bonsib limping down the hall....Borton swinging it down the hall....Grandy asking Gilbert how he got bald—or if he gets half price at the barber shop....Bollman bunning a ride home....Reichert leaning on Helen Gray's locker—(Some thoughtful soul brought him a chair the other night.)

Flare—There are rumors going around that Walter (Tarzan) Weaver has been swamped with fan mail after his splendid appearance in the senior fun fest—That's O. K., Walter.

Flash—Flash—Flash—Scoop: After all that scrapperin', Harrison and Adler have decided to go steady again.

All those wishing to file suit against us will please phone Judge Harruff.

--CLEAR CUT CAMEOS--

It is rather difficult to describe a personage so indescribable as this one. One cannot put her in any particular class, as she does not belong to any class. Only her charm exceeds her versatility.

When you first meet her, you say to yourself, "I wonder what she will be like?"—and after having known her for several months, you still don't know. The reason? She is as changeable as our climate. And yet each change is just as nice or nicer than the one before.

For instance, one day she will be absorbed in science. Chemistry is one of her special hobbies; and explaining her concoctions (most of them produced with her own chemical set), she fairly sets one's head whirling.

Then, perhaps the following day, she will be orating on some current topic. She has not only eloquence, but an over-sized vocabulary (for her size).

The next day will find her writing, writing, writing—either a Totem story, one for her English class, or one for her own pleasure.

Her dramatic work must not be forgotten. She has appeared in several South Side productions. Her latest was "Frances-Francis," in which she took the lead.

Selma enjoys relating stories of her Russian background, as well as many enjoy hearing them. Although she has spent only two years in South Side, she is a member of many clubs and has worked on the Times and Totem. She has spoken in several speech contests.

Once you know Selma Liff, you can never forget this petite, dark-haired, bright-eyed senior who has accomplished so much in so little time.

Example of American credulity: "Hey, Ma, here's where it says that I can get five thousand dollars free if I can find seven faces in this picture."

If you make money on your stock investment, the company head is a master of high finance. If not, you knew he was a crook from the beginning.

Our Gift From Rome

The month of March, which was the first month of the year before Caesar changed the calendar, was named in honor of Mars, the Roman god of War. The month was so named because spring campaigns usually began about that time. The Ides of March, on which Caesar was murdered, was the Latin translation for the 15th of March. In March, July, October, and May the Ides were on the 15th. In other months the Ides were on the 13th.

Jabbercadabra

I. K.

"Yep, that's me. I'm the star initial carver. Mr. I. Karvem is the name; here's my card—Yeah, I signed the name on the card myself. Pretty good, eh?"

"Yes, yes, it's very well initialed—amm, looks quite artistic; but what's the reason that you've got initials all over it?"

"You see, that's a fault of mine. You'll have to excuse it. When I get started writing my initials, I get so wrapped up in it,—no, not the initial—that I just can't stop until I've signed my initials in every place there is on the card, at every conceivable angle, and every different size. You see, I'm a champ initial-signer."

"But Mr. Karvem, hadn't you better have put your full name on the card at least once so they would know who you are?"

"Well, yeah. I had thought of that, but you see my job is initial-signing, not name-signing; and besides I'm so famous that everybody knows my name."

"By the way, what did you say your name was?"

"Say, don't get smart. Sir, I am the one and only Karvem."

"Oh! Anyway, tell me some of the dizzy places you carve initials."

"Shucks, I carve 'em everywhere. Whenever you see the letters I. K., you can be sure I did it."

"What places for instance do you carve them?"

"Oh, on desks, floors, tables, trees, buildings, walls, rocks, turtles, sheds, mountains, etc. Sometimes I write them on people's shoe soles so they will be always stepping on me. Then, too, sometimes I carve 'em on people's books, clothes, pictures, and other junk like that."

"You evidently don't respect other people's property very much, eh?"

"Certainly not. I have a supreme contempt for property. I, sir, am a professional initial carver and care nothing for the yelps of the common horde."

"It really must be funny, though, when people find out that you have wrecked their clothing and stuff by carving your initials on them. Ha-ha-ha. Pretty funny, ha-ha-ha. Ha-ha-ha."

"Yeah, I enjoy that a lot too, ha-ha-ha. Well, I'll be going now."

"Well goodbye.—Hey wait a minute here! What have you got cut in my brand new hat? I. K.—Why you dirty—!"

Waggin' Tongues

Another week, another column....

But with vacation over, one must get used to these things.

We are told that John Miller has a hard time trying to study in the library with Bonnie Craig around. That is very silly, John. You are wasting your time, because she has a big Deahl on her mind that she can't forget. No offense. Just a little friendly advice.

One of the most valuable things in life is to be able to listen. It seems that whenever Frances Knight sees Paul Kennedy (our popular cartoonist), her heart sounds like an alarm clock. Listen some time; maybe you too will hear this strange phenomena of nature.

What makes Morgan Harrison pass people in the hall and not speak to them? Certainly he couldn't have a superiority complex! If so, it is about time he was getting over it. Can't you do anything about that, Ruth?

Nominated as the biggest pest of the week—Fritz Lohman.
Best looking girl of the week—Lizzy Faulkner.
Best looking boy of the week—Dick Busch.

The names Busch and Faulkner seem to run hand in hand in more than one way.

Maxine Howard has at last got the date with the boy of her dreams, Dick Korn. He is a graduate of North Side. Tall, blond, and handsome. Right, Max?

George Anna Martin and John Bex certainly show that their interest in each other is more than purely platonic. He seems very interested in her lessons. They look so sweet, helping each other through all of the difficulties of school life. Maybe the rest of us have missed something by not giving this a try.

Dick Schaffer says that courtship is that period which lasts from the time a boy starts chasing a girl until the girl catches him. It must still be a courtship then, between Betty Joe Wilkenson and Earl Hoy, because he is still chasing her.

Spring weather is getting the best of us, so here we go outside to breathe some fresh air. See you next week.

Skis

I hope that I shall never see
A stick so tricky as a ski;
Steer that darn thing as I will,
It always rides me to a spill.
The skis lie quiet till I'm on;
Then without notice they are gone.
Down, down we run; I'm filled with glee.
Good gosh! I' msunk, here comes a tree.

Secrets to Seventeens

Here It Comes—Uh-one, uh-two, uh-three—ready, girls? The boys have been frank in expressing their opinions of us this week.

The new fads, gum-blowing and "burping," seem very detestable to our masculine admirers. Now, when we think of it, we cannot say these habits are at all attractive or refined, can we?

Even though we are expected to be smartly arrayed and well groomed, boys bawling at a girl's fussing about the rain making her hair come down or taking the powder off her nose. Just keep such worries to yourself!

The movies seem to create quite a few pet peeves for boys. In the first place, many boys dislike having a girl insist that the evening be spent at the theater. They enjoy carrying on an interesting conversation with you. They can see a show almost any day. If boys do take their dates to see a show, they dislike for their dates to rave about the handsome screen romances—there's just something about it!

Concerning the feminine sex, gentlemen prefer sport clothes and good ports. Vitality; strongly clever jokes, and even Little Audrey stories; "cute" tricks; jassellaizing; and a willingness to enter into any fun the crowd thinks up, are lauded long and loudly by the fellows.

Make the conversation light and airy. Don't fume over family trials and tribulations. Our modern boys are well-read, so naturally they have not omitted articles to girls telling them to "tactfully cause a boy to talk about himself and his interests—he loves it." The result is that boys render "being worked on" in this fashion. Handle with care, girls—avoid explosions!

The White Elephant Of Cochrane High

CHAPTER III

"Hurry, bud!" shouted Detective Collins "five dollars if you make the airport in five minutes."

During the wild ride that followed, Collins sat huddled on the back seat, tense and motionless. His agile mind was plotting each detail of the ensuing chase.

The driver pulled up in front of the airport with a flourish. Collins was out of the cab like a shot, paid the driver, and hastened to the office. There he encountered his first difficulty.

"Sorry, sir, but the plane is all sold out," the wizened little man inside said.

However, when Collins showed his badge, the man said, "I'll see what I can do. Hurry, the plane's leaving in three minutes!"

As the plane soared into the clouds, Detective-Sergeant Collins leaned back in the cushioned seat and drew a deep breath. He had thought for a moment that his mission was to stop before he had started. During the two-hour ride to Chicago, the detective calmly read his notes over again and memorized the features and general appearance of his quarry so thoroughly that he thought he would recognize him under any circumstance.

Detective Arrives in Chicago
As the plane dropped down from the clouds and glided to a gentle standstill on the Municipal Field at Chicago, the detective jammed his hat on and stepped over to the entrance. He was the first passenger out of the plane; and he rushed over to the taxi stand, leapt into a waiting cab, and gave orders to the driver to drive to the Pennsylvania Station as fast as he could.

According to Collins' calculations, if the boy and man had left town on the next train after they had bought their tickets, they would arrive at Chicago at 8:10. It was just 7:48

Thru The Wringer

O. K., here's your chance to air all your gripes and grievances. Because so many contributors to the mailbox have asked for such an opportunity, a special feature has been added to this column. Each week someone's Pet Peeve will be printed. If yours is used, you will receive a box of Jell-o as a prize, for twenty-five cents. Pet Peeves for this week are: No. 1—Wearing a fur coat and galoshes to school in the morning to keep from freezing, and then having to carry them home in the afternoon to keep from smothering. No. 2—Having to study when there's something else you would much rather do.

And now to that ancient custom of "wringing"....According to Phyllis Bundy and Emily Lepper, Bruce Bradbury is a D'Artagnan, Cellini, and Casanova all in one—such technique.... Art Maxham is back in school, that is, in the thoughts of Eleanor Liby.... Jack Beemer raves on about being an opera star and living in a cabin in the mountains, quite an appropriate place for an aspiring young singer to live, we'd say.... Jack Voorhees is a member of the "Lonely Hearts Correspondence Club"—The receiving end of this affair is a cute little freshman.

Margaret Beck and Delores Crumrine have fallen for Robert Budde, but he doesn't do anything about it. Tut! What's your trouble?.... "Won't You Give a Broken Heart a Date" Don Lauer, or at least give Betty Broderick credit for trying?.... James Roth could give Mary Ellen Blauvelt a break without making her mad.... Couldn't you give just a "crack" to Clara Thompson, Bob Lee?.... Old Dame Rumor has it that Don Hickman thinks Betty Clark is—well you know what.... Janet Hartman and Martin Bohn are getting along.

Vernon Gregory has his hands full in the library after school, trying to keep up with three of his ardent admirers.... A new club has been formed, known as the Fish Club. In filling out application blanks, you have to enumerate the different times you have been a fish with the opposite sex.... Guess most anyone could join that club.... Morgan Harrison and Ruth Adler have re-joined the fast-growing ranks of those going steady—It must be a new fad around here. It kinda makes all "free lancers" feel fickle.

When he arrived at Chicago, and it seemed that his frantic haste would avail him nothing. But he urged the driver on, and it was 8:05 when he arrived at the station.

He alighted from his cab, paid the driver, and pushed his way through the milling throng.

In his haste, he bumped against a towering mass of flesh which turned angrily on him and shouted, "Why don'tcha look out where yer goin', fella! Say, for two cents I'd knock yer block off!"

But his menacing look faded into a sheepish grin as the detective flashed his badge at him, and the detective rushed madly on. The huge iron gates separating the tracks from the platform clanged shut in his face as the train bearing his quarry roared away.

Collins fairly howled with disappointment. It was cruelly exasperating to be so close to the runaway and then to lose him again!

Wearily, he turned away and once more started for the airport. Then he quickened his pace, and once more the mad race was on. He had just remembered that the eastbound plane left at 8:30 P. M.

Rush Necessary
This time, the rush was more desperate than before because, if he lost this plane, he would have lost his last chance to head off the man and boy before they arrived at New York; and, indeed, he feared that they would get off before they reached New York.

It seemed that bad luck was following him like a shadow, for, just as he raced pell-mell from the ticket office, the plane zoomed off the field, and the detective was stranded for nearly five hours. The next plane going east did not leave until 1:20.

The detective decided to spend the hours catching up on sleep; so he accipied.

Shoes and Ships

SLEEPLESS NIGHTS—Those two old masters of the whip, ye old honorable Messrs. Patrick Murphy and Wilburn Wilson, certainly caused many of their studious stogees to watch the clock hands approach the wee small hours of the morning some days ago. It seems that an economic crisis was being approached in which the stock of one's grade took a sudden fall if one's notebook was not completed. We wonder if there could have been any trading and exchanging of preferred stock in last year's notebooks.

PUNITIARY FLASHES—Although guns have no legs, they are able to kick. They do this with their breeches.

A pair of roller skates and an apple are much alike in that they both have occasioned the fall of man.

Then comes the story of the young ladies who attempted to hang their coats over a music rack, which soon tipped over. Either their coats were too heavy or the music was too "light."

No miller need ever be out of employment, for he can always grind his teeth.

REVENGE—From very reliable sources we hear that Miss Dorothy Durbin has been studying the methods Cleopatra used in getting her men. It seems that Dot now needs some advice on how to get rid of one after he has been captured and secured.

PUNILOGIC DEFINITIONS—

A smart thing—a mustard plaster.
A door belle—a pretty housemaid.
New book—"The Stray Wig" by the author of "The Wandering Heir."
A well-built woman—one having an alabaster neck, marble brow, and arch expression.

A PERFECT "36"—An excellent illustration of what Leap Year will do to this modern generation can be found at one of Fort Wayne's popular show places each evening. It seems that the members of the fairer sex now get the boy-friend. Among those who patiently waited for the dismissal of the ushers recently were BonSilene Craig, Maxine Howard, and Vera Craie.

AGED IN THE KEG—It is very singular that almost all the preservers of fruits and vegetables get what they can.

You can clear a barn of rats in ten minutes by setting fire to the hay in the mow.

George Hart and Mary Soul have been married. They entered into matrimony heart and soul.

TSK, TSK—Rumor has it that the person who smuggled out of the downtown library some choice reference books for the extemp contest is none other than Mrs. Jones' little boy, Myron. Well, that's one way of getting an edge on your competitors.

CURRENT COMMENT

By Margaret Gross

"Their Master's Voice"

A Bad Week For Aviation
European Powers Still Arguing

BAFFLED—During the short stay of former President Hoover in Fort Wayne, he received the following telegram from California from his two dogs, Oujia and Son. "Son and I are happy to hear your voice again. Please hurry home to those who love you so very much. (signed Oujia.)"

Upon receiving the telegram, Mr. Hoover told friends that whenever the dogs hear his voice over the radio, they run from the basement to the attic of the house in search of him; and when their search proves fruitless, they go down and lie down beside Mrs. Hoover with puzzled expressions on their faces.

TRAGEDY—Last week was a disastrous one for the airplane industry. Crashes occurred from Vermont to the Caribbean. The deaths were most numerous and tragic in the mountains of Pennsylvania, where sixteen were killed. Five army fliers met their death in a crash near Fredericksburg. On Tuesday, eleven more were killed in a crash of the T. W. A. plane "Sun Pacer" on a mountain side near Uniontown. Three others were injured.

On the following day—Wednesday—two were carried to death when a plane dove into a field near Hamilton, Ohio. On the same day, a student pilot was killed. Another pilot was killed and his mechanic hurt on the same fatal day. The tragedy of the "Puerto Rico Clipper," a Pan-American plane, plunging into the Gulf of Paria, just off Trinidad on Saturday, brought the American aviation death toll up to twenty-three for the past seven days.

RECESS—After a hectic week of international conflict, Great Britain's diplomats gained a recess from plans for European peace. However, serious arguments among the great powers were still prevalent as statesmen returned to their homes for the Easter holidays. Especially are these arguments between Britain and France, over a plan to hasten a settlement of the Italo-Ethiopian entanglement and also over essentials of Europe's attitude toward Germany's re-arming. They decided to postpone the meeting until May, while Britain again approached the Nazi Reich for a settlement. The League's conciliation committee adjourned until today, while they

Archers Meet Laporte Team In Track Event

Southern Squad Defeated By Orange And Black In Former Year's Contests.

Prospects Bright For South Victory

After Triumph Over Goshen Green Expected To Take Most Of Its Opponents.

South Side's track squad will engage in its second outdoor meet of the season when the team participates in the invitational meet at Laporte Saturday. The Archers' opponents at Laporte will be Riley of South Bend, Knox, Nappanee, and Laporte.

The Archers have participated in this invitational meet for the past four years, but have never taken first place honors. The Green squad this year has high hopes of capturing the meet for the first time.

Saturday's meet with Goshen served chiefly to bring out some of the good material for Coach Lundy Welborn. Bob Miller proved to be one of the best middle distance men on the Green's squad when he captured the 880-yard run in 2:18.

Two-Team Meet
Last year's meet proved to be a two-team meet between Laporte and South Side, with the former nosing out the Green. With the power that the Kelly Klads showed in the dual meet at the Southern stadium last Saturday, it is the squad's hope that this year's meet will be a one-team affair. But with the strength that Laporte and Riley of South Bend have shown in their previous meets, they are certain to give the Archers much competition.

Ed Leitz, who showed much power and strength in the competition last week by winning the broad jump and shot put, will prove to be a strong contender for the events at Laporte. If Leitz and the relay teams can place first in their events, the Archers have a good chance to win this meet.

Terrapins, New Club, Is Organized At Y. W.

A new club, the Terrapins, was recently organized at the Y. W. C. A. by South Side girls. Meetings are projected for every other Saturday. Swimming occupies much of the program, followed by business meetings. Martha Ann Bacon is president; Betty Pugh is secretary. Emily Gardner, South Side, '35, advises the group, which is made up largely of girls who attended Camp Yarnelle last summer.

Bob Smith, Of Central, Wins Kiwanis Contest

Bob Smith, Central senior, won first place in the first annual Kiwanis declamation contest, held at Central Tuesday afternoon. The winner's topic was "The Meddler's Confession," a dramatic reading. Others entered were Manuel Rothberg, South Side; Harriet Snyder, North Side; and Jerry O'Dowd, Central Catholic. A silver loving cup is presented to the winner, who keeps it if he is able to win the declamation three times.

Ed Leitz Attributes Success To Playing Leap Frog Once

By Luther Prociac

Introducing none other than Ed, "Champion easy-taker", Leitz. Yes, it's that handsome, five-foot nine-inch, one hundred and sixty-five pound track man who makes all of South Side's feminine hearts go pit-a-pat.

Why does Ed claim the title of "Champion easy-taker"? Here's the reason, folks. Instead of going out and "stomping it up" with the other boys late at night, Ed stays home listening to the radio and generally "taking it easy." Prevailed upon to make a statement as to what he attributed his success, Ed says with modest pride, "I am probably the best shot-putter, easy-taker, and broad-jumper that ever was." He coyly added, "I guess it was because I started early. I always was pretty good at playing leap frog and at heaving rocks at people's windows."

If you wish to see Ed in action, just go out to the stadium one of these evenings. There you will find him, along with Nelson Miller and Pooty Schoppman, earnestly working up a sweat in his endeavors to throw the lead pellet out of the stadium.

Ed has been a consistent point-getter on South Side's track outfit for several years, specializing in the shot-put and broad-jump events. He is a letterman and is well on his way to a second letter. In the dual meet with Goshen Saturday, Ed broke the field record by putting the shot two feet over the old record. He also made a broad-jump of twenty feet and one inch. These are good marks for the beginning of the season; Ed expects to better them before the end of the season.

Ed, who will be eighteen years old on July thirtieth and who graduates this June, imparts this information as to his future: "I want to be a civil engineer or the chief, most-all-powerful rubbish picker-upper at the Chicago ball park." Well, here's to bigger and better pickings, whatever and wherever you are, Ed!

All Intramural Softball Teams Must Sign Up

The time for intramural softball entries was opened Monday, four entries being turned in. More are being expected later in the week. The entries close tomorrow night; all team captains are urged to have their teams in by then. The first game of the season is scheduled for today. The Sluggers will oppose the S. O. M. A. C.'s. Both teams are in the heavy-weight class.

Boys need not be afraid to enter if they have failed in a subject, as subjects have nothing to do with the intramural sports. There are two divisions, lightweight being to 115 pounds and heavyweight being 115 pounds and over.

Girls' Gym Classes Show To Be April 24

Roller Skating, Dancing, Sports, Games, Varieties Features Of Annual Girls' Exhibition.

Of the many different divisions of the Girls' Physical Education Department, the skating, dancing, and gym sections have made definite arrangements so far for their portion of the forthcoming exhibition. All of these divisions are working hard on their various presentations to be given April 24.

The roller skating demonstration will be of unusual interest as it will be given for the first time. The skating is one part of the whole sports review which will introduce the exhibition, and will be the first number of that demonstration. There are about ten girls who have been practicing fancy figure skating daily for the last few weeks in the handball court. It is being directed by Miss Smith.

Different sports, such as track, speedball, hockey, baseball, and football will be done in pantomime by the members of some of the gym classes. The number of girls taking part will approximate 150. After the various sports are presented, the whole group will join in a tap dance done to the accompaniment of drums by Roy Jones.

The members of Miss Patterson's gym classes will present recreational games of Scottish origin. These games are an annual event held at Roundtop, Connecticut, and at Montreal, Canada. The girls will present only a small portion of the festival which is entitled "Highland Flings."

The exhibition will have as a special number on the program a few selections on the bagpipes by Mr. William Dunbar, who has been kind enough to consent to render his services as part of the entertainment. It has not as yet been decided whether Mr. Dunbar will accompany the group in their Scottish games and dances. Miss Patterson's dancing classes will present a dance entitled "The Foursome Reel." The members of the Dance Club will also present a Scottish dance called the "Sword Dance."

The beginners' tumbling group are working hard on their mass stunts which they will present as their share of the exhibition. Advance tumbler have not started work on their stunts yet, but they will work out some very good stunts as their contribution to the exhibition.

Ed Leitz broke the South Side field record in the shot-put with a record heave of 45 feet and four inches, bettering his former record by more than two feet. He also turned in a good performance in the broad jump to win that event and tie for second in the individual scoring with Phend of Goshen, who won the 100 and 220-yard dashes.

Intense rivalry has been created between the half-mile and mile relay teams, because Friday the half-mile squad gave the mile group a seven-yard handicap and beat them. But the mile relay team replied that they always take it easy on Good Friday.

For the first time in many years, in the dual meet with Goshen, the Archers took first place in shot put, broad jump and pole vault. With the support of Ed Leitz, Nelson Miller, Ed Kruse, and Chuck Stone, the Green should be strong in these events in future meets.

To create more interest and competition among the track squad, Coach Lundy Welborn held a practice meet Wednesday during spring vacation.

Jack Fleming, former South Side student and now co-captain of the Northwestern track team, practiced with the Archers during spring vacation.

The University of Southern California track and field squad took its first step of the Olympic year to defend coast and national championships by beating California 93 to 38 recently.

Judy of Goshen proved to be an all-around man, in the meet Saturday, placing in four events. He captured the high jump, was second in each of the hurdles, and tied for third in the pole vault to become individual scorer with 11½ points.

The North Side Redskins showed great power Saturday when they defeated Kokomo, state champions the past two years, for the first time.

Poorman was high-point man for the Redskins, placing first in the 440-yard run and running anchor man on the mile relay team, which won first place and clinched the meet for North Side.

Lettergirls Meet, Discuss Play Day

Program In Form Of Discussion On Swimming, Dancing; Refreshments Served At Close.

Swimming and dancing were the two subjects discussed at the Lettergirls' meeting Monday afternoon in the handball court. The program was under the leadership of Marjorie Hower, vice-president.

Ruth Goeglein reported that the skating party was one of the largest and most successful parties of any put on by a South Side club. Another report was given by Barbara Scheele concerning the Play Day plans. All lettergirls from North Side and Central High Schools will receive invitations to attend this party, the object of which is to promote good will and sportsmanship between the three high schools.

Marjorie Hower gave a history of dancing, bringing out the point that dancing might be older than man, because certain animals are known to dance. Betty Lou Lindenberg read a poem which brought out the grace of a dancer. The history of swimming was given by Margaret Dickmeyer, Vera Louise Krueger gave an account of what women have done in the swimming world. Miss Alice J. Patterson also commented on the famous swimmers she has seen and met, among whom are the well known Kampa sisters.

Games were then played, and powdered doughnuts were served as refreshments.

Fort Wayne Splashers End Season With Win

The Fort Wayne Y. M. C. A. swimming team ended its season Saturday with a 46-29 victory over the Dayton Y. M. C. A. in the local pool. Local splashers won six firsts in the eight events and showed power in all. Hildebrand of Fort Wayne was high-point man of the meet, scoring first places in the 40-yard and 100-yard free styles, and was a member of the winning 160-yard relay team. The local team has had a fine record for the year, losing to but two teams, George Williams College and the Huntington Y. M. C. A.

Two of the most outstanding members of the Fort Wayne team are members of South Side High School. Jerry Zehr, whose brother Dan is a prospect for this year's Olympic swimming team, is one of the most valuable members of the Y's team this year. Jerry specializes in the 100-yard backstroke and is also a member of the 100-yard relay team. Al Kelso, the most valuable member of the diving team, is also a South Side. Al is considered one of the best divers in the state.

The summary follows:

100-yard relay—Fort Wayne, first. C. Leuenberger, Scott Hildebrand, Zehr; Dayton, second.

100-yard breast-stroke—Zahn (F. W.) first; Ronicker (D) second; Lamb (F. W.) third.

100-yard back-stroke—Zehr (F. W.) first; Hison (D) second; D. Leuenberger (F. W.) third.

40-yard free-style—Hildebrand (F. W.) first; Retter, second; Scott (F. W.) third.

220-yard free-style—C. Leuenberger (F. W.) first; Schwetzer (D) second; D. Leuenberger (F. W.) third.

Diving—Kelso (F. W.) first; Lamb (F. W.) second; Zahn (D) third.

100-yard free-style—Hildebrand (F. W.) first; C. Leuenberger (F. W.) second; Schwetzer (D) third.

cepted the manager's invitation to occupy a back room in the office. It was almost one o'clock when his gentle snores died away and he sat upright in the strange, dark room to hear the howling of the wind and the beating of the rain on the metal roof.

In a driving storm, the detective hurried with upturned collar and down-turned hat brim to the huge, roaring airplane.

This time, he embarked safely and with plenty of time to spare. He settled down in his corner and promptly dropped off to sleep again.

When they arrived in Roosevelt Field, at New York, the passengers of the plane surged out into the early morning sunlight. William Collins, among them, took his time looking about him. Confident of success, he arranged with the ticket agent for three tickets back to Cochrane via Chicago.

Then, once again, he took a taxi. This time, however, he directed the driver to take him to a modest hotel just a few blocks from the heart of town.

Since there were still four hours to pass away before the arrival of the train, he contemplated his first move. Then he decided that a shave and bath and breakfast would suit him exactly.

Collins Motors To Small Town

After breakfast, Collins hired a car and driver and motored to a small town about thirty miles from New York. Here he dismissed the driver and car and proceeded on to the railway station. The train was scheduled to stop there for a few minutes; so Collins sat down to wait. As he sat there, he conversed with the skinny old stationmaster who had grown grey and old in his ill-paid job but had always considered himself lucky to be making a bare living.

The detective swung aboard when the train came to a standstill. He talked to the conductor a moment and then walked on into the coach which the conductor had instructed him to inspect. He slouched down into a seat and proceeded to take stock of his fellow passengers.

There were few people in the car, and almost immediately he caught sight of the ones whom he pursued so diligently.

The man was evidently an Italian, one of the peasant class, with a heavy, scowling face and a thickset, awkward body. His outstanding feature was a huge wart on his left ear.

The boy accompanying him was of athletic build; had dark, rather wavy hair; and was dark-skinned. His face, which appeared to be ordinarily tan, was underlaid with pallor; his dark eyes were dull and lusterless.

The boy stared almost unceasingly out of the window at the ever-changing landscape. However, the man glanced about him again and again, his glance always encountering the detective's stealthily.

Just before the train drew into the station, the detective approached the two. The boy made a valiant but unsuccessful attempt to conceal his alarm; but his companion took the offensive and denounced the detective in voluble Italian.

Captures Prisoners

His words were of no avail, however; the detective, convinced by the accuracy of the descriptions of both, securely handcuffed the two together. Then he searched them for weapons. When he discovered a pistol in a shoulder-holster on the Italian, he decided that these prisoners would bear special watching.

When he herded his sullen captives out of the train and into the huge, tumultuous station at New York a little later, this decision was well borne out. In spite of his attention, the older man managed to wrench his arm loose from the detective's grasp; and, dragging the boy along by means of the handcuffs, he raced into the crowd.

Collins shouted, "Stop those men! Stop those men! They're wanted by the police!"

This attempt at escape availed the two little, however; for in a moment two husky porters had them in their iron grasp.

The two, although sullen, were quite docile on the trip out to the airport; they evinced no emotions whatever when they were shown into a small room and told to sit down.

The detective addressed his words to the boy first. He said, "Are you

Nathelle Cour

Nathelle Cour, South Side sophomore, the daughter of Howard Cour, 528 West Main Street, died at the St. Joseph Hospital at 10:40 a. m. Thursday, April 9, following an automobile accident Sunday morning.

Miss Cour died without regaining consciousness, after the auto in which she was riding collided with a taxi cab at Spring Street and St. Mary's Avenue. Death was attributed to a cerebral concussion and a skull fracture.

Nathelle was fifteen years old, came from the Hoagland School, and took the college preparatory course. She attended the Third Presbyterian Church and was a junior member of Ben Hur Court No. 15.

Dick Hamilton?

When he received no reply, he went on, "If you won't answer, I'm afraid I'll have to search you."

He emptied the pockets of the silent pair. Then he looked at the collection on the table.

"Well, well," he ejaculated as he saw a newspaper clipping of a group of young football players in the stuff extracted from the boy's clothing. "Thought you were smart, eh, kid? Well, you clipped off the names and data concerning this picture, but you didn't take the 'C' off the sweaters on the boys' suits, and you didn't remove your own picture. These are Cochrane boys without a doubt."

Detective Shows Knife

The boy said nothing. The detective went on, "And here's a knife with the initials D. H. on it. Well, you can't conceal your identity from me, my lad. Say, why aren't you with your team?" he added, hoping the boy would accuse the man of kidnapping.

The man answered gruffly, "Say, buddy, you got the wrong guys. This kid is my nephew. I'm takin' him to New York for a visit. It's legitimate, see? You ain't got nuthin' on us, see?"

The detective could get nothing more from either of the two, although he questioned them for nearly an hour. More than ever, he thought that the boy was Dick Hamilton; but he could not imagine why he was silent.

At last the plane was ready to leave. The detective marshalled his charges out of doors. However, as the captives neared the ship, the swarthy man said, "Well, detective, where are ya' aimin' to take us? Ya know ya can't take us out of the state, don't cha?"

Detective Collins stood still, mouth open, eyes bulging; he was just plain flabbergasted. He had overlooked the fact that he had to have extradition papers from the governor to take his prisoners out of the state!

Even at the prospect of a respite, the boy showed no emotion. He seemed to be paralyzed by a great fear or by deep regret; he had neither spoken a word nor changed the expression on his dark, good-looking face, which was so like the picture of Dick Hamilton snug in the vest pocket of Detective Collins.

Detective Sends Telegram

The detective finally decided to send a message to Cochrane before seeing the governor. He telephoned the following message to Western Union:

"To Coach Gregory Jackson, 109 Pasadena Avenue, Cochrane, Iowa.

Man, boy caught—stop—Need permission from Governor to bring back—stop—Arrive soon as possible—stop—Collins."

Next, Collins took his prisoners to the county jail and saw them safely lodged.

The next lap of his journey was destined to failure. He telephoned to the governor's mansion at Albany but was told that the governor was in conference. He called after this at half-hour intervals for two hours, but could get no results.

In desperation, the irate Collins hired a car and drove to Albany. When he arrived, the slender unsmiling under-secretary informed him that the governor had left to attend a parade in New York in honor of Anne Connet and Cal Acton.

"They've just finished their non-stop flight around the world in six days," she said.

Once more, the detective was left gnashing his teeth on his ill-fated journey of justice. There was nothing to do but wait, which he did.

Bands blared, confetti came down in torrents, and shouts filled the air as the huge black sedan rolled down the broad street carrying the victorious flyers. Detective Collins, stirred against his will, watched the endless procession.

Troop after troop of trim Boy Scouts in their immaculate uniforms marched in regular lines down the streets. The New York "Sun" band followed, playing in martial rhythm. Soldiers, sailors, Girl Scouts, policemen, and firemen followed in orderly array. Huge, fantastic floats loaded Dalton McAlister, a sophomore here, took first place in the annual high school discussion contest sponsored by the local Rotary Club.

Representatives from the three public high schools of the city, Elmhurst, and Central Catholic spoke before the Rotary members at their noon meeting Monday at the Chamber of Commerce.

James Jackson of North Side High School was the runner-up.

Dalton is automatically entered in the Rotary group contest to be held Monday night in the auditorium of Central High School against winners from Hartford City, Decatur, Bluffton, Columbia City, Kendallville, Auburn, and Angola. The winner will compete in the state finals held at the time of the Indiana Rotary district convention at Lafayette in May.

Fort Wayne Hears Address By Former President Hoover

Fort Wayne was privileged on April 4, to have as its distinguished guest Herbert Hoover, former President of the United States. He gave a political speech before a Republican rally at the Fort Wayne Gospel Temple.

On entering the temple, one saw a large auditorium that can hold approximately four thousand people. To accommodate the very large crowd, bleachers had been erected and a large number of chairs placed in the aisles. The temple was decorated with red, white, and blue bunting. Above the speakers' stand hung a large colored cloth picture of Mr. Hoover.

Long before the entrance of the ex-president, the auditorium was packed to capacity. An estimated 4,700 were present, and others were turned away at the doors, even though they held tickets.

When Hoover entered the auditorium, he was greeted with much enthusiasm, the crowd standing and cheering him.

Mr. Hoover spoke with ease and force, weighing each word before he said it. At times, he flavored his speech with humor, once likening the New Deal to a white rabbit which speeds hurriedly in uncertain directions and multiplies its progeny rapidly.

At the conclusion of Mr. Hoover's speech, he was again greeted with loud enthusiasm. While leaving the auditorium and before disappearing from sight, Hoover bade the audience goodbye with a sweeping wave of the hand.

Meterites Hear Film Endorser Tuesday

Mrs. John D. Bostic, a member of the Fort Wayne film endorsing committee, spoke before the last Meterite meeting in the Greeley Room Tuesday.

The speaker was introduced by Dorothy Hall. Dorothy also read a story about Hollywood extras. Ruth Bode played the "Song of the Bayou" on the piano.

A committee was appointed to decide a theme for the annual Mother-Daughter tea, to be held in the near future. Those on the committee are: Dorothy Hall, chairman; Betty Daniels, June Holzworth, and Betty Neeb.

Central Takes First In Band Competition

Central High School's orchestra won first honors in the Northern Indiana band and orchestra contest, held recently at Peru. The win makes the musical group, under the direction of Gaston Bailhe, eligible for the state contest to be held at Elkhart, April 22 and 23.

Besides the orchestra's triumph, the Central string trio, the woodwind quintet in the senior division, and Marion Menze, violin soloist in the junior division, won their way to the state finals.

The 1937 contest will be held at Columbia City. Approximately 3,000 musicians participated this year.

More than 5,000 persons watched the 28 musical units parade the downtown streets as the closing event of the two-day program.

Tickets are in charge of Selma Liff. The price is fifty cents a couple or thirty-five cents stag. Tickets may be purchased at any time from officers of the club, committee on tickets, or in Miss Dochterman's room.

The programs, which are in charge of Mary Martha Hobrock, will be in a combination of colors conveying rays of light.

The officers of the club who are assisting in the plans for the dance are: president, Rosemary Chappell; vice-president, Kenny Scott; secretary, Marie Mitchell; and treasurer, Stuart Trulock.

Chaperons for the dance will be Mr. and Mrs. Merle J. Abbott, R. Nelson Snider, the Misses Martha Pittenger, Dorothy Magley, and Erma Dochterman, and parents of the officers, the Messrs. and Mesdames J. H. Chappell, E. C. Mitchell, and A. C. Trulock, and Mrs. H. Kiwanis Series On Vocation Is Well On Way Medicine, Chemistry, Nursing, Dentistry Are Topics For Session Given Today.

Henry Meyer Heads Guidance Program

Judge McNabb, Mr. Louis Wade, Mr. Geo. Muist, Mr. Skelton Spoke This Week.

Four professions, medicine, chemistry, nursing, and dentistry, will be represented in this afternoon's session of the second annual Kiwanis vocational guidance series, which was inaugurated at South Side on Monday morning of this week. The meeting this afternoon will be held in the cafeteria and will be open to every interested student.

The speakers who are slated to talk today are Dr. L. F. Harshman, whose topic will be medicine; Miss Pearl Brown of the Perfection Biscuit Company, who will talk on chemistry as an occupation; Miss Delta Schmoer, of the Lutheran Hospital, who will speak on nursing; and Dr. L. S. Tucker, whose talk will be on dentistry.

McNabb Speaks

Judge Clarence McNabb was the first speaker to be featured in this part of South Side's activities in the series. His topic was "Preparing for the Future." Mr. Henry Meyer, supervisor of physical education in the city public schools and head of the committee on vocational guidance for the second consecutive year, presided at the meeting and introduced Judge McNabb. Mr. Meyer's assistants this year are the Messrs. Oscar Clem, D. Oswald Jones, John Slater, Willis Richardson, John Richardson, and Herman Sigrist.

In his talk, Judge McNabb stated that in the last four or five years some twelve million boys and girls have graduated from the high schools of the country, and of these few are employed. Because of the financial condition in these trying years, there are more cases of the various forms of insanity in hospitals than of any other illnesses. From Allen County alone, there are three hundred thirty-eight persons isolated in the Plainfield state institution for mental diseases. This figure excludes sixty persons who are home from the institution on trial, epileptic cases, soldiers, children, and those who have the advantage of being cared for in private homes or hospitals. To offset those evils, Judge McNabb urged the pupils to further their educations as much as possible so as not to be burdens on society.

List Others

Prominent Fort Wayne business people who spoke on Tuesday afternoon are Mr. Louis Wade of the Wade Advertising Service, who spoke on advertising; Mr. George Buist, whose topic was accounting; and Mr. Tom Skelton of the Lincoln Life Insurance Company, who spoke on office management.

At North Side and Central Catholic high schools, the Kiwanis Club has nearly completed its program. Central is not participating in the current vocational guidance series, but is carrying on its own program under the direction of Mr. Fred Croninger, principal; and Robert Wyatt, social science instructor.

I. O. U's Are "Out," As Pay For Food

If ever you see "Liberal credit to those over 80, if accompanied by parents" inscribed on the cafeteria wall, you will have guessed rightly that cafeteria charge accounts are now O-U-T.

Thus, one would deduct that although Wimpy hamburgers are served there, Wimpy don't get them.

Present financial conditions prohibit the charge accounts. Henceforth, only cash or a turn at dishwashing will procure for one a tasty meal.

National Honor Will Hold Tag Day Soon

National Honor Society tag day, which is a semi-annual affair at South Side, will probably be held the fore part of next week, according to Mr. Herman Makey, chairman of the nominating committee.

A meeting of the committee was held last evening at the home of Miss Martha M. Pittenger to finish the selection of the members. About forty new members were chosen. Seventeen January graduates were selected last November on the basis of leadership, scholarship, character, and service.

Members of the nominating committee besides the chairman are Miss Gertrude Oppelt, Latin instructor; Miss Mabel Thorne, mathematics teacher; Mr. Earl H. Makey, head of the commercial department; Mr. Herbert S. Voorhees, head of the science department; Miss Martha Pittenger, dean of girls; and R. Nelson Snider, principal. The latter two act in an advisory capacity and have no vote.

Alice J. Patterson, Edith Crowe Direct Next Health Week

Health Week this year will feature swimming. The program is under the direction of Miss Edith Crowe and Miss Alice Patterson. There will be two films shown in the Voorhees Room Tuesday and Wednesday, April 28 and 29.

The pictures that are to be shown are very interesting. One is a film of champion swimmers and divers in various championship events. The film was obtained from the Red Cross of New York.

The other pictures show the technique of swimming. This film should be of exceptional interest to those persons who are interested in the technique of swimming. This film was obtained from the University of Illinois.

Besides being shown in the Voorhees Room, the films will probably be shown one day to all the girls' gym classes and the next day to all the boys' classes. They may also be shown one day in the Study Hall.

Everyone interested should try to see these pictures.

Archers Place High In Music Contest At I. U.

K. Witmer Wins Medal;
Betty Kreischer, Betty Lickert Win Scholarships.

Betty Kreischer, Kathleen Witmer, and Betty Lickert, of South Side, received gold medals in the finals of the annual Indiana High School Music Contest at Indiana University April 16. The two Bettys also won scholarships to the Indiana University School of Music. Both won them in cello competition. Kathleen received her award in the piano division.

The victors won the right to compete in the state finals by placing first in regional competition held recently at North Side.

Kathleen Witmer competed against twenty-one people to win her gold medal. In the cello division there were eight contestants. Kathleen's award is equivalent to those won by Betty Lickert and Betty Kreischer. A scholarship was not given her, however, because Indiana University feels it has nothing to offer her, due to her advanced knowledge.

The contest, sponsored by the Indiana University Extension Division, was held in conjunction with the Hoosier Music Festival April 16-18.

Awards were presented at a banquet Thursday evening. Franklin Peddie, of North Side, also won a medal and scholarship in the voice contest.

Clean-Up, Conservation Program Is Presented

Conservation of birds, flowers, and recreation areas, and clean-up in all lands were the main themes of the assembly held Thursday in the gym under the sponsorship of the Conservation Club and the Inter-Club Congress.

The part of the program which was put on by the Inter-Club Congress consisted of skits and German, Spanish, and Scotch songs. These depicted clean-up in all lands.

The program put on by the Conservation Club consisted of six parts. The first depicted wild-flower pickers, and was enacted by Mabel Bevington, Pauletta Stienbarger, and June Bly. For the second part Ruth Fowler presented the cat as an enemy to the song-birds. Franklin Bly and Richard Burley did a skit in which they were small boys hunting birds. Bill McNutt illustrated the methods of illegal fishing. Eileen Mentzer showed by posters the ways in which pupils may become acquainted with wild flowers and birds.

Careless picnickers were depicted by Gladys Shifflet, Mabel Bevington, and Jane Worthington. A display of bird houses which was borrowed from the Hoagland School Pioneer Club was presented for the purpose of showing how birds may be attracted to our homes.

Today Is Birthday Of Two Very Well Known Personages

Do you know what today is? Thursday, huh? That's all you know about it! If you don't know what today is, you're one of the most benighted persons who walk the face of the earth, and stuff. Today, ladies and gentlemen, is the birthday; no, that isn't right—it's the birthdays—well, anyway on April 23, long centuries ago and not so many years ago two very famous persons were born.

Long centuries and not so many years ago, did you know? Ha, you still don't know the half of it. On April twenty-third (is this the second time we started the same sort of sentence?) Shaly Shirkspere—(that doesn't sound right, does it? Start over again, Willie Tempest—wrong the fifth or sixth time. This time it'll be right: On April twenty-third two very prominent personages came into being—a boy who was determined to write poems and plays and piffle that would give nightmares to two thousand odd South Siders and a girl who was destined by the same fate to sing songs and dance dances and smile smiles (is this getting a trifle complicated or is it just the spring?) that would be the envy of every other little girl—and some big ones—in the land.

Making Story Longer
You say you still don't get the connection? Well, to make a long story longer, April twenty-third (there's that date again!) is the birthday of William Shakespeare and Shirley Temple. In 1564 there arrived in Stratford, England, the boy who was to become so well acquainted with human nature as to enable him to write plays and poems (this is getting serious now; we'll omit the "piffle") that portrayed more accurately than any literature ever published, the habits and fancies of the thing called man.

Somewhere around 1928 or 1929 there came to Beverly, California, a curly-headed little girl who was to become so generously endowed with the right qualities of human nature so as to enable her to sing and dance and act so well that hardly a person who sees her on the screen can help but wonder and admire the genius of so tiny a person.

To the man who died so many years ago, may your Macbeths and Caesars and Rosalinds live on for many more centuries to come. To the charming little girl who helps so much to make everyone's life a little cheerier, may you live on and on; and may your sunny smile continue to light a million paths as always.

Teacher Is Punished
For being late to class, a teacher in Cleveland, Ohio, was given a period in the detention hall.

Sophomore Parents To Be Party Guests

Parents of members of the sophomore class will be guests at a booster party sponsored by the South Side Parent-Teacher Association to be held Tuesday evening, April 28, at 8 o'clock.

Music and games will be featured in the entertainment, which will be held at the school. Refreshments will be served. A small admission will be charged at the door.

Totem Kodak Men Train Camera On Post-Easter Parade

Spring brings love, laziness, and larceny. Occasionally a spring also brings some sunshine, and this has lured the Totem photographers from their flash bulbs and gloomy rooms into the open air.

After school, in suitable weather, Homer Miller, the page-boy, may be seen and heard running through the halls informing certain students that they are to be "shot" outside the main entrance. A few minutes' grace is always asked by most of the girls to run to lockers to give their hair the "once-over." The ever-ready boys carry a comb with them.

After being led to the desired place of execution, the condemned are grouped with one or two others from their class to be shot at the same time. Then the photographer (who incidentally always has his back to the sun) tells you not to squint but to smile sweetly. Then snap! and it is all over; and if you want to see the results—subscribe to the Totem or complete your Totem payments immediately so that you will be sure of receiving your yearbook at the end of the year.

There are still too many students who owe money on the Totem, and payment arrears must be made up this week.

Archer Team Wins Honors In Shorthand

Individual Award Of Second Place To Leona Menze; Contest Held At Muncie.

South Side's beginning shorthand team composed of three stenography II students won second place in the annual Indiana State High School Commercial Contest which was held at Ball State Teachers' College in Muncie on Saturday, April 17. Second place individual honors went to Leona Menze, junior class member of the team.

The high schools of Michigan City and Martinsville tied for first place in the general commercial contest by winning the most points in all divisions of the work. The two schools will share possession of the Governor's Cup, which is awarded for general excellence, and the typing and shorthand cups. Each school will be permitted to keep the trophies for six months.

In the beginning shorthand and typing divisions, which was the only section South Side entered, Michigan City won with a total of 539 points, South Side captured second place with 535.7 points, and Martinsville finished third with 533 points.

Individual honors in beginning shorthand and typing went to Miriam Glofcke of Michigan City, who succeeded in attaining 182.7 points; Leona's second place total was 182.3; and third place went to Ruby Smith of Peru High School, who had 181.3 points. It is interesting to note that the first place winner's total was only four-tenths of one point higher than Leona Menze's.

After the contest was over, the members of the team who were Virginia Fathauer, Leona Menze, Katherine Simminger, and Louise Gerding, alternate, were guests at the victory dance and dinner which were held as parts of the regular competition events. Miss Martha Pittenger, dean, accompanied the contestants from South Side to her farm near Muncie where they stayed until Sunday. The team members and Miss Pittenger returned to Fort Wayne early Sunday evening.

Accompanying the team members were Dorothy Fathauer, sister of Virginia, who won first place in the advanced division of shorthand and typing last year, Mr. Earl H. Murch, head of the commercial department here, and Mr. Harold Windmiller, typing teacher.

These games will all be played in taps by members of Miss Smith's classes. Following this will be the Scottish games, which will be presented by members of Miss Patterson's classes. The sword dance will be presented by the Dance Club.

Dance To Bagpipes

The basketball game will be played between members of the Junior and Sophomore honor teams. These teams were winner and runner-up in the honor tournament which was held recently. Dick Helm Wins Wrangler Debate

Miller, McAlister Take Second;
Third Goes To Charles Hart;
Joe Bex, Bob Storm Entrants.

By a unanimous decision of the judges, Dick Helm was declared first place winner in the extemporaneous speaking contest featured at the last meeting of the Wranglers' Club Monday in the Greeley Room. He won this honor with his speech entitled "Freight by Highway."

Second place was tied for by Vernon Miller and Dalton McAlister with the respective subjects, "Don't Be a Lawyer" and "Trial by Newspaper." Third place was awarded to Charles Hart, whose subject was "Wake Up and Live." The other two contestants and their subjects were: Joe Bex, "Quiet Please," and Bob Storm, "Small Town."

The contestants were notified three weeks ago that contest subjects would be drawn from the February, March, and April issues of the "Literary Digest."

Fifteen minutes before the subject, the speakers drew their subjects. These talks were from four to five minutes in length.

Judges for the contest were Mr. Sterner, Miss Virginia Montgomery, and the members of the Wranglers' Club.

The contest was the first of its kind to be held by the Wranglers' Club, but it is to become an annual event.

A silver medal will be presented to Dick at the honor Wranglers banquet, May 12.

Ice cream bars were served at the conclusion of the meeting.

Mother-Daughter Tea Planned By Meterites

A colonial style tea is scheduled as the annual mother-daughter event of the Meterites, it was announced at the last business meeting of the club. A play, carrying out the colonial motif, is also planned. The committee that arranged the theme was: Dorothy Hall, chairman, Betty Daniels, June Holzworth, and Betty Neeb.

At the next meeting the club plans to review the picture, "The Trail of the Lonesome Pine." There will also be a discussion of film endorsing.

Many people class Gertrude Stein with Shakespeare. They can't understand either one.

So Mussolini is winning Ethiopia. Well, from what we have heard about the place, he can have it.

A woman is that someone who heckles you, quarrels with you, and slaps your face, but still makes you like her.

Wall Street is the place where everybody thinks he has the right tip and tries to beat everybody else to it.

Theatre entertainment changes. Once it was the father, the villain, the drunk, the hero, and the girl. Now it's the girl.

Every time some European nation criticizes our policy of isolation, all we have to do is to remind them of the war debt.

If you like the fellow who jumps at every chance he has to make some more money, he is an ideal business man and a go-getter. If you don't, he is a grasping, avaricious, selfish beast.

Don't Be A Pessimist! Be An Optimist, And "Keep Your Sunny Side Up"

Many, many definitions of the words optimism and pessimism have been given, but all can be condensed so as to say that an optimist is one who looks on the bright side of things and a pessimist is one who looks on the dark side of things. To illustrate: Two students had each an A and a C on their grade cards. One student said that the A "pulled up the C." The other said that the C "pulled down the A." Judge for yourself which was the optimist and which the pessimist.

One interesting thing about this is that the optimistic person is the person who accomplishes things, and that the pessimist rarely does; and if the pessimist does accomplish something, it is not often for the good of the world. Very few pessimists have ever been known as great men, and those who have, have been fearfully admired rather than loved by the people, and were great in spite of their pessimism, rather than because of it.

As it is in the world, so it is in high school. The optimistic student is the person who does things and will be a better citizen because of it. The pessimistic, bitter, and cynical student is not the type that accomplishes things and becomes a beloved citizen.

Imagination, Spirit, And Mind Play A Part In Appreciation Of Music

"Who is not moved by concord of sweet sounds is fit for treasons, stratagems, and spoils." Every person who hears music should be, in some small way, emotionally affected by it. It is not necessary to understand music completely to appreciate it.

Music is a rhythmic combination of pleasing sounds that has been interwoven with the development of the human race. The primitive people had a better sense of rhythm than of melody. Later, as man became civilized and educated, he demanded more than the rhythmic beating of drums; he wanted melody. Rhythm was an expression of his love of motion; melody was the result of a desire to create, which is an integral part of every human composite.

The listener must understand and remember this to truly appreciate the real beauty of music. Every composer, when he writes his melody, has a definite plot in mind, just as a novelist has before he attempts to write a novel. Whether he is to tell of the flight of a bird, a love story, or a dreadful storm, he knows his subject before he starts and is conscious of it throughout the entire melody.

To appreciate music, one needs no education in music—merely a willing imagination to picture the composer's plot, a willing mind to concentrate on the story the composer is trying to tell, and a willing spirit to appreciate the natural beauty of music.

Carrying On

With Max Howard and Dorothy Durbin

All aboard! Just two minutes before the train pulls out of the station and into the future. The station is crowded with some happy and some unhappy couples bidding each other fond farewells. Among them we find Gwen Horn and Terry King, whose romance came to an end during vacation. Not far from them are Dorothy Crabill and Bill Wilson. We not only see split-up romances, but also a few just blossoming into flowerhood. These include Dick Helm and Forrestine Valentine, Dave Steger and Juanita Wolford. Over in one corner we see "Robin" Zieg and "Minnie" Heller, who are rather undecided as to whether they should take up their journey together again or continue traveling alone, meeting only once in awhile for a short portion of the journey.

The train is ready to pull out, so now let's go inside and go along with the conductor, as he collects the tickets, and pick up a little gossip.

The first tickets he collects are from two of our illustrious students, Wayne Bennett and Marty Hobrock, deeply engrossed in conversation. From what we can hear, the conductor decides that Wayne should be an attorney because he is so able to plead his own cause.

The next seat appears to be empty, but never fear—it belongs to Dick Busch, who is under the seat trying to avoid his ardent admirer, Lizzie Faulkner.

Down the aisle a little way we see Dave Stoner trying to fight off a flock of his admirers. The most persistent among them seems to be Boo Boo Wermuth.

Anita Catlett is one of these people who are most contented in a crowd. Of course, she prefers some crowds to others. At present she seems to be thoroughly enjoying her journey with Dick Orr, Dick Vogelsang, Eddie Reeves, and Lizzie Well, we always say "the more the merrier," Anita. And to be sure, there's safety in numbers.

As we amble down the aisle, we are rudely jostled by Louis Bonsib selling magazines, newspapers, etc.

And as the train slows down a bit for a crossing, we are thrown off balance into the lap of the very lovely Marian Patterson. We would like to stay awhile, but business before pleasure.

The next seat we approach is occupied by Margie Lou Wickes and Bill Hall. Well, we can't be surprised. After all, when two people go steady for six weeks, one would be more surprised at not seeing them together.

Across the aisle Jerry Zehr is trying in his own quaint little way to amuse Marilyn Benninghoff. Don't give up Jerry, Marilyn is easily amused.

We are about to come to Niagara Falls, the end of our trip. Little Cliff Schrom is trying in vain to persuade Jean Bollman to get off the train, but he decides that selling just must not be his line. We notice, however, that Herbie Kramer and Roseanne Certia can't get off quickly enough.

On The Character Of Horses

If we should tell you how many times we've been tossed to the high heavens or had a toe stepped on by a horse, you would think that we gnash our teeth at the sight of them. Instead, we admire them very much and hereby resolve to pay tribute to one of the servants of mankind.

Of course there are many different kinds of horses. As the proverbial expression goes: there are big ones and little ones, fat ones and skinny ones, tall ones and short ones, narrow ones and wide ones, bony ones and smooth ones, rough, fuzzy ones and slick, shiny ones. However, it seems to us that, after all, like our own illustrious group, their character depends not on their size or shape, but on the allotment of gray matter that has been placed between their ears. Some have that proud, high-spirited, yet gentle temperament that causes them to carry themselves most splendidly on all occasions. Others seem to lack this element of gentleness and self-control. They rush madly about uselessly expending all their energy. We sometimes think they are like some of our present-day members of the fair sex. They have contracted the "vanity disease." There are also a few vicious, ill-tempered horses. It is well sometimes to remember that horses, as a rule, are about as "far off" on the far-famed wing-sprouting practices as we animals of higher mental processes. However, if every horse were perfect, wouldn't that be a grand slam on our own crowd?

Yes, we say that the horse is a dumb animal. However, it oft-times apparently seems that he has considerable better judgment than the one at the other end of the reins, who is probably absorbed in some delicate "personal problem," which causes him to entirely neglect Old Dobbin. It's a pity that horses can't talk, for, of all the silent onlookers, including the moon, the stars, and the trees, we imagine that the horse could give us some very enlightening and perhaps startling information on these delicate, dangerous problems of the heart.

Of course this refers only to milk-men's horses and saddle horses, certainly not to ash-wagon horses. We really pity the ash-wagon horses leading such a dull, unromantic life!

After all, we think probably the most commendable tribute that has been paid the horse is the remark, "That man has good, common horse sense."

It is said that, in the future, electricity is to be our servant in every line of activity; but shall we forget our old faithful servant, the horse, and the noble service he has rendered to mankind and the whole world in general?

Secrets to Seventeens

Community Mail—Once again, girls,

we give you some idea of the likes and dislikes of those you aim to please, the boys. The college boys have very definite opinions about the girls who pass their letters around as though they were the daily newspaper of Posyville. The more cultured high school girls realize that a boy's letter is a personal message, and that its being "passed around" only lessens its value to the owner. Fellows boo girls whose motto is "I can keep a secret"; the only trouble is that the people whom I tell can't keep one!

Inconspicuous "Specs"—As to personal appearance, here's a new one, especially for girls who wear glasses. Boys say they really do not mind "specs," if the girl wearing them arranges her hair and dresses accordingly. Avoid giving a "cluttered up" impression. This appearance is often caused by droopy ear-rings, heavy necklaces, and tiaras. Glasses seem to fade away in the shadow of a brimmed hat; on the other hand, tiny, close fitting hats and berets display them very obviously. Believe it or not, but eyebrows arched to follow the rim of the glasses help a great deal. Perhaps boys do not stop to reason all this out, but at least they have a vague idea that they do not mind some girls' glasses, while they detest others.

Popeye Wins Out Over Mussolini
So Nazimova Became An Actress

POPEYE—Mr. E. C. Segar, cartoonist who originated the comic strip "Thimble Theatre," said during his short stay in Indianapolis last week that he created Popeye when the Oyl family was going on a cruise and needed a sailor. He little realized at the time that the mariner would immediately dominate the scene and push the Oyl family into the background, with the possible exception of Olive Oyl.

Mr. Segar and Mr. J. V. Connolly, general manager of King Features Syndicate, both spoke officially at Butler University and over station WFBN, the former speaking about Popeye, the latter about Mussolini. "I talked louder and longer about Popeye than Mr. Connolly did about Mussolini," said Mr. Segar with deep satisfaction.

"It was swell at Butler. I really felt free and I had lots of room. I drew all the characters in the strip and used up so many blackboards that it will take the janitor three weeks to clean all of them." He added that Popeye's next opponent will be a giant who also eats spinach.

STAR—Alla Nazimova, now first lady of the legitimate stage, came to America from Russia thirty years ago with the great ambition of being a concert violinist, after studying and playing in symphony orchestras under the direction of Tchaikovsky and Rimsky-Korsakoff. Upon her arrival she was given a part in a play on Broadway, instead of receiving a job with a symphony orchestra. When the play closed, Alla Nazimova prepared to return to Russia, but was persuaded by one of her American friends, Howard Herrick (now her "advance man" on the road), to remain in America, learn English, and go on with a dramatic career. She learned the English language well enough in five months to go on the stage.

Today, Miss Nazimova is considered the world's greatest interpreter of the works of Henrik Ibsen, and large audiences pack the theatres throughout the country wherever she appears. Her presence on the stage is considered the outstanding event of the season in every city where she is booked. Next week Miss Nazimova will appear in Ibsen's "Ghosts" at the Shrine theatre here in Fort Wayne. She is now 55, but it is said that she looks 20 years younger.

Thru The Wringer

Oh, yes, great idea this Pet Peeve business; only trouble is that everyone is too contented these days. Maybe nothing is peeving you, but did you ever try selling Senior Play tickets to a bunch of freshmen who can't understand why they charge the exorbitant price of 35 cents for a three-act comedy?

Ah ha, Scheele has been smitten by that green-eyed monster "jealousy." In fact she has it so badly that she cannot bear to have Don Reichert ever speak to another girl.... Jack Birkenbeul has inveigled someone out of her G. A. A. pin (cherchez la femme).... Johnny Hines is beginning to suffer a Payne from Helen (don't get worried, it's probably only growing pains).... They all fall at last, even confirmed man-haters like Mable Redding. We guess Junior Ellinger was the reason for her changing ideas.... Harold Schmidt is under the delusion that he has found his ideal girl in Betty Jaebker. Everyone feels like that in the spring, or is it spring now?.... Paul Geary and Barbara Arney may be doing a Romeo and Juliet act, but what we'd like to see is the "balcony scene"....

The Junior Prom is only two weeks off, and—well, why don't some of you boys do something about it?... Girls may come and girls may go, but dates go on forever. That seems to be Don Sparkman's policy. He does not seem to mind the loss of Jeanette Kellogg, his one time "steady".... Bob Storm has definitely taken L'il Sweet Pea, I mean Geranium, oh well, you know I mean Lillian Gunzenhauser out of circulation.... Wonder if the rumor's true that Wayne Rolf is making headway with Helen Kelsey.... Take a tip George Moses—Evelyn thinks you are Pest No. 1.... Here's the latest thing: wear a blue and red dress like Alice Shifflet's and Jack will give you a candy bar.... Another girl who rushes the season, Mary Jane Staley, has gone for the track star, Albert Hinton.

A BIT OF BAD WEATHER

"Yes, that's me. I'm the weatherman. I make the weather for the whole world."

"Say, it's sorta cold in here. Don't you think?"

"Hm—can't say that it bothers me any. You see I'm used to all kinds of weather. But if you want it a little warmer, I'll change it for you."

"Thanks, feels warmer already. But to go on with this interview: How do you enjoy your work?"

"Oh, I have a lot of fun. I get a great kick out of spoiling those newspaper predictions. When they predict Fair and Warmer, I enjoy making it snow, or pour down rain. In fact, I get the greatest joy out of making people say: 'Ain't this terrible weather, though.' It turns me up when anybody says: 'I do believe it's going to be a fine day, today!'; then I get revenge and be sure to make it a terrible day."

"You're pretty tough on the people. Don't you ever please anybody with your weather?"

"Yeh, I do once in a while. Now like when some people go to Florida in the winter. Then the other people up North, who couldn't go, say they wish it would get unbearably hot in Florida; and the people who go to Florida say they hope it will get 20 degrees below freezing up North while they are in Florida. Well then, I roast 'em in Florida and freeze 'em up North. Thus I please everybody."

"That's quite interesting. But tell me, what things do you dislike the most?"

"That's easy. My pet peeve is seeing people wearing weather prophets. Another thing that gets me is when the young brats squeal out: 'Rain, rain, go away! Come again some other day! I and Johnny want to play!'"

"And, by the way, what is your theme song?"

"Isn't This a Lovely Day To Be Caught in the Rain?"

"Just one more thing: Nice weather, isn't it we're having, if it doesn't rain—"

"Crash, bang, thud. 'Oh well! I was ready to leave anyway, and coming through the window was a short cut.'"

Our Gift From Rome

Civics students! Have you been hearing anything about intangible taxes? Do you know where the name comes from or why the tax is so-called? Intangible is derived from the Latin verb tango meaning touch, and the prefix in meaning not; together, they mean not able to be touched. Intangible taxes, then, are taxes on possessions which can not be touched by the tax official.

Waggin' Tongues

Spring vacation seems to have played a bad trick on poor little Terry King. It seems that Gwen Horn just couldn't be content with one, especially when Indiana University holds such strange delights. Don't take it so bad King—every cloud has a silver lining.

It is surprising how many of our alumnae come home from school gone simply "Joe College." The worst one seems to be Eugene Jackson. Conway is doing as well as can be expected under the circumstances.

We seem to have a very talented girl among the stately portals of South Side. Did all you see the picture of Helen Gray in the paper Saturday night? Yes, boys she is still going with Bob Moody.

It kind of looks like the fading romance between Bob Zeig and Minnie Heller is going to brighten up again. They have a lot of dates in the future, and, if we know anything about it, we predict a very smooth romance about to come forth and see the light again.

Lois Rea and Paul McConnell are just beginning to feel the effects of spring, anyway they seem to be walking around with that forsaken look in their eyes.

What is this strange power that Ann Winters has over Chester West? It seems that he left town and, when last heard from, was in Texas.

Betty Lee Wilson spends most of her time in the Times Room. Could it be that this room holds some strange attraction for her? Yes indeed, and it is no one else but our dashing romeo, Charles Hart.

Well, that's all for this week. Had enough? We thought so.

The White Elephant Of Cochrane High

By Elinor White and Laverne Boyce

CHAPTER IV

Dick was more than startled when he heard that he was going to Canada that night with the last load of furs; he thought he must be dreaming. He soon realized the truth of the smuggler's words, however, for the entire gang began to carry out the crates of furs under the direction of the boss. Buzz had been ordered to keep an eye on Dick, to whom the process of loading the furs was extremely interesting.

Some of the crates had become loosened in their previous shippings; so their contents were dumped onto the floor while the crates were nailed together again. After the crates were repaired, the old newspaper wrappings surrounding the furs were removed and replaced by fresher editions. Never before had Dick seen such a quantity of beautiful furs.

After a time, the work became boring, and Dick picked up an old discarded newspaper. It was dated Saturday, November 23, 1930, and was a special football edition of an Army-Navy game. Hoping to find a play which might help his team win Saturday, he began to read a play-by-play description of the game. He realized that his chances of playing in the game were very slim, for he would be in Canada soon. Even if he was not in Canada, he would have to escape some way. Also, if he escaped, he would be disqualified because of the essay that was due for Mr. Phillips. However, if he worked out a play, he might be able to mail it; or—

"What's on yer mind?" muttered Buzz, interrupting Dick's thoughts.

"Huh? Oh, I was just trying to figure out some way to get a play for that game tomorrow to my coach."

"Say listen," whispered Buzz. "Kinda' move over in that corner so they can't hear us. I got things to say to ya."

Boys Become Good Friends
A warm friendship had developed between the two boys, who were so strangely different. While Buzz walked nonchalantly around the room, pretending to be interested in what was going on there, Dick carried his chair over to a secluded corner and pretended to read his newspaper once more.

"Thanks, kid, for gittin' out of our way," said the foreman. "Buzz, you'd better get over there with him."

"It worked," whispered Buzz after he had joined Dick. "Now, listen; I know I could get yer play mailed O.K. until late tonight or tomorrow morning. They can't possibly get all the junk out of here before Saturday night; so they'll probably send us off soon. We might even— Here, he bent over Dick's shoulder as if looking at the newspaper, and whispered into the quarterback's ear. "We might even plan with yer coach for some escape."

Dick glanced at Buzz to see if he was serious and found a strange look on his face.

"Sit down on the floor, Buzz, and tell me what's on your mind."

"Wal," sighed Buzz, sitting at Dick's feet, "it's like this: If I stay with the gang, I'll get caught sooner or later; while, if I get away, I've got a 50-50 chance of never being caught. I could go straight then; and I might even make something of myself like you're doing," he added wistfully.

"Hm," said Dick thoughtfully. "Well, we'll figure that out later. The play for the game's more important now. At least, we can mail the play, like you said, even if we don't get out. Now, let's see—"

"What kind of a play do you want?"

Shoes and Ships

PRIZE PUN—The Nobel Award for the best pun of the year should be deposited on the doorsteps of the editorial rooms of the Purdue University newspaper. In the April Fool issue of this paper, which was printed in red ink, the West Lafayettes notified their advertisers that this was one issue that would be "red" from cover to cover.

WHAT THE DICKENS?—What English instructor will blush at this one? Recently a certain pupil, in answering a question, repeated the words of the outstanding authority on Dickens upon the subject being discussed. Imagine his surprise when the instructor informed him he was entirely wrong in his idea.

SIGHTS TO SEE—Luther Precise, Myron Jones, Bryce Minier, and Dick Helm attempting to set up an extension ladder.... Marjorie Rohrer trying to get out of the Library and failing.... Miss Montgomery smilingly handing pink slips to students who pleaded illness after dancing most of the night before. (She goes to the dance and "spots 'em").... Herman Makey, Jr., following the luscious Dush demand with that moony look in his orbs.... Miss Patterson taking "Heather dear" out for his sun bath.

BURP—Then comes the young man who wonders if the Bugburg Bugle will play "taps." If so, he wants that, big, bad desperado, "Dillinger" Snider, to do the blowing.

LOST SECURITY—Many persons formerly gained positions as major staff members to insure themselves security from the vile dirt columns. The "Times" have changed, however. It is now impossible to protect your "honest" name.

SLAPS—It has been reliably reported that Bob Adams and Ann Abbott are considering taking up winter sports after all the "Skidding" they have done during the last few weeks.

NOTICE—It has been demanded that an apology be printed in this column for statements made in last week's column, about the extemp contest. Far be it from this column to pass judgment on mere rumor, so this can be considered a sincere apology, if the statements made last week were untrue. This column can neither confirm nor deny the rumor; the accused knows best whether or not he is innocent. And if innocence is the verdict, this column apologizes wholeheartedly. But if last week's statements are true, things stand as they did last week.

Buzz Demonstrates Play

"Now, it works like this," began Buzz after handing the paper to Dick. "The ball is passed to 1, who drives ahead over 7 and 3. Then 2 drives ahead, bumps T, and blocks F, 3 drives ahead to block either C or F, whichever is the more dangerous man. Then 4 fakes to left. 5 blocks out T, 6 and 7 take care of G, 8 blocks C, 9 and 10 take G out. 11 bumps T and blocks F. How's that?"

"Say!—That's a winner! I didn't know you knew so much about football. Now, let's see—" After a careful study of the play, Dick shook Buzz's hand and whispered, "I think it'll work. It seems to be the one we needed. It surely is a surprise!" A pause, then, "What's your idea for escape?"

"Wal, lean over here so I won't have to talk so loud. The gang and I will be leavin' for eats about six. They'll leave somebody with ya until I get back. Now, when I go, I'll take yer order, bein' back yer grub before I eat. I'll advise you to order soup. It'll work better. Now, when I come back, I'll have my hands full; so I'll kick on the door. You be kinda wanderin' round that way; but don't stand so you'll be behind the door when it opens. Be so's you kin rush out. I'll throw the soup at whoever opens the door; so watch out! Then, we'll run for it."

"Oh, I see!" exclaimed Dick under his breath. "My guard will be so scared that he won't realize what's happenin'. You'll be back early enough so the others won't interfere?"

"Yea—sure. See, I'll tell the boss I'm goin' to bring back your grub first, then eat. See?"

"Say! that's great! Put 'er there, kid;" and once more the two grinned at each other and shook hands.

Plan Unsuccessful
About fifteen minutes of six, the boss stopped the work and dismissed the men so that they could eat.

"Be back in thirty minutes," he ordered; then, turning to Buzz, he said, "I'm leavin' Smith with the kid till you get back. Get the kid's order and beat it." Then he turned to the negro and began giving him his orders.

Buzz whispered to Dick, "I'll be back in exactly ten minutes with the soup." Then he left with the boss.

Muttering about being hungry, Dick began to pace the floor. The negro paid no attention to him but kept right on repairing crates. Dick looked at his watch.

"Buzz ought to be here soon," he thought. "I'd better wander over toward the door."

Seeing a calendar by the door, he walked over to it and began to study it. He jumped when Buzz kicked the

Kathleen Witmer, Betty Kreischer, and Betty Lickert were awarded gold medals in the finals of the Indiana High School Music Contest held at Indiana University on April 16. Fair Prospects Displayed By Redskin Squad This Season

North Side, city track champions for eight years, will display a fair Redskin track squad this spring. Although it is too early in the season to make any definite predictions or statements, it is indicated that the Redskins will probably have a good squad for 1936.

There are no outstanding new prospects; veterans from last year are plentiful. Roger Poorman and Al McMeen remain from last year and will compete in the middle distance heats. McMeen also runs in the dashes. Poorman looks very good for this early in the season.

For field prospects there remain from last year Shilts, Ivey, and Joe Shumm. Shilts is a pole-vaulter with an enviable record. Last season in the city meet he set a new city record of 10 feet, 9 inches. He too has improved from last season. Ivey high jumps and will be a hard man to beat this season. He is very consistent, which adds to his reputation. He jumped consistently around 5 feet, 11 inches last season and once went up to six feet. He has improved this season and will be tough to beat. Joe Shumm is a distinct threat in the shot-put and is improving steadily. season at Hammond is as follows:

Thirty-Two Withdraw Since First Of January

Thirty-two students have withdrawn from North Side since the first of the year. Most have found employment while others have moved out of the city or to other parts of Fort Wayne. Four have quit for no definite reason and one was married. Two new students have entered school during the past week. They are Linda Norma Miller from Lake View High School, Chicago, and Louise Barnes from Three Oaks, Michigan.

Those who are no longer here are Raymond Racine to North Side, Arleen Schoenefeld quit, Alicerose Reynolds illness, Ellen Woods, Eugene Beck, Milton Shank to Maryland, Victor Seewald to work, Robert Crawford to work, Robert Wiebke, James Sarton quit, Ray Bender to work, John Kuhn to Dayton, Virginia Hemmer to Cincinnati, Bob Augsburg quit, Louise Bredemeyer to work, Donald Steinhauer to Lafayette Center, Ruth Dillon to Chicago, Norman Theye to work, Harold Krauskopf quit, Ed Locker to California, Betty McKown to Monmouth, Indiana, Neva Beckett to Churubusco, Merl Norris to work, Jack Canning to work, Carl Nelson to Indianapolis, Earl Howard to work, Sherman White to work, Floyd Neireiter to work, Mae Turner to Central, John Worline to work, Mildred Shepler was married, and Frank Glusen-kamp to work.

Ambitious Scholar Calculates Minutes, Seconds Left In Term

By Don Helm

Around and around it goes, and where will it end—do you know? What, you don't know! Are you ignorant! What do you mean you don't know what I am talking about? Mmmm—now I know you are ignorant.

Now listen, we will start all over again—No this isn't an April Fool joke. I'm trying to explain something. Do you want to know what that something is? Now don't try and tell me that I didn't tell you what it was. All right—All right! I'll tell you what I'm trying to tell you can tell what I'm going to tell you in more complete figures.

Well, anyway, I'm trying to tell you when school will end. What, you know when school will end? All right then, will you be so kind as to tell me just when school will end? What, you say it ends in June? Well, of course, but I bet very few know they have only 189 periods to go, starting today. Oh! you think that is something, huh? Then let your eardrums vibrate on these facts. Since we have 55 minute periods, there are only 10,395 minutes to go; or we only have 623,700 seconds to wait before they parole us.

You say your going to begin to save your money? Hey! listen! Freshmen, what has saving money got to do with what I just told you. (The silent party at last speaks.) "Well, the way those figures sound, I'll have to buy a razor and shaving mug to dispose of my whiskers which will be about sprouting about the day I'll want to attend the graduation exercises next June." (Laugh, dear readers.)

Mardi Gras Topic Of French Club Meeting

The interesting and elaborate preparation for the celebration of the annual French holiday, the famed Mardi Gras, will be the topic for discussion during the program of the French Club meeting to be held today at 3:30 o'clock in the Voorhees Room. Many picturesque balls, parades, and other social functions take place during the annual Mardi Gras celebration in New Orleans; a glimpse into these various affairs will be given the members by several speakers.

The official French Club pin will be awarded at this meeting to the members who have the highest number of points. In order to be eligible for a pin, the member must be a senior.

During the short business meeting which will precede the program, plans will be discussed for the annual club picnic which is held as the last meeting of the school semester. Committees for this affair will be appointed by Virginia Wood, president.

Advertising Does Four Things

If you conduct a retail store, there are four things you wish to do.

- (1) You wish to HOLD all of your present customers.
- (2) You wish to SELL more goods to your present customers.
- (3) You wish to REPLACE with new customers the old ones who move away.
- (4) You wish to INCREASE THE NUMBER of your customers.

Thus you have four objectives. Not one of these objectives can be reached by doing nothing. None of these objectives can be wholly realized without advertising in

The South Side Times

Bryce Minier, Leona Menze, Joe Bex Place

Win In Feature, Editorial, Vocabulary Divisions Of Quill And Scroll Contest.

Bryce Minier, Joe Bex, and Leona Menze, three students from South Side who were entered in the Quill and Scroll vocabulary, editorial writing, and feature writing contests respectively, won honors in the judges' decisions.

Joe Bex, sophomore, won fourth place in the East Central States division of the editorial contest. This district includes Indiana, Illinois, Ohio, Michigan, and Wisconsin. Joe is a member of the editorial staff of the Times. His editorial was "Can We Abolish Poverty?"

In the feature writing contest, Leona Menze received honorable mention. Her feature was an interview with Miss Dorothy Benner about the radio programs that Miss Benner dislikes. Leona is a star reporter and circulation manager of the Times.

Bryce Minier, student adviser of the South Side publication, won honorable mention in the vocabulary division of the contest.

The papers of other students were submitted to Miss Harvey, who acted as the judge of the local contest. One winner from each group was selected and sent to the National Quill and Scroll contest held at Northwestern University.

Besides those students from South Side who placed, three North Side students also won awards. Cornelius Ryan, editor of the "Legend," received honorable mention in the editorial division; Harry Smenner, managing editor of the "North Star," received fifth place in the feature writing contest; Virginia Blakely, student adviser of the "North Star," received honorable mention in the vocabulary contest.

Sharps And Flats

From both the band and orchestra comes the news that South Side is again leading in up-and-coming soloists who someday may make their debut in the presence of world-famous directors and composers. Mary Jo Allen has chosen the well-known Beethoven Sonata, with orchestral accompaniment, with which to make her violin enchant the school body at a future assembly. "Triplets of the Finest," a cornet trio, is at present being rehearsed by Bill Nickerson, George Glenn, and Don Hickman. This selection also has band accompaniment, and as a lively, snappy solo, it will add much color to a concert.

Norwood Dalman and Bill Knocke, two '35 graduates, will soon return home for their summer vacation from the University of Miami, Coral Gables, Florida. The boys received scholarships to this college through the help of the Wainwright Camp, which they attended each summer. They have been specializing in music, studying languages, and have been in training for the college swimming team. One unforgettable experience they had was being in the last Florida hurricane when they grapefruit, oranges, and coconuts came flying at their heads; but they both agree there is nothing like warm weather all winter, and they hope to return to complete their education.

A new type of study has been introduced into the music department by Director Wainwright. The band has been divided instrumentally, and each section holds practices one eighth week. The purpose of this action is to further the student's musical knowledge in his own instrument. It is compulsory if he wishes to continue his band work. The students in charge and the time of meeting are as follows: Clarinets—Myron Jones, Tuesday.

Trombones—John Lyons, Wednesday.

Saxophones—Dorothy Mertz, Wednesday.

Cornets—Bill Nickerson, Thursday. Flutes—George Stralem—Thursday. French horns—Jean Meyer, Friday. Basses—Glenn Gregory, Friday.

Last Friday evening Mr. Wainwright directed a minstrel show, given by the Exchange Club at Lagrange, his home town. The show is an annual event and was given this year for the benefit of the Boy Scouts of that territory. Several students from South Side went to furnish music for the entertainment by comprising an orchestra. These students are Betty Kruecher, Glenn Gregory, Don Hickman, Dick Snook, Goy Jones, and George Stralem. The musical stairs, a vod-vil feature, also was given as a special feature.

So-Si-Y Presents Unusual Program

"All Hands On Deck," Hobby Theme, Is Subject; Avocations Discussed By Guest Speakers.

One of the most unusual programs to be presented this semester by So-Si-Y was given on Tuesday afternoon in the Greeley Room with "All Hands On Deck," a hobby theme, as the subject.

Miss Margaret Jones, secretary of girls' work at the Y. W. C. A., was the first speaker on the program. Her talk was about the various interesting hobbies followed by her acquaintances. She also told something about her own avocation, scrapbooks of interior decorating stamps, and poetry. Following Miss Jones' talk, Mrs. Grace Laswell, prominent radio artist, gave two whistling solos to her own piano accompaniment. Her selections were "Lassie O' Mine," and "Beautiful Lady in Blue."

Eleanor Warren, junior student, was the second speaker on the hobby program. She told about her pastime, which is dahlia raising, and stated that she raises nearly five thousand blooms a summer. She also told of the requirements for growing and the annual dahlia shows sponsored by Fort Wayne associations.

Mrs. Ada Perry Beinhacker, well-known local poet, read several of the poems she considers to be most representative of her hobby. Her selections were "Just Too Bad," "Busy Friends," "Contentment," "Kids," "The Old Green Pump," "Lone Oak," and "Wiseacre." After reading her poems, Mrs. Beinhacker presented several readings from her newspaper column, "Inspiration."

Concluding the meeting, the members of the club sang several of the songs which will be used at the annual Mother-Daughter Tea which will be given at the next regular meeting on May 5.

Wainwright Hobby Is Music Collection

Valued At $25,000; Collection Is Estimated As One Of Largest Private Libraries In World.

Everyone has a hobby, but perhaps none of ours is as helpful to other persons as that of our music director, Jack W. Wainwright, whose pastime (and there is little of it) is spent in collecting various types of music.

It has been estimated that Mr. Wainwright has one of the largest, most complete private libraries in the world and his collection is steadily increasing. He has been accumulating these works for the past thirty years and has spent somewhat over twenty-five thousand dollars on his hobby. Although he likes all types of music, he is especially fond of symphonies, overtures, and heavy vocal numbers with orchestra or band accompaniment, and along with this choice comes his favorite masters, Ludwig von Beethoven and Richard Wagner.

Mr. Wainwright has had some donations to his library by other school collectors who have died, but most of the numbers he has bought himself with hard-earned cash. Only the section of the library that is beneficial to high school music students is kept at South Side, and this collection alone numbers over fifteen thousand pieces.

Other selections are loaned free of charge to various directors of bands and orchestras in other high schools and colleges. At the present time approximately one-half of the collection is scattered over the United States and Canada.

The library is concealed in cabinets made by the collector himself. The rows of them in room 50 contain over one thousand three hundred pigeon holes each holding proudly the works of a great master. This hobbyist has also arranged a system of filing so that he is able to find any number he desires in less than one minute. This has been made possible by indexing, filing, and numbering; and each selection has been cut, bound, taped, and punched to fit a notebook of loose leaf style.

In his hobby, Mr. Wainwright has not only had fun, but has also furthered the advancement of music by both collecting and loaning his library. The only comment hard working "Jack" had was, "I like music."

Welbornites To Compete Saturday In Famous Relays

Track Teams Of City Enter Kokomo Meet

Shotput, Medley Relay, High And Low Hurdles, Broad Jump, Dash Will Feature.

Ed Leitz, Charles Stone May Place

First Five Men Will Receive Points For Team In Each Event; Trophy For First.

South Side, North Side, and Central will send their track teams to the Kokomo relays Saturday afternoon, along with about twenty-five or thirty other Indiana schools.

The meet is usually much tougher than the state meet itself, and Coach Lundy Welborn expects to experiment somewhat to uncover new material.

Brightest prospects for the meet are expected by Welborn to be Ed Leitz, in the shot put; the relay teams; and Ed Leitz and Charles Stone, in the broad jump.

Relays Differ

The Kokomo relays differ a little from ordinary track meets. No flat events are scheduled except the 100-yard dash. High and low hurdles, pole vault, shot put, and the broad jump are run off as in any other meet. However, a medley relay consisting of the 220-, 440-, and 880-yard runs; a mile run; a middle distance relay, composed of two quarter mile runs; and two half miles are scheduled, in addition to the usual half-mile relay. In place of the usual mile relay, a 1600-yard event is run.

The first five men in each event will receive points for their teams, instead of the first three, as formerly. The school winning first place in each relay and the squad winning first in the meet will receive a large trophy.

Central's hopes are mainly placed on three veterans, Charlton, Central dash man, and Gibbons and Brown, who should be able to break into the point column.

Redskins stand a good chance for the relay championship. Coach Chambers bases his hopes on the fact that the Redskins defeated Kokomo and upon the good showings of Poorman, Ivey, Thomas, and Shumm.

Baseball Resumed For Frosh Team

Teams 4, 1, 5, And 2 Win Over Teams 7, 3, 6, And 8; M. Hower, E. Disler, E. Rarick Umpire

Freshman baseball play was resumed last Monday after a two-week interruption when Freshmen teams 4, 1, 5, and 2 won victories over teams 7, 3, 6, and 8. As they had very mild weather, the teams were able to play outside, thus using all four diamonds at the same time.

On the first diamond Norma Martin's Frosh 4's bested Anna Lou Kowalski's Frosh 7's to the tune of 28 to 9. Dorothy Blomker, Pauline Oetting, Katherine Burrell, Beverly Jane Bond, Miriam Rarick, and Norma Martin made home runs for the winners, while Anna Lou Kowalski made one for her team. On the second diamond Nadine Mueller's Frosh 1's defeated Marjorie Rapp's Frosh 3's by the close margin of 20 to 19.

Hazel Perry's Frosh 5's easily won over Imogene Wright's Frosh 6's by the score of 40 to 4. Home runners for the winners included Mary Ann Armstrong, Hazel Perry, Marjorie Schepel, Bernice Laisure, Frieda Schubert, Mary Ellen Larimore, and Betty Franklin, while Evelyn Potts made one for the losers. On the fourth diamond Virginia Menze's Frosh 2's defeated Beatrice Craig's Frosh 8's by the slight margin of 1 point, the score being 14 to 13. Evelyn Kruse, Bernice Bender, and Mary Snavely score home runs for the winning team, and Betty Bolyard and Evelyn Knox for the losing team.

Marjorie Hower, Edna Disler, and Eleanor Rarick acted as umpires, and Mary Lee, Ruth Seifert, Lida Mae Millburg, and Catherine Moring acted as the scorers.

Lettermen Will Have Banquet On April 30

The annual Lettermen's banquet is scheduled for 6 p. m., April 30, at the West Creighton Christian Church, the club has decided. As Mr. Snider has been toastmaster at past banquets, he is expected to preside at this one.

An unsuccessful attempt was made to get Mr. Everett Dean, basketball coach at Indiana University, and Mr. Tony Hinkle, basketball coach at Butler. Mr. McCracken of Ball State has been asked to speak, but he has not yet replied.

Each teacher who attends this banquet is asked to take a letterman.

Sportlights

Let's have a brief look at the National League ball clubs as they inaugurate the 1936 season.

St. Louis: The Cardinals have the same club that lost out to the Cubs last year with the exception of Bud Parnes, whom they acquired in a deal with the Giants. With this addition to their pitching staff, the gas-house gang rates as a sure-fire contender for the pennant. If Frankie Frisch can hold up at second, the Cardinals will be the class of the league next September.

Chicago: The Cubs are depending heavily on Chuck Klein and Manager Charley Grimm to come through; if they do, the Cubs will be greatly strengthened. With the youngsters in possession of a year's more experience than when they entered last year's successful campaign, the Cubs will put a speedy, aggressive team on the field that will be in the thick of the fight all the way.

New York: The Giants, with Burgess Whitehead filling in the gap at second base, seem visibly stronger than the team which has, for the last two years, folded after leading the league until July. The Giants will be after the pennant in a big way this year. They have an excellent chance to nose the Cubs and Cards.

Pittsburgh: The Pirates are definitely the team to watch. With a group of promising youngsters filling in the gaps in last year's lineup, Pittsburgh will have a good chance to knock off the leaders. A great deal is up to Manager Pie Traynor, who will attempt to return to his third-base post this year. Cincinnati: The 1936 "dark-horse" Reds last year made a habit of knocking off the leaders with a group of first-year men who looked like mid-gets but who played like veterans. This year they're all back; and they will be greatly improved, especially the pitchers, by their year's experience.

Brooklyn: The daffy Dodgers have taken a new lease on life this season, Linus Frey being the only regular last season who has retained his post this year. The Dodgers team will be somewhat of a question mark. They may live up to their name as the dizziest ball players in the big leagues or they may be the surprise of the season.

Philadelphia: The Phillies will have much the same club as they put on the field last year, with no more power than that which landed them seventh the preceding season, the prospect of the Phillies' moving up is none too good. It seems as if the city of Philadelphia has drawn a lemon as far as its two baseball teams stack up.

Boston: With everything renamed except Manager Bill McKenchie, the Bees, who set a new mark for number of games lost last season, are optimistic. It's going to take a great deal of optimism to move the Bees out of last place. Unless their financial situation takes on a brighter aspect, the Bees are doomed to be almost as hopeless as the club that floundered in eighth place all during the campaign last year.

A new threat to Joe Louis is appearing in the boxing world, in the person of Leroy Haynes, who hails from Philadelphia, Pa. He took care of "Da Pream" and Natie Brown in less time than it took the Brown Bomber. This may not mean anything, however, is Louis felt Carnara out for the first few rounds of his bout.

As to the chances of Max Schmeling in his coming fight with Joe Louis, the sportwriters do not concede him much chance for a victory. The Uhlan fights in the style that Louis just loves to wade into. Maxie is a short puncher and must be close to his opponent in order to produce an effective blow.

There are two clubs that aren't playing to the dopsters in the American League. They are the Cleveland Indians and Boston Red Sox. These two teams are going right ahead to the top of the standings.

While on the subject of major league baseball, we might mention the gallant comeback that Chuck Klein is making this season. In the game with the Cincinnati Reds last Sunday, he blasted out three homers and a single to lead the Cubs' attack in their 16-6 victory. Manager Charlie Grimm seems to have won out on the gamble that he took in keeping Klein.

Many of the games played last Monday were won after last-inning barages. The Cubs were beaten in the last inning by the Pirates; the Yankees were downed in the ninth by the Athletics with a rally that resulted in a regular sand-lot score of 13 to 12.

Tracksters Tie With La Porte In Meet There

Archers, Slicers Both Finish With Fifty-Nine Points; Knox, 2nd; Nappanee Last

Engaging in their second track meet of the season, South Side's thirteenth tied with LaPorte, the host school, in the quadrangular meet held there last Saturday, when both teams scored a total of 59 5-6 points. Knox finished second with 18 1-3 points, and Nappanee finished last with 4 points.

The meet was very close from the time the meet opened until it closed. The Archers were assured of a tie when, in the last event, Ed Leitz and "Red" Stone both cleared over twenty feet in the broad jump. Stone won over Troy of LaPorte by the margin of one-half inch. Both schools broke even in the relays to end the meet in a tie.

Bob Miller of South Side and Vogel of LaPorte took the honors for being "the closest runners of the meet, with the latter nosing out a win by a scant margin in the 380-yard run. The Archers were strongest in the shot put and broad jump but were considerably weak in the high and low hurdles. The Slicers were very strong in the pole vault.

In the century dash, Stone came in second and Feichter came in a close third. In the 120-yard high hurdles Bill Kruse, the only South Side to compete, placed third. In the 220-yard low hurdles B. Kruse came in third and "Lute" Precise followed in fourth. Hinton, the only member of the Kelly Klads to place in the mile run, came in third. Feichter and Selzer came in second and third respectively in the 220-yard dash to add a few points for the Archers. Schoenfeld and Zehr were the boys to place for the Archers in the 440-yard dash. The high jump was taken by Alexander of South Side, and B. Kruse tied Lewis of LaPorte for last place. Stryker, another Slicer, and Ed Kruse tied for third place in the pole vault. The half-mile relay team, composed of Stone, Selzer, Frazell, and Feichter, came in first, while the mile relay team came in second.

Redskins Defeat Both Anderson And Muncie

North Side's Redskins defeated both Anderson and Muncie to win first place in a triangular track meet Saturday afternoon. The Indians took first in ten events and filled in with a good share in other places to score 69 points in the meet.

North Side was easily the best of the three competing aggregations. Muncie was second with thirty-six points; Anderson was third with thirteen.

At McMeen, a senior, led his team to victory, scoring fifteen points by making a clean sweep of the dash events and running the 440 in 52.6, excellent time considering the weather conditions. Thomas, Redskins miler, turned the four laps in 4:43.5 for another brilliant mark. He led Ehrman, a team-mate, to the wire.

Williams of Muncie took first place in the 220 low hurdles and broad jump. B. Goul of Marion captured first place in the 20-yard high hurdles. In all the other events, Fort Wayne took first places.

J. H. Chappell Speaks At Jr. Math Meeting

Mr. J. H. Chappell spoke on "Mathematics in Industrial Arts" at Tuesday's meeting of the Junior Math Club. He stated that people seldom realize the importance of mathematics.

"Industrial arts," he said, "are based upon mathematics." He went on to say that the study of industrial arts consists of two divisions: shop work and mechanical drawing; and that, although in industrial arts the practical side of math is used, there must be the theory also. To give an illustration of this point, he related a practical problem about building a fence.

Following the program, a checker tournament was held. Refreshments were served. The program committee for the meeting consisted of Marian Roehrs, chairman, Jessie Freeman, Gene Cassidy, Max Spencer, Helen D. Meyer, and Nora Mae Bradbury.

If it had not been for Fred Meyers, student manager for the Archers, South Side would have lost the meet with LaPorte. The records of the judges showed that the Slicers beat the Green by one point. But Meyers showed them their mistake; and, on the second count, South Side tied their opponents.

Glenn Morris, an automobile salesman from Fort Collins, Colorado, won the decathlon honors at the Kansas Relays and rolled up the impressive total of 7,576 points in his first try at the decathlon.

The sectional track and field meet will be held at North Side May 8. Winning relay teams and athletes placing first or second in individual events in the sectionals will be eligible to compete in the finals at Butler Field, May 16.

The North Side Redskins were unable to compete in the Mansfield, Ohio, Relays last Saturday because of the inter-state competition ruling by the Indiana High School Athletic Association.

Eleven pairs of new track shoes were ordered for the winners in the various events by Ora Davis, athletic manager of the Archers.

Perry Zahn, former Archer and track star at Butler University, has been helping Coach Welborn by giving South Side's middle distance men a few pointers.

Ben Mourning, the Tigers' star in the mile and 440, is out of action with a sprained ankle, but hopes to be back in competition for Central's next meet.

Bob Miller of South Side and Vogel of LaPorte turned in the closest race of the meet in the 880-yard run, with Vogel nosing out Miller by a close margin.

McMeen of North Side led his team to victory against Anderson and Muncie last Saturday, when he made a clean sweep of the 100 and the 220. He also turned in a 52.6 time in the 440, scoring fifteen points for the Redskins.

Charlton, Central's star dash man, showed plenty of speed when he won the 100 in 10.2 and the 220 in 22.6 and anchored Central's half-mile relay team against Marion.

Gene Reiff, one of South Side's best low hurdlers in the past few years, has been helping Bill Kruse improve his form and speed.

Jerry Zehr has been showing his heels to some of the best of the Archers' middle-distance men in the 375. Zehr, who reported for track last week, has already won himself a position on the 1500-yard relay team which will compete at the Kokomo Relays.

Brown of Central won both the low and high sticks against Marion in fast time, and is expected to break the city record in the high hurdles, which is now held by Hathaway of North Side.

Ed Leitz, star shot-putter and broad-jumper on the Archer squad, attempted to run the hurdles last week. He looked more as though he were playing leap-frog than hurdling.

During the past week, Coach Welborn held trials in the hurdles to determine the boys who will run in this event at Kokomo. Bill Kruse won the trials, turning in fairly fast times.

Jack Fleming, former South Sider, anchored Northwestern's medley relay team, composed of Hey, Millett, and Keitel, at the Kansas Relays last Saturday. This team shaved two-tenths of a second off the intercollegiate record performance of Ohio State in 1931.

The two latest members of the Archer track team are Sidney and Gwen, large earthworms who were adopted by the Green for mascots. Because of recent rains Sidney and Gwen had their homes washed away. Kind-hearted Jim Dern brought them in from the cold and gave them a warm home in the track room.

Gym Carnival Is Under Way; Finals Later

Boys Try To Break Previous Records; Finals Are Set For Date In Near Future.

The annual gym class carnival has gotten away in full swing, with the boys striving very hard to break the previous records. There is no doubt that many records will be broken. The finals will be held at a later date. Most of the records were broken last year, and it looks as though they will not exist over this carnival.

The records are as follows: in the heavyweight department, Peters broke the standing broad jump record in 1932, with a jump of eight feet, eleven and a half inches. Alexander tied it in 1934. In 1932 Bartels broke the baseball throw record with a score of 100 out of 100. In 1934, Greely tied this mark. In the relay, McBride, now a student of Central, smashed the record with the time of twenty-one and one-fifth seconds. It has not been tied or beaten since. Garrett holds the volleyball serve record with six out of ten. He made this record in 1934. The balancing test record was won by Schoeb in 1935 by the score of 501.

In the running broad jump, Thorne captured the title with a jump of seventeen feet, five inches. In 1932 Kessler won the thirty-yard dash in three and one-fifth seconds. Strasser tied it in 1934. Faulkner captured the high jump with a mark of five feet, three inches. Other Records Given

One of the most strenuous events in the carnival is the chin up which was won by Kelso, who chinned himself thirty-nine times. The rope climb was won by Rinard in 1935, by scaling the rope in seven and three-fifths seconds. The medicine ball push record was captured by Vic Seewald, who heaved the ball fifty-three and three-quarters feet. Kennedy won the walking on hands record in 1934 by walking ninety-nine feet, two inches. In 1935, Phelps captured the backward jump with a jump of five feet, four inches. The hand wrestle was won by Seewald and the leg wrestle by Earl Anderson.

In the lightweight division, Elliot, in 1935, broke the standing broad jump record of seven feet, two inches. Gidley broke the baseball throw record with the score of ten out of ten. In the relay, Elliot broke the record with the time of twenty-one and two-fifths seconds. The volleyball serve record was broken in 1935 by Roth, with the score of seven out of ten. Cassidy broke the old record for the balancing test in 1935 with ninety-seven. Elliot and Arnold were tied in the high jump with a leap of four feet seven inches. Griffin broke the existing records last year in the chin up as he performed the feat thirty-two times. Elliot won the ball push with a throw of fifty-one feet, eleven inches. Brown broke the record in the backward jump with a leap of four feet, eleven inches. Papai won the hand wrestle, and Griffith won the leg wrestle in the light division.

Attention, all G. A. A. members! The annual G. A. A. banquet will be held on Tuesday evening, May 5, in the cafeteria. Be sure to sign up on the list inside the office. Everyone will be assured of a grand time.

Isn't it too ducky the way Gwen Roberts and Hazel Perry always fall while roller skating on a whip? We think they should try something simpler first, don't you, girls?

Be sure not to forget to attend the G. A. A. Exhibition to be given tomorrow night in the gym. Come and bring your mothers and fathers, your aunts and uncles, cousins and sweethearts, or what have you?

The Dance Club has really been working hard on their numbers for the exhibition. But they are just one of the many attractions which will be shown tomorrow.

Miss Smith (Smitty) seemed to be worried when she first got on the floor at the Lettergirls' skating party. She exclaimed, "Must they go so fast?"

What dark-haired Lettergirl has been absent from school for the past week because of that popular fad (?) called the mumps? Yes, you've guessed it. She is Ada Schuelke, and we are surely glad to see her back.

The costume committee for the exhibition has worked very hard on the costumes. They deserve a great deal of thanks. The costumes surely will add a lot of color and gaiety to the performance.

Do you remember how chilly it was outside last Friday? Well, even a little thing like that didn't stop a few of the teams from having a game. Edna Disler was one of the home-runners.

Another attraction of the exhibition will be a demonstration by ten roller skaters. They will skate to the tune of the "Skater's Waltz," played by the South Side orchestra.

First Outdoor Games In Baseball Resumed

Despite the rather cold weather last Friday, much sport was had at the first outdoor softball games. Soph teams 1, 2, and the senior team defeated Soph teams 5, 4, and Junior team 2. Junior team 1 beat Junior 3 by a default.

Soph team 1 whipped Soph team 4 by a score of 16-2. Home runs for team 1 were made by Mary Ellen Blauvelt, Betty Eisenacker, and Dorothy Elfner. Delores Pequignot made the only home run for the losers.

Soph team 2 won over Soph team 3 by a score of 5-7. With only five players, the defeated team held down the winner's score. The Senior team also held its opponent, Junior 2, by a score of 14-1.

Every player except one made a run. Marjorie Cartwright, Marjorie Hower, and Betty Rison made home runs for the senior team. Margaret Green made the only run for the losers.

Tennis Coach To Pick Team In New Way

All Candidates To Be Entered In Tournament; Finalists To Be Put on Varsity

This year the Archers' varsity tennis squad will be chosen under an entirely new system which will give many boys a chance to prove their ability. By this system it is believed that the "cream of the crop" will be chosen to be on the varsity squad.

The system was devised by Mr. Windmiller, the new tennis coach, and Mr. Briner. The new system is as follows: All boys wishing to try out for the team will enter the intramural elimination tournament on Monday, April 27; those contestants still left in the finals will be on varsity team. However, if some boy really believes he is better than some one who went into the finals, he will be given another chance, provided that the coach believes he really is good enough for the team.

This year the team will be greatly hindered because of the loss of most of last year's veterans. Last year's team consisted of Schelper, Close, Jackson, and Lee; the latter is the only one to return this season. This former squad won three matches out of their five encounters.

Mr. Windmiller urgently sends out he call for more candidates. Those players wishing to enter in this tournament must sign in Briner's office. The schedule for this season will probably include Decatur, Bluffton, Huntington, Central, and North Side.

Ex-Redskins Triumph Over Other City Alumni

A band of North Side's ex-warriors went on a rampage at the Central gym last Thursday night to take the alumni basketball tourney for the second time in as many years by defeating South Side and Central. The Redskins trailed in both games until the second quarter, when they forged into a lead they never relinquished.

The first game found North Side and Central clashing. The Redskins came out on top in this game after a close and hard-fought game, 37-34. North Side, after this grueling game, played South Side and defeated them to the tune of 28-21. North Side led at the half by the score of 17-10. Both teams scored the same number of points in the last half. The third game was played between Central and South Side with Central coming out on top to take second place honors. Central led at halftime by the score of 19-10. This game was a typical South Side-Central battle. There were eighteen personals called on the boys, but in between the trips to the foul circle there was a good brand of basketball played.

Although Coach Burl Friddle had some trouble in rounding up the ex-Archers, there were enough to give the former Redskins and Tigers good battles. The boys who represented South Side are Hilgeman, Symonds, Lytle, Beery, Nelson, Stump, Ralston, Ehle, M. Ellenwood, Smith, and Wallace.

he rushed out, slamming and locking the door behind him. The two rushed up, the pathway to the furnace room.

Luck seemed to be against them, for Mr. Schmidt coming through the rifle range, heard the commotion. When he saw who was coming, he pulled a revolver from his overalls and pointed it at the boys.

"Tackle him, Dick," shouted Buzz. "He can't shoot here in the school."

Dick made a neat tackle which knocked the janitor onto the floor. The two rolled over and over; each trying to overpower the other. Buzz watched for his chance to use the gun which the janitor had dropped in his fall. Dick, seeing what Buzz was planning to do, maneuvered the fight in such a way that Buzz was able to knock the janitor unconscious by a hard blow on his head with the gun.

However, during the fight, the boys had not seen the negro approaching. He had used a skeleton key to unlock the door as soon as he realized what had happened. Just as Dick regained his feet, Buzz let out a warning yelp as the negro flattened Buzz against the wall with a powerful uppercut. Smith lunged at Dick, who, using his football tactics, side-stepped and tripped the negro.

Buzz got to his feet at the same time Smith did. The two boys rushed at the negro and struggled with him. Smith overpowered Buzz, who went down again; but Dick drove home a lusty punch which knocked the breath out of the negro, stopping him for a time. Then Buzz, regaining his feet, shouted, "Schmidt's coming to!"

The negro rushed at Buzz, catching him off his guard, and knocked him unconscious so that he fell heavily. Immediately, Smith rushed at Dick, who was trying to fight off Schmidt. The two smugglers soon made short work of Dick, since they both attacked him at once.

Schmidt picked up the still unconscious Buzz, while the negro carried Dick like a sack of salt over his shoulder. Once back in the shower room, they put the two boys on the floor. Dick, wondering what would be the next move, heaved a sigh and got to his feet as soon as the negro untied his legs. With a groan Buzz came to and slowly got to his feet.

"Well, Dick," he said with a sickly grin. "It didn't work, I guess we—"

"Shut up, you two," yelled Schmidt. "Get back there against the wall. I'm going to keep an eye on you until the boss gets back. That's probably him, now," said Schmidt as they heard the sound of voices.

If it was the boss, he certainly made a queer entrance. Turning, they heard a loud crash and saw the door groan on its hinges and then crash heavily to the floor.

Mrs. Wilson Is Satisfied As Teacher's Wife, Despite All

The statement of Mrs. Wilburn Wilson, "In spite of the trials and tribulations, I am very content to be the wife of a school teacher," says much for her husband, Mr. Wilburn Wilson, South Side's well known social science teacher. Mrs. Wilson, herself, has had quite a bit of instruction in social science, as she majored in it in college.

But she blandly goes on to say that he field is so broad and everchanging that she feels she knows little about it. However, she is still interested in it, even though her husband carries the major portion of knowledge of that particular subject for the Wilson family. Mrs. Wilson, however, has managed to acquire a great deal of education, as one can readily see.

Graduate From College
She was graduated from Bluffton Indiana High School, Ball State Teachers' College, Muncie, Indiana, and in addition, took several courses at Indiana University under the maiden name of Ruth Nash. She taught school in Bluffton for two years, and then came to Fort Wayne to teach. An odd coincidence is that both she and Mr. Wilson came from Wells County, but never met each other until they came to Fort Wayne. Here they made up for this delay and were married June 12, 1931.

Mrs. Wilson now settles comfortably down to "home life," but still maintains the creditable hobby of interior decoration. She also likes reading but sticks mainly to magazine articles and fiction. An important phase of Mr. Wilson's character is clearly shown by his reading. He reads books and magazines on government, philosophy, and current events, such as Congressional Digest, Atlantic Monthly, Current History, and Harvard Law Review.

Husband Usually Late
Pet peeves constitute an important item in everyone's make-up; and Mrs. Wilson inserts hers, which happen to be: "having Mr. Wilson late in an appointment with me—as he usually is." As for Mr. Wilson, he maintains discreet silence on that touchy subject and "flatteringly" enough doesn't turn the tables on his wife.

The calls and phone calls at the Wilson residence are many, but seldom annoying. They both reply that the calls from some of "the old grads" are especially enjoyable.

Mr. Wilson expresses the wish and firm ambition of completing his instruction at Harvard. Mrs. Wilson's are lighter but more numerous: to become an efficient housewife, to have

The Green Freshman
There was a little freshman boy,
As green as he could be.
He daily loitered in the hall
And late for class was he.

One day an old rule was enforced—
No one was to be late.
But like the poor dumb fish he was,
He bit upon the bait.

His teacher sent him office-bound,
Miss Pittenger to see,
To get an admit slip to class
And pay the penalty.

"Come in, young man, and please sit down,"
The greeting that he got.
"So you were tardy? Well, my boy, That's happened quite a lot."

"A pink slip I will give to you,
So that you will not fail
To stay an hour after school,
The period so like jail."

No more was freshly late for class—
His time he could not spare.
For baseball practice after school
Would never let him dare.

EXTRACT FROM A DIARY
November 23.

Today
My brother went away,
To see my aunt.
He took our car,
Because it's several miles,
To my Aunt Minnie Stiles.
He is going to see a fight,
And then stay all night
At Aunt Minnie's.

The telephone rang:
'Cause my brother was dying.
We went to see my brother

Most Archers Would Support The Country In Case Of Invasion

Would you support your country, right or wrong, in event of a war? Most students of South Side declare they would remain loyal to their country to the end as all true patriots do. They gave various reasons for their decisions.

John Jackson—Yes, when I became a Boy Scout my oath was "to do my duty to God and my country."

Bill Marsh—I would if I thought it was right; otherwise, no.

Bill Willson—Yes, if I could be an aviator.

John Bonais—Yes. What would you expect me to do, sit home and knit?

Bob Locke—Why naturally! I'd be very patriotic!

Jane Brothers—Yes, because I could be a nurse.

Betty Davenport—Yes. My duty to my country comes first.

Joan Kennedy—I'd remain neutral. Bill Korte—Yes, if we don't start it. Peggy Kilpatrick—Yes. I owe it to my country.

Dick Helm—I am definitely opposed to armed warfare, but I would support my country in case of active invasion. This will not occur, however, in my lifetime.

Cliff Schrom—I'd support my country, but I'd do my best to avoid wars.

Ray Ballweg—No, because I think there are more satisfactory ways of settling disputes than by war.

Eddie Reeves—Yes. To support the country in what it does is the duty of every citizen.

Bryce Minier and Robert Adams—No, because that is pseudo-patriotism.

Dorothy Crabill—Yes, if I thought it were right; no, if I thought it were wrong.

Private lessons on any instrument are $1 each and horseback riding 25 cents per hour.

Lists Courses

Departments in which a student may enroll are music, art, dramatics, athletics, eurythmics, dance, water activities, horseback riding, and academic courses, for which regular credit will be given.

Faculty members of the Wainwright Camps are selected because they have attained the highest success in their particular fields.

Seniors should be especially interested in the camps. Many colleges and universities of the country have recognized the Wainwright Camps as a reliable source for musicians to round out their musical organizations. Valuable scholarships are offered many of the campers each year, giving them an opportunity to receive a college education in return for their services in the musical organizations of the school.

Contest Is Sponsored By Junior Chamber

The Junior Chamber of Commerce is sponsoring a contest of proper house lighting as a part of its annual clean-up week May 1. Blanks are available from home room or art teachers. Archers To Take "Southern Cruise" For Prom Friday

Heads Dance Plans

Jerry Zehr

Jerry Zehr, junior class president, is general chairman of the Junior Prom to be held Friday, May 1.

Sophomore Big Top Will Feature All Of Circus Attractions

Everyone (as long as the ticket supply holds out) is invited to attend the Circus to be held Friday, May 8, at 8 o'clock. This circus may be viewed for the nominal sum of twenty-five cents. Tickets went on sale yesterday in all sophomore home rooms so that sophomores may have the first chance to get them.

The ticket sale will be open to everyone, beginning May 5. There will be only 300 tickets for sale because it is impossible to accommodate any more than this number in the cafeteria. For the past two years, tickets have been sold out before the closing date of the sale. The ticket sale closes at 3:15 next Thursday.

All the attractions of a "real for sure" circus, the funny clowns, the freaks, the animals, the tight-rope walkers, the acrobats, and even the Siamese twins may be found at this year's sophomore party.

The first part of the evening will be devoted to games, which will be played in the gymnasium. The games will be followed by dancing. Duke Bauer and his orchestra have been chosen to play for the dancing. The evening will be concluded by the serving of refreshments in the cafeteria.

Two palmists, Princess Matascha and Princess Marie-Sadja, will look into the future of the South Side students as a special favor to the sophomores.

Committee chairmen are: Decorations, Sue Wallace; orchestra, Mary Louise Helms; programs, Sally Rea; lighting, Walter Prange; check room, Charles Thorne; publicity, Lois Wyneken, and tickets, John Edwards.

Other members of the ticket committee are: Miles Porter, Vic Nussbaum, Wade Thorne, Mary Louise Helms, Ned Henslee, Barbara Scheele, Leona Menze, Richard Dent, Jim Dern, John Bex, Ruth Berning, Don Sinish, Mildred Hoff, and Alfred Kettler.

Several members have been added to the decorations committee. They are: Doris Bennett, Emily Lepper, Iona Schuler, Hazel Noll, Rayola Morton, and Katherine Simming.

Burl Friddle is really going to have a good team next year! On to state, gang!

No, this isn't the Bugbug Bugle! This is the South Side Times.

Our heartiest congratulations to the new members of the National Honorary Society.

Moreso than anyone else, the elevator operator must have his ups and downs in life.

Some people go to war to get killed others just go out for a little Sunday afternoon ride.

Freshmen look on them for example and inspiration. You can make it in spite of those sophomores.

A boy whom everyone dislikes will get along all right. In later years he may be another Bernard Shaw.

A farmer is the fellow who chews his straw and listens to Lum and Abner because they are such "hicks."

Shakespeare was a great playwright, but see what modern critics think of someone else who tries to write that way.

A diplomat is the fellow who is sent by his country to make up good legitimate reasons why his country does what it does.

The life of the pioneer wasn't so hard. He didn't have to worry about whether or not Barbara Hutton was going to get another divorce.

Undergraduates, take advantage of the experience of the soon-to-be graduates. Ask them what they would do if they had it to do all over again.

Real Temperance Means Moderation In Everything You Do

The word temperance is usually considered to mean moderation in eating and drinking. This is true, but it has a much broader meaning. In general terms, temperance is a person's ability to restrain himself from overdoing anything. He who goes out in the rain and stays in the water for five hours is as intemperate as he who drinks too much. A high school boy who plays basketball for several hours straight is intemperate.

However, the person who is intemperate in anything usually pays for it. The person who eats or drinks too much has indigestion, is susceptible to diseases, and has poor health; the fellow who swims too long will pay with a tired back, sore muscles and perhaps sunburn; the student who is intemperate in athletics or something else will also have to pay for his mistake. When the law of temperance is broken, the penalty is always paid by the offender.

If You Are To Lead The Throng, Initiative Will Be Your Outstanding Characteristic

Initiative is that quality among people that enables them to think and act spontaneously "without a kick in the rear." The world always has and always will need and demand people with initiative. In everything there must be someone to lead the way, someone who can think and act by himself.

In the modern machine era initiative is needed even more than before, for people are tending to become so dependent on machines that they are not much more than automatons. Any man, who has ideas and initiative to carry them out will be successful no matter what his handicaps may be.

In high school there are always some students who look on, not doing their own thinking and acting, but just following the leader; there are, however, the few other students who lead the way, who have ideas and carry them out. To which group do you belong?

Carrying On

With Chuck Hart

Come on, all you swabs, gobs, and sailors' lassies! We're sailing away for the Yacht Club Junior Prom! The theme is nauti(cal), so come in that kind of a mood. Get out your fish hooks and fish so you can land a good haul (date).

Well! Well! Here they come! Coming up the gang plank, we see Paul Geary (who never dates girls from his own school because he goes to a boys' school) with our own little Babs Arney. Glad to see you, Paul; but we thought that South Side's diminutive Eddie Reeves would be in your place. Right behind them are Winnie Locker and Harold (Cast-away) Schmidt. What's the matter, McAttee? Did Schmitt find out?

Look who's here! Dick Orr, ably accompanied by none other than Marjorie Roehrer. Wonder if they walked? You know Maggie doesn't feel safe in cars. Since this is a sea cruise, it would not be complete without a fish or two. Here's Fish Rehner, but we don't know who he's with, since it isn't Catlett. Central sent Jeanette Kellogg to take care of Don "Crooner" Sparkman. She is one of our star entertainers lately; and sometime, when we have time to waste, we'd like to hear him really blast it with the vocal pipes. There are a lot more of this younger group who are already on deck.

Let's go up on deck and find out who is really there. There's Marty Hobrock and Wayne Bennett talking to Dot Crabbill and Bill (soda-jerker) Willson. They were on deck about a half hour before anyone else got there. Oh, well, the early bird gets the worm. Here is South Side's one and only, Ed Leitz, with Sue Wallace. Mary Lou (Baby Face) Helms has Bob Locke up on the deck. Morgan Harrison knows his stuff! He has the prize sophisticate (in a nice way) of the school with him. Here's to you, Ruth Adler!

Some Things We'd Like To Know:

Can Bob Gargett do anything but dance; if so, why not?
Why Jane Brothers is going to church instead of the Prom?
What Mary Jane Wagoner is so snooty for?
When Izzy Weinraub is going to wake up?
Why Bob Hall can't get dates?
Why Betty Jaebker never skips school?
Why Dick Busch is so downhearted when Lizzy Faulkner steps out?
Why is Kenton Dickey such a slow driver?
Where was Bob Adams during the party for the Senior Play cast?
Why Marjorie Rohrer always gets a white absence slip?

Said Shakespeare on such subjects: "And nothing is, but what is not?" Back on deck. Received from port a news flash: "Popular debutante, Lou Closs, is seen giving more than usual attentions to a certain southern gentleman (!) from good old Kentucky." That's no flash, that's a flop. Someone found a bottle with a message in it floating beside the yacht. The message said: "Finder please return to Miss Pittenger's office." The captain just put a bulletin on the bulletin board. Let's see what it says. It reads: "Lost, or strayed, or stolen away, a few passouts." The following articles have been reported missing. The bulletin further stated that Virginia Gross should please stop using the yacht telephone to call Time Service to find out immaterial details about the young operator at the Time Service. That is the end of the bulletin my friends, as well as the log of our jaunt.

Hint to girls: Skates unnecessary as prom will be held on board a yacht.

--CLEAR CUT CAMEOS--

The girls seem to have held the spotlight so far in this gallery of popular individuals; and therefore we must give the worthy boys a break. This one is just too worthy to miss. Tall and handsome, this personage is seen daily sauntering back and forth between the Totem office and locker room with one or two stops between for readin', writin', and 'rhythmic.

The academic achievements of this "cameo" are many. He is an active member of orchestra, Social Science, Totem, Torch, Junior Hi-Y, and band. He was a member of the social council for the junior class last year, and has retained that office in the senior class. He has taken exceptional interest in dramatics offered at South Side. He appeared recently as "Wayne Trenton, III" in the senior play, "Skidding."

During the rehearsal for the play, an embarrassing happening was experienced by Bob. Being a finalist in the extemporaneous speaking contest held a few weeks ago, Bob was rather overworked—torn between drama and public speaking. So, during a rehearsal, he skipped off to the library to accomplish a little "between acts" extemp studying and returned too late for one of his entrances for the play. A complete silence reigned on the stage as "Marion" (Ann Abbott) waited for her dear "Wayne" to meet her at the door. Ten minutes later Bob Adams strolled in and said nonchalantly: "I hope I haven't kept you waiting, Marion, dear."

To which Ann replied: "Oh, no, only ten minutes, Wayne DEAR."

And then of course, as you know, the performance continued as usual, for "the play must go on."

You undoubtedly know that this is Bob Adams of whom we are speaking. He is a member of the graduating class—one of its whois!t!

Waggin' Tongues

Ed Kruse seems to have a large following of girls. Some of his more ardent fans are Betty Joe Wilkenson, Nadine Noe, Betty Shifflet, and Sally Wonder. (Wonder why?)

Please, Hon. John Bex, don't use your powerful influence and cut this, but one of our constant readers requests us to tell you that Elvera Koop is still pining her heart out for you. Come on, John; give her a break.

"All's fair in love and war," must be the motto of Barton Turley, because he is certainly doing his best to steal Jack Eisler's Betty Brodrick. Don't be discouraged, Jack; a little competition is better than none at all.

Gwen Horn seems to win all honors for invitations to go steady. Here are just a few of them that we can think of: Bob Weaver, Bob Willson, Terry King, Bobby Holman, and Bill Geyer. This is a mere drop in the bucket, but we can't recall the other six right at this time. Gwen ought to give lessons on how to get your man. Try it, Gwen. We bet it would make you good money.

Some one ought to take Bud Jones around the school and show him where his classes are. For two days now he has landed in the wrong class. Don't be downhearted, Bud; it just takes some of us a little longer to learn than others. Maybe next June, when you graduate, you will have the plan of the school well in mind.

Attention: A new romance in the portals of South Side. One of those sweet sickening romances that the spring weather brings on. Now all kidding aside. This new romance is not one to be overlooked. It concerns none other than Myron Jones and Mildred Hoff. Don't they make a sweet couple?

Do you all remember Shirley Sykes and Jim Clapper? Well, this is once that our South Side Times will beat either of the city papers in some hot news. It is gossiped that Jim is saving his money to buy a ring and the big occasion is due to come off most any time after the first of next year.

Louise Closs has a secret yen for the South. Especially Georgia, because there lives a certain southern lad by the name of George. Why don't you pick someone who is a little nearer home? What good is a guy in Georgia?

Period's up—news all gone—tired—goodbye till next week.

Many, many apologies to Fritz Lohman. The remark made recently was only in fun, because, really, little Fritzie has a heart of gold. In fact, he is one of our up and coming freshmen.

Thru The Wringer

If you are still awake, we might let you in on some of the dirt they left in the wringer this week. Dave Howell wishes that nothing be said about his broken heart over Margie Cartwright; we hear that he's not as broken up about it as some people seem to think. ...Royal Steiner must be pretty "tough;" Marjorie Bowser had the bouncer at Bell's rink look her up to get away from him. ...Russell Crumrine had his first date the other night and states that the first is the last. ...Are Phil Bowser and Polly Borton going steady? Martha Zell and Betty Rose Lehman would like to know the answer to that question, as they both have dates with him far in advance. Might be a little complication there. ...Hubert McEwen is still going steady with Dorothy Turfingier, no battles yet to mar their romance.

A sight to see is Dorothy Aldridge and Dick Ake eating lunch together. ...Ruth Rose gets all hot and bothered every time Bob Smith (of Central) is mentioned. ...Neil Rupert and Georgianna DeWald are still battling out that old question "to go, or not to go" steady. ...Dorothy Durbin and Paul Ream have quit going steady. ...Maxine Howard has taken up a "street car" romance with Dick Korn. ...Brazy has given the air to his girl friend at Central and is now "open for business."

Ed Kruse has been escorting Betty Jo Wilkenson around lately. Pulling a "black sheep" stunt, huh Kruse? ...Dick Busch and Tom Jaenicke are getting to old bachelors lately, what did you do—join the "No Rata Data, or the "Don't Wanta Data?" ...Virgil Duncan is having a hard time trying to make his unrequited love for Barbara Arney "requite" ...Barbara Noble and Frank Eakan have broken up—for good, too, we hear. ...We wonder why Phil Green doesn't stop trying to get a date with the "Wonder" girl. You're wasting a lot of energy there, Green!

A good way to promote a romance is to go skating like Melvin Bell and Mildred Huffman do—only if you are kind of a dub at this skating business, don't try it. ...Betty Meigs has a sure fire, never fail formula. Latest example of this is that she went to Purdue the other day on a blind date, and now has a date for their Junior Prom. ...Would you forgive us if we should wax poetic? We heard some very lovely poetry the other day, and, knowing how you all love poetry—anyway—

There was a boy named Sweet Who was always very neat. He thought he was a big shot, But all he had was big feet.

There was a gal named Mariotte, Who rode around in a chariot. The chariot broke down, And now she has to carry it.

Our Gift From Rome

The name of the fifth month, May, is said to have been derived from Maia, daughter of Atlas, a wife of Jupiter, and the mother of Mercury. The Romans offered sacrifices to Maia on the first day of May. This month was the third one of the Roman year. —Don Schafer, Jr.

Jabbercadabra

A. SKEEMER

Q—"You are Mr. A. Skeemer, the inventor of an old age pension plan?"
A—"Yes, I'm the father of the plan that shall prove the salvation of a nation."

Q—"Now, Mr. Skeemer, when did you first get the idea of your plan?"
A—"Well you see it was like this: Me and my father (who was about 90 years old by the way), and my three brothers who were 61, 64, and 70, and my mother, who was 92, and my five cousins who were all over 70, and my sister who was 65, and my brother-in-law who was 67, all got to talking one day. And we finally came to the conclusion that since we were all getting pretty old that we must do something great for our country."

"So we thought a long time and we wanted to help other people so much that we finally decided that we would help the youth of the nation by having an old age pension so that when they get to be old they would have some money. And we all agreed that that was the most patriotic thing to do, for we knew we all wanted to forget ourselves in doing good for other people. Then we all began figuring on the age limit and my youngest brother (who is 60) said that he believed that it would be for the good of everybody in the country if the limit was 60, and we all agreed except one of my other relations that was listening to us, who by the way was 58. Well then, from this I founded the plan in 1933."

Q—"Did the other relation of yours ever get to accept the age limit?"

A—"Oh yes, he came to agree with us on his birthday in 1935."

Q—"Tell me, Mr. Skeemer, some more things concerning this self-sacrificing plan of yours."

A—"I have it all worked out so that it works very smoothly and nobody in it ever quarrels. At least not very often. I mean not very badly, when they do quarrel. Anyway, we get along okay, except when we don't get enough donations. And the plan is that every man, woman, or child (second childhood, I guess) over 60 gets 400 dollars a month as long as they live."

Q—"What I would like to know is: How are you going to get the money?"

A—"That one had us stumped too, and we worked lenty long on it, and we still haven't got it figured out, but it doesn't bother us any. You see, we won't let little things like that prevent us from serving our country by making this great plan a law."

Q—"Well, that's quite interesting, but our time is gone now and I just want to ask you one more question."

A—"Yeh, what's that?"

Q—"How old are you?"

The White Elephant Of Cochrane High

By Elinor White and Laverne Boyce

CHAPTER 5

Black Fang, Dick Hamilton's big black police dog, rose on his hind legs and barked ecstatically when he heard the name of his beloved master. He had waited three long days and nights for him; and, now, he thought, perhaps he might return.

Cary Phillips, having concluded his conversation with Peter Grant, who was staying on at Dick's, had decided on a definite course: he decided to shadow the shadow of Schmitt, who was suspected of having a hand in Dick's disappearance.

Cary walked briskly along the leaf-strewn, autumn streets to the school; he entered the school by means of his passkey and walked directly to the laundry. As he entered the room, he saw the door to the basement stairway close gently.

Cary hurriedly crossed the room, opened the door, and looked downward. There was Schmitt hastening down ward. As Cary reached the third step, the janitor, reaching the basement, turned and saw him. He paused a barely perceptible moment; then he turned to the right and went into the furnace room.

When Cary reached the furnace room, he found Schmitt engrossed in the furnace. When Cary asked him how it was working, the man said that it was not in working order. So, Cary, who was something of a jack-of-all-trades, decided to have a look at it.

Cary decided that Schmitt was only bluffing; and, not wishing to arouse his suspicion, he told him he would come back and help him later.

However, Cary, instead of leaving the building, went to the head of the stairs and waited. Soon he saw Schmitt cross his line of vision, apparently headed for the rifle range.

Quietly, Cary ran down the steps and followed him. He saw Schmitt enter the heating room and close the door behind him.

Cary decided to wait a few minutes to give Schmitt time to feel free. As he lounged against the opposite wall, he surveyed the passageway. His interest centered at first on the earthen floor at his feet.

Notices Rifle Shells
His eyes strayed over the dusty floor, noticing the signs of scuffling. These signs, he decided, were caused by the searchers' shoes shuffling over it.

Then his eyes came upon three shells from a rifle. These shells were about a foot from the door of the "White Elephant," close to the wall and in a straight line, very close together.

Subconsciously he thought, "Funny that three shells would be together like that."
Just then, he heard a clatter of metal and rushed into the heating room. Janitor Schmitt was sitting on the floor nursing a bump on his head and was surrounded by a mass of huge pipes. Before Cary's astonished eyes

Shoes and Ships

BRAWN—That beautiful damsel of Germanic extraction, Miss Betty Wolf, seems to have a complex for cavemen. Her big flame now is Art Boerger, who is getting tamed down to the grind. (Yeah, he's a grinder at the International Harvester.)

OH WILLIAM!—According to current whispers along Broadway, there will be a determined effort to revive Shakespearean plays this season. Among the first productions will be "Twelve Nights in a Bar Room," "Ham Fed," "Nothing Much To Do," and "We Hope You Like It." Clark Gable has also announced his desire to revive the masterpiece, "Strange Inner-tube."

STAGE PROPS—Drama in its zenith is now being operated on in Miss Demaree's English 5 class. Those great lovers, Luther Proelke and Frederick Brubaker, really do a moon-eyed act as they portray the character from "The Rivals."

SIGHTS TO SEE—Miss Harvey trying to chew gum in a civilized manner. ...Bob Zig threatening to put Max Howard on the spot by telling things he should not know. ...Dorothy Durbin staying up nights trying to develop dirt for her column. ...Emily Lepper trying to conceal her admiration for Billy Wilson. ...Max Rippe holding her sombrero as Bob Robinson takes a corner at 45 per.

DIRTY TRICK—Good old American humor has been ably illustrated by our clever wit who advises us to put a high hurdle in the middle of a low hurdle race. Some jumpin!

CURRENT COMMENT

By Margaret Gross

The Saving of Life
A Dog Suffers
Science Versus Nature

HEROES—The heroic efforts of John R. Simpson, George Morrow, and Truman Hershfield to rescue three men trapped in a gold mine near Moose River, Nova Scotia, were not in vain. One of the victims of the cave-in died before the rescuers reached them; but the other two were brought from the mine alive, but weak, after their eleven-day confinement, and are expected to live.

When the three heroes were asked why they felt so keenly about getting perfect strangers out, one of them answered, "You see we know what it means to be shut in like that."

TRAGEDY—One of the most pathetic figures at the entrance of the mine during the rescue was a Great Dane dog belonging to Herman Magill, who died below ground before rescuers reached him. The dog watched in bewilderment as they brought the other two men up and his master did not come. Half an hour later the third stretcher was brought to the surface. The silent figure that lay on it was completely covered with blanket, but the dog knew. He howled tragically and raced off into the night.

TWINS—Johnny Woods, a "scientifically-conditioned" child, who never has exhibited fear of anything, and his twin, Jimmy, who has been allowed to "just grow up" were four years old last Sunday. The boys were brought up for the first two years of their life in the Columbia-Presbyterian Medical Center in Chicago. Their mother says they seem to grow more alike as they get older. Johnny astounded medical men at the age of 17 months when he roller-skated, swam, and jumped from high boards—completely unafraid. Jimmy, left to develop himself, just moped and played like other ordinary children.

Although Johnny is the "conditioned" one, it is his more practical twin who is "boss," Mrs. Woods reveals. Johnny "gives in" to Jimmy, the unconditioned twin, at the end of every quarrel, as if it were too much trouble to argue. They are both smart, and Johnny persists in mimicking his untutored twin, which may prove that it is what we do for ourselves and not what others do for us that gets us the farthest.

Secrets to Seventeens

Spring is here!—It means that many delightful things are in store for us; and, boys, if you are going with a girl for whom you like to do thoughtful things, now is your chance. The florist shop that advises, "Say It With Flowers," is admirable in the eyes of the girls, particularly at this time of year. Corsages for formal occasions are a thrill to a girl at any time of the year, but especially in the Springtime when we begin to think of green grass and flowers. Of course, corsages are luxuries; and although it is undoubtedly lovely to make your friends happy, yet you may rest assured that any girl would rather not receive flowers than to know that sending them caused you too much financial disturbance. For high school students, omitting the corsage is not a breach of etiquette; for us they are simply additional joys.

When to send them? There are too many Spring formal affairs for us to expect corsages for all of them; however, they would be very appropriate for the Junior Prom or Senior Dance. There's the secret boys—make of it what you can or will!

As for what type of formals boys prefer—well! Upon being interviewed, they did everything from giggling foolishly and standing on their heads, to telling what they really thought. It seems that frilly formals are liked the least, while smart well-fitting ones are all in good favor. However, the predominant answer was, "It's all according to what type of girl is wearing it." It seems to be up to us to decide whether we are the sophisticated, smart, or sweet type of girl.

Aquatic Pictures Emphasize Safety

Presented By Miss Patterson And Miss Smith; Loaned For Showing By Red Cross.

Five moving picture films emphasizing the importance of swimming and diving in aquatic safety are being shown all of this week during each period of the school days in the Voohees room as South Side's part in the observance of National Child Health Week, which is being celebrated this year from April 25 to May 2.

No Charge For Show

Miss Alice J. Patterson and Miss Gretchen Smith, girls' physical education directors here, are in charge of the presentation of the films, which were loaned to South Side through the courtesy of the American Red Cross and the University of Illinois. No admission is being charged for either the showings, but special preference is being given to gym students during their class periods. Any available room during the showings may be filled by other students who are interested in seeing the films.

The first and probably the most interesting of the group is "Swimming and Diving" and was filmed in Hawaii recently. The performers, two Americans and one Egyptian boy, have held national championships and Olympic titles. The Egyptian lad, Farid Samik, is a member of this year's Olympic team and performs from a thirty-foot tower. The two Americans, Dick Degner and Mickey Riley, execute less spectacular dives from the ten-foot board and the fifteen-foot platform.

Show Swimming Technique

Another of the films was taken by the New York Red Cross Aquatic School at the Brooklyn Boy Scout Camp at Narrowsburg, New York and is entitled, along with another film on the same order, "The Technique of Swimming Strokes."

The two films from the University of Illinois were taken in the middle west and also have to do with various techniques of swimming and diving. National Health Week is observed every year and is endorsed in Fort Wayne by the Junior Chamber of Commerce, the Fort Wayne Medical Society, and Mayor Harry W. Baals.

John Gunter, 1935, Now Employed By Local Organization

An outstanding commercial student, John Gunter, has been rewarded for his commercial interests and study in South Side with employment in the office of the Eagle Coal Company.

He reports that his business duties are varied, but that he finds them all very interesting and to his liking. Hours in the office are from 7 in the morning to 5 at night, with the usual lunch hour included.

His ambitions and interests lie almost entirely in this line, as he never expressed a desire to go to college but would rather work up in the business world. He has a good start in this line already and is now quite pleased.

John went through the regular commercial course in South Side. Among the things which he considers most important in the course and which should be taken and studied carefully are business English, commercial law, and economics.

Then, too, among all his subjects, he considered English his hardest; history, the easiest subject. His inclinations for a favored subject are quite apparent, as he won several bookkeeping awards.

The sudden change from study in South Side's commercial department and then actually working in the office was quite noticeable; but John found himself able to adapt himself easily to office standards. In fact he thought that office work, taking dictation and transcribing especially, was even easier than the strict instruction standards set in the South Side commercial department.

To give aid and consolation to commercial students who are now struggling in the present course, he offers the suggestion and opinion that the hardest part in the whole course is the first semester of shorthand. The rest will follow as something to be liked and regarded as the thing which you intend to use in the future.

as you said. I can tell if they are Dick's with my magnifying glass. For amusement, we used to find the markings left by the guns. I'd know his anywhere."

Room Is Surveyed

The boy picked up the shells and examined them closely under the bright light in the passage. Soon he looked up; and, by the grim set of his lips, he showed the man that the answer was yes.

The two and the dog entered the "White Elephant" and closed the door behind them. They surveyed the room carefully. Then they went around the room, pounding on the walls for a possible doorway. They found nothing.

Suddenly, the door flew open. Schmitt, white with emotion, stood for a moment in the doorway. When he saw Cary examining the pipes of the equipment, he made a dash for him, wielding a heavy axe.

A mad scramble ensued. Although the odds were against him, Schmitt put up a good fight. As Cary grabbed for his right hand, Schmitt flung the axe directly at him and wildly eluded the clutching fingers.

Cary, escaping the axe, leaped upon the burly janitor. As Peter sprang for him too, Schmitt gave him a powerful kick on the shoulders. It flung the boy against the wall and for a time put him out of the struggle; but Fang, too, joined the melee; and the janitor went down from the weight of numbers.

Cary tied him up with his coat. Then he turned and surveyed the room again.

"Well," he said, "I believe I know what the answer is. Schmitt seemed quite worried when I fooled around with the pipes."

He strode over to the pipes and set about loosening them. To his surprise, when he touched one, the whole network came off with a clatter. Where the pipes had rested against the wall, a hole now showed.

This hole was about four feet in diameter; and, as they eagerly stared into it, they saw that it formed a passageway.

Passageway Discovered

On hands and knees, they crawled into the hole. They scraped along in this fashion for many yards. Then, at last, they came to the end. It opened out into a half-lighted cubicle. In this cubicle, there was an old wooden door.

As they approached the door, they heard an angry voice call out, and Dick Hamilton's voice answered. An exultant yell broke loose from Peter.

"That's Dick! I'd know his voice anywhere," Peter shouted. Cary, trying the door, ordered, "Come on, Peter, we've got to break the door down. It won't budge."

The door, rotten with age and dampness, gave after several heavy blows; and the rescuers broke in to the "White Elephant." Within, they saw four people: a negro, a short fat man, a boy, and Dick.

As they entered, the two men inside stared at them in amazement. With a lightning-like blow, the Negro felled Dick; then he and the fat man raced for the opposite door. The rescuers ran to Dick. After a short time, he opened his eyes groggily. When he saw them, he shouted with delight.

"Mr. Phillips," he cried, after a quick glance around, "we've got to get those men. They're smugglers and dangerous criminals. Don't let them get away!"

Dick, Peter, and Cary ran to the door and out into the passage. They saw no one. Just as they reached the outer door, they heard the hum of a powerful motor; and then knew that their quarry was beyond their grasp. They turned back and retraced their steps into the shower room. As they entered, they stopped short in surprise. There was Buzz petting Black Fang.

"Buzz," Dick cried, "what are you doing here?"

"Well," Buzz laughed uneasily, "I decided.... I didn't want to go along with the smugglers any more. So here I am."

Tells of Adventure

On the way home, Dick told Peter and Cary all about his capture, Buzz's idea for escape, and their friendship. Cary, although puzzled, decided that they should let the problem of Buzz rest awhile.

When they reached the teacher's home, Cary said that he would look out for the boys and Black Fang for the night. When the boys were fed and in bed, Cary immediately called the coach and principal and told them the good news.

Coach Jackson arrived at Phillip's house in five minutes flat. He rushed in and was all for rushing up to see Dick. However, Cary persuaded him to sit down and then told him the story as he had heard it.

Coach Jackson was exuberant when he heard that the boy also had a trick plan worked out too. Just before he left, Cary finally allowed him to go up and look at him, just to remove all doubts.

"Well, it sure is Dick," Jackson said; "but that detective sent a telegram this afternoon that he had Dick and to keep it quiet. He's going to be fooled."

Just as the coach left, the raucous voices of newsmen disturbed the quiet city with their extras containing news of Dick's return.

In the morning, Dick awakened and, with a yell, aroused the others. The three boys, all strangers forgotten, whooped with glee and sarcasm as they read in the papers the lurid, highly garbled accounts of Dick's kidnapping and return.

Suddenly Dick shouted, "Oh, boy, fellows, I know a way to capture the smugglers to the last man!"

South Side Heating, Ventilating System Briefly Explained

There are very few persons in a building the size of South Side, excluding, of course, the engineers, janitors, and perhaps some few faculty members and students who are especially interested, who know anything of the intricacies of the heating plant and ventilating system.

Even though so little is known of the heating and ventilating process, it really is a most fascinating subject; it is comparatively simple to trace a breath of this lovely spring air through a triangular opening on the roof into the numberless ducts and coils which help to make up the system.

Air Travels Down Shafts

Entering the building from the point on the roof, the fresh air travels down the huge air shafts, which are marked on the inside of the building by the grilled cages which freshmen think to be elevators, to a section just below the first basement floor level. From this point, the air is thrown up again and into one of three huge steam coil sections, which warm the air to a temperature of 74 degrees Fahrenheit. From the coils, the air blows into a corresponding fan set and remains at 74 degrees. From the fans the air travels into either a high or low duct.

Should it choose the lower section, the air continues to hold its temperature; but, if it travels through the upper part, it passes through another set of steam coils and is warmed further to a temperature of 120 degrees. In either case, however, the air flow is controlled by a set of dampers which open into the various class rooms of the building—for it is into the rooms that the air finally finds its way. This damper set, along with the thermostats which are located in every room, controls the heat and ventilation of the individual rooms.

These dampers open and close alternately seven times an hour, thus maintaining an even temperature at all times. If the change to cool air is made, the bottom damper opens and the top damper closes; and, if a warmer change is necessary, the reverse damper-contacts are made.

Heat Enters By Ducts

The fresh air enters the rooms through the individual heat ducts which are located rather high on the walls as grilled openings, and passes evenly to escape through the openings in the walls near the floors. It travels through other passages up and into the outdoors once again.

The three fans which control the ventilation are located in separate rooms along with their own steam coils and air passages. The first fan controls the east half of the building; the middle fan takes care of only the gymnasium; and the third fan controls the west half of the building.

Many people have been known to remark that the opening of windows on cold days is necessary for proper ventilation in the rooms. This, however, is quite wrong, for the system efficiently takes care of all the ventilation problems that may arise. In very warm weather, though, it is perfectly permissible to open windows for then no hot air is being forced through the ducts.

All of this complex system is in direct charge of Russell R. Clark, engineer, and Newton Cameron, assistant engineer.

Student Players Hear William Davies Talk

William Davies, well-known actor of the Old Fort Players, spoke at the last meeting of the Student Players' Club. His subject was the superstition of the stage, opportunities for Fort Wayne actors brought about by the Old Fort Players, other people's opinions of South Side, and the difference between the American schools and the British schools, which he attended. Dalton McAlister was program chairman.

After the talk a business meeting was held. The club discussed plans for the annual picnic to be held at Franke Park and for the initiation of new members.

UP AND DOWN OUR INCLINES

The pupils in the public speaking classes have been making political campaign speeches, for office-seekers running in the May primaries. The information for these talks was gotten through direct interviewing of these men. Some of the best of these talks were given by Ruth Gerber, Ruth Garrison, Rosemary Shea, Dorothy Keen, Sybil Knudson, Harriet Basford, and Ada Baumgartner.

Miss Benner's English 3 class has been writing short stories about various sports. In these stories, four characters were to be named to prove that one would be able to name their characteristics. The class voted for the five best stories. The winners were Ned Kelsey, who wrote about baseball; Ray Speaker, football; Dorothy Elfiner, tennis; and Doris Schrom, tennis. Vera Jane Wells, basketball, and Mervyn Bohne, football, tied for fifth place.

Mr. Tudor's citizenship classes have completed the study of crime. Many students prepared books to prove that "Crime Does Not Pay." The following students handed in good articles: period 1, Vivian Crill, Jack Powers, Betty Jane Pressler, and Dorothy Zeltitz; period 3, Hilda Knoche, Dorothy Gore, Juanita Lilens; period 4, Charlotte Allen, Dorothy Amstutz, Bob Holloway, and Melvin O'Brien.

The students completed the study of crime by staging a trial complete in the last detail. The case was prepared by the students, every one of whom participated in the trial. Outstanding as witnesses were Nila Grael, Walter Howard, Wanda Nahrwald, Jean Russ, Virginia Scherer, Marcella Trautman, Herbert Dorer, Geraldine Grim, and Aleda Randol. The leading attorneys were Bob Holloway, Dorothy Gore, Robert Kungel, and June Schilling. The best judge was Dick Birkenbeul. Practically every student in class had outstanding work. At the end of the trial, because of this fine work, two juries were unable to reach a verdict; the other jury returned a verdict of "not guilty."

Mr. Tudor's occupations classes are busily engaged in considering the different occupations. Many students that have not definitely decided on a vocation are viewing the discussions with evident interest. Many prospective lawyers have decided that the "back to the soil" movement is now to be preferable to law; and several potential farmers have changed to law. The following students are setting the pace in the amount of work done to date: Ruth Kaiser, Bob Bolyard, Josephine Antrim, Patty Lyman, Sadonna Neith, Sophia Keller, Mary Jane Kelly, Donna Dennis, George Horner, Lauda Reed, and Virginia Selby.

The big ten composed of Miss Covall's typing pupils, is headed this week by Helen Allen, who wrote for ten minutes at the rate of 51.6. Others are: Verna Holtman, 49.7; Elizabeth Stoltz, 49; Leona Menze, 48.2; Wilma Butler, 47.4; Virginia Fathauer, 46.5; Louise Gerding, 46.3; Betty Jeanne Bond, 46.5; Margaret Smith, 46; and Carl Mesing, 44.1.

The honor roll, composed of pupils who have written a ten-minute test since the previous grade period without a mistake in the typing 2 classes of Miss Covall, contains Verna Holtman, whose rate was 49.7; Edith Powell, 40.4; Don Schaefer, 35.3; and Don Faux, 35.5.

Those who made A— to A in a recent general history 1 test in Miss Smeltz's class are: Henry Vekoff, Charles Will, Julia Smith, Robert Byers, Eugene Schmidt, Eddie Reeves, Freida Schubert, Margaret Cross, Joe Bex, and Ruth Bade.

Mrs. Gould Loves Flowers, When They're In Her Garden

Delightful and intricate labyrinths and patterns on the face of a rare leaf, technical terms applicable to common flowers, and rare species of plant life are not, sad to say, a bit interesting to Mrs. Gould, wife of South Side's botany teacher, Mr. E. S. Gould.

She readily affirms that she knows nothing about it, and even goes on to say that any research work in that department is done by her husband.

She does, however, love flowers—in the flower beds in her back yard.

The Goulds represent a 100 percent Olivetian family. To explain this: Both Mr. and Mrs. Gould graduated from Olivet College, which was Mrs. Gould's home town. She then taught school in the town high school. Many years later, both her daughters were sent through the same Olivet College, thus completing the family circle and tradition. It seems that when these two daughters were quite small, their father practiced his teaching on them by taking them out in Foster Park and giving them their fill of wild nature study.

Daughter Enjoys Botany
The oldest daughter then took a year of botany at South Side and thought it quite the nicest subject she had ever taken. Mrs. Gould has always harbored a desire for her girls to become good home-makers. Father's wishes, if any, have not been expressed.

Mrs. Gould regards reading as one of her hobbies. She sticks mainly to fiction and magazines of the current event type. Church work and her position as a member of the Board of Directors for the Young Women's Christian Association are also included in her hobbies. Her husband's hobby is mostly in line of his work—wild flowers and nature study.

Pet peeves, here too, insert themselves in the family. Mrs. Gould represents agents at the door, and Mr. Gould bears down on the students who come to class unprepared in their lessons. The lady of the house also has a life-long unrealized ambition. She has always longed to be a student of French and has never studied a word of it. This rests as the family joke.

Telephone Disturbs Meals
Meals are frequently served in the household and the most frequent interruption is the clanging noise of the telephone. They get their share of

Eddie Leitz Records Only First Place In Elkhart Track Meet

Only 17 points were scored by South Side's track squad after it had journeyed to Elkhart to engage in a triangular meet with Elkhart and Mishawaka. Mishawaka nosed out Elkhart for first place, 51 to 49 points. Despite the cold weather and poor condition of the track that prevented good marks in all of the other events, Eddie Leitz, the Archers' star shotputter, heaved the shot 45 feet 10 1/4 inches for a new field record to give South Side its only first place.

Stone Places Third
Chuck Stone won a third place in the 100-yard dash and a second in the broad jump. Nelson Miller was nosed by a scant margin out of second place in the shotput. Ed Kruse tied for second in the 440-yard dash. In the mile relay the combination of Zehr, Bob Miller, Jim Dern, and Miller Makeny placed third. The half-mile relay team of Franzell, Feichter, Shoenefeld, and Stone won second place.

The summary:
100-yard dash—Deinhart (E), Mes-tach (M), Stone (S). Time—11 seconds.

Mile run—Bolenger (M), Evans (M), Stock (E). Time—5:05.
440-yard dash—Hawks (E), Lunce (E), Zehr (S). Time—57 seconds.

High hurdles—Bringle (E), Chandler (E), Powell (M). Time—18.8.
Shot put—Leitz (S), Davis (M), N. Miller (S). Distance—45 feet, 10 1/4 inches (new field record).

High jump—Hardy (E), Chandler (E), Moran (M). Height—5 feet, 8 inches.
880-yard run—Weaver (M), Gos-sens (M), Colson (E). Time 2:12.2.

220-yard dash—Deinhart (E), Hol-linwood (M), Buschell (M). Time—25.6.

200-yard low hurdles—Kistler (M), Wolf (M), Foster (E). Time—27.2.
Pole vault—Bringle (E), Kruse (S), and Kenaga (E), tied for second. Height—11 feet.

Broad jump—Hyrtle (M), Stone (S), Harris (M). Distance—20 feet, 11 inches.

Mile relay—Mishawaka, first; Elkhart, second; South Side, third. Time—3:55.

Half mile relay—Mishawaka, first; South Side, second; Elkhart, third. Time—1:43.

telephone calls, she says, but most of them seem to pour in on them at meal time. Talk at the meal table runs lively. It may include Mr. Gould's observations at school, the latest doings of the neighbors, what Italy and England are thinking about these days and finally, perhaps, what Mrs. Gould has come across at the Y. W. C. A. meetings.

A current argument seems to be entitled—"What to have for breakfast." We wonder just who emerges the victor. A family belief rests in World Peace, which is a very familiar theme at the house. Mrs. Gould ends a pleasant discussion with the following statement. "I am satisfied with my position as the wife of a school teacher and really do not desire any other sort of a life," which settles the family life quite nicely.

City Track Teams Scheduled In Relays Next Saturday

Archer Squad Entered For Muncie Meet

Thinly Clads Of South Side, North Side, And Central To Make Bid For Honors.

School Will Send Fourteen To Meet

Welborn Plans To Enter Team In Three Events; No Combination Yet Made

One of the largest outdoor scholastic track meets in which the Archers will participate will be held in the form of Muncie Relays at Muncie Saturday afternoon. Thinly clads from South Side, North Side, and Central will be among the athletes who will make their bid for honors in individual events or relays.

Coach Welborn is planning to take about fourteen Archers to this meet. He believes that Ed Leitz and Nelson Miller have a chance to score in the shot put. He also will enter Stone and Leitz in broad jumps. Coach Welborn intends to enter teams in all three relays but is undecided upon what combination to enter. Feichter, Stone, and Franzell are entered in the 100-yard dash. The Archers also hope to break into the point column in pole vaulting and hurdles which will be handled by Ed Kruse and Bill Kruse.

Redskins Team Strong
Coach Chambers counts on the Redskins finishing well up in the final standing, expecting some of his field event competitors to get points in their specialties. North Side will have strong teams in all the relay events, especially in larger combinations.

Coach Mendenhall is not expecting too much of his relay combinations. But he does believe that some of his individual performers will score points enough to put the Blue on the top. He is counting on Charlton in the 100, Brown and Garvin in the hurdles, Givens in the broad jump and both Givens and Schroff in high jump to get some points.

The Muncie Relays are just like the Kokomo Relays because no flat events are run except the 100-yard dash. The field events will be run off as in any other meet. There will be three relays, distance relay, middle medley, and one-half mile relay.

There will be five scoring places in each event. All first places in individual events and relays will receive medals, and ribbons will be given to second, third, fourth, and fifth place winners. A large trophy will be given to the school winning the meet.

Fast times are expected by many of the athletes; and some records are expected to be broken because of the excellent condition of the field and track. Brown, Central hurdler, should set a new record in the hurdles because of the shorter distance of the hurdles.

The other teams which will compete with the city schools are Muncie, Marion, New Castle, and Anderson.

Frosh Baseball Teams 2, 4, 5, and 8, Victors

Teams 2, 4, 5, and 8 were victors over teams 1, 3, 6 and 4 in the freshman baseball games which were played last Monday.

Team 2 won over team 3 by a score of 22-14. Three runs were made for team 2 by Marjorie Wallace, Bernice Bender, and Virginia Menze. Beverly Griffith and Helen Banks also made three runs for the losing team.

Team 4 whipped team 1 with a score of 22-11. Norma Martin, Miriam Rarick, and Dorothy Bloemker made home runs for the winning team. Home runs for the losing team were made by Betty Showalter and Nadine Mueller.

Team 5 won over team 7 by a tremendous score of 18-2. The two home runs which were made for the winning team were made by Mary Ann Armstrong and Betty June Franklin. The runs for the losing team were made by Martha Ann Bacon and Dorothy Ringenberg.

Team 8 took team 6 with a score of 14-5. Marjorie Stratton made two home runs for the winners. Ladonna Neith having made one home run. Phyllis Springer made two runs for the defeated team.

Choose Ward Gilbert Athletic Group Head

Mr. Ward O. Gilbert, South Side chemistry teacher, was chosen president of the Northeastern Indiana Athletic Officials' Association at the annual business meeting and banquet Monday, April 27, at the Catholic Community Center. Mr. Gilbert was former basketball coach here and is a veteran athletic arbiter.

Another South Sider to hold office is Maurice Tudor, elected treasurer of the group. Mr. Tudor teaches social science and distributes the athletic equipment. South Side was well represented in the election of officers, as Mr. Harold Windmiller, another faculty member at South Side, was elected secretary.

Mr. Gilbert succeeds Mr. Walter Geller, who has served as president during the past year.

Letters, Sweaters Are Objects Of Much Work By Archers

A great many young men in South Side are laboring industriously toward a coveted letter, and as a consequence the little cards on which athletic points are recorded can be found in great number in Mr. Davis' office.

Due to the fact that both Lundy Welborn and Burl Friddle have ordered their football and basketball charges to go out for track, those who fell just short of a letter in the preceding football or basketball season will be able to cash in on their track service points and obtain their letter.

Five Service Points
An athlete must have 200 points to obtain a letter. Twenty-five service points, that is, points that are given whether the athlete competes in any actual play or not, are given in football and 20 in basketball and track. Basketball, football, and track have their own systems of awarding points to the active participants.

Letter winners this year who are well on their way to another letter are Bud Feichter, Carl Hall, John Hines, and Don Reichert. Kenny Miller, Bill Epmeier, Ray Speaker, and Ben Wood-

Colorful Costumes Made Dances, Tumbling Performances More Attractive, Very Effective.

As an example of the work done in the girls' physical education department of South Side, the girls of the gym classes and dancing classes presented their annual exhibition last Friday afternoon and evening.

Miss Patterson and Miss Smith, instructors in the physical education department, arranged that each class would have a part. The dancing club, which was organized especially for the purpose of further study of dancing, gave several interesting numbers.

All dances, games, and tumbling acts were made more attractive by the gayly decorated costumes appropriate for each performance.

Skirts and Sports

Attention! Attention! All G. A. A. members! Don't neglect signing up for the G. A. A. banquet to be held next Tuesday evening. Sign up now on the bulletin board inside the gym office. The theme is "A Day at the Beach."

Miss Patterson and Miss Smith wish to thank all the girls who helped make the exhibition a success, especially the costume, tickets, and arrangements committees.

Marjorie Stratton, Sadonna Neith, Dorothy Bloemker, Norma Martin, and Miriam Rarick were among the freshies who made home runs last Monday.

Psst! Psst! We hear that Marjorie Hower and Miss Smith have deep, dark secrets between them. In fact, it is so deep that it makes them both blush even at the mere mention of it. P.S. Gwen Roberts knows a fragment of it.

What is the matter with the junior honor basketball team? The other night at the exhibition they actually let the sophomore honor team tie the final score. Oh, well—hull have passed the 150 mark and will probably earn their letter in the near future.

Those who have earned between 100 and 150 points are Chuck Geyer, Ned Henslee, Harold Kitzmiller, Bob Miller, and Nelson Miller. None of these boys are seniors and as a consequence they will probably obtain their sweaters before they leave South Side. Nearing the 100 mark are Jim Roth, Bob Bolyard, Dale Hamilton, and Henry Brandt. There are a great many other athletes, too numerous to mention, who have recorded a few points and who might possibly earn a letter in a few years.

There are also some who have already earned one letter but who have not, as yet, accumulated any points for their second. Next fall you will be sure to see quite a few more S's strutting grandly about the school.

Sportlights

In the Drake Relays, Glenn Cunningham showed all foresters that he was not through on the track as he broke the 1,000-yard run record. He clipped a full second off the old record by circling the track in 2:11.2. He was never threatened by the rest of the field.

Perhaps you might have wondered how Joe (Ducky Wucky) Medwick, the Cardinals' outfielder received his nickname? Well, here it is. When Joe was playing with the Houston Buffs, a fan of the female gender wrote in to the managing editor of the Houston: "I want to suggest Ducky Wucky as the proper name for Joe Medwick. Haven't you noticed that he waddles like a duck?"

Although this is a little off the season, the L. H. S. A. has decided to return to the 16-man state final instead of the four-team basketball tourney. Although there was some money made, there is not the color and excitement that is at the 16 man tourney.

Gridiron Equipment Dragged From Mothballs For Spring

Once again football, the king of sports, prepares to ascend his throne. The smell of mothballs pervades the air as "Pop" Tudor adds to his already heavy burden of distributing equipment by beginning to unpack the bright new practice jerseys and clean canvas football pants. The bright leather of football armor shines as helmets, shoulder pads, and pignisks are brought out of the war chests.

Spring football started last Tuesday and a large number of prospective gridsters answered Coach Lundy Welborn's call for football candidates. Out of the large number of boys who received equipment, four complete football teams will be picked for a final series of games and a tournament to decide the best team, to be held later in the spring.

Those who do not make one of the teams will turn in their suits and resign themselves to wait for further football campaigns next fall. Incidentally, quite a number of last year's football squad are now out for track and must wait until track season is over to participate in spring football. These fellows will make up two more teams which will compete in the final tournament.

The first two weeks of practice will consist of an extensive program of calisthenics and exercises to toughen and limber up the muscles. This and some light scrimmages will serve as preparation and getting in shape for the hard

Three Gridiron Heroes Eligible To Scholarship

James Ellenwood, Fred Nye, Bud Lee Nominees For Lion Cubs' Annual Award.

James Ellenwood, Fred Nye, and Bud Lee have been named as South Side's nominees for the second annual athletic scholarship to be awarded to the outstanding graduating athlete of the Fort Wayne high schools by the Fort Wayne Lion Cubs; it was announced by Miss Vivien Lower, executive and chairman of the scholarship committee.

The scholarship amounted to $130 last year and is expected to mount higher than that this year. It is not only based on the boy's athletic ability, but if he is most likely to succeed in that department which he chooses at college, and if he is in need of money.

Ellenwood Is Veteran
Jim Ellenwood has been on South Side's football team for four years. He made the varsity in his sophomore year and remained on until he became a senior. He was placed on the all-city team for the three years that he was on the varsity. He was also given all-state mention in his senior year. He played basketball on the reserves for two years and has played varsity for the past two seasons. He was elected to the National Athletic Honor Society and is a member of the Senior Hi-Y.

Fred Nye played tackle on the varsity football team, was elected captain for the year, and was on the third state team. He is also a member of the National Athletic Honor Society, is the president of the senior class and of the Lettermen's Club, and is a member of the Hi-Y.

Lee Here Since '32
Bud Lee played varsity football for three years and has been out for four years. He has also played varsity basketball and is now a member of the varsity track squad. He was also named on the all-sectional basketball team, is vice-president of the Lettermen's Club, and is a member of the Senior Hi-Y. Bud has won six major letters at South Side.

These boys were nominated by Coaches Welborn and Friddle, and R. Nelson Snider, principal.

charging and hard body contacts of the final tournament games.

From the results of this spring practice Coach Welborn will be able to get a line on the prospects for next year's varsity squad. Boys from last year's squad who will be back next year are: in the backfield, Ben Woodhull and Bert Lyman, at quarterback; Jim Phelps at fullback; and Short Benz, Bud Feichter, Bob Pequinot, Bridges, and Lahman at halfback. Those linemen who will return this year are Bill Miller and Dick Franzell at end; Kenny Miller, Jim Dern, and Ned Henslee at guard; Nelson Miller, Bill Kruse and Menze at tackle, and Bob Miller at center. Don Faux, a varsity end of the squad last year, will be lost this year because he is moving to South Bend.

Graduation hit the Archers heavily last year and there will be plenty of competition for the vacated positions. The boys who are now out for football are the makings of next year's football team and with them rests the success of South Side's future gridiron wars.

"Chuck" Stone Has Acquired Ability In All Track Events

With an infectious grin that is perpetual, red-headed, rather short and slight of stature, and wearing a green letter sweater, he can be recognized two blocks away. Charles Vernon "Chuck" Stone came to South Side from Hoagland school, where he garnered many laurels in grade school track meets. Since then he has added greatly to his large collection of ribbons and awards, won by virtue of his natural ability as a speedster on the cinder path.

Chuck, in his first year of varsity competition, made the track team and the half-mile relay combination. He has been a valuable member of the squad ever since. He was anchor man of the half-mile relay team that won its event at the state indoor meet at Butler last year. This meet, by the way, is the toughest of competition. Chuck, who can run the 220-yard dash under twenty-four seconds when he wants to, is an all-around athlete. He not only runs any dash event on the field in good time but also broad jumps and plays football. This is not the limit of his versatility, however, for we find that Chuck is an accomplished student in art. He won a scholarship to the Fort Wayne Art School last year. He is a member of the Hi-Y, Lettermen, and Art Clubs, the Interclub Congress, and DeMolay. He also plays a good game of golf, shooting in the high hundreds. Chuck modestly admits that when the Olympic golf team hears of his prowess on the links, they will probably make a bid for his services.

Popular though he is, Chuck doesn't have dates. When asked the reason for this, Chuck shyly chortled, "Haw-haw, I guess I'm just too gosh-darned bashful, ha-ha-haw."

When asked what he intended to do when he graduated this June, Chuck said that he would probably further his education in college.

Richard Wagner Is German Topic

F. Schubert, G. Dannenfeldt, D. Buchholz Give Report On Composer's Life And Operas.

The German Club discussed Richard Wagner, one of the greatest composers of Germany, at its meeting Wednesday, April 22.

Gertrude Dannenfeldt, first speaker, invited members to take a pilgrimage to Wagner and observe his daily life in the little town of Bayreuth. Everyone in Bayreuth knew him and could tell a stranger many things about him, for he was a local celebrity. Very often he was found at the theatre which was being built for his operas. However, he did not visit the site of the building to inspect it or to issue orders. To the contrary, he was often found among the bricklayers, working as if he were one himself. He was convinced that the building would go on much faster if he only paid an occasional visit to the builders of it, and took a turn at building and carpentry and the secret dissatisfaction of the foreman. If any visitors happened to catch him working in his bricklayer's garb, he was never ashamed of the work or of his dress.

Wagner Similar To Thackeray
Wagner shared the peculiarity of Thackeray, that he would sometimes go for weeks without putting pen to paper; and then as suddenly, after a long period of idleness, would write a great deal of music in a long fit of composition, abandoning it as soon as the humor had passed.

One can scarcely believe, after hearing some of the beautiful works of Wagner, that he was not even a fair player of the piano. His playing is described better if one says "hammering" or "thumping."

Wagner's life was continued by Dorothy Buchholz, who related that he was born in Leipzig in 1813. During his childhood he was exceedingly backward in his musical studies. After attending school and the university, he studied music for a few years. He married an actress.

Frieda Schubert Gives Review
Frieda Schubert gave a short review of Wagner's operas, most of which are very well known in American theatres today. Probably the ones which most students recognize are "Der Fliegende Holländer" (The Flying Dutchman); "Tannhauser," one which is quite often in American operas; "Lohengrin," which many remember because of the beautiful wedding march; and "Tristan and Isolde," an opera so complicated that after 57 rehearsals it was given up as being impossible to produce.

Don Vetter played "Evening Star," from Tannhauser. He told that many people go to Wagner's Theatre at Bayreuth annually to hear this production. After the reading of the minutes, given by Marjorie Meyer in the absence of Elizabeth Neff, Don Sparkman appointed the following nomination committee: Harriet Basford, Lorraine Meyer, and Don Vetter. This committee will meet with Miss Schmidt to select nominees for the club officers. They will be elected at the next meeting, May 6, in room 144.

The treasurer, Betty Rison, announced that everyone should pay his dues as the picnic will take place soon, and no members who have not paid their dues will be allowed to attend. The meeting was adjourned by the singing of "Wiegand," by Brahms, and the club song, "Die Lorelei."

Miss Smith To Talk Politics For Father Over Radio Station

Only in drama has it been portrayed in South Side before. That was in the senior play, in which the daughter spoke for the benefit of her father in a campaign procedure.

Now in real life Miss Gretchen Smith, South Side gym instructor, will give a campaign speech for her father, a Democratic candidate for judge of the Allen County Circuit Court. Miss Smith will speak this evening at 9 o'clock over WGL. This is difficult for any girl.

Miss Smith faces it with courage and, most of all, high hopes. Her father resides at 709 Kinnaird and has been well known in Fort Wayne politics since he became a resident here. He is a member of the law firm of Smith and Parrish and has been in the practice of law for forty-five years. Other offices and appointments he has included: lawyer at the Allen County bar since 1919; member of school board in 1929; and Judge of Circuit Court of Adams County from 1913 to 1919. Mr. Smith may be heard Friday evening over the same station at the same time.

To Exhibit Negro Art

A collection of paintings by Negro artists will be exhibited at the Fort Wayne Art School salon next week. Only on rare occasions has such a collection of celebrated paintings been exhibited in Fort Wayne at one time. Wheatley Social Center brought the exhibit here for last week.

South Side Places Seventh In Relays

South Side finished seventh against some of the toughest track teams in Indiana at the annual Kokomo Relays last Saturday. This is not a bad position, considering that eighteen teams and 300 athletes participated in this crack track meet. The Archers succeeded in collecting six points in the meet by placing in the pole vault, shot put, and broad jump. Ed Kruse tied for fourth place in the pole vault; Ed Leitz finished second in the shot put, and Walt Stone captured third in the broad jump.

Froebel of Gary nosed out the host school by a single point, to win the meet 27½ to 26½. North Side and Central of Fort Wayne tied for fourth place, each earning eighteen points. Although several fast teams participated in the meet, no records were broken. However, two new marks were established in the revised hurdle races run this year, with lower hurdles than used before.

Final Musicale Has Been Set Next Tuesday

Concert To Be Outstanding
In Talent, Higher Class
Music, Outside Program.

To Charge Same Admission Price

W. Van Crank, Well Known
Violin - Cellist, Bernard
Raney, Cornetist, To Play.

The next music assembly, expected to be the outstanding one of the year from the standpoint of talent, high class music, and guest artists, will be held in the gym Tuesday, Mr. Wainwright has announced. The customary five-cent admission charge will be made.

Wynn von Cronk, well-known violinist, will offer solo selections. At a very early age, Mr. von Cronk showed evidence of musical talent, on both the piano and cello; but he chose the latter for his musical career. He first studied under Paul Beebe at Berlin, continuing his studies with Hans Hess of Chicago, Philipp Abbas of Detroit, and Alexander Shuster of the Michigan College of Music. He also studied under Stephen Deak at the Curtis Institute of Music, to which he won a scholarship.

Wins Other Awards

In 1928 he won first place in a Michigan Federation of Clubs contest; in 1929 he took first in an All-State High School Orchestra at Ann Arbor. Mr. von Cronk is now associated with the Willard School of Music at Berlin, and is a member of the Kalamazoo Symphony Orchestra. He has done extensive concertizing, radio performing, and teaching. However, he accepts only a limited number of pupils.

The young artist, in his many concerts, has been given many press comments, all leading to the fact that this serious-minded young man has the rare gift of a genius. For his part of the concert, Mr. von Cronk will offer "Scherezo" by von Goens; "None But the Lonely Heart," by Tschailowsky; and "Tarantelle," by Papper. Toledo will also lend its musical genius to our concert by sending six-year-old Vernard Raney, cornetist. Mr. Raney has studied at the Wainwright Camps and has proved to be an outstanding performer for his age.

These performers were chosen by Mr. Wainwright because of their ability to play well, and the fact that Mr. Wainwright wishes the pupils to become better acquainted with the works of skilled artists.

Play Poster Melodies

The soloists are the main feature of the program. The South Side band and glee club will balance the program. By popular request, the band has been asked to repeat the school song, "Alma Mater," and the glee club is asked to learn the words. Other band numbers on the program are: "Stephen Foster Melodies," a delightful collection of Foster's works; "Autumn Leaf," by Richard Wagner; "Selections From Faust," arranged by Gounod; Intermezzo from the "L'Arlésienne Suite," by Bizet. The well-known "Dream of Love and Berceuse" will be sung by the Glee Club. This number will be presented with band accompaniment.

The music department has been giving these monthly concerts for over a year. With the proceeds from the admission charge, the department has purchased numerous new instruments for the band and orchestra. The concerts, however, were not meant merely to raise money, but to create an appreciation of good music by the students of South Side.

Homer Miller, junior student, was named editor of the 1937 Totem Monday afternoon by Miss Rowena Harvey, publications adviser. He began his journalistic work this semester and showed great promise that he will be a successful editor. He has been given a limited number of pupils.

The young artist, in his many concerts, has been given many press comments, all leading to the fact that this serious-minded young man has the rare gift of a genius. For his part of the concert, Mr. von Cronk will offer "Scherezo" by von Goens; "None But the Lonely Heart," by Tschailowsky; and "Tarantelle," by Papper.

Programs made for the occasion were decorated with models dressed in garments resembling those made by the girls.

The room was decorated with flowers and candles, and refreshments were served. Sandwiches, donated by the Holsum Bakery, were piled high, forming a colorful design on silver trays. They were served with hot tea. Club members are to be guests of the North Side Home Economics Club at a formal banquet to be held at the Y. W. C. A. next Saturday. Wo-Ho-Ma hopes to repay them at a later date.

Latin Club Potluck Is Planned For May 22

The annual potluck of the Latin Club will be held in the cafeteria May 22, due to the possibility of bad weather, members decided at their meeting last Thursday. The potluck will be the last meeting this semester.

Cyril Velkof, Maxine Ripp, Constance Haag, Betty Jean Bond, and Betty Gross, the committee in charge of preparations, met Monday, April 27, in room 36. The menu for the potluck will be posted in room 36 soon.

It's Gone To Press! The Totem Of 1936 Will Be Here June 1

This year's Totem has established history! It will be distributed on June 1, the earliest date any Totem has ever been published. The material was sent to the printers last Monday. This will give them over a month to print it. Usually only 2 or 3 weeks are required for printing.

At this time in former years, the snapshots were just being taken but this year they were completed and sent to the engravers last Monday. The 1936 Totem contains more snapshots than any other.

There are now 120 students who have not paid for their Totems. As the deadline for payments has passed, all persons who haven't paid in full will be taxed 25 cents. Their names were given to the circulation assistants who are looking them up and making every effort to get in the payments.

Senior, Junior Classmen Plan Ivy Ceremony

Affair May 14 To Be Annual Improvement Of School
By Two Upper Classes.

Juniors To Elect Class Ivy Queen

Faculty Advisers Nominate
10 Candidates For Throne;
Crowned At Entrance.

The first annual Ivy Planting ceremony for the junior and senior classes of South Side will be held May 14 at 8:10 o'clock at the south and north ends of the building, respectively. Preparations were made by Miss Emma Keifer, and Mr. A. Verne Flint, group advisers, and the ivy planting arrangements committees.

The affair was decided upon because of the need of ivy on our school building. Each year, sometime early in May, the junior and senior classes will each plant a spray of Boston ivy.

For Upperclassmen Only

Ceremonies will be thirty minutes long and will be for junior and senior class members only.

Ruth Rose, chairman; Richard Strasser, Jim Sweet, Anna Bremer, and Myron Jones compose the senior committee. The junior committee members are Bob Sturm, Jim Dorn, Bud Heger, Richard Rastetter, and Ruth Garrison.

The following senior ceremony has been scheduled: music by a quartet from the music department, a speech on the purpose and meaning of the planting by Ruth Rose, the presentation of the ivy by Manuel Rothberg, acceptance of the ivy for the school by Mr. R. Nelson Snider, and a reading by Ann Abbott.

Plan Green Programs

Programs of green cardboard tied with a white ribbon will be given each senior. The seniors will meet in the gym and form a procession, headed by the class officers, the class advisers, and the committee.

At the junior ivy planting, which will be held at the north entrance, some junior girls will be honored by being elected Junior Ivy Queen. Class advisers will nominate candidates for the position and junior classmen will elect her in a general election.

The program for the junior planting is as follows: music by the harp ensemble, a talk on the purpose and meaning of the planting by Bob Sturm, the crowning of the ivy queen and the queen's speech of acceptance, the planting of the ivy, short talks by Jerry Zehr, class president, Miss Martha Pittenger, and Miss Dorothy Magley. It will be ended by the singing of "Alma Mater."

Each junior will be given a bow of green and white and a program in the form of an ivy leaf.

Kruse, a chemist at the General Electric Company, who will speak on chemical engineering, and Mr. John McKay, superintendent of the Northern Indiana Public Service Corporation branch here, whose subject will be civil engineering. On Tuesday afternoon of this week, the speakers were representatives of law and music. Mr. Paul Jasper, local lawyer, spoke on the advantages and requirements of his profession; Mr. Gaston Baihi, music instructor at Central High School, talked on the interesting phases of his work.

The members of the city-wide vocational guidance committee, Willis Richardson, John Richardson, Oscar Clem, Fern W. Average Of Thirty Suffer Martyrdom In Eighth Weekly

Thirty to thirty-five eighth periods per week are the rewards reaped by offending Archers, a glimpse of the tally cards show.

Tardiness claims the most offenders; but a good many eighths are assigned by teachers when students asked to report to them after school failed to appear.

Numerous eighth periods are given for skipping school, but only two or three a week are assigned for being found in the halls without a proper hall-pass.

There are certain regular customers who show up quite frequently to face the music. Each teacher in the building assists in administering the eighths by taking charge two nights a year.

If a student skips an eighth period, he is given five as a penalty, unless he is excused; then he is given two. An excuse from the teacher who assigned it is the only way out of an eighth.

Bryce's average for his four years here is 96.05 percent. Eric's is 95.87. These averages are based on the grades received at the end of each semester during the four-year course.

In connection with the announcement, Mr. Snider said, "It is most unusual to have two boys filling these positions. Both boys have been fine and very active in school activities."

Cheer up, gridiron fans! Spring football is here.

The life of a popular song writer in two acts: do, dough.

For wit, humor, and good reading—read South Side's literary magazine, "Singing Arrows."

People And Schools Are Judged First On Appearance

A great deal has been said and done about the clean-up campaign but this campaign can hardly be over-emphasized. The only thing wrong is that such campaigns are not held often enough.

A city, in order to retain its self-respect, must keep its streets, alleys, buildings, parks, vacant lots, and houses clean and orderly. A school, also in order to retain its self-respect, must keep clean and orderly. Since the city is now conducting a clean-up campaign, it is up to us South Siders, not only to do our part in this city campaign, but also to begin to think of keeping our own school clean.

However, in so doing, our aim is to try to make cleanliness and orderliness a permanent reform instead of a temporary one; for a campaign that doesn't have lasting effects is of little use. Just as cleanliness and orderliness often go a long way in determining the character of a person, so they do in determining the character of a school.

As A Guest You Are Expected To Put On Your Best Manners

With spring comes the spring social season; with it comes the crowning social events of the year, the Junior Prom and the Senior Dance. Folks put on their best, in both charm and new clothes.

There is, however, something that some of us forget to put on: that is manners. Not that manners are something to be put on and taken off on special occasions; but at our dances some of us forget that we are guests, that as guests we owe certain respects to the host. It is in this respect that manners are forgotten; some people come to the dance late, others leave before the dance is over; and yet others choose to run in and out at different intervals.

When parents let their children go to a school affair, they have an assured feeling that the young folks are safe and under proper and responsible chaperonage. It is not, then, a false feeling of security if their children are not even at the dance. It is, after all, you know, still the best taste to pay the proper respect to your host by coming at the proper time and leaving at the proper time.

Specialization, Like Other Things, Is Good When Taken In Moderation

This, as everyone knows, is an age of specialization; everyone must specialize to get any place. That is, of course, true, because today there are hundreds of different lines of work and thousands of different occupations. Each occupation has become divided into various departments. Whereas it used to be that each doctor took care of every ailment of his patient, there are today the eye specialist, the foot specialist, the nose and throat specialist, the ear specialist, the special surgeons, and many others who specialize in one or two branches of the wide field.

Although this specialization is a very good thing, there is a danger that it may be overdone. This over-specialization often generates a narrow-mindedness which is always harmful to a free, democratic country like our own. The high school student, after graduating, has to decide his occupation, whether he plans to attend college or not. In college he will have to decide the courses he will take. If he chooses wisely, he will not pick a too-specialized occupation, but will try to learn to do more than one thing. For when he goes to get a job later on in his particular line and then finds all the jobs filled, he may learn too late that over-specializing can be very bad.

Carrying On

With Jake-Fuss-Jacobs and Hazel-Budget-Kuttler

After due consideration, we will allow you to accept our quaint puns, epigrams, and ducky little slams; and to join the company of Miss Fuss, and Miss Budget at the circus. Our guide for the day is none other than Johanus (Sell 'em Quick) Bex. The first stop will be at the side-show, where charming Selma is lifting her eye-lashes at —(Snake)—. (Since "Sell 'em Quick" is flirting with Martin, the "discher-outter of hamburgers," we will leave them and do our own guiding.)

"Budgie, darling, aren't the Siamese twins cute; they are so much like the two Max's?"

"Yes, aren't they; but look, Fuss, isn't that strong-man Norman, Bucking a pennyweight?"

On our right is Marge (Little Egypt) dancing to the rumbling rhumba.

"Hurry, Budge, the big show is starting. Let's go!"

"Look, Fuss, here come the cowboys. At the head of the whole shooten match of Indians and cowboys is none other than "Cowboy" (Five-Star) Friddle, followed by some of the better looking little cowboys, Benny Woodhull, Bud Feichter, and Victor Nussbaum, who have the little ponies well under control. Do you know who they are?"

"They look like brothers, Bennett, Bonsib, and Bollman to me."

Next on the program are the bareback riders.

Warren Zelt is pinch-hitting (mostly hitting) for one of the acrobats.

Bang!—Cannonball Schrom is flating through the air into unknown spaces, with practically no ease at all.

"Look, Budge, isn't that Princess Velkoff toe-dancing on the back of a beautiful horse?"

Once outside of the tent again, we see Wayne Bennett, gassing up balloons for the little boys and girls.

"(Sell'em Quick" is still flirting and still eating.)

In closing we should like to say that without a doubt Gwen Horn, Max Roth, Ruth Stoner, Vera Ellinger, Max Howard, and Dot Durbin, who formed the "World's Best Acrobatic, tight-rope walking, and trapeze troupe," took top honors. Dick Rastetter capably led the band through all of the musical interludes and Louie Bonsib was one swell barker. Crisite took care of the trained-dog act very well, and Jack (Two-Gun) Brazey was one of the most daring of all wild animal trainers.

Mr. Snider and Mr. Murphy, two of the luminaries in the audience, were enthusiastically cheering and enjoying the Indians and cowboys, while eating salt-water taffy. Mr. Wilson said it was so good that if he had a film of it, he would show it to the whole school (using our new picture machine) free of charge.

Budget enjoyed the pop corn and peanuts a lot, but Fuss had to save her money, on account of because she spends most of her spare copper coins on flowers; and fruit for the star of her big show, who at present is laid up in the hospital.

On Shoes

"Well, sir, as I live and breathe and try to keep these bulldog shoes from biting a piece out of the calf of my legs," if it isn't Spring. In the Spring a young man's fancy lightly turns to new shoes. There are as many kinds of shoes as there are the people who wear them. There are many sources of "dog houses," such as horses, cows, calves, bucks, alligators, snakes, rubber, canvas, suede, grass, and we have heard that some soles are made of crepe. Maybe that is to allow for the stretching of growing tootsies. And, OH! we almost forgot the Dutch shoes—that wooden fit.

The styles are chosen to meet the requirements of the people who wear them. For instance, high heels are made to counterbalance people who like to hold their heads up and back. However, after a night of wearing them, most women use flat-heeled shoes to unbalance themselves again. Sometimes, it's quite comfortable to be unbalanced physically. Flat shoes seem quite the fad also with His Majesty, the Baby. They help keep his feet strong and make good posture, and all that stuff. The perforated type, with no-draft ventilation, seem to be very popular with the men in the summer-time. But the ladies are the envy of all. They wear sandals and slippers made of a heel, a sole, and about half a dozen straps. This is the time of year when the sales of Lux go up. It's practically impossible to cover runners and holes with such shoes.

One type of shoe that should be popular with girls, who dance, but is not, is the safety steel toe worn by shop workers to protect their solid foundations from injuries by a mere motor falling on them. They are guaranteed to hold a weight of six hundred pounds. Quite sufficient, we would think.

Then there are the thick-soled super-shoe worn by policemen. They probably cover more ground, both stationary and moving, than any other shoe. You all know that life is a song, and here it is:

"Breaking in a New Pair of Shoes."
"Shine On, Shine On, Shoes, For Me And My Gal."
"Don't Send Me Posies When It's Shoesies I Need."
"Oh, Them Golden Slippers."
"Lives of great men all remind us,
We can make our lives sublime
And departing, leave behind us
Foot prints on the sand of Time."

Our Gift From Rome

"The detective took careful aim and pulled the trigger!" Many times you will find similar phrases in your "Thrill a minute" man-hunter mystery. But have you ever stopped to wonder where the detective (the word) comes from? No. The story is too good, eh? Well, it comes from the Latin verb tego, tection meaning cover and de meaning from. Thus a detective is one who takes the cover off of crime.

RADIO ROMANCE

"Yes, yes, John. But this is so sudden. (Sudden? heck, we wrote this two weeks ago.)"

"That's true, Mary, it is sudden; but I have been doing to get a chance to tell you that I—I love you. (That's some ducky line. I wonder why we had to put that in our script.)"

"(Shut up, you sap.) Ahem—Yes, John, I know how you feel, because I love you, too. (Now get the next line straight, you idiot.)"

"(Since when, woman, are you talking that way to me?) Er-You don't know how much those words mean to me, Mary. Tell me all over again that you love me. (Yeh, and when you do, don't get so cock about it.)"

"(Sh! You big lummox!) Yes, John, my darling, I love you. I have always admired you. You are so big and brave and handsome and smart that I don't see how any girl could help from loving you. (Huh, you wrote that line, you conceited—, You are so—)"

"(Quiet, sister. We have a broadcast going on here.) Mary, I only hope I can be worthy of you. You are so—oh, Mary, how can I ever tell you. (Yeh, and listen here, dearly beloved, if you don't act a little more realistic, I'll tell you where—)"

"(Realistic, with you? Huh!) I know John, I feel the same way about you. Words fail me when I try to describe you. (But not after this program is over, they won't.)"

"(And I'm supposed to be making love to you. Oh, well.) My darling, let me hold you in my arms. (Where is that sound effects man?—we've gotta have a decent sounding kiss.)" Snm-ack!

"Oh, John! you know you should. We have done that. (And listen you big stiff, don't let this script give you any crazy ideas.)"

"(Don't worry, I won't mug you, with that pan.) Mary my darling, kiss me again. (For gosh sake, don't take me literally.) And say Mary, there is something I have been wanting to tell you."

"Yes, John. What is it? (Me asking you what is it, when I wrote the script.)"

"Well, it's like this: Will you marry me?"

"Yes, John. (And to think I answered that same way five years ago.)"

"Hello, folks. This is the announcer telling you that another happy episode in the life of John and Mary has been completed by that loving couple of actors, the Busleys."

Thru The Wringer

Hang on to something and don't faint—an article was actually published in this column that was really dirt; Johnny Hines' old girl friend didn't know that he had thrown her over for Helen Payne until she read it in this column... Ellen DePue is trying to rate Will Scott these days. Think you got what it takes, Ellen? ... Margaret Ann Ruckel has decided that Dwight Frost shall be her next conquest—maybe so, but who's the darling brunette accompanying him down the hall mornings?

Roger Halfey is taking up the pursuit of Maxine Greiner, now that she has left off calling up Ronnie Diehl for dates... Dick Ferguson and Betty Crum are still trying to decide whether or not to go steady... Cliff Boxberger and Helen Dettemore have that "sickly sweet" look on their faces lately. It's a pretty good sign, you know... Bernie Shearer is getting to be very much in Annie Gardner's favor... Rod Ferguson and Mary Oatis are getting pretty friendly with each other.

Helen Gruenwald has two escorts every Sunday afternoon, who take her riding and describe the country to her. Bet they lived on a farm once... "Love Makes One Blind," but that bright blue Ford Ruth Turner is so "fond" of ought to open her eyes... Marjorie Hower seems to be the apple of Bruce Bradbury's eye; caution Bruce, apples caused the downfall of him... Bud Fairweather is so sought after, that when he sees a girl coming, he runs and hides.

Now, in conclusion, may we tell you a story of true love?... Once during vacation (spring vacation to be exact) a girl went away, leaving her boy friend behind. Unable to stand her absence, he hitch-hiked down to see her. On the way, night overtook him; so the authorities of a small town put him up for the night. (Not jail.) The girl and her father, hearing of this, came to pick him up. They found him very soundly asleep, so they left him to his fate... If you think it isn't true (except for a little exaggeration for the sake of effect) just ask Rosie Chappell and Warren Zelt. As the main participants, they should know.

Ruth Adler, Beanie Dygert, and Betty Meigs deserted South Side and went to different colleges over the week-end to attend their junior proms... An item used in this column last week was misinterpreted by many. The article meant to kid Ed Kruse for running around so much, and was not intended as a slur on Betty Jo Wilkenson.

Casting Reflections

Listen my children, and you shall hear
Of the showcase mirrors that are so clear.

Down the halls the girls do fly
Admiring themselves as they pass by.
Some just stand, and stop, and stare;
Others wait and comb their hair.
And as their locks they do untangle,
They see themselves from every angle.

By this idea, up-to-date,
The boys do keep their ties up straight.

So when you pass from class to class,
Just take a look into this glass.

Secrets to Seventeens

Little Things—It's getting fair and warmer; but seventeens, don't lose your pep. Our feminine associates wish, in fact, that the boys would keep up on their toes much more than most of them do. Little acts, such as closing and opening car doors for a girl, helping her on with her coat, offering her your arm while you are walking down the street, taking a girl's arm and guiding her across the street, and unlocking her door for her after you have taken her home, are things that really count. Too often boys have the mistaken idea that these things are foolish; on the other hand, they can be carried out in such a manner that they seem a delightful part of your well-mannered person. Of course, girls are capable of doing every one of these things themselves; but somehow these considerations on your part mean a great deal to them. If you can gracefully enact these things and not make the girl conscious of your efforts, then you're a man, sonny boy!

Trading Dances—Today, in our schools alone, we seventeens are given marvelous opportunities in having the social affairs that we do. However, the many comments made by fellow students, as well as by our younger adults, bring out the fact that we are not making the most of it. We pride ourselves in being an improvement over those who came before us; but we go to a high school dance with one person and dance all evening with one person, while only a few years ago, the younger set filled up dance programs with many different names and traded at least half of the evening's dances. Although it is not necessary to follow this example at every dance, yet we might at a few of them. This is something worth while to consider anyhow, for the system is much more broadening and is being practiced in many other cities. Boys, it is up to you; for you are in the position to start this custom by seeing that your date has different people to dance with. Be sure at all times, though, that she is well cared for and spared any embarrassment; but right at hand after each dance. What do you say?

CHAPTER VI

Mr. Phillips arose early Saturday morning before the boys were up and brought in the milk and "Morning News." While mixing the pancake batter, he glanced at the headlines. "Local Boy Returned Home."
"I expect I'd better get that 'local boy' up so he can get over to Jackson's as soon as possible," he said half aloud. "I'll pour a couple of pancakes into the pan first so they can be frying."
After doing this, he went upstairs to awaken Dick.
"Come on," he said, "you've got an essay to write before you can play this afternoon. You'd better get up." "Boyl oh, boy!" exclaimed Dick, "can I play?"
"We'll see," replied Phillips. "I'll send you over to see Jackson as soon as you've written your essay. I've got breakfast about ready—pancakes and syrup. So hurry. You'd better waken Peter and Buzz, too. I'll go down and look after the pancakes."
"O.K.," replied Dick, jumping out of bed. "I'll be down in a jiffy."
He woke Peter first; then the two rushed toward Buzz's room, shouting for him. When they received no answer, Peter pounded on the door.

"He's a heavy sleeper," laughed Dick. "I'll get some water, and we'll go in and douse him with it. I'll bet that'll waken him," he said as he ran towards the bathroom.

Dick returned quickly with a glassful of cold water.

"O.K., let's rush in and surprise him."

"He'll be surprised all right," laughed Peter as he opened the door.

Buzz Is Gone

The two boys stepped quietly in, glanced toward the bed and then stopped abruptly. The room was unoccupied; the bed had not been slept in. Buzz was not there.

"Hey! Mr. Phillips," shouted Peter. "Come here! Quick!"

Dick stood staring, with glass of water gripped firmly in his hand. Mr. Phillips came up two steps at a time with the pancake turner in one hand and the frying pan in the other.

"What's the matter?" he asked breathlessly as he rushed into the room, accidentally bumping Dick's arm and causing him to drop the glass and spill the cold water all over him. (Continued on page 3)

Shoes and Ships

HOW TIME FLIES—In 1921 we had the famed Army of Occupation. In 1936, after spending some fifteen billion dollars, we seem to be carefully preserving a large army without an occupation.

FIRST-RATERS—Unknown to many of us unobserving infidels, the planners of our city's street system must have had "Maiden Lane" for their theme in naming our streets. Among the young ladies having streets named after them are all these answering to Sallie, Agnes, Ellen, Betty, Eva, Florence, Fay, Emma, Anna, Clara, Edith, Gertrude, Ethel, Edna, and Eleanor.

QUICKIES—Other names designating our thoroughfares have caught our eye. We wonder if they play bridge on Culbertson Street? If Diamond Street is paved with asphalt? If there are any quack-quacks on Duck Street? If we could find Paradise on Eden Street? If every one living on Tons Street is, shall we say, stout? If Al Jolson formerly resided on Mamie Street? If everything is so swell on Opechee Way? After due consideration, we have decided that the most appropriate answer is Foohy Street.

OH, MR. COPPER!—Unless we are entirely incorrect, there are at least a thousand car owners and at least two police squad cars violating a city ordinance each day within one block of our school. According to the sign at the intersection of Rudisill and Harrison Boulevard, only light retail delivery trucks are permitted to traverse on Rudisill Boulevard. May we suggest to the Board of Street Commissioners that they take a short course in English, specializing in expressing themselves correctly?

CUTTING REMARKS—To all those students of South Side, who look upon Mr. R. N. Snider as a man with a great deal of dry humor, we have a suggestion to make. Mr. Snider also has a very "cutting" sense of humor, as Bryce Minier will readily confirm. Last week Bryce was proudly displaying his new white shoes, when a young damsel suggested that it would be fun to cut the strings with a pair of scissors lying nearby. Ye olde principal readily agreed and neatly divided the lace with a sprightly snip of the cutters.

GRADUATING SENIOR—A strange machine, seemingly incapable of becoming weary. It plows merrily through studies, plays, vocational talks, Tag days, Kid days, speeches, scoldings, banquets, and Dad's pocket-book. To regain its equilibrium over the week-ends, it goes to a couple of movies, hits the high spots, attends a couple of dances, and then rushes to the lake on Sunday. Now we know the meaning of that well-worn phrase, "Graduation—then what?"

Death Comes To Egypt's King The Cutting Of A Diamond French Surgery Gets Its Start

SITUATION—King Fused I of Egypt died last week at the age of 68, of a throat infection. King Fused took the throne of modern Egypt in 1922 and remained throughout his reign a bulwark against the Egyptian Nationalist tide, which is strongly anti-British. His death leaves the political situation of Egypt tense. His funeral was held two days after his death in spite of the fact that the Moslem religion prescribes that burial must take place 24 hours after death. This was done so that foreign dignitaries might attend funeral rites. The heir to the throne is 16-year-old Crown Prince Farouk, who has been attending school in Great Britain for the past few years. However, royal prerogatives will be assumed by a regency council for the next two years, until the boy becomes of age.

HERE'S HOW—The 726-carat Jonker diamond, owned by Harry Winston, was cut into three pieces by Lazare Kaplan, a diamond cutter of New York. His son, Leo Kaplan, describing the first step of cutting the world's largest diamond, said it was "like a very difficult engineering problem and a very delicate surgical operation combined." Kaplan studied the diamond for six months and then went trout fishing for three days to steady his nerves before starting on the difficult feat of cutting it. As an unset diamond, the stone was insured for $1,000,000. The owner intends to have the three pieces cut into twelve and then sell them as a necklace, with a value of $2,000,000.

BLOODY—Dr. Howard W. Haggard, a professor at Yale University, recently revealed some interesting facts about Louis XIV. Dr. Haggard said that Louis XIV had much to do with the rise of surgery. It was not until the king suffered a fistula and called for Felix, the court barber and physician (for physicians were put in the same class as barbers and executioners at that time) to perform an operation that the profession was given any recognition, according to Dr. Haggard. "Felix was unable to perform the operation, so the king gave him six months to learn, which he did by practicing on every patient he could. The operation was performed in the king's bedchamber and not in a hospital for they were nothing but hotbeds of infection. The operation was successful; and because it was, the king built a college for surgeons, excluding only those whose favorite prescriptions were herbs, bleeding, and remedies based on the study of astrology."

Quill, Scroll Banquet Held On Wednesday

Forty North Side And South Side Members Present At Dinner At Mandarin Cafe.

The South Side and North Side chapters of Quill and Scroll, international honorary society for high school journalists, held its annual joint banquet for members at 6:30 o'clock last evening in the banquet room of the Mandarin Cafe. About forty members from North Side and South Side were present.

Short introductory speeches were made by each of the newly elected members, and Miss Rowena Harvey, faculty adviser for both the Times and the Northern, presented the Quill and Scroll pins to the members. She also announced that each person would receive a year's subscription to the Quill and Scroll magazine.

At the conclusion of the banquet, the group was the guest of Miss Harvey at a motion picture.

Crowded One-Room Country School Has Standing Room Only

After attending a school with a body of approximately two thousand students, we decided to visit a country school, the kind which you pass so often while traveling through the country.

It was recess when we arrived before Pleasant Township School No. 3. The entire student body of thirty-five was in the yard, some playing baseball, some playing with mud pies, and some skipping the rope.

School Has Stove

Instead of the endless halls and innumerable doors that greet the stranger entering South Side, we entered a one-room structure, the only other door leading into a cloak room. We interrupted the teacher in the process of putting some boots on a small child; but, nevertheless, she extended to us a very friendly greeting. When we told her that we had just dropped in to see what the school was like, she very happily requested that we make ourselves at home.

One of the first things noticed was a chart covering one section of the blackboard. It was designed to show who was keeping his ears, finger nails, and the rest of his personal appearance up to par. The room itself was split into two divisions with a space of about six feet separating them. At the back of the school was a huge stove with a pink pipe showing its way out of the top. We didn't ask the teacher the reason for the decoration.

About this time the teacher blew a whistle, and the student scurried in. Several students took their places at the blackboard; others sat in movable chairs before the teacher's desk. Still others moved to their seats. Afterward, the teacher told us that this was the only possible way to teach eight grades at once.

School Dismisses Early
Tests given in this and all other township schools, are sent out by the state department of education. Final exams for all township schools were given last Friday; school will be dismissed for the summer tomorrow.

Although we may forget many of the details about Pleasant Township School No. 3, we will never forget the romance attached to the one-room school. Some of the greatest men in the United States have gone to just this type of school. Men like Ford, Rockefeller, and Edison, along with countless others, have received a major part of their formal education from these schools.

Ex-Dean Of Princeton Appeals For Thought

"Thinking is one of the finest arts, but one of the most difficult to develop; and yet it is one of the most useful," remarked the Reverend Dr. Joseph A. Stevenson, former dean of Princeton University, at an assembly held Monday morning. He continued, "One of the finest things about the human race is that it is a thinking race and only, as such, makes progress."

Myron Jones, who introduced the speaker, disclosed that Dr. Stevenson has addressed over 175,000 students. Dr. Stevenson is a worker in social education.

"One of the great privileges the old fellows have is giving good advice, but one of the privileges of the young fellow is not taking it," the doctor continued. He concluded his speech with the defying and spirited remark: "I came today, not to tell you what to do, but to challenge you, the young people of the world, to be the advancing leaders, because it is through the advancing young people that higher levels and higher achievements may be attained."

Two Juniors Here Play For Musicales

Kathleen Wimer and Reginald Gerig, both juniors here, presented a musical at the Fort Wayne Art School and Museum Sunday afternoon at 3:30 o'clock.

Both Kathleen and Reginald have studied music for many years. They are pupils of Miss Edith Foster. Both have won gold medals for placing first in state piano contests conducted by Indiana University.

Kathleen played "Prelude from English Suite in A Minor," by Bach; "Andante Favori," by Beethoven; "The Sunken Cathedral," by Debussy; "The Hurdy-Gurdy Man," by Gossens; and "Juba Dance," by Dett.

Reginald played "First Movement of Italian Concerto," by Bach; "Ballade in A Flat Major," by Chopin; "Pell Street and Chimes of Saint Patrick's," by Emerson; "Whitmore," by "Sequidilla," by Albeniz.

Both played as a duet "Allegro Brillant," by Mendelssohn.

self. Dick came out of his stupor with a jolt as the cold water trickled over his bare feet.

"Buzz's gone," he said, dropping as if exhausted onto the bed. "Hey, look!" exclaimed Peter, rushing over to the window. "He must have gone out here and climbed down that tree. Gosh, it wouldn't take any athlete to do that."

"Yes, I know," replied Dick. "This used to be my bedroom until Mom got wise to me. I used to climb out of here and get in an hour's extra play without Mom knowing about it after she sent me to bed. I got caught once, though—I tore my pants on a limb and couldn't give a satisfactory explanation since she knew they weren't torn when I went up to my room. She changed my room, then."

"Is that a note—there, on the pillow?" asked Mr. Phillips, pointing with the pancake turner toward a slip of paper pinned to the pillow.

"Why—yes," said Dick, listlessly reaching for it. "Hm. It's kinda hard to read. His spelling's awful. Here," he sighed, handing it to Mr. Phillips. "You'd better read it."

Mr. Phillips read:

"Der dick
I mite get you in trouble, if I staid hear so I lef. I don't no where I'm going but I'm going to tri to go strate. Thanks for the eets and your considerashun. You showed me how much better it was to go strate than to be kooked. I hope I can be famus some day in football lik you will be. But I don't suppos I can sinse I ain't lived rite. I hope you win the game Saturday. I'll be there if I kin get in."

Buzz

P. S. Wish I had gon strate so I cud be your frend but sinse I didn't I'm going to tri to do good things maybe I kin be your frend some day!"

"Well!" ejaculated Peter.

"I believe he'll keep his word, Mr. Phillips," said Dick. "He did so much to help me escape. He gave me that idea for the game, too. He said he'd seen so many big games, and."

"Why, Dick," interrupted Mr. Phillips, "I believe you're about to cry!"

"No—I'm not," he replied gruffly. "Let's go eat. Our pancakes won't be very good if we don't."

The three went down the stairs quietly. Mr. Phillips was relieved to find Buzz gone. His going away had solved the problem of what was to be done with him. Peter was filled with mingled feelings; he hardly knew whether he was relieved or sorry. He was jealous, however, that Buzz had become such a good friend of Dick's. Dick was plainly upset and stricken.

At the breakfast table, Mr. Phillips tried to cheer Dick. "See the headlines, Dick?" he asked. "You're famous! This is the most exciting thing that's happened in Cochrane for ages. All you have to do now to get your name in 'Who's Who' is—capture the smugglers."

"Say!" exclaimed Dick, choking down a bite of cold pancake. "We've got to get them tonight, or they'll be in Canada."

No Plan Yet

"Do you have a plan?" asked Peter, drowning his pancake in syrup. "No, not yet. But I'll think of something. I expect I'd better get to work on that essay now, Mr. Phillips," said Dick, washing down the last soggy bite with a gulp of coffee.

Mr. Phillips nodded his assent; so Dick rose from the table and got to work on the essay.

While he worked on the essay for Mr. Phillips, Peter was busy answering the insistent ringing of the telephone. Every few minutes the telephone rang; and when Peter answered, someone asked about Dick, expressed joy on his return, or asked for information of the kidnappers.

After about two hours' work, Dick looked up with a sigh.

"Well, Mr. Phillips, it's finished," he said. "Here it is. May I go see Couch Jackson, now?"

"Sure," replied Phillips. "I'll grade this while you are gone. Jackson will probably be at the school by this time; so you'd better go there first. I'll expect you back about twelve. That gives you nearly three and a half hours for practice."

"Well, I'll run along then. Coming, Peter?"

"Sure."

The two boys grabbed their jackets and rushed out of the house. They sprinted the six blocks to the school and made good time. When they approached Mr. Jackson's office, they knew from the noise within that the team had already assembled.

"Hi," Dick yelled as he yanked open the door.

There was a strange sort of silence as the boys stared at him. Then, shouting and pushing, they rushed toward him. Two of the boys helped him onto their shoulders while the others gave him three lusty cheers.

"Speech!" Speech!" they yelled. But all Dick could do was stammer, "Gosh, fellas, I'm glad to see you again!"

"Well, Dick," said Jackson, shaking his hand heartily. "I guess you aren't half as glad as we are. Now let's get quiet, boys. Dick has a play!"

Three more cheers rent the air. "Quiet, boys, please," yelled Jackson. "We've a lot of skull practice to do before the game; so let's get busy!"

Play Is Successful

The boys gradually settled down; and Dick explained the play, which met with Jackson's full approval. The boys studied the play carefully and then went out on the field to run through it several times. It worked perfectly every time.

They went back into the Coach's office after their practice to get final instructions. While Jackson was talking to them, the telephone rang.

"Yes?" he said, answering it. "Oh, yes, Phillips. B-plus? Oh fine! Well, that relieves me immensely. Yes—Sure. Thanks a lot."

"Well, boys," he said after he had hung up the receiver. "All the pep talk I could give you would not mean half so much as this—Dick will play this afternoon!"

The boys could be controlled no longer; so he dismissed them. Dick and Peter had a hard time getting away from the mob of overjoyed teammates, but they finally managed to do so and started home a little after twelve.

"Gee whiz!" exclaimed Dick as they approached the house. "Mom and dad are home!"

With Peter close at his heels, he dashed up the sidewalk and into the house.

"Hi, dad!" he shouted. "Hello, mom!"

"Dick," she exclaimed throwing her arms about him. "What is the meaning of these headlines? Are you sure you're not hurt? Did they treat you all right?"

"Hey, mom," laughed Dick freeing himself. "Just one question at a time. Didn't you know about it?"

Parents Weren't Told

"Why, no, son," replied his mother. "Mr. Phillips has explained it all to us, but it seems impossible, unreal. You know, we didn't get the telegram at all!"

"Why—that's strange," frowned Dick. "Mr. Phillips saw Mr. Collins send it. Oh, well! It doesn't matter, now."

"Well, my lad," said Mr. Hamilton, pounding his son on the back. "I guess you've had a novel experience, all right. I suppose it's just as well that we didn't know about the kidnapping. Your mother wouldn't have had a moment's enjoyment out of the trip if she had known."

"Well, for heaven's sake," laughed Mrs. Hamilton, "have you no feelings? I guess you were the one who was upset when we got home and found out about it."

"Hey!" interrupted Peter. "Let's eat!"

"We can't eat," remonstrated Dick. "We play at two! I'll have a malted milk."

"I didn't expect you boys would eat," said Phillips; "so I didn't fix much. I thought we'd have a big meal tonight. Sort of a celebration dinner, you know."

"Well, if that's settled, let's eat what we have," said Mr. Hamilton. "I want to get to that game."

When the Cochrane team came onto the field shortly after one-thirty, a bedlam of shouts broke forth. The entire student body from both schools was almost hysterical. They had read the news of Dick's return in the paper.

To the Cochrane group, it meant hope; to their opponents, it meant despair after hope. Excitement ran high, and the bands blared, trying to outdo each other. Then there was a momentary hush from the Cochrane group as the opposing players ran onto the field, and wild shouts of excitement and encouragement swept the bleachers occupied by the Dragon supporters.

Never in the history of the two schools had there been such bitter feelings over a football game as there was in this one. The two teams were very evenly matched, and the game promised to be a fierce battle. The winner would be the city champion and have the honor of having its name carved on the brand new cup offered by the editor of the Cochrane newspaper.

The teams got their positions and were ready to go when the gun went off at two o'clock, starting the first quarter of the decisive battle. Neither team could gain sufficient yardage on the other to make a touchdown or even come anywhere near the goal in the first quarter. Neither team had the advantage. The crowds yelled themselves hoarse to no avail, for at the half the score was 0-0. There was a twenty-minute intermission, when the crowd stopped yelling long enough to soothe their strained throats with drinks and ice cream.

Couch Jackson had his team in his office fixing up scrappers where the door burst open and Detective Collins rushed in, followed by a tall, dark, well-built lad.

"I've found him!" he shouted. "Just in time! Let him get dressed and win the game for you."

"What are you talking about?" asked Jackson crossly.

"Why, Dick Hamilton, of course! I've found him! Why, man, he was returned last night. Mr. Phillips rescued him. There he is."

"Why—why there must be some mistake," blustered the detective.

Big Mistake

"I'll say there's a mistake," yelled Jackson. "It was a mistake and a big one, too, that Jackson ever got in here. Now, will you two get out of here. I can take care of my team? I'll see you after the game, Collins. Now, beat it!"

The two intruders made a hasty exit and took seats in the bleachers, where a stiff argument began.

"Why didn't you tell me," demanded Collins, "that you weren't Dick Hamilton?"

"You didn't give me a chance, sir. You jumped to conclusions so soon."

"Jumped to conclusions! Bah! I guess I trailed you far enough that I wouldn't be apt to jump at conclusions!"

"Maybe so; but I—"

"Enough! Look at the money I wasted on you!"

"Oh, I'm not so sure it's wasted," replied the lad with a twinkle in his eyes.

"Oh, you're not, are you," fumed the detective. "I'll have you understand that that trip cost me a good deal over $500."

"I still don't think it's wasted," persisted the youth. "You'll get that back and more—Really, though, I don't think you deserve it!"

"What do you mean by that crack?"

"Just this: do you realize that you don't know who I am, who that man was whom you had put in jail, that he is jailed on a partly false decree."

"Why—why! I say now. Stop this foolishness! What are you talking about?"

"Well, I'm Dick Van Pryline. Someone stole mother's diamond tiara one night, and I decided I'd have some fun and try to find it."

Mr. Collins leaned back in the bleachers and prepared to listen to the boy's story.

"I got on trail of the tiara through a pawn shop. That man you put in jail had pawned one of the diamonds. I recognized it by its peculiar cut; and I knew he must have pried it out of the tiara. My problem, then, was to find that man. I started out after him, using the meager description given me by the pawn broker. He had just left the shop a few minutes before I had come in. The pawnbroker said that he had seen him in

Sketched Figures Of Teachers Decorate Lettermen's Banquet

Attractive decorations featured the annual Lettermen's banquet held last Wednesday evening at the West Creighton Avenue Christian Church.

The color scheme used on the tables was in green and white.

The white paper tablecloths were made gay with bright green plaid. Green and white napkins and green bowls filled with American beauty roses were also used. Places were marked by clever little figures of the persons attending the dinner. These were made of chenille pipe cleaners in skeleton fashion. The heads were sketched from pictures or from real life by pupils of Miss Mary Helen Ley's art classes.

A sketch was made of the head of each teacher in school, but was discarded if the teacher did not attend. Nearly one hundred sketches were made in all, but only about eighty-five persons attended. Pupils who volunteered time for making the figures and sketching the heads are: Janice Dyer, Martha Jane Clark, Miriam Lickert, Virginia Greiner, Hollis Logue, and William Bliss.

Members of the Booster Club decorating committee which has charge of the decorations for all school affairs for which no committees are specifically appointed, supervised the arrangement of the tables. They were assisted by Miss Ley, adviser to this group, aided by Anna Bremer, Virginia Greiner, Marie Wolf, Evelyn Kruse, Ann Hull, and Robert Lee.

that neighborhood for almost four months now and that he went into the confectionary shop across the street from the pawn shop every day about five o'clock.

Van Pryline Receives Bump

"So I waited until I saw him go into the store. When he came out, I trailed him as far as his room in an apartment building. I stood outside quite a while and listened to his conversation with a comrade. I became so interested in what they were saying that I didn't notice a big burly man approaching from behind. When I did notice him, it was too late. He knocked me over the head with a gun."

"Yes—go on. This is interesting," said Collins with excitement glowing in his eyes.

"Well, the next thing I knew, I was in the room with the three men. The men were arguing about mother's tiara, which was on the table. I couldn't make much out of their talk, and my head felt dull; so I soon fell asleep."

"What happened next?"

"It was Thursday morning when I awoke, and only Mr. Carlo was there. He was the man whom you put in jail. We took a train to New York, and the big burly man who hit me with the gun took the tiara back to my house for the reward money. Of course, the one diamond was missing, but—"

"Here the boy leaned over and whispered into the detective's ear.—"I've got that diamond in my shoe!"

"What? This is incredible!"

"Mr. Carlo took me to New York, hoping to get some ransom money for me from dad; but you blundered in and sort of messed up their plans."

"Well, I'll say I did!" exclaimed Collins, forgetting all about his disappointment at not having found Dick Hamilton.

"You had Mr. Carlo jailed for kidnapping Dick Hamilton when it wasn't Dick Hamilton at all he kidnapped,

Pins, Boots, Costumes Add To Excitement At Gym Exhibition

To be backstage at any kind of a performance is a thrill to an outsider; therefore the G. A. A. exhibition was very interesting and amusing to a wandering reporter who saw over four hundred girls trying to get to the right entrance at the right time in the right costume.

The handball court with a rope stretched from end to end was transformed into a dressing room. It was here that we saw one girl—like a jig saw—being put together by four 'maids in waiting.'

Out in the hall a few other girls were running through the steps of the Russian dance to their own whistling accompaniment. Another performer could not find the correct chord for the musical stairs on the piano.

"Pins, does anyone have an extra pin? I just need one little pin during the next dance." Yes, pins were really classed with the precious metal that night because of their scarcity.

Over in the corner sat a girl, who, in trying to get out of a pair of leather boots, had missed out in two of the dances in which she had a part; and she was still trying to get the boots off her legs.

Student leaders were vainly attempting to keep a group of freshmen in kiddy dresses from drowning out the music in the gymnasium.

Even though there were some things that the gym class girls thought would mar the show, the audience outside saw but a very few of these things.

but me. So you'll have to change your charge against him."

"Well, I guess so. My goodness, this is supreme!"

"Now if you return me to Chicago, you'll be handsomely rewarded by dad, I know."

"Now, that's fine!" exclaimed Mr. Collins. "Let's be on our way."

"Oh, no!" exclaimed Dick Van Pryline, startled. "I want to see this game, now that I'm here. Say! here come the teams again."

"Oh, but I say," put in Collins, "I really do believe we'd better get started!"

"I said no!" said the boy emphatically. "You can go by yourself if you want to, but you won't get the reward unless I'm along. Besides, the reward has waited this long. I guess it'll wait a couple more hours."

"Well," sighed Collins, "just as you say; but I really think we ought to—"

"There goes the gun," interrupted Dick Van Pryline. "We'll leave on the first train after the game. Boy! This is going to be good!"

The intramural softball tournament was officially opened last week with 20 teams in three leagues competing. They are lightweight, middleweight, and heavyweight. The lightweight teams are composed of players who weigh up to 120 pounds. The heavyweight league is entered with twelve teams, the middle and lightweight both having four teams. The middleweight players weigh from 120 to 130 pounds, while the heavyweight teams are made up of all players weighing over 140 pounds.

This is the standing of the teams up to Monday, May 4.

Miss Harvey Bears Down On Times Staff

"The Times staff is suffering from a terrible spring let-down," stated Miss Rowena Harvey, adviser, at a staff meeting held last Thursday in Room 24. She suggested that the reporters get the copy in as soon as possible and lessen the strain on a few of the more conscientious staff members.

Plans were announced for the demonstration given by the Times staff before the annual spring P-T.A. meeting Monday evening.

Mothers Of So-Si-Y Girls Are Honored

Helen Anderson, President, Assisted By Cabinet Members Had Charge Of Tea.

Nearly one hundred fifty members and guests of So-Si-Y attended the club's annual mother-daughter tea held Tuesday afternoon in the Greeley Room. Helen Anderson, president of the organization, assisted by the cabinet members, was in general charge. The program was built around the meeting's theme, "Shipmates Forever," and the poem, "I Have Three Candles," which was read by Marjorie Franz as the leader of the entire ceremony. In opening the program the president gave a welcome to the mothers present, emphasizing the ship and light theme. Fay Bechtold, service chairman, continued the welcome by telling of the service projects carried on by the club. Norma Clausner, vice-president and program chairman, outlined the club's semester program and conducted the welcome. Betty Muntzing read a poem entitled "Lights" to introduce the tribute to the club mothers. This tribute, which was divided into three groups, recognized the mothers of the past, the present, and the future, by a pageant and several musical numbers.

Mothers Are Honored
The mothers of the past represented were those of Lincoln, Whistler, Edna St. Vincent Mallay, Moses, and the Little Women. Girls who took part in this pageant are: Eliza Bess Lucas, Betty Rison, Marjorie Schumann, Phyllis Barrows, Catherine Allendorph, Virginia Wood, Katherine Simminger, Dorothy Roudsbush, Alice Shiflet, Beatrice Schieber, Betty Burhenn, Gertrude Dannenfeldt, and Barbara Von Gunten.

The mothers of the present were represented by six girls portraying Confidence, Trust, Comradeship, Love, Patience, and Sympathy. The members who took these parts are: Millie Poellinger, June Close, Dorothy DeHaven, Harriet Basford, Miriam Lickert, and Anna Bremer. The mothers of the future were honored by talks on the rainbow by Ruth Bormuth, Eleanor Schremser, and Mary Michaels. Virginia Baker, accompanied by Elizabeth Emley, sang "Pat O' My Cradle Days," and the "Rainbow Song" was sung by the entire group. In closing the program, the members sang the Girl Reserve Quest.

Help Is Listed
The program was in charge of Helen Forker as chairman, and Mary Ellen Blauvelt, Betty Rison, Beatrice Schieber, June Haeger and Martha Crum. Other committee members who assisted in planning the meeting are: refreshments, Geneva Shearer, chairman; Virginia Pothauer, Ruth Rose, Fay Bechtold, Marjorie Schuman, and Virginia Wood; decorations, Virginia Greiner, chairman; Eliza Bess Lucas, Helen Doenges, Mary Anne Park, Ruth Adler, Irene Becker, and Doris Line.

Hospitality, Mary Michaels, chairman, Norma Clausner, Betty Muntzing, Helen Clark, and Martha Franz; music, Virginia Baker, chairman, Lorraine Quackenbush, Ruth Gerber, and Miriam Lickert; and invitations, Miriam McIntire, Eleanor Schremser, Lorraine Meyer, and Grace Nelson.

Mrs. Briner Stands Against Over-The-Back-Fence Gossip

"I was never very good in athletics, but I like them," states Mrs. Louis A. Briner, wife of South Side's physical education head. As her contact with sports at the present time seems to be constant, she can't help but like them. Radio and group discussions, however, suffice to quell any desire for further reading on the subject; this she leaves to her husband.

Mrs. Briner graduated from Kendallville High School and finished her education with two and a half years at Indiana University. She started work as a stenographer and later decided to give this up for the favorable position of a housewife.

Their only girl, it seems, is going to be taught everything about physical education and sports that her father knows. She has not, as yet, voiced any objections. Mr. Briner has ambitions to work himself further up in his line; his wife has a passionate desire to be a good cook.

Gives Pet Peeves
Pet peeves, too, find a place in the Briner household. Mr. Briner positively hates to pick up wash rags that continuously fall on the floor. Mr. Briner is beside himself with anger when his wife forgets to hang her towel on her own towel rack, thus making her husband search all over for his own.

The lady of the house has a theory

Mother's Day

Mother's Day brings to me the thought
Of days when I was young;
Thoughts of my Mother and her arm,
And joys my heart has sung.
Her soul has gone to that blissful realm,
Where life's pains are no more
Her spirit dwells with angels now—
Her tasks on earth are o'er.

For her this white flower I'll wear,
As memory's sign of love,
And hope some time to gladly share
With her, the joys above.
Mother's songs touched my inmost soul,
And thrilled me to the heart;
Her words inspired for me the goal,
That we might never part.

Mother's Day reminds me of the years,
When wayward, weak and wild,
She soothed my pain, dispelled my fears,
With spirit meek and mild.
The world has not been quite the same,
Since Mother went away;
For to my heart an aching came—
The void I feel today.

For her this day, I'll gladly wear
This symbol of mortal hope,
And strive to meet dear Mother there—
Cling to faith's golden rope.
The years for me may come and go,
But none can take the place
Of my Mother, who loved me so,
And blest me with her grace.

Melodies Of Stephen Foster To Feature Music Concert

When you hear Stephen Foster's melodies, played at the next music concert, you will probably wonder where such fine scores of music came from, who arranged them, who the original composer was, and how such elaborate copies can be afforded by our music department. Answers to these questions lie in the hands of three men, Stephen Foster, Luis Guzman, and Josiah Lilly.

To begin our story, we must start Foster. He was born near Pittsburgh, Pa., July 4, 1826. His early manhood was devoted to business at Cincinnati, Ohio; but when remarkable success followed his composing of "Oh, Susanna" and "Old Uncle Ned" in 1848, he turned toward a musical career. His greatest song "Old Folks At Home," was published in 1851; and it was this song which made the humble composer world-famous. After this success, he began most of his other writings. His brief career ended at the young age of thirty-seven, when he died at his home in New York City. The simplicity and sincerity of Foster's songs have endeared them to the hearts of people, not only in his native land, but in other countries as well.

Guzman Arranged Music
The arranger, who should be given much credit for tearing the piece apart and fitting it together again so that all numbers harmonize and are written in the same key, is Luis Guzman. Mr. Guzman is a native of Bogota, Columbia, South America, and has had much experience in this line of music. He is at present a member of the United States Marine Band at Washington, D. C., of which our own director, Mr. Wainwright, has been a past member. This selection has been produced with the courteous assistance of the Marine Band, led by Captain Taylor Branson.

It has been through the hard work of these masters that these melodies have been written and arranged by the men mentioned above; but it has been through the unselfish efforts of Josiah Lilly of Indianapolis, that they have been published and contributed free of charge to all large bands of the country and of Central and South America, where Foster's works are also popular. Mr. Lilly has endeavored to further the love of these numbers by printing and taking care of this book at his own expense. He is head of the new Stephen Foster Memorial, Foster Hall has been built and dedicated to the life and works of Mr. Foster. Begun late in 1930, the collection numbers over ten thousand pieces.

Seniors Would Go For Clubs, Studios If Freshmen Again

If one could live a certain part of his life over, what things in it would he change? A reporter became so curious about this matter that he asked a number of graduating seniors, "What would you do if you were a freshman and could begin your high school career again?" The following are some of the answers we received. Here is what representative Archers say:

Bill Knickerson: I'd get in more clubs. I'd take more interest in my lessons.

Jim Ellenwood: Work harder.

Catherine Allendorph: I wouldn't take shorthand.

Doris Rohrer: I'd join more clubs.

Delores Miller: I'd try to study harder.

Bob Harruff: I'd go to North Side.

Sybil Knudson: I'd put every possible effort into study.

Janet Fisher: I'd study hard so I'd know a little more.

Ed Leitz: I'd work harder and strive to be on the honor roll.

Mary Martha Hobrock: I'd take public speaking. I'd work harder in the first two years and maybe in the last two years.

Maxine Mariotte: For one thing I'd go in more for public speaking and take it more seriously. I'd enter all the speaking contests instead of just a few.

Ruth Roadcap: I'd take public speaking, secretarial training, and business English.

June Haeger: I'd enter the freshman-sophomore speech contest, join Wranglers, take all the science I could get, and take journalism and shorthand.

Mr. Snider will give his last commencement speech of the year at Lafayette Central High School tonight. He recently spoke on a similar occasion at Arcola High School.

Travelers Take Trip To Canada

Motion Pictures And Talk By Miss Marion Bash, Of North Side, Feature April 29 Meet.

Miss Marion Bash, teacher at North Side, gave an interesting travel-talk illustrated with moving pictures on her trip through Canada at the Travel Club meeting April 29.

If asked, those present would answer thus: "Through the possibilities of technicolor, we visited quaint, colorful, French villages with their French-speaking inhabitants. Next the briny nets and racks of codfish of the picturesque fishing villages snuggled on hillside by the sea greeted our eye. We gazed upon famed and historic spots, too—the Bird Sanctuary, world-famous for the haunt it affords to thousands of birds; the Plains of Abraham, site of a famous battle during the French and Indian War; the Great Falls; the Reversible Falls; Quebec with its beautiful parks, chateaus and chateaus. With all these and others, we became familiar, through the film taken by Miss Bash."

Preceding the pictures, a report on the Inter-Club Congress was given by Marjorie Ruhl, representative; and Lorraine Meyers gave the treasurer's report. It was decided to make amendments to the Constitution. A report by the Constitution Committee was given by the chairman, Leona Menze. It was announced that a meeting of the program committee would be held in Miss Thorne's room May 6 to make arrangements for the next meeting on May 13.

Election of officers was then held. Candidates were: president, Charles Thorne and Arnold Shelper; vice-president, Rosemary Lehman and Constance Haig; secretary, Betty Garton and Leona Menze; treasurer, Marjorie Meyer and Margaret Ruhl; Inter-Club Congress, Marjorie Ruhl and Dorothy Newell; sergeant-at-arms, Richard Gerke and Dick Meller; Junior Red Cross, Emilou Allendorph, and Ruth Baade. Results of the election will be announced at a later date.

Five Hundred Go To Junior Prom

Novel Nautical Decorations Are Used To Further Theme; Gold, Silver Ships Mark Programs.

With a "Ship ahoy!" and the dismal toot of a fog horn, approximately five hundred juniors and their guests were launched on the "Southern Cruise," the theme which the third year class chose for the annual prom.

Friday evening the gymnasium was transformed into the deck of a ship with the appropriate fish nets, gold-fish, flags, sea gulls, and ocean waves as decorations. The orchestra platform was built like a steamship. Novel programs with a nautical pin on them were used.

The Barons of the Blues from Auburn provided music.

Dances Featured
During the intermission the floor show also portrayed the dance theme. Peggy Kilpatrick and Bill Korte, in sailor suits, gave a rhythm tap dance. "Shipmates Forever" and "I Saw The Sea" were sung by Don Sparkman. Girls from the physical education department gave a sailor tap dance. Chaperons included Dr. and Mrs. Noah Zehr, Mr. and Mrs. C. A. Bex, Mr. and Mrs. R. Nelson Snider, Mr. and Mrs. Merle Abbott, Mr. and Mrs. Lawson M. Creighton, Mr. and Mrs. T. R. Dent, Mr. and Mrs. H. F. Fathauer, Mr. and Mrs. Edward B. Henslee, Mr. and Mrs. Trygve Storm, Mr. and Mrs. Lloyd Whelan, Miss Martha Pittenger, and Miss Hazel Miller.

Committees were headed by Mary Louise Helms, orchestra; Sally Rea, program; Walter Prange, lighting; Lois Wynken, publicity; Charles Thorne, check room; John Edwards, tickets; and Sue Wallace, decorations.

Richard Halliburton, Writer, Pities Poor Italians In Africa

"From what I have seen of Ethiopia, it will serve the Italians just right if they get it." Richard Halliburton, famed travel writer, was speaking, in an interview with Times' staff members at the Hotel Anthony, Monday.

"I liked Haile Selassie. I was his guest a week, you know. He is very cultured, has a fine personality, speaks French very well, comes from a good family, and is a strong man and a good diplomat. I hate to see things going against him so now."

"You're from a high school paper?" he asked. "I was editor of my prep school paper and the Daily Princetonian, the Princeton University paper."

Concerning writing, Mr. Halliburton said that he had always liked to write. To prepare for authorship, he put in much time on books in his parents' large library, enough to give him a thorough knowledge of each place he went, he said. "There is no royal road to the arts," he added, and advised young writers to write for the love of writing and not the money.

Wrote Five Books
Seven publishers rejected his most popular book, "The Royal Road to Romance," before its publication, he remarked. He has written five books, but present plans call for no more, because "the critics tell me I should write no more."

Mr. Halliburton likes travel so well he hates to stay in one place very long. He has a home in Laguna, California and an apartment in New York, and he has been to Memphis, his parents' home. His next trip will be to Tahiti, in the South Seas, because he wants to see it before it becomes too modern, and because he wants to take a "frog" out of his voice. It will be his first trip there.

Mr. Halliburton is quite a personable man. He has a pleasant voice, which seems to float out of his mouth, he talks so naturally. He stands about five feet six and is athletically built. Good manners and education seem to ooze out of the man.

He has been lecturing, as a side-line to writing, since his first book, but says he prefers writing. Only two hundred lectures are scheduled for him this year! He thinks he has spoken in all Indiana towns of over 5,000.

Lady Faints
During his lecture at North Side High School Monday, someone in the audience fainted; and he later asked what was wrong, with gestures to show how the people looked away.

This called to mind lecture experiences of the past. He says seven people have fainted, an introducer broke a leg on the stage, radiators have banged, fire engines have run by, and one lady threw an epileptic fit at his lectures. Another distraction seemed to be a flock of bats which interrupted him once.

His lecture Monday was not the customary one on his "Flying Carpet" experiences, but later experiences, because he has been here twice and some people have heard the other lecture.

Comments On Sheean

In commenting on Vincent Sheean's opinion on the Zionist movement as expressed in his "Personal History," he replied that Mr. Sheean was a good friend, and that the settlement of Arabic Palestine by the Zionists was like giving America back to the Indians. He said it is very apparent in Palestine, and that a war is probable, unless England can prevent it.

"Business English Is Best Office Training" Robert Shelper, 35

Robert Shelper, 1935 graduate of South Side High School, has acquired a position with the Bowser Company as a result of his commercial training in the South Side commercial department.

A present, he is working in the Traffic department. His hours are from 8:30 to 12:00 and 1:15 to 5:00. His duties seem to be wholly likable, to his way of thinking.

In a day's work, he starts out by separating ing many of the bills of lading that keep pouring in for a short time. Various orders then start coming in; and he must type orders, and then generally be responsible for following-up and answering any correspondence in regard to orders.

In his actual work in the commercial training at South Side, he believes that he should have put more time on shorthand. He probably would, he said, if he had it to do over again. In the whole course, he believes that the things which are most helpful in real office work are business English and secretarial training. The hardest part of the whole course, however, he believed to be the beginning shorthand and first connections with transcribing and punctuation. From then on, it's easy sailing.

He followed the commercial course in South Side; and of all his subjects, he regarded general history as his favorite. Health, he considered not especially hard, but rather a drag. Bookkeeping was his easiest subject. An ambition, besides an earnest desire to win the city tennis title next summer, is to become a public accountant. Activities at South Side included four-year honor roll, membership in German Club, participation in intramural sports, and varsity tennis.

Bob ended the short discussion with the statement, "I think that anyone who is a graduate of the South Side commercial course is fitted for a secretarial position in any office in the city. Of course, there are individual methods in each office which must be learned; but they are not to be feared."

Archers Prepare To Enter Sectional Track, Field Meet

Winners To Go To State Final At Indianapolis

North Side Is Site Of Meet On Saturday; Will Start Promptly At 1:30 o'clock.

City Is Made One Of Sixteen Centers

Under Auspices I.H.S.A.A.; Two First In Each Event Chosen For State Contest.

The annual sectional field and track meet will be held at North Side Field, Saturday May 9, at 1:30 o'clock. North Side has been chosen one of the sixteen sectional centers of the state and host to the track teams in this region.

This meet, which is under the auspices of the I. H. S. A. A., is held every year near the end of the track season to determine the outstanding performers in the various track and field events. Winners here go to the state meet at Indianapolis the following week to compete with the winners of the other sectionals. Winners of first and second places in each event will qualify to compete in the state meet. In the case of the half-mile and mile relay events, however, only the team that takes first place goes to Indianapolis.

List Teams
Teams to be entered are South Side, Central, and North Side of Fort Wayne, Auburn, Garrett, Bluffton, Huntington, Columbia City, Decatur, Elmhurst, Roanoke, South Whitley, and Waterloo.

North Side is the defending champion and is figured to win again this year with Central expected to crowd the Redskins closely.

John Beck, of Illinois, and formerly of Plymouth, will act as starter and referee.

In fourteen other centers next Saturday, the eliminations for the annual state meet will be begun.

Each event has a certain time which must be equalled or bettered by two winners in order for them to compete in the state meets. These eligibility marks are not too difficult to attain.

Give Point System
In the sectional meets, points will be given for first, second, and third places, while at Indianapolis the first five places will be recorded.

The only difference in any of the events is that the low hurdles will be run over a new distance, 200 yards, clipping 20 yards from the distance which was run last year. The same number of hurdles will be used but they will be two yards closer together. The high hurdles will be run this year at a new height, 3 feet, 3 inches, instead of 3 feet, 6 inches to which height they rose last year. New marks will be recorded in both of these events.

Freshman Baseball Returns Announced

Teams 2, 6, and 8 won over teams 3, 4, 5, and 6 at the freshman baseball games which were played Monday.

Team 1 took team 5 by a score of 20-7. Betty Shwalter made two home runs for her team. Wilma Carrier and Nadine Mueller also scored home runs for the winning team. Sarah Smetzer, Marjorie Schelper, Frieda Schubert, Vera Wells, Hazel Perry, Bernice Laisure, and June Schilling made the only runs for the losers.

Team 11 won over team 4 by a score of 17-11. Two home runs for the winners were made by Deloris Meneffe.

Team 7 won over team 6 by a score of 6-5. Marcelle Brackman scored two runs for the victors. Miriam Oberkiser made a home run for the losers.

Team 8 won over team 3 by the tremendous score of 30-7. Valeska Cramer and Berry made home runs for the winning team. Loraine Iba made a home run for the losers.

Janitors Clean Up

Clean-up Week meant a great deal to the Archer janitorial staff, for they spent it washing windows, scrubbing walls and corridors, and waxing the floors. They fixed loose seats and did varied carpenter work. Other elbow grease was applied to checking locks on the doors, dusting desks and lamp shades, and repairing linoleum floors.

Cinder Scrapers

Brown, Central hurdler, was the outstanding individual performer at the Muncie Relays, winning both the low and high sticks in record time and running as anchor man on the half-mile relay team.

Ed Leitz and Ed Kruse were high scorers for the Archers at the same meet. Leitz won the shot put with a heave of 42 feet, 11 inches; Kruse tied for first in the pole vault for the Green.

Horace Mann of Gary, scoring first in the dashes, quarter-mile, and both relays, won the Northern Indiana High School Track and Field Carnival Saturday with a total of 45 points. Second to the fast traveling Steel City squad came Mishawaka's Cavemen with 41 points.

Heavy rains which flooded the track at Muncie accounted for the slow times in nearly all events. Brown of Central, however, captured the hurdles in 15.8 seconds and 23.8 seconds, setting new field records.

At the Muncie Relays there were four relay queens, who, after the victory call was sounded and the winners announced, presented the winners announced, presented winners.

All of the Archer track men stated that in a few years the Muncie Relays would be better than the Kokomo event because it had more color and will entertain tougher competition.

The Redskins scored two grand slams against Auburn Saturday, taking all three places in the mile and half-mile runs.

The closest race of the Auburn meet came in the 220-yard dash, when Central of North Side and Mason of Auburn ended almost in a dead heat. A final lunge at the finish, however, enabled Ormiston to break the tape first.

The Archer half-mile relay team was disqualified at the Muncie Relays when one of the Archers lost his stride and knocked down an opponent.

"Poody" Shoppman, 225-pound football tackle, heaved the iron ball 38 feet, 6 inches, a good showing for his first year on the track squad.

Intramural Tennis Tourney Advances

Garman Reaches Semi-Finals; Lahrman, Eicher, Buck, Morton Among Other Competitors.

Intramural tennis has swung into full swing, one lightweight being in the semi-finals, and a heavyweight in the quarter-finals. Garrison is the lightweight to be in the semi-finals by virtue of his 6-4 win over Cassidy, and Lahrman is the heavy to reach the quarter-finals because of his 6-3 victory over Morton.

The first match was between Eicher and Hargan, the former coming out on top by a 6-1 score. In the next match, Buck proved to have too much power for Stilwell, when he won, 6-3. Morton captured the next match rather easily from Helmsing when he won 6-1. Lahrman, too, boy in the heavy quarter-finals, proved too much for Logue, beating him 6-1. In the next match, Nussbaum did not provide much competition for Dent, as he was defeated 6-1. The following match proved to be a little closer, when Cochran defeated Russell 6-4. In the following match, Will proved to be Armstrong's superior, defeating him 6-1. The following match was won by Klopfenstein over Schlefer.

In the McAlister-Ertel match, McAlister was victor by 7-5. Sherman then took the match, 6-3. After a see-saw battle, Scott finally emerged victor over Fletcher, 6-3. The battle between Dammier and Obringer ended with the former coming out on top, 6-2. Carl Shilder was the victor over Kirkpatrick by the score of 6-3. Redmon and Schaaf battled to a 8-6 before Redmon emerged the victor. Earl Shilder and Brown were the next contestants with Shilder coming out on top, 6-3.

Archer Team Places Second At Relay Meet

Central Takes First Place; Brown, Central Boy, Most Outstanding Contestant.

Shut out of the scoring column in four events, the South Side Archer track team finished second in the Muncie Relays at Muncie Saturday afternoon. The Archers scored 17 1-3 points, while Central scored 36 1-2. Bad conditions on the track and field failed to produce good times or results in all but the hurdles and half-mile relay team.

Brown of Central, was the outstanding scorer of the relay, taking both the hurdles and running the anchor leg on the winning half-mile relay team. Brown did the 120-yard high hurdles in 15.8 seconds, and the 220-yard low hurdles in 23.8, both being new field records, as well as the 1:36.9 mark of the half-mile relay team.

Stone of South Side took fourth in the century run and second in the broad jump; Nelson Miller was fourth behind Ed Leitz who took first in the shot put; Kruse tied for first place in the pole vault; the Archer medley distance relay team was third and the half-mile relay team was disqualified when Frazell injured his leg and lost his stride, fouling his opponent in front of him.

The other six participating schools finished as follows:

Muncie Central, 14 1-2; Anderson, 13; Marion, 13; Frankfort, 9 2-3; Richmond, 5; and New Castle 1.

Outdoor Baseball Scores Are Given

All But One Of Several Ties Are One-Sided Affairs; Four Outdoor Diamonds Are Used.

Junior 3, Senior, Sophomore 4, and Junior 1 teams in upperclassmen baseball defeated Junior 2, Sophomore 3, Sophomore 2, and Sophomore 1 last Friday in outdoor games. All the games, with the exception of one, were one-sided affairs.

On the first diamond, Margaret Ruhl's Junior 3's defeated Enita Snavely's Junior 2's by the score of 27 to 4. Margaret Ruhl, Anna Marie Baumgartner, Ada Schuelke, and Margery Ruhl made home runs for the winning team, while Helen Humcke was the only player to score a home run for the losers.

Marjorie Hower's Senior team easily bested Barbara Raymond's Sophomore 3 team to the tune of 47 to 0 on the second diamond. Each one of the Senior team scored several home runs. These included Marjorie Hower, Marjorie Cartwright, Mary Jane Redding, Betty Rison, Lillian Winkler, Velma Yoder, and Jane Bligh.

On the third diamond, Eleanor Rarick's Sophomore 4's defeated Mae Persing's Sophomore 2's by the score of 6 to 0. Eleanor Rarick was the only one to make a home run for her winning team.

Diamond 4 was the scene of the most exciting game when Winnie Locker's Junior 1's beat Betty Eisenacher's Sophomore 1's by the score of 8 to 7. Edna Disler, Winnie Locker, and Marjorie Meyer contributed home runs for the winners, and Marjorie Crago, Betty Eisenacher, and Lillian Roe for the losers.

Sportlights

In the past week, the Detroit Tigers have suffered two blows which will affect their standing greatly. The first and worst is the broken wrist of Hank Greenberg, the star first baseman. Then on the very next day the manager and catcher, Mickey Cochran, was injured. The relief catcher, who is Hayworth, has proved himself to be quite a fine catcher under careful catching of his present manager. The Tigers were forced to make a fast deal with the St. Louis Browns for the present first baseman who is now taking Hank Greenberg's place.

The Cleveland Indians, who have been proving one of the surprise teams of the year, have come up into and out of first place in the last few weeks. They always manage to stay within the range to attain first place, as they have always been one of the first four teams in the American League.

Although Chuck Klein has not hit any home runs in the last few days, he is still in a tie for first place with Mel Ott of the New York Giants. Klein has aided the Cubs in the past, however, with timely hits which have won more than one ball game for the Cubs. The home run leaders at the present time are Trosky of the Cleveland Indians and Jimmy Fox of the Boston Red Sox, who have both hit five homers.

As little attention is put on the American Association, we will relate a few facts and records. At the present time the Kansas City Blues are the leaders in the league. The Blues have won 10, and lost only 2 for an average of .833. The second position is now occupied by St. Paul, which has won 12 and have lost 4 for an average of .750. In third place we find the Minneapolis Millers, who were last year's champions. They have won 8, and have lost 5 for an average of .615. The rest of the teams follow in order thus: Milwaukee with .538, Louisville with .375, Indianapolis with .364, Columbus with .355, and Toledo with .250. The race will be close for the first place, and they all look very good for this season.

At Louisville last Saturday, at the sixty-third running of the Kentucky Derby, Bold Venture was the first horse to cross the line, for a fine and rich victory. The jockey of the winner, Bold Venture, was given, however, a fifteen-day suspension for rough riding; but he told reporters that he would spend his time feeding sugar to the horse which won him and the owner a nice sum of money.

At Bonneville last week a Captain George Eyston went over a measured mile in a record time with his specially built car. He set the record for these cars with an average of 158.87 miles per hour. He was protected from the flying sand and whistling winds by a trick windshield and a covered cockpit.

The Notre Dame golf team was victorious last week when they defeated Northwestern by a score of 13 1/2 to 7 1/2. This is the fourth match that the Irish have won this year.

Archer Golfers Play At Brookwood May 9

South Side's crack golf team will participate in a triangular conference meet Saturday May 9, with Auburn, and Bluffton at Brookwood golf course near Fort Wayne. This is one of the most important meets of the season, as Bluffton and Auburn are the Archers' toughest competitors. The Bluffton and Auburn teams are better this year than they have been for several years; and they are expected to give the Archers plenty of competition, but South Side is expected to come out on top.

May 13, Auburn will come to Fort Wayne for a return meet with the Archers, as the Archers traveled to Bluffton May 21 for a match with the Redskins. May 29, the South Side team will go to Marion and on June 1, Marion will come to the Brookwood course for a return match with the Archers. Negotiations are being made with Elmhurst and Huntington, and matches are expected to be made with these teams.

Skirts and Sports

Attention all G. A. A. members! The annual track meet will be held May 11 and 15. Sign up now for the events in which you wish to participate. For further announcements, watch the bulletin board.

To all participants in the forthcoming track meet: It is advisable to begin practice immediately on the different events, as there will be plenty of stiff competition.

We wonder what that certain touch of mystery is in Miss Smith's red sweater that draws compliments from nearly everyone who sees it. Perhaps it is the fact that she didn't like it formerly and is now wearing it backward.

Leona Menze will be back again this year to defend her high jump record. She broke the school record last year, when she jumped four feet, eleven inches.

The balance beam record will again be defended by last year's champion, Marjorie Hower, who walked it 34 times without faltering. This was also a new record.

Ada Schuelke set a new record in volleyball serving last year, making ten serves out of ten. She will probably compete this year again.

Marie Winkler set a new baseball pitching record last year. She made a perfect score out of ten balls.

Talk On Lincoln Is Library Topic

Library Club's Meeting Featured
By Report On Lincoln Museum
And Review Of Trip To Wash.

A report on the Lincoln Library located in the Lincoln Life Insurance Building carried out the Library Club theme "Literature of Indiana" at the last meeting on Tuesday, April 27. This report was given by Arlin Grieser. Members discussed a prospective trip to this library, to be made on a future Saturday morning.

Ruth Fritz related to the club her most interesting experiences while on her recent trip to Washington, D. C. as a representative to the C. A. R. and D. A. R. conventions. "I found the Senate most disappointing," stated Ruth. "The men seemed to just sit around eating and napping, paying no attention to the speaker, whatsoever."

"Outdoor Indiana," and "Independent Woman," two magazines that are obtainable in the South Side library, yet little-used were discussed by Hazel Kuttler. "Independent Woman" is a monthly published entirely by women and used extensively by professional women all over the United States.

The program was concluded by a medley of melodies played by Bob Gargett. These included "Lost, Melody From the Sky," and "Touch Of Your Lips." Refreshments consisting of ice cream bars were served.

Those in charge of this, the April meeting, are George Anna Martin, program chairman for the year Arlin Grieser, Bill Hebermehl, Selma Liff, and Hazel Kuttler. Sometime in May, the annual picnic at which the juniors entertain the seniors, will be held. George Anna Martin, James Geiger, Richard Gebert, Don Sinish, LaVon Cook, and Geraldine Valiton are in charge of this.

Girls Sew Dresses For Mothers, Aunts, Sisters, And Selves

With graduation rapidly approaching, many sewing students are turning their attention to their last school projects.

Martha Franz, Marjorie Boerger, Vivian Hickman, Katherine Magley, and Betty Rison are making graduation dresses. Remembering Mothers' Day, Dorothy Kimble is busy on a dress for her mother. Anita Affolder has just completed a smart brown linen suit. Brown is also the color chosen by Doris Rindchen for her spring jacket, to be worn with her spring and summer clothes.

Betty Hayden and Rachel Mings have each been making a spring dress, after having completed their Easter outfits. Betty is completing a blouse, and Rachel is making another spring dress. Helen Horstmeier and Merle Welsh are working on late spring suits.

Sisters and aunts also benefit from these sewing classes. Mary Rapp and Vivian Bloom are making dresses for their sisters; Evelyn Heine is making one for her aunt.

Bessie Wesslow, Elsie Campbell, Marcell Kronister, Geraldine Kelly, Florence Crabs, Eleanor Liby, Belaria Martin, and Eleanor Rarick are also sewing summer dresses.

New Totem Editor

Homer Miller

Miss Rowena Harvey, faculty adviser for the Totem, has announced that Homer Miller, a junior who has been working on the Totem this year, will edit the 1937 yearbook.

Sharps And Flats

The little ensemble has been doing a little bit more than keeping themselves busy; they have been rushed. On April 21 they played for the freshman P. T. A. in the Greeley Room, and on the following day they traveled to Mongo, Indiana, where they furnished music for the graduation exercises. On April 27 they played while the Rotary Club dined here at South Side. On the next evening they accompanied some acts from the physical education department at the sophomore P. T. A. meeting. Coming events forecast their shadows, and they have many other engagements that we will tell you about next week.

Are you all wondering when the next music assembly will be? Well, you haven't much longer to wait. It is to be Tuesday, May 12, and a very interesting program is being lined up, so don't forget your nickels!

Last week we told you about Dalman and Knoche, who received their scholarships to college from the Wainwright Camps. They are not the only ones. Wilbur Arnold, '34, was awarded a scholarship to Capitol University at Columbus, Ohio. And the Bryan twins from North Side and Louis Didier also from the Redskin school, won scholarships. The Bryans went to Miami, Florida, and Didier to Riverside Military Academy at Gainesville, Georgia.

On May 9, a group from the band will go to Shipshewanna, Indiana. Those who will play there are Myron Jones, Bob Adams, Harry Ertel, Don Hickman, Vernon Gregory, Jean Meyers, James Kelso, Dick Snook, John Lyons, Eileen Myers, Bob Groves, Dorothy Mertz, George Strahlem, Charles Thorne, and Glenn Gregory. Dick Rastetter is to be the leader.

On this same day, May 9, in the evening, the little ensemble will play in Lagrange. Those who will play will be Mary Jo Allen, Bill Cargile, Margaret Null, Ruth Bade, Margaret Rehm, and Vernon Gregory. Mary Jo leads the group.

Have you noticed the new instruments the band has this year? They purchased them with money obtained from giving concerts. They include a French horn, an oboe, three basses, and a baritone. The band has also been using many instruments belonging to the Wainwright Camps.

Students Clean Out Everything From Yards To Refrigerators

"What did you do for Clean-Up Week?" Variety is the only word which expresses the results of this inquiry. Hard work, such as cleaning of lockers, predominated.

After reading the following, everyone should agree that South Side still needs janitors.

Don Redmon: I dug dandelions.

Betty Garton: My mother cleaned house.

Allan Tremper: I cleaned up twelve bottles of pop.

Marjorie Dancer: I forgot that it was Clean-Up Week.

Richard Meyer: I gave some good advice.

Beatrice Fudge: Cleaned out my notebooks.

Bob Storm: Not a blessed thing.

Selma Liff: I wasn't conscious that it was Clean-Up Week.

Don Helm: As a man of integrity I cannot tell a lie. I washed down the windows, scrubbed the porches, dug the weeds, etc.

Martha Lyman: Cleaned my finger nails.

Bob Morton: I did too much to mention.

Dorothy Keen: Pulled weeds and washed my hair.

Andy Bremer: Cleaned up the yard.

Phyllis Culver: I cleaned out the refrigerator—(of food).

Bob Groves: Went to the lake and cleaned the cottage and painted the boats.

Paul McConnell: I cleaned up everything.

Phyllis Hayner: I cleaned my bedroom.

Doris Osgood: I didn't even know it was Clean-Up Week till the assembly, and then I sent my dog to the laundry.

Helen Doenges—I picked up paper which I found lying around.

George Martin: I cleaned out John Bex's desk.

Most Of New Honor Society Comes From Harrison Hill

Harrison Hill is leading the field! Emmaus Lutheran is in second place! What will be the outcome of this exciting race?

No, reader, Harrison Hill is not the name of a horse, and this is not a horse race. This is merely an account of the schools from which our newly-chosen National Honor Society members come.

Harrison Hill leads with fourteen members, and Emmaus Lutheran is second with ten. Other schools are also well-represented: Hoagland has eight students, James Smart with five, Zion Lutheran with four, and St. Paul Lutheran, and St. Peter's Catholic with one each. Two students who received the National Honor Society award came to South Side from out-of-town schools. They are Virginia Wood, who came from Galesburg, Illinois, and Miller Mahey, who came from Reelsville, Indiana.

Boys Demonstrate Freshman Version Of Art Of Fencing

The art of fencing was demonstrated in a very modern fashion in our front hall Monday.

Two chubby little freshmen (Tom Thompson and Kenneth Erne, to be exact) evidently having been greatly impressed by the exhibitions of that sport in the gymnasium, decided to indulge in a bit of this fascinating art themselves.

When they were discovered, they had discarded their shirts and were frantically poking each other with pointed sticks (foils to you.)

When they were asked their names, the boys, thinking that they would be given eighth periods, refused to tell; but when they were told that they might be allowed to display their talent at an assembly they consented.

Local Attorney Speaks Before Wrangler Club

Samuel Jackson Acts As Guest Of Honor For Annual Banquet On Tuesday.

Mr. Samuel Jackson, a Fort Wayne attorney, was guest speaker at the annual Wranglers Banquet held in the cafeteria Tuesday evening. His address concerned the use of the power of speech for good. Miss Dorothy Benner, faculty adviser of Wranglers, was in direct charge of arrangements, with Sally Rea assisting her.

Miss Sybil Knudson, one of South Side's most effective speakers, served as toastmaster of the banquet. Her speaking ability and humor were contributing factors in making the affair a success.

Musical Interludes Given

Musical interludes were provided by Franklin Peddie, soloist, with William Benninghoff accompanying him. Mr. Peddie and Mr. Benninghoff are members of the graduating class at North Side.

During the course of the banquet, honor awards were presented to outstanding speakers from the South Side student body. Manuel Rothberg received the highest award of the evening, a gold "S" with two pearls and three emeralds inset. Dalton McAlister received a gold "S" with a pearl and emerald setting. These presentations were made by Dick Helm.

Honor debate medals were awarded to Sybil Knudson, Vernon Miller, Dick Helm, and Charles Hart, members of the Wrangler Honor Debate Team. Tom Jaenicke presented these awards. Meterites Make Plans For Tea, Skating Party

In keeping with the theme of the semester, "Critical Studies of Motion Pictures," the Meterites held a discussion Tuesday, May 12, on one of Shirley Temple's latest hits, "Captain January." A report on the show itself, its good features and bad points, was given. Speakers were Maurine Seibert, Doris Seibold, Betty Showalter and Gwendolyn DeWeis.

Plans for the Mother-Daughter tea, to be held soon, were discussed also at the meeting. Committee heads appointed are Margaret Null, program; Ruth Bax, reception; Marjorie Rapp, social, and Lois Rea, decorations.

Final plans for the Meterite-Lettermen's skating party were completed.

Staff This Fall To Be Headed By Bob Storm

Leona Menze To Be Business Manager; John Bex Will Act As Student Adviser.

"Bob Storm knows all the essential steps in producing a paper," stated Miss Rowena Harvey, "therefore I picked him as the next general manager of The South Side Times. He is faithful and hard working; he knows how to write and edit copy; he has a good sense of originality. These are the reasons I picked him as the next general manager."

Miss Harvey added that she has other good material for general managers from which to pick next year. She also announced that Leona Menze will be the next business manager and John Bex, student adviser.

Bob Storm is completing his second year on the major staff and his third year on the paper. He has held the positions of reporter, assistant circulation manager, circulation manager, make-up editor, copy editor, news editor, sports make-up and copy editor, and editor.

Miss Harvey announced that there will be a staff meeting next Thursday, at which time the staff members will choose the positions which they would like to occupy on the staff. Later the names of the persons who will fill the remaining major positions will be announced.

Final Concert Features Two Guest Soloists

Bernard Ramey, Cornetist, Wynn van Cronk, Cellist, Demonstrate Music Skill.

Bernard Ramey, cornetist, and Wynn van Cronk, cellist, two leading musicians, were the featured guest artists as the closing music assembly presented Tuesday morning.

"Hostrauser's March" by Chambers, and "L'Aletheie" by Bizet, were the initial selections presented by the school 75-piece band, under the direction of Jack W. Wainwright. Following, Mr. Wainwright gave a brief but informative description of the cello, stating, "There is very little to be said about the history of the cello, except that it belongs to the violin family. The parts of the cello are named similarly to the parts of the human body: namely, head, neck, shoulder, back, front, and finger board. The variety of tones are produced by shortening and lengthening of the strings."

Van Cronk Plays

Wynn van Cronk, accompanied by his mother at the piano, presented "Scherzo" by van Goens, "None But the Lonely Heart" by Tchaikowsky, and "Tarentelle" by Poppo. The last piece, one of particularly difficult fingering, demonstrated his ability. "The Album Leaf" by Wagner, led by Mr. Wainwright, followed.

The school chorus, accompanied in the first number by the band, presented "Berceuse" by Jaernefelt. TwTo more vocal selections, "Who Knows?" by Lucas, and "I Passed by Your Window" by Lucas, were given, accompanied by Ruth Bax, pianist.

Foster Medley Heard

A collection and sympathetic arrangement by Gunzmann of a large number of Stephen Foster melodies, bound and presented to Mr. Jack Wainwright by H. K. Lillie, were interpreted and played by the band.

A short and concise description of the cornet was given by Mr. Wainwright. An unusual demonstration of the cornet was rendered by Bernard Ramey, namely, "Bride of the Waves" by Clarke, and "Perfect Day" by Bond. Mr. Wainwright directed the band in his own composition, "The Spirit of South Side." Mr. Ramey turned with two selections, "Grand Russian Fantasia" by Levy, and Lake's "Drink to Me Only With Thine Eyes."

Victor Herbert's "The Fortune Teller" was played by the band. Little Billy Wainwright led the school band in the concluding song, "Stars and Stripes Forever."

Use White Slips

A shortage of red hall passes has caused the use of white session room slips in their place as many pupils may have noticed recently.

Sophomore Circus a Stupendous Success.

The perfect easy-to-write liner: "Just — days till school is dismissed."

Finally we found a place where the music really goes round and round. It is on a merry-go-round.

Correct this sentence: "No," said the defeated baseball players, "We won't blame Smith for our losing the game, just because he fumbled the ball once."

If you like the fellow who doesn't change his mind, you speak of him as a man who sticks firmly to his principles. If you don't like him, he's a stubborn fool.

Progress of a nation in song:

1934: Santa Claus Is Coming to Town.
1935: Lookie, Lookie, Lookie—Here Comes Cookie.
1936: Goody, Goody.

Learning Through Personal Experience Is Not The Only Way

An old saying is that a wise man learns from the mistakes of others, but a fool learns only from his own. Anybody can learn from his own experiences, for even a dog or cat learns that fire is not a pleasant plaything after it has once been burned by it. The real wisdom lies in finding things out without having to pay the price of a sad experience. A boy who recklessly drives his automobile and ends up with a twisted spine or a life-long deformity because of it will have learned his lesson.

But one need not be badly injured in a little accident of their own in order to learn that recklessness in driving is not good policy. A student in school, who does his lessons carelessly and then fails at the end of the semester because of it, will probably have learned somewhat of a lesson. But it is not necessary that every student should fail once in order to discover that one should always do his schoolwork with care. Be wise and learn to profit by the mistakes of others as well as your own.

Tall Buildings Aren't Built On Weak Foundations

Time and time again we students are inclined to ask ourselves, "Why are we in school?" The answer seems plain enough, "To get an education," but that leads to the ever-appearing question, "Why get an education?"

May we illustrate: Tom was an ordinary student who, after asking himself these questions, came to the conclusion that an education wasn't necessary to a person's happiness in this modern world. He had seen other boys who had dropped out of high school and began making money; and since Tom was naturally very fond of money, he followed the example set before him and quit school to go to work. He soon got a job with a small salary, which proved to be a lot more interesting and profitable to him than school. And so it was at the time.

However, a few years later, since Tom was coming into manhood, he decided to seek a promotion because he knew he had worked long and faithfully and deserved well. When he arrived at the office, he found the boss talking with a friend of Tom's—who had graduated from high school. His friend got a good job immediately; when Tom went in, he asked about his friend's success. Then he asked for his promotion and after being turned down because of his lack of education, he requested an explanation from the boss. The boss said, "Well, Tom, you have been a faithful worker, and we do have some openings in several departments; but there are none that you could manage. You see, your friend has had algebra and geometry, and we can use him in the drafting department. If you had learned to do more things, we might be able to advance you; but the way it is, you'll just have to wait around a few more years."

Tom learned his lesson and is now taking hours and hours of work in night school.

As headstrong as a man eating onions.

Pud Piquignot was seen cavorting with Miriam Bell at the Sophomore Circus. Better pick a new one, Pud. Harold (ladies man) Schmidt ditched Boo Boo (Davey) Werumth to go to the Senior Dance with a Centralite. Dave (Goo-Goo) Stoner is to rescue his castoff, Boo Boo.

Bonsie must be in her second childhood, she was seen playing basketball with a few neighbor boys. (Or were they.) Now please, dear reader, don't blame the following points on us. After several hours of snooping, South Siders gave their opinion of a few mugs.

Superlatives:

Biggest pest—Charles Hart.
Best sport—Ed Kruse.
Most intelligent—Bryce Minier and Eric Beyer.
Best looking—Paul McConnell and Eddie Reeves.
Most conceited..... We know who.
(Censored)
Best looking girl.....too many.
Best all-round girls—Jo Bonsib and Lill Gunzenhauser.

You can always see tag-along Percy Kellogg holding up the rear when the following couples are seen strolling down the Ave.: Heide Scheele, Roger Neff, One-half Pint Iba, and Billy Siples. The last thing we thought we would ever see is Vera Crise and Jim Phelps attending the May Festival.

--CLEAR CUT CAMEOS--

Finding no appropriate words to express our feeling for this great personage and yet not wishing to become too verbose and exaggerate, nor to become too scimp and use stupid adjectives which don't fit—we'll merely say that in the first place he is absolutely the most wonderful, scrumptious, versatile, marvelous, studious, and brilliant person in South Side and in the second place, he's just swell! How is that?

This is rather a description of a young man who entered high school with no pretense of pretentiousness, who has striven to avoid any excess public lauding of his accomplishments, as yet, a young man who has acquired an extremely pretentious place of honor in the 1936 senior class and has received at least a part of the praise that he deserves.

Just to illustrate the fact that no one can be perfect all the time, we want to tell you one of Bryce's most perplexing experiences. During an assembly last year, Bryce and one of his cohorts in crime decided to skip the entertainment. Not particularly relishing the idea of being caught walking out of the door, they climbed out of the Times office window. And then, of course, the perfect ending.—They fell into a trap, the arms of their dear, dear principal, R. Nelson.

Let that be a lesson to each and every one of you. Let us enumerate some of Bryce's very numerous activities at South Side: He has been president of Social Science, Booster, 1500, and Torch clubs and the Inter-Club Congress, was a member of Math Science, Junior Math, National Honor Society, Quill and Scroll, the Safety Council, was general manager of the Times, and was business manager of the Totem.

As to Mr. Minier's personality and appearance, we shall say that he is the very essence of good looks, has an irresistible smile, and makes one feel that he has known you all his life. Bryce gets embarrassed quite easily and is one of the very few people who blush at small insinuations or compliments.

Above all his other accomplishments, we must say that Bryce is the valedictorian of the senior class, having an average of 96.05.

Welfare's Watchdog

Drawn by Paul Kennedy

Shoes and Ships

PRIZE BONER—This story does not concern the pussy that wanted a corner. In a discussion concerning the lighting arrangements for the senior dance, the lighting expert asserted that he understood the corners (of the dance floor) were not used and could be left darkened. Ruth Adler, that shy little lassie, piped up, "I like to get in the corners." How about it, Harrison?

GOOD IDEA—Mr. Sterner has found a new means of obtaining enough humor to make his personality continue to sparkle. He lets his English pupils write themes on topics which guarantee to provoke no little mirth. We have an idea he knows, by now, that modern youth is too, too direct in its consideration of personages.

THOUGHTS WHILE STUMBLING—Miss Smith valiantly gathering voters to support her papa...Helen Anderson threatening to take this scribe for a ride (in the Austin, perhaps) if he mentions anything about the "dude" Weinman taking her to the senior dance...Those last two minutes before you must rise from the banquet table and give some person a flowery introduction...Bryce Minier wearily lifting his tired feet after his first day of manual labor...Will the International Harvester close down the night we have our commencement exercises? There must be a hundred South Siders laboring "out there"...Ash Kabibble singing "Wahoo" with Kay Kyser's band reminds us of the famed night before the morning after...Dot Durbin splashing a middle-aidster in her column before the participants knew about it.

BLACK GAUDIES—After months of battles and intense feuds in Congress and the entire Democratic party yelling at the "nine men in black," some prankster is reported to have the entire population of Washington seeing "red." It seems that the U. S. baseball team returned to work a few mornings ago, and on gazing up into the heavens to see "Old Glory" flying over the new supreme court building, they were astonished to find the red banner of Soviet Russia flapping over the heads of the supreme court. Since things are burning up in Russia, the guards decided that the same thing should happen in the United States, and the Soviet banner soon was a mass of flames.

DISGRUNTLED SENIOR—I was late to school on the first day and I was late to the eighth period the teacher gave me. I didn't get to class on time, and the instructor became angry just because my theme was late. I usually came to the dances late and got home later. I forgot to apply for a scholarship until it was too late because I had to take care of a library book that was overdue. Now I've got my report card and I'm afraid that I'll be so late at commencement that I'll be late for school next year.

The White Elephant Of Cochrane High

By Elinor White and Laverne Boyce

In the fourth quarter of the hard-fought game, the Cochrane team seemed to lose its hold on the other team. Then the coach called out one of the players and sent in Dick, who had been out for a short while. His big moment had arrived. He called the signals, the boys jumped into formation, and the play went off like clockwork. Cochrane made the first score of the game.

Cochrane Fans Go Wild
The Cochrane fans went wild. They yelled, whistled, waved their arms, hugged their neighbors, and created a bedlam. Even Collins caught the spirit and shouted and waved his hat. However, when his hat blew over the stadium wall, his hilarity was cut short. He rushed outside and began searching for it. As he muttered imprecations and curses upon the bit of felt, a boy dropped from a nearby tree.

"Is this what yer lookin' fer, mister?" he said.

Collins retrieved his hat eagerly and thanked its rescuer, who was Buzz, although that name had no significance to the detective.

"Say, you have you been in that tree trying to see the game?"
"Well—huh?—oh yeah—I didn't have no cash."

"Well, come on in with me. Maybe we can see the last of it together."

The two re-entered the stadium just in time to see the Cochrane fans carrying Dick and his teammates triumphantly around the field to the martial strains of the school band. The score was 7-0.

Buzz gave a triumphant yell and rushed toward the gates through which Dick would leave. He wiggled through the crowd until he was in the front line when the team started through. Dick came last on the shoulders of two of his friends. As soon as Buzz saw him, he could restrain himself no longer.

"Hi, Dick," he shouted above the tumult of the crowd. "You won! Boy! that was swell!"

Dick, seeing Buzz, jumped from the shoulders of his friends and grabbed Buzz's arm, pulling him from the sidelines into step with the last of the team.

"Say! Why'd you skip out on us?" Dick demanded as the crowd closed in behind them. "You had me awful worried."

"Well," stammered Buzz, as they approached the school. "I figured I'd (Continued on page 3)

Beauty Hath Charms

I watched her every moment,
Her every step and dart—
I stood there fascinated,
And dumb right from the start.

I watched her there for hours
As she posed before my face;
She thought she'd surely win me
With all her charm and grace.

But then I thought I'd better go,
It's not polite to stare;
But I liked to watch the curlers
That were bobbing in her hair.

I. W. KARRS

"Who me? Hey listen, officer, I didn't do nothin', it was all that other guy's fault. I—My name? O. K. Mr. I. W. Karrs, but I was just a drivin' along peaceful-like, and this fellow comes a tearin' into me and before, I—Sure I was going 40 miles an hour myself, but that's not fast—Course, I know it's higher than the city speed limit, but nobody ever obeys that dizzy law—Hey, not so rough; all right, it's a good law; but I don't see why you don't enforce it—Oh, Yer just startin' out with me?"

"Listen, officer, I've seen a good citizen, and I haven't never done anything wrong. In fact, I voted for Clancy, your boss, the last time—Well, I can't help it if you don't like him, can I? Anyway, let me go now; the accident is all over with, and it's that other mug's fault anyhow. He was comin' over 60 miles an hour right at me when I—sure he could do that in that model T. Anyway he was coming down Smasher's Hill, and anybody can do 60 coming down that hill—How do I know? Huh, I've done—Aw heck! I never hurt anything, that is except for the time I couldn't stop and ha-ha—I went right through an old shed at the bottom there—ha-ha-ha—that sure was a mess—Oh you don't think it was so funny, eh."

"Well, I got to be on my way now. What are you keepin' me here for?—Ask me some questions? Well, fire away.—Yeah, I got that darn permit right here in the pocket. Oops! Hm, doesn't seem to be here. Guess I must have left it at home. We all make mistakes, eh officer? Sure, I was coming on the right side of the street when I turned, that other guy was—Oh, you're supposed to turn those kind of turns on the left. Thanks for the information, pal.—Sure, I honked my horn—Oh, the horn doesn't work for you, eh? Guess it must have just went dead. I'll have to fix that some day."

"My brakes? Say, they are in perfect condition. I have 'em checked every two years. I can stop on a line and have two cents change. Pretty funny, eh— Well you needn't act so tough about it. Even if I couldn't stop in time, if that guy hadn't been in the way, I wouldn't hit him.—Did I see the spotlight was red? Gosh no, what's that got to do with it?—Sure I can read signs; what do you take me for? A dumb-bell? No, I didn't try to get away after the accident had happened. I must not have heard your whistle. Guess that's it, eh?—Me, I've been driving for five years and never had more than four accidents per year. Good average, I think.—Yeah, I've been held by you flatfoot before for reckless driving. Eight times, I believe I'm getting to know you cops pretty well."

"Well, goodbye, officer—Hey leggo, where are you taking me? What kind of a country is this anyhow?"

Secrets to Seventeens

Informal Summer—Let's not exactly talk about the weather, but summer is coming and with it come a great many changes in the things everyone will be doing. During the summer months, let glamour fall out of your "big fifteen," seventeens, and be your own summer selves. Anklets, socks, shorts, freckles, and tousled hair may not be glamorous, but there is something irresistible about such a don't-care-never-mind bearing. Boys enjoy "coming half-way" and dropping starched collars and formality. They, too, are looking for fun and someone to play with, and there is fun to have! As for summer behavior, then, here's a cue—be a pal. Be ready for anything—mending a canoe or any fun that might present itself. Big moments are in the air—they just seem to happen in the summer.

Hustle—Old Man Weather surely does have his finger in many pies. He even influences our tempers and makes us less willing to put up with people's failities. The girls, who have been in the habit all winter long of having their friends to spend half their time waiting for them, are very wise if they begin hustling, for a change. If you are a "cow's tail," just remember that some day your friends may begin to think you're not worth waiting for, and go without you!

Blind Dates—Here and there are always new situations with which to cope—a blind date is one of them. Little bits of information from the promoter of your date help you some, but the largest part is left up to you alone. If you are gifted in getting people's numbers, then you can behave accordingly. You will know whether to let loose all your pep, or to calm down; whether to suggest a show or a dance, etc. As a rule, though, dancing is too risky, and your suggesting it is not only endangering your pride, but your poor toes. Whatever you do, no matter how your blind date turns out, give yourself the satisfaction of having made the best of a situation. Good luck, and may your blind date be a pleasant surprise.

Waggin' Tongues

Congratulations to Sally Rea and our popular leader of yells, Dave Steger, for finally taking the fatal step. Yes, they too have joined the rank and file of those going steady.

We can't figure out why James Smoak and Thelma Ervin won't admit that something came and got them in the spring. They both deny any sign of romance, but we can see that love light gleaming in Mr. Smoak's eyes.

Marjorie Turner's school work seems to be taking a turn for the worse. We decided there must be some cause for this so we investigated. The solution to the problem was that she has been spending most of her time writing notes to Bob Keller while in class.

Maybe the article in this column did some good. Anyway it helped give Dickie Zieg a little courage. He finally called Anita up, and is she thrilled!

Schrom and Bollman are beginning to have their first battle. It seems that Cliff went out of town the other night and didn't tell Jean. Well, Jean was sure that he went over to some girl's house. Cliff explained the truth to her, and he now has the matter well in hand.

What's the matter, Noble, are you slipping? When it comes to the point where you have to fall for a boy in your history class, especially when Paul McConnell is running around practically free, it is just too much. Nothing against Arthur Bares; we think he is a fine boy.

Could it be that Katherine Patterson's interest in Homer Miller is more than just platonic? When she found out that he was made editor of the Totem, it wasn't safe to be around her. To tell you the truth, we never heard anyone shout so much with glee. Ah! Homer, what is that strange power you have?

We heard a cute saying that a professor down at De Pauw was supposed to have said: "In the spring, the boys begin to think about what the girls have been thinking about all winter."

Elected for the biggest pest in the library this week—Dick Vogelsang.

Only four more weeks of school for the seniors. Now don't all you underclassmen wish you were seniors? My, my.

It seems that the fascination that Reeves held for Arney was fatal fascination. That's O. K., Arney. Always remember that men are just like street cars; when one goes, another comes along. My—My we feel like little rays of sunshine.

A New Weapon Against Submarines
The King of Kings Departs
A Story Comes True

NEW—A new mystery ray projector which has been invented by American Naval experts, is expected to make the submarine, dreaded war machine of the sea, unimportant and ineffectual as an offensive war weapon. The exact nature of the projector is a closely guarded secret at the present time. However, a few details of the mechanism of the ray were revealed. The ray is able to locate submarines from distances beyond the range of torpedoes. The instrument throws the light forward in a cone, similar to the radio directional beam used for guiding airplanes in blind flying. "If the ray doesn't strike an object, nothing happens," said the expert. "If it comes in contact with a whale or large fish a dull thud is heard as the rays leap back. If it hits a submarine you hear a metallic clang." The navy has asked for $100,000 to develop the ray projector further.

FLIGHT—While Italians besieged the city, Addis Ababa, Emperor Haile Selassie, of Ethiopia, fled from his country with his family and government officials on a train bound for Djibouti, French Somaliland. His sudden decision not to fight the Italians has not been accounted for. It was learned that he had a long interview with Sir Henry Barton before his flight. Although what passed during that talk was not revealed, it was said that the British Minister did not advise the Emperor to leave the country.

The whereabouts of the Emperor are unknown and his destination has not been discovered. It has been rumored, however, that if the Emperor's absence is for only a short time, that he will probably abide in Palestine; otherwise it is likely that he will settle down in either England or France.

PROPHECY—About ten years ago, Thomas Mann, Nobel prize winner, wrote a small book entitled, "Mario the Magician." This book treated of the powers which could be evoked through hypnotism, but could not be controlled by the hypnotist. Last week in Iszak, Hungary, a hypnotist, giving a demonstration of his powers, was himself stabbed by the man he hypnotized. The newspaper account of the stabbing parallels, bit by bit, the story which Mann wrote ten years ago. One wonders if fiction thus becomes non-fiction. At any rate, the idea which Mann conceived in his imagination, has been given a very sinister actuality.

Best Of Concerts This Year Named By Archer Critics

"How did you like the music assembly Tuesday?" and "What music assembly did you like best this year?" These were questions asked some students.

Everyone seems to think Tuesday's assembly was a very good one, and some claimed it was the best.

However, there is an old saying "everyone to his choice," and the following are representative choices:

Betty Anne Schaaf—Today's assembly was fine.

Alice Shiflet—The last assembly was "gorg," but I think the assembly that the opera singer sang in was the best.

Peggy Kilpatrick—I thought Otto Schacht of the Chicago Opera was the best, and I especially liked the light opera from which he sang. As for Tuesday's program, I think it was the best music assembly we have had this year—it had so much variety and good talent.

Homer Miller—Tuesday's session was O. K. The gent that blew the cornet had a lot of wind behind him, but I'll take a pep session any day!

Mary Jane Kelly—Tuesday's session was the best I ever heard.

Bob Locke—The last assembly was the best. They had better guest artists and better program.

Andy Bremmer—I liked best the assemblies that they had Billy Wainwright directing.

Lois Rea—After thinking over the last session, I think it was O. K.

Virginia Shidler—The last one was the best of the season. Especially Billy Wainwright's directing.

Elaine Bernstein—The last one was the best we ever had.

Miriam Rarick—I liked the last one best because I love the cornet.

Should Schools Teach Facts About Fascism?

Do you think that American young people should be taught in school the facts about Fascism, Socialism, Communism and other forms of government?

The American Institute of Public Opinion has asked that question of thousands of Americans in its latest nationwide poll. Next Monday you may read what America has to say about the matter—in AMERICA SPEAKS, the National Weekly Poll of Public Opinion, appearing exclusively in the caused you enough trouble; so I just left. I wanted to see the game, though. Boy! It was great!"

"We owe you all the credit for winning," said Dick, putting his arm about the shoulders of Buzz as they dozed off to sleep. "You were the one who closed behind them, leaving the rejoicing fans outside. 'It was that play of yours that carried us through.'"

CHAPTER VII

Inside the shower room, the boys cheered Dick, who jumped upon a bench and waved his arms for silence. "Fellows," he said as soon as he could be heard. "That play was no piece of brainwork on my part, but I've brought with me the fellow to whom all the credit should go. It should go to the boy over there by the door—my friend, Buzz."

The team started to give three cheers for Buzz, but he did not wait beyond the first "Rah." He opened the door and rushed out. When the boys saw what he had done, they showed the right and left tackles out to bring Buzz back. Needless to say, he was brought back promptly. "Now, fellows," yelled Dick, "keep your suits on, 'cause we're in for some real dirty work, now. We're going after the smugglers!"

The boys quieted down when Dick mentioned the smugglers.

"Buzz, here, can help us get 'em," Dick continued. "He told me he has a good plan. Now, Buzz, if you'll come here and stand on the bench, we'll get down to business."

"Aw, gee, Dick," he protested, "I ain't got flowery language like you."

"Well, you just tell us about your plan. We don't care a cent about flowery language." Now, stand up on the bench and go to it.

Buzz reluctantly jumped onto the bench.

Buzz Outlines Plan

"Wal, now," he began, "I ain't much on speeches; so you guys'll have to overlook my mistakes. Now—this here plan—well, I figured like this. A little before six tonight, the boss'll load up on a big truck all them furs that go to Canada. This truck'll leave at six sharp, 'cause the boss's awful sharp when it comes to time. I guess ya got to be strict on time in the smuggling business, though."

"Wal, now, that truck'll go out Twenty-first Street two miles to U. S. Highway Three. Now, we got to stop that truck before it reaches the highway. It's got to be a good distance from school, here, too."

"Say," interrupted one of the boys, "if we could stop the Dragons this aft."

"I guess we can stop a truck," "Sure," replied Buzz. "Now, here's the idea. I'll stick around until Steve comes with the truck. He's the driver. Jake goes along to relieve him. Well, when nobody's around, I'll drain all the gas out exceptin' about a gallon. Steve ain't got a gas gauge; so, if I'm not caught, he won't know the difference. He always gets the truck filled with gas first, then loads the furs, 'cause the boss don't like delays even for gas after them furs is loaded. The truck'll leave at six sharp, too."

"What if they change their plans?" asked one of the boys.

"We'll have to take a chance on that," continued Buzz. "Now, some of youse guys with a car'll have to follow the truck down Twenty-first Street till she runs out of gas. Then, jump out and get Steve and Jake. They're plenty tough; so some of youse heavyweights ought to go. Who'll volunteer?"

Team Is Willing

The whole team responded; so Buzz told Dick to pick out four of the bigger boys and get someone with a car. After Dick had taken care of this, Buzz continued.

"Now, youse guys park on Warren Street about half a block from Twenty-first a little before six. Keep your eyes open and remember you're out for business. As soon as you see the truck—it's a big red Harvester, brand new and stream-lined—start after it; only keep a safe distance so they won't suspect nothing. When it stops, pull up as if you're going to help 'em; get out and let 'em have it. Take plenty of tough rope along to tie 'em up. Somebody drive the truck back to the school while the rest of youse bring Steve and Jake here and take 'em into the rifle range. Got me?"

"Sure," the four boys chorused.

"Why do we take them into the range?" asked Bill Phelps, one of the four.

"'Cause the rest of us are going to do some dirty work near there, and that'll be a good place to meet. But I'm warnin' you—watch those babies—they're tough."

"Now, for the rest of youse guys, meet here at four-thirty—here, in the shower room, and we'll proceed from here. Be prepared for some real exercise, though."

Buzz jumped from the bench and Dick took his place.

"Hey, gang!" he shouted, "it's only ten of four. What say we all get something to eat now and then come back for the climax of the day?"

"Swell," was the answering shout.

Boys Prepare for Action

So the boys, Buzz included, went across the street to the Hamburger Inn and feasted on hamburgers and coca-colas.

Then the four boys picked by Dick went over to Bill Phelps' house to get his car. The remainder of the team returned to the shower room, where Buzz issued instructions.

"We're going to crash their hide-out down in the stadium. There'll be Smith, the boss, Schmidt, and Al there that we'll have to surprise and capture. They'll be all ready to pull out in the boss's car about six; so we've got plenty of time, but we've got to work carefully."

"I'll go down there now and see what's goin' on. Then I'll come back here, and we'll decide what to do next. Youse guys wait here—and be quiet," he admonished as he left.

So Buzz departed, leaving the team in the shower room in charge of Dick, who was to keep law and order. Buzz went first to the furnace room to see if Schmidt was around, but he was not there. Then Buzz walked cautiously across the tunnel and peered into the storage room. The furs were still there, all neatly boxed and ready to load. Being sure of all this, he slowly and carefully made his way down the dim corridor toward the unfinished shower room in the stadium.

As he approached, he heard voices raised as if in an argument. Being all the more cautious, he crept to the door and listened.

"I tell you," shouted a voice which Buzz recognized as Schmidt's, "we've got to beat it before six! The game's over, and Dick'll be bringing the police here any moment."

"Oh, no, he won't," replied the voice of the boss. "That kid's too scared to meddle in our affairs any more. Besides, Steve won't get here until five-thirty; and it'll take half an hour to load. Steve doesn't know about our trouble, and I've been too busy to notify him. Still, I know we don't need to worry."

"Yea," said Al, "but you forgot about Buzz."

Here the boss laughed rudely. "Buzz—humph! He's so yellow he wouldn't dare do anything against us for fear he'd incriminate himself."

"What time is it, Boss?" asked Smith.

Gang To Leave at Six

"Four-fifty-one. You guys can rest awhile. There's nothing to do until Steve gets here. I'm going out to get something to eat."

Buzz, hearing this, hurried down the corridor and rejoined the boys.

"Hey," he shouted as soon as he had shut the dressing room door behind himself. "It's all set!"

"What?" chorused the gang.

"They're leaving at six! They expect Steve at five-thirty! Now, Dick, you take... Wait, let's see how many of us there are—," he counted heads and found there were fourteen boys, including some scrubs who had substituted in the game.

"Swell," he exclaimed. "Now, Dick, you take seven fellas and go out to that entrance to the unfinished shower room in the stadium. I'll take the rest of the guys and storm the place by the way of the rifle range."

"Now?" asked Dick.

"No. You see, I'll have to go out first and drain the gas out of the truck. I'll stick around then until Steve drives off with the truck. Then I'll dash back here. Then you take your gang, Dick, and rush over to the stadium. I'll take my gang down into the tunnel."

"How'll we know when to break in on 'em?" asked Dick.

"We'll set our watches exactly alike. Then start together, allowing three minutes from the time we leave this room until we crash. See?"

"Sure. You mean the three minutes will start as soon as we leave here?"

"Yeah. Now pick your guys. I might warn you fellas to watch for rods on the boss. There'll only be four guys in there; so we ought to have a good chance, if youse disarm 'em first. The negro's plenty tough, and the boss is quite a jiu jitsu performer."

Dick Picks Helpers

Excited murmurs filled the room as the boys thought of the battle ahead of them. Dick chose six boys and conferred with Buzz to be sure that he had all the details exact.

Then Buzz, glancing at his watch, saw that it was five-thirty-two.

"Boy!" he exclaimed, "I've got to beat it. Youse guys stay in here till I come back. And," he warned, "keep quiet."

Buzz slipped out of the school with a can and siphon in his hand and cautiously started toward the side street, where the truck would be. Flattening himself against the wall of the school building, he peered around the corner. The truck was just being driven up. As he watched, Steve and Al got out and went into the school through the storage room.

Buzz dashed toward the truck as soon as the two men had disappeared. He pulled the siphon out, drained the gasoline into the can, and then slipped back around the corner of the school. He watched the furs being loaded and saw Steve and Jake drive away down Twenty-first Street. Rejoicing that the first part had worked, he rushed into the school.

"O. K.," he said breathlessly. "Get over there, Dick, and crash in. Oh, swell! you got axes and hammers. Where'd you get 'em?"

"In the manual training room," replied Dick. "Got your watch set?"

"Let's see." The two boys compared watches and regulated them. Then Dick, taking his crew, started for the stadium; while Buzz took his gang down into the corridor.

The stadium was deserted, but the gates were open. Dick led his gang over to the door which led to the unfinished shower room which the smugglers were using for headquarters. Ordering the boys not to say or whisper a word, he lined them up outside the door and kept a close check on his watch. How well he knew one slip-up would be disastrous!

Boys Crash Shower-Room

When the allotted time had elapsed, Dick ordered the boys to crash the door. The door fell in slithers before their attack.

Inside the shower room, the boss, Al, Schmidt, and the negro were putting on their coats and heaving sighs of relief, when the attack came. At the first blow, they all stood as if stunned. Then realizing what was taking place, they ran around the room looking for places to hide.

The two crews broke in, however, before hiding places could be found; and a terrific battle ensued. The team had difficulty in gaining the upper hand at first, since the smugglers were scattered all over the room. However, once they gained the upper hand, they made short work of the fight. They tied the four men securely and proceeded back to the rifle range, carrying their prisoners.

While all this was going on, Bill Phelps and his crew were parked on Warren Street, waiting for the truck to go by on Twenty-first. When it did, they drove slowly out of Warren Street onto Twenty-first as if they were out for a joy ride. Then, keeping almost three blocks behind it, they followed the truck for almost a mile before it came to a stop.

Bill pulled his car up then beside the truck, and he and Phil Crosby jumped out and inquired of Steve if they could be of any assistance.

"I guess I'm out of gas," Steve said. "Could ya loan me a gallon?"

"Sure," replied Bill, "just a minute. If you'll come on over here and help me. I just don't know how to go about this—"

Steve got out of the truck and followed Bill behind his little Ford. Phil, seeing his chance, struck Steve and sent him sprawling. The two boys in the car jumped out and easily overcame Jake, who was still in the truck.

First Annual Ivy Planting Held

of the building after a procession along the east side of the building follows:

Music—By members of the band.

Purpose of the Planting—Robert Storm.

Crowning of the Ivy Queen, Ruth Garrison—Ned Henslee, junior class vice-president.

Planting of the Ivy—Wade Theye, Jim Dern, and Richard Rastetter.

Dean's Sentiments—Miss Pittenger.

Faculty Response—Miss Magley.

The song Alma Mater was sung by the junior class closing the rites.

Each junior received a program in the shape of two ivy leaves containing the program for the ceremony and the words to Alma Mater, and tied by a bow of green and white ribbon.

Tying him securely, they went back to help Phil and Bill. Between the four of them, they made quick work of Steve, too. After siphoning out two gallons of gasoline for the truck, the boys put Steve and Jake in the Ford with Phil to guard them. Bill started back toward the school, leaving the other two boys to follow in the truck.

They reached the rifle range with their prisoners at the same time as Dick and Buzz. Dick rushed up to the office and telephoned the police, directing them where to come for the smugglers.

There was great rejoicing among the teammates while they awaited the police. Never before had they had such excitement.

It seemed unreal that they had captured an important band of smugglers and had won the Cochrane-Dragon game, all in one afternoon! The police were amazed when they arrived, for they had been trying for years to get this band and had never succeeded. They took the smugglers off to jail and escorted the team and the truck load of furs down the main street of the town.

At the police station, they made out papers for the reward of $5,000. The team insisted that Buzz should have it; and Buzz was determined that the team should have it.

Central Tigers Take Sectional Track Contest

Break Five Records, Win Seven Firsts In Events; Garner Total Of 56 Points.

North, South Side Are Second, Third

Favorable Weather, Track Conditions Make Possible All Track Records Broken

Breaking five records and capturing seven first places in all, Central's Bengal Tigers raced their way to victory in the sectional track meet at North Side field Saturday. Warding off the attempts of North Side, the defending champion, to creep ahead in the last events of the closely contested meet, Central garnered a total of 56 points to emerge a new winner of the sectional crown.

Following were North Side with 45 points and South Side with 28 points. Auburn came in fourth with 6 points while Decatur, Roanoke, South Whitley, Garrett, Huntington, Elmhurst and Columbia City failed to score a point.

Favored with all that was desirable in weather and track conditions, records were brushed off right and left by Central's and North Side's crack thinny clads. Out of a total of eight new sectional marks made Saturday, Central accounted for five and North Side for three. Central hung up new records in the 880-yard run, the 120-yard high hurdles, the 200-yard low hurdles, the half-mile relay and the high jump and captured first places in the 220-yard and 100-yard dashes. In the latter event Jaehn Charlton equaled the sectional mark of 10 seconds flat set by Bob Willson of South Side in 1934. North set new records in the 440-yard dash, the mile run and the mile relay. South Side captured first places in the broad jump and the shot put and Auburn a first place in the pole vault.

McMeen, North Side's crack 440-dash man, hung up a new mark for himself by virtue of a 50.6 quarter-mile, to better the old mark of 52.2 set by Bill Geyer of South Side in 1934. Bob Brown of Central was easily the winner of both hurdle events with his teammate, Joe Garvin, following him in second place each time. New records were accomplished in both events, 15.5 in the highs and 24.7 in the lows. These marks, however, were expected because the distance in the lows was shortened 20 yards and the high hurdles were lowered three inches.

Qualifiers Are Listed
Ehrman of North Side in the mile broke the old record of 4:36.2 formerly held by Don Lash of Auburn, now of Indiana University by .2 of a second and Ben Mourning of Central chalked up a new time of 2:00.7 in the 880-yard run to better the record formerly held by Jack Fleming of South Side and now of Northwestern university. Jim Schreff of Central established a new record in the high jump, skimming the bar at a height of six feet and 1 1/2 inches. Williams accounted for five of Auburn's six points by vaulting to a height of 11 feet and four inches barely to nose out Ed Kruse of South Side for first place.

Chuck Stone leaped 21 feet and one inch and Ed Leitz heaved the shot 47 feet and 11 1/2 inches to garner two places for South Side in the broad jump and the shot put. New records were hung in both relay events; North Side's combination of Van Wormer, Young, Poorman and McMeen setting a new mark of 3:30.6 in the mile relay and Central's quartet of Charlton, Russell, Mourning and Brown being clocked for a new time of 1:35.5 in the half-mile relay.

Those who qualified to compete in the state meet to be held at Indianapolis next week are Charlton, Brown, Garvin, Russell, Mourning, Schreff and Owens from Central; Van Wormer, Young, Poorman, McMeen, Ehrman, Thomas, Lee and Ivey from North Side; Stone, Leitz and E. Kruse from South Side and Williams from Auburn.

Typists Make Novelties

If, by chance, you happen to see a tennis player, a skier, or some other figures made out of x's or stars, you will know that these figures represent the exhibit of the typing class.

Each student is supplied with a booklet that has figures on pillow cases or on other material for the purpose of decoration. The pupil then selects a few of these figures and proceeds to type the x's or stars so that it forms the figure.

The figures are very attractive when they are completed.

Cinder Scrapers

Ed Leitz, Archer shot put star, again broke South Side's field record when he qualified for the state meet with a heave of 47 feet, 11 1/2 inches.

Michigan's Western Conference track and field champions scored firsts in nine events and slams in five last Saturday to overwhelm the University of Illinois in an outdoor meet. Michigan scored 79 1/2 points to 46 1/2 for Illinois.

"Red" Stone was the only Archer to qualify in the broad jump. Stone beat Ivey of North Side for first place with a leap of 21 feet, 1 inch.

To determine what two men would run in each event, Coach Lundy Welborn held trials for the sectional meet last week.

Ed Kruse vaulted over eleven feet in the sectional meet when he took second place behind Williams of Auburn, who won at 11 feet, 4 inches.

Bob Osgood, the Wolverine's Olympic hurdling candidate, turned in the day's best performance, a time of 14.3 seconds, over the 120-yard high barriers last Saturday in a dual meet between Illinois and Michigan. The Michigan ace's time was one-tenth slower than the world record established by Perry B.ard of the New York A. C. in 1931.

Al Hinton, varsity miler who turned in a 4.44 last week in the sectionals, has turned to the golf field for more glory. Hinton tours Brookwood in the high seventies.

Joe Shumm, the Redskin's star shot putter, was off form last week when Leitz and Owens bent him. Joe's best try was 44 feet.

Jim Schreff of Central bested Ivey of North Side in the high jump. The Tiger cleared the bar at 6 feet, 1 1/2 inches to establish a new sectional record. The former mark of 6 feet even was held by Bob Irons of North Side.

Both of the sectional relay marks were broken last Saturday. North Side's crack squad of Van Wormer, Young, Poorman, and McMeen, won the mile in 3:30.6, while Central's speedy quartet of Charlton, Russell, Mourning, and Brown, took the half-mile event in 1:35.5.

Many of the Archer track men think that Port Wayne should have a track meet called the South Side Relays. They believe that tougher competition could be produced here than at Kokomo.

Bud Feichter showed plenty of speed when he nosed out his teammate Frazell for third place in a fast 220-yard run.

John Charlton, Blue and White flash, started off the sectionals by running the 100-yard dash in 10 seconds flat to equal the mark of Bob Wilson of South Side in 1934.

Bob Brown, Central's hurdle ace, established new records in both the high and low sticks in the sectionals Saturday; but these marks were expected, as the high hurdles were lowered three inches this year, while the lows were run at 200 yards instead of 220.

Kokomo High School, winner of the state interscholastic track title for two successive years, indicated in a sectional meet Saturday that it is again a contender for the title.

North Side qualified eight men, Central seven men, and South Side three men for the state meet this Saturday at Indianapolis.

The Wolverines, who handed Indiana its only defeat in indoor competition last winter, are expected to enter a full team in the meet between the two schools. It will be a final "warm-up" event for both squads before the Big Ten championships May 22 and 23.

Mourning of Central broke the mark in the 880-yard run by covering the distance in 2:00.7. The former record was 2:03, held by Jack Fleming of South Side.

Notre Dame nosed out Ohio State in a spectacular track meet last Saturday despite the three local records established by Capt. Jesse Owens of the Buckeyes. Notre Dame finished with 71 1/2 points, Ohio State with 70 1/2, and Michigan State trailed with 20 1/2 points.

Mardi Gras Is Topic Of French Club Meet

The Mardi Gras celebration in New Orleans was the subject of a talk by Mrs. Lyman Gould, the guest speaker, before the French Club last Thursday in the Greeley Room.

She told of the first Mardi Gras celebration in New Orleans in 1827, at which time "the observance merely consisted of the masters parading the streets." These early celebrations were of a very religious character and were taken from the Roman ideas. Down through the years the Mardi Gras has lost its religious nature and has become a commercial occurrence.

Mrs. Gould showed pictures of the 1935 Mardi Gras celebration in New Orleans. An unusual feature of this observance was the children's parade, in which boys and girls of all ages took part.

During the business meeting which preceded the program, Virginia Woods, president, appointed this committee to make plans for the annual club picnic: Mary Lou Monning, chairman; Elizabeth Simpson, Dorothy Herbst, and Dorothy Newell. The picnic will be held at the last meeting Thursday, June 4.

Tiger, Winner Of Lion Cubs Annual Award

Steve Sitko Gets Athletic Scholarship; Agenbroad, Irish Star, Is Alternate.

Steve Sitko, Central High School football and basketball star, was chosen the winner of the second annual Lion Cubs athletic scholarship. The announcement was made Saturday night at a Lion Cubs dance at the Catholic Community Center.

Jim Agenbroad, star guard of Central Catholic's basketball team and all-state center of the Irish gridiron, was named alternate in case Sitko could not accept the award. Bojinoff of North Side was given first honorable mention and Jim Ellenwood was given second honorable mention. The award amounts to about one hundred dollars, to be used by the winner in aiding him through his freshman year of college.

Sitko was named to the all-state football and basketball teams, was captain of the state team, and was awarded the Gimbel Cup at the state tourney. This cup goes to the player showing the best mental attitude and the most value to his team. Sitko not only does well in the field of sports, but he is also a four-year honor student, and a member of the National Honor Society.

Agenbroad was also active in basketball and football, being honorary captain of the city team in 1934. In basketball, he made the all-state and all-national Catholic quintets.

Bojinoff, given first honorable mention, made North Side's varsity eleven the first time out for the sport, was on the all-city football team, and on the fourth all-state team. In basketball, he was on the all-sectional five.

Jim Ellenwood, South Side's candidate, was given second honorable mention. He played football and basketball and was named to the all-city football team for three consecutive years. He was also elected to the National Athletic Honorary Society.

Grades Given Tuesday

Grades, in the form of U's and S's, were issued this Tuesday. Since the pupils have one more chance to make good, there was not so much fear in the hearts of the pupils this time at receiving the grades, one may well guess.

Winners Of Three High Schools Go To State Track Meet

Three Archer Tracksters Go To State Meet

Ed Leitz, Ed Kruse, Charles Stone Are To Represent South Side At Contest.

Competition To Be At Butler Field At State Capital; Auburn Envoy Is Williams

Winners of the local sectionals of the annual Indiana high school state track and field meet will go to Indianapolis to participate in the state track meet held at Butler field Saturday, May 16. The trials for all field and track events will be run off at 10 o'clock Saturday morning. Finals for these events will be held at 1:30 in the afternoon.

South Side qualified three men for the state meet. They are: Ed Kruse, Charles Stone and Ed Leitz. Stone, Leitz and Kruse were the Archers' best performers in the local sectional. The former won the broad jump with a leap of 21 feet, 1 inch, while Kruse placed second, back of Williams of Auburn in the pole vault. Ed Leitz' heave of 47 feet, 11½ inches proved that he will be a strong contender for state honors at Butler field.

Redskins Qualify Eight

The North Side Redskins qualified the most men of any team in the sectional, getting eight in the finals, including the boys on the mile relay team, namely, McMeen, Lee, Young, Ehrman, Thomas, Ivey, Van Wormer and Poorman. Coach Rolla Chambers hopes to break into the point column by the fast time turned in by the team during the sectionals. The Redskin relay team stepped the mile distance in 3:30.6 for a new sectional record and should produce tough competition at Indianapolis.

The Blue and White of Central will send seven men to Butler field to compete in the state finals. Central has most of its hopes based on the good performances of Charlton, dash man, who tied the sectional record of 10 seconds in the century dash and Brown, ace hurler. Schreff and Mourning also hope to gather points for the Blue. Central's half mile relay team should place in their event.

Auburn is the only other team outside of the city schools which will send representatives to Butler. Williams gave Auburn its only first in the local sectionals when he took the pole vault, at 11 feet, four inches.

Winners To Get Medals

The school winning the state meet at Indianapolis will be awarded a shield or gold cup. Gold, silver and bronze metal will be given to first, second and third place winners in their individual events. Members of the winning relays also will receive medals.

Kokomo high school, winner of the state interscholastic track title for two successive years, again indicates that it will be a contender for that title. Froebel of Gary, a school that long had a strangle hold on the state championship, proved that it also will be a leading contender for the state title.

Olympic Contribution Asked

All of the South Side students are asked to cooperate for the Olympic Contribution Fund to be collected this morning. The contributions are to be used to send the American Participants to the Olympics, which are to be held in Germany during the summer.

Miller Makey Became Runner To Avoid Tardiness To School

Again one of the Makey boys steps into the limelight. This time it is the track star none other than Miller "Midge" Makey. Midge went out for track two years ago and, despite the handicap of being a bit heavy for a track man, made the squad in his first year. He is now an invaluable member of the team, participating in the 440-yard dash and running on the mile relay team.

Miller was born on October 24, 1918, and acquired his grade school education in Reelsville, Indiana, where the Makey family lived before they migrated to Fort Wayne. Miller attributes his success as a trackman to the fact that he gets up so late in the morning that he has to run to school every day to avoid being tardy. In this manner he develops a natural ability as a runner.

The question that has bothered many seniors does not seem to have caused Miller much concern. He has narrowed his choice of vocations down to being either a doctor, a business man, pharmacist or metallurgist, or a commercial illustrator. Whatever it is, however, he has definitely decided on attending college, Indiana University being the favored institution.

When Miller was asked about his love life, he would admit nothing and refused to talk. Finally he opened up and said this, "Fems have but a small part in my life and don't fit in my ambitions." How small a part, however, is a matter of opinion, for only the other night Miller was seen "stomping it up" with a cute little lassie at the Junior Prom. Furthermore, rumor has it that this is the same little lassie that endowed upon him his favorite nickname of "Midge."

As to description—Miller is of the tall, dark, silent type possessing curly black hair and a masterful physique. This undoubtedly accounts for his popularity with the girls.

In this school work, Midge is better than the average student, only last week having been elected to the National Honor Society.

Miller decided to play just the opposite type of game to smother Tudor of Bluffton under a barrage of powerful shots, 6-1, 6-2. Lahman's drive, picking off the receiving line, proved to be his best weapon.

Buck, playing number one position, lost the only match for the Green, bowing before Spain, 6-0, 6-1. The Tiger star had his chops working in good shape and used them to good advantage.

Take Doubles Easily
The first-string Archer doubles combination, Eicher and Klopfenstein, won rather easily from Spain and Rector, 6-2, 6-2. The losers seemed unable to co-operate well enough to get going properly.

Lahman and Cochran captured the other doubles engagement for the Green from Prough and Baumgartner, 6-2, 6-2, with very little trouble. Both Archers displayed good early-season form. Baumgartner, a former North Side boy, has shown rapid improvement since taking up the game this spring.

Archers See Fencing, Ju-Jutsu Arts Friday
The ancient and royal arts of fencing and ju-jutsu were demonstrated before a South Side assembly last Friday by six students of the education department at Wittenburg College, Springfield, Ohio.

The instructor of the six boys gave short explanations on the different styled swords. He fenced three times, using each of these three swords, against one of his students. The instructor was a former Olympic fencing star.

The group then gave an exhibition of ju-jutsu art. Holds were performed with both fast and slow motions.

Archer Tennis Squad Defeats Bluffton Tigers

South Side Captures Three Singles, Both Doubles; Eicher Wins In Feature.

South Side's tennis squad traveled to Bluffton Friday afternoon to defeat the Tigers, five to one. Four singles and two doubles matches were played. The meet was the second of the season for the Green.

Eicher, number two man for South Side, captured the feature match from Rector, 6-2, 12-10, after Rector had match point three times in the twelfth game. Nearly every game went to deuce.

Klopfenstein Defeats Smith
Klopfenstein outdistanced Smith, third man for the Tigers, to win by 6-1, 6-2, in a slow match. Both men elected to play a deliberate game; the Archer, however, proved the more consistent.

Lahman decided to play just the opposite type of game to smother Tudor of Bluffton under a barrage of powerful shots, 6-1, 6-2. Lahman's drive, picking off the receiving line, proved to be his best weapon.

Buck, playing number one position, lost the only match for the Green, bowing before Spain, 6-0, 6-1. The Tiger star had his chops working in good shape and used them to good advantage.

Sportlights

One of the most gallant comebacks made by a major league baseball pitcher is being made by Lefty Grove. As this column is being written, he has won five games and has lost none. This is a marvelous record for a pitcher that has been in the majors as long as Lefty. At the beginning of the season, the know-it-alls predicted Lefty would be knocked out of the box in about every game he pitched, and that the good pitchers would have a great season before them; but it has turned out that the "good" pitchers are the ones that are being hit all over the field.

"Who will win the American League pennant for 1936" baseball fans are asking each other. Due to Hank Greenberg's broken wrist and Manager Mickey Cochrane's ill health, the Tigers do not loom as strongly as they did at the beginning of the season. It looks as though it is between the Yankees, the Red Sox and the Indians, with the White Sox looming as the "dark horse."

Another gallant comeback in the sport world is that of Tony Canzoneri in his recent fight with Jimmy McLamin. It was in the first round that the fans thought Tony's end was near, as Jimmy almost sent him to the canvas. The bell saved him, but the spectators didn't think that Tony would be able to continue. The bell started the second round; and Tony came back with a counter attack that had the fans on their feet, thundering their approval. From then on it was Tony's fight.

Joe Louis does not seem to be taking his training very seriously in his coming fight with Max Schmelling, as he is at his camp just taking it easy and resting; and he says he will not start until perhaps May 18. On the other hand, Schmelling is taking his training very seriously. He builds up his wind and legs each morning by getting in plenty of roadwork. He is building his shoulders and arms by splitting many inoffensive logs.

The University of Miami will play their 1936 football schedule in a new $250,000 stadium to be erected this summer. It was made possible by loans and grants by the federal government. The new stadium will seat 25,000 people and have a parking lot for 4,000 automobiles. Good lights for night football, dressing rooms, and locker rooms for two teams.

Tennis Squad Seeks Win In N.E.I.C. Meet

Bluffton, Central, Decatur, South Side To Enter Teams; Jackets Are Host.

South Side's tennis squad will travel to Decatur Saturday morning to compete in the annual Northeastern Indiana Conference net meet. The Archer team will probably be composed of Wilbur Eicher, Hubert Klopfenstein, George Lahman, and Bud Cochran.

In addition to South Side, Bluffton, Decatur, and Central will send squads to the meet. Several other schools may also be represented.

Central, defending champion, is again expected to capture the title. Don Troxel, number one man for the Tigers, is the defending champ and favorite in the singles. Spain of Bluffton, however, may offer him plenty of competition.

South Side, with two one-sided victories in two matches, will present a well-balanced squad against the individual stars of the other schools. The Archers' downed Decatur, five to one last week. They followed up this victory by administering the first defeat of the season to Bluffton's Tigers Friday by the same score.

Eicher and Klopfenstein, number one and number two men, will team up to make one doubles combination; Lahman and Cochran will form the other. It is probable that all four will participate in the singles.

Only Fifteen Kept In Spring Football

Under Fred Nye, Fred Meyers; Coach Welborn To Take Over Boys For Extensive Practice.

Football gridders who have been in charge of Fred Myers and Fred Nye for the last three weeks, received their first cut last Friday. Fifteen of the original number are still biting the dust.

Chances for any of these fifteen playing varsity this fall are slim. There will be three varsity squads of which at least two have had experience. They will, however, be valuable in filling absentees' places and will have their crack at a varsity berth.

There have, of course, been outstanding performers. In the line, Biedenweg and Kelsey, who are sophomores, show plenty of promise, as well as Kock and Reinkensmeier. Backfield threats were Wayne Huth, a freshman, and Tommy Rendleman, a sophomore. Rendleman is handicapped by lack of weight, weighing only about 130 pounds, but showed up much better than fellows thirty and forty pounds heavier. Spring football will soon be taken over by Coach Welborn for more extensive drilling.

Spring Fever Again Harasses Archers While Flowers Bud

"The flowers that bloom, tra! la!" Yes, folks, spring is here, and with fair lady spring come many "Oh hums." The cause for this deadly malady is that contagious spring fever which comes once every twelve months at the first sign of a temperature above eighty degrees. At this time the body and the mind are tormented with the fresh scent of flowers, the pleasing sounds of birds in the trees, and also thoughts of going swimming, hiking, playing tennis, horseback riding, and motoring, until the mind strays away to these amusements while the poor body must sit in the crowded classroom. This was the best definition that the columnist's girl Friday could think of. When she asked students, "Do you have spring fever? What does it do to you? Does it make you lazy or ambitious? What desire does spring fever make you feel?" Her definition was fulfilled.

Let the spring fever sufferers tell you for themselves:

Lou Closs—When spring comes I get a feeling I can't express. It is my favorite season and it sorta gets me. Bobby Storm—It makes me wish I were young again.

Leona Menze: Yes, I guess I have that thing called spring fever. I suppose test grades will soon show that. Jimmy Sweet—I want to eat watermelons and drink lemonade.

Miss Harvey—Spring fever is agony to me! I can't let down on my work, for I have to keep on whether I feel like it or not.

Louie Bonsib—Oh gosh! Be a fudge—I like to go for a walk in the evenings instead of doing my lessons.

Norman Buck—I am nursing a warm spot in my heart for the entire world.

Jo-Anne Smith—I catch it terrifically. It makes me feel like sleeping indefinitely except I am too tired to repose very long at one time.

Betty Wolf—I would like to do an impossible thing; to sit under a cold shower and sleep.

Millie Foellinger—No spring fever. I am sitting on top of the world.

Bob Harruff—I haven't gotten over mine from last year. I just don't feel, for that takes up too much energy.

Don Helm—As a man of high ideas I do not let my s. p. get the best of me, thus I sleep in only three of my four classes.

Bud Miller—Shucks sake! Do you think so?

Bill Korte—My spring fever takes me to thoughts of sailing and swimming which I hope to fulfill in the near future.

Bohumer Kryl, Music Guest, Here Thursday

Bohumer Kryl, outstanding personality in the music world, was the guest last Thursday and Friday of Mr. Jack Wainwright.

Mr. Kryl has written many cornet solos with band accompaniment, some of which have been selections on our school music concerts. He has also been former cornet soloist with the bands of Sousa, Pryor and Liberati. For many years he has had a band of his own. This is a traveling band and the only one of its kind left. This year, however, Mr. Kryl is transforming it into a symphony orchestra.

Mr. Kryl is not only a famous musician, but also a great sculpture and painter. He has studied in nearly every country in the world, and this advantage has perfected his art. His contribution to art work in the Hoosier state was the sculpture work on the Sailors' and Soldiers' monument on the Circle at Indianapolis.

Sunshine Club Holds Impromptu Radio Hour

"Gong, gong!" went the bell, and the Sunshine Club program began last Tuesday in the Voorhees room. The program was in the form of a "Children's Hour," with Doris Rahrer as Aunt Sally.

All the members were given hair ribbons at the beginning of the meeting. Successful contributors were given suckers. All numbers were impromptu. Delores Miller, as Emily Post, gave advice to the seniors; Mildred Heidrich gave clothing advice, which turned out to be a big joke. Virginia Busse gave a bedtime story. Many games, including Rock-a-bye-Baby, were played.

Before the program, a business meeting was held in which a letter received from Mrs. Sandefur, state dean, was read. It told of work of the Sunshine Societies. Plans for the picnic to be held at Foster Park were discussed. Graduating senior Sunshine members will be guests. Girls are to sign up for the picnic before May 23.

Jerry Has Chicken Pox

"Chicken pox makes me feel like a convict," moaned Jerry Zehr, president of the junior class, as he sat in a darkened corner, telling his tale of woe into the telephone. "No one will talk to me. At my appearance, everyone within a radius of one block makes haste to remove himself from the vicinity. I lead a nearly perfect life; twelve hours of sleep and twelve hours of wakefulness. All I need is someone to talk to. However, I'll be back Monday."

Marionette Club Will Present Annual Play

Furthering plans for its annual play, "Chu Chin Chow," the Marionette Club held a special meeting last Thursday evening in its workshop. Meetings have been held each week for the past month to complete rehearsals for the play.

Work on the elaborate costumes, which are being planned by Laverne Boyce, chairman, Dorreen Russell, Ruth Eysenberg, and Janice Dyer, is also being continued at the meetings. The costumes, as well as recently completed puppets, will present a striking appearance and are expected to show much improvement over last year's products.

Kenneth Scott, president, has announced that the group will stage the production sometime during this month or the fore part of next month.

Nominations for the club officers for next semester's activities will feature the business part of the next meeting, which will be held this evening in the workshop at 3:30.

Puppets Group Plans To Give Ali Baba Show

To Present 'Chu Chin Chow,' Tale Of Arabian Nights,
On Friday Afternoon.

Kenneth Scott Has Charge Of Staging

Club Members Have Been At Work On Production Since
Fall, Due To Extra Work.

Marionette Club will present its second annual production, "Chu Chin Chow," an adaptation of the well-known Arabian Nights tale, "Ali Baba and the Forty Thieves," next Friday afternoon, May 29, in the Greeley Room.

Kenneth Scott, assisted by the club adviser, Miss Dorothy A. Magley, and the officers, Norman Budde and Doreen Russell, has general charge of the production. Other committees comprised of club members have been at work on the play since last fall, when the production was originally scheduled. Original plans were abandoned because of unexpected extra work required for production of the play.

Prominent roles listed:
Ali Baba, Kenny Scott; Abdullah and the robber chief, Tom Sellers; Morgiana, Eliza Bess Lucas; Kasim, Norman Budde; Kasim's wife, Lorraine Meyer; and the spy and the little tailor, Helen Faux. Less important parts, such as the robber band and the dancers, will be played by other club members.

Continuing for the entire play has been under the direction of LaVerne Boyce, who designed all the elaborate clothing. Her assistants are Janice Dyer, Ruth Eysenber, and Doreen Russell.

The construction of the puppets, made of wood and papier mache, was directed by Norman Budde and Lillian Sherbondy. Tom Sellers had charge of stringing the marionettes and was aided in his work by Janice Dyer and Ruth Eysenber. Members anticipate better marionettes this year than last.

Others Aid
Kenneth Scott, aided by Norman Budde and Tom Sellers, had charge of scenery and has designed several sets for the newly purchased stage.

Doreen Russell is ticket chairman for the production. She has announced that tickets may be purchased for five cents from any member of the club, or in room 140, beginning next Monday morning. Tickets will act as excuses from seventh period classes on Wednesday.

This year's play is Marionette Club's fourth production before South Side students since its organization two years ago.

Decorations, created by members of the Booster Club decorating committee under the direction of Miss Mary Helen Ley, were featured by small table fences twined with spring flowers and vines. Programs were hand-painted garden scenes, and scroll copies of the theme poem were used. Pastel-colored candles and garden flowers completed the decorations.

They arrived at Foster Park by 6 o'clock and began cooking breakfast. Mr. Flint and Mr. Snider were chief cooks. They turned out bacon, eggs, and coffee.

Four very suspicious excuses were turned in by four pupils who failed to appear. "Too sleepy" should have been the excuse for all.

No one seemed to know why they did it.

Fred Longdon, who is the program chairman, introduced the speaker for the afternoon, Mrs. Houser. Her subject was "Drama." Mrs. Houser read several recent dramas. The first among these was "The Importance of Being Earnest," by Oscar Wilde. The next drama, "The Royal Family of Broadway," by Edna Ferber, was one which particularly interested Mrs. Houser, for she once played the leading role. This was followed by "Anna Christie," by Eugene O'Neill. It is the story of a poor, uneducated girl fighting for her chance. The last drama to be read by Mrs. Houser was "The Nut Farm," by John C. Yarmelle.

Year's Final 1500 Meet Held Friday

Huge Cake, "Unexpected" Surprise; Baseball, Tennis Furnish Other Picnic Features.

"Who proof-read that story?" "Why all the blank space?" These were enough copy.

No, it wasn't a copy of the Times which caused these comments at the 1500 Club picnic Friday evening at Foster Park; it was a huge white cake covered with pink, green, and white icing resembling the front page of a newspaper. Miss Harvey's picture was on one side and Ruth Garrison's, with the title, "poison ivy queen," on the other.

This surprise was planned by George Anna Martin and John Bex, in charge of food arrangements.

Baseball, tennis, walking, wading by a few dignified seniors, and a treasure hunt made up the entertainment which was planned by Ruth Garrison, Harriett Yapp, and Maxine Mariotte. The trail, which led through hills and among the trees, was laid by Louise Cross, Ruth Garrison, and Don Helm; the treasure, a box of candy, was found by John Bex.

Preparations for the picnic were made by Jim Sweet, Ruth Garrison, and Harriett Yapp. Lois Wyneken, Ruth Hoenle, and Helen Kelsey prepared the menu, which consisted of sandwiches, fruit salad, olives, pickles, baked beans, potato salad, pies, ice cream, cake, and coca cola. The cleanup committee was made up of Leona Menze, Homer Miller, and Bob Storm.

After the exhibit in the rooms, to last from 7:30 to 9:15, a demonstration will be given in the gym from 9:15 to 10:15.

Mrs. Victor Rea, president of the Parent-Teacher Association, has appointed Mrs. Boyd Martin, chairman of the ways and means committee, to be in charge of arrangements for selling refreshments and candy in the halls during the exhibit.

The present Macbethian cry: "Out,—school."

Judging from appearances, the millionaire playboy is what one might call a doughnut.

Spring Fever Is Nothing More Than An Alibi

At this time each year there are many who find it convenient to loaf, loiter around, do nothing but sleep, and in general behave lazily and then label their laziness under the heading of spring fever. They, who are shiftless and lazy usually, however, do not confine their loafing to one season. To them, spring fever is so-called because it lasts from spring to spring.

But the thing that is most surprising is that people pick such a season as spring for their so-called fever! In this, the gladdest of all seasons, the trees first begin to grow again and spread their foliage over the once barren landscape; the grass springs up from the once cold, dry earth; flowers show their first bright blossoms; the brooks and rivers rush eagerly over their beds, no longer impeded by the ice and snow of winter; the joyous birds come home from their long migrations and fill the air with their songs in appreciation of spring; all of nature is aroused from the long cold winter and bursts into life and activity. And there are those who would sleep during this glad awakening of all life called spring!

A Well-Rounded Life Includes Appreciation Of The Finer Things

One of the main purposes of our going to school is to learn to appreciate the finer things of life, as well as the essentials. A school that turns out people into the world whose only joys lie in having clothes, food, and shelter, has missed one of its main objectives. A good citizen can hardly be one who cares only for the things that the caveman did. In order to have a full well-rounded life, people should appreciate art, literature, and science. The Bible says that men should not live by bread alone, and, what was true two thousand years ago, is true today.

As a graduate steps out of high school into life, he should have learned to appreciate culture and refinement. Everyone knows that a person's happiness depends on his appreciation of things; therefore, when a student learns to appreciate many good things, it will contribute much to the happiness of his life. Of course, there are always some people who prefer the radio to concerts, the movies to the theater, the drug store magazines to our periodicals, etc. Such have not learned to appreciate really good things.

Ivy-Planting Ceremony—A Beautiful Program For South Side

Wednesday, May 13, introduced to South Side a new and beautiful custom, that of planting ivy. This is a custom that will become an annual formality for the junior and senior classes. The origination of this noble ceremony is something of which the classes of '36 and '37 may well take pride. It is not the aim of those taking part in the activities, however, to derive any direct benefits from their task, for the ceremony is symbolic and it is only in the future that there will be any tangible results.

The planting of the ivy is a custom honored by institutions of learning all over the world, the derivation of which was the ivy planting by the ancient monks, by the walls of their revered monasteries for the preservation of the bricks and the beautification of the buildings. Since the days of the monasteries and the ancient monks, this custom has become a tradition tender in the memories of students of their alma maters. It is hoped then, that the origination of this ceremony will be something by which the school can remember the classes of '36 and '37, and something by which the students may remember their alma mater.

Carrying On

With Mary Jane Campbell

Well folks, here we are down at the two South Side camps. The boys' camp, "U Tell 'Em," is located on one side of Lake Katchafishie and "We Know It," the girls' camp, is found on the other side. There's going to be a big dance in the town of Hitchhiki. It occurs annually and is known as the biggest dance of the year. Through buzzing around among the crowd, we found out that these people are all ready to go: Bollman-Schrom, Chapell-Zelt, Kilpatrick-Korte, Rippe-Robinson, Schaeffer-Whitacre, Rea-Steger, Craig-Busch, Crise-Sam Rea, Boo Boo Wermuth-Stoner, Winters-Jaenicke, Spangle-Stair, Dygert-Perkins, Kellogg-Schmidt, Arney-McLeish, Connell-Dicke, Nichols-Dickmeyer, Dancer-Hickman, Henslee-Haven, Bojinnoff-Ellenwood, Roth-Leitz, Cleaver-Grann.

Now back at the camps. Everyone is talking about the brawl Dick Orr had the other night. It sounds terrible. Well, well, look who's coming down the hill. It's none other than Betty Broderick. Maybe the boys are coming over in their canoes. . . . Down on the beach are Janice Cross and Mary Melching playing in the water and occasionally gazing out to sea. Wonder why? . . . Fritz Lohman has come over to the girls' camp but no one knows how. It is whispered around that he has quite a crush on Margaret Fisher. . . . Betty Floyd, one of the blonde girls, is certainly wishing that Floyd Menze would swim across. . . . Margaret Dickmeyer and Betty Rose Lehman are sitting up on the porch reading Love Stories. . . . Linda Lou Schultz is moping over her recent break-up with Joe Smith from N.S. . . . Helen Goehring, one of our seniors, has been bothered quite frequently by calls from Brouwer George, one of our ex-South Siders. . . . Betty Jo Wilken-son is anxiously awaiting a call from Harold Meyers; we hope it isn't serious. . . . Ruth Bormuth really got a big kick out of delaying the street cars. Laugh? She thought she'd die. Margie Cartwright is so afraid she'll lose that ring she's been wearing; wonder whose it is?

Well, since we've found out all we can about the girls we thought we'd cross to the other side. What do you think we noticed first? The boys have concession stands. . . . Over on the left is Cliff Schrom handing out those famous Morrow nuts. . . . Next is a Martha Washington stand, and look who's there; Don Boh and Herb Kramer, dishing out the ice cream, not dirt. . . . Poor Miss Montgomery, it looks like Ray Ballweg is up to no good. . . . We just got word that Tom Jaenicke skipped out one night and went to the show. One of the chorine's cocktail shakers slipped and hit Tom right in the eye. My goodness, it's black. . . . It's been rumored that Kenny Hess has been chasing Ginny Nelson, Oh pardon, we mean Gardner. Poor Nelson. . . . A stranger has just ridden into camp; his name is Bill Mayer, and he says he's looking for Libby Findley. . . . Dale Perkins, one of the ex-South Siders, is trying to get up enough courage to ask Nancy Newell to the big dance. Come on Dale! . . . Warren Zelt made a crack at Rosie and they had a little squabble, but it's all okay now. . . . What's the matter, Kenton Dicke, aren't the city streets dark enough? . . . Bob Bosely asked Doris Bennett to a wiener bake. . . . Why doesn't some nice boy give Ina Claire Chappell a break?

Since all of the little campers have wondered away from the camp, we are left without further information. Good-bye now!

On Looking In A Mirror

It has become quite a fad, this looking-in-a-mirror habit. The weaker sex is especially infected with it. One of our would-be feminine demurements will stand before a little bit of glass for a couple of hours, patting one cheek and then the other, or else manipulating her curls into such compact coils that one would think that she was making springs with which to hang up the porch swing.

Then you start with her to some place of amusement, congratulating yourself that you have at last got her away from her mirror, but alas, you have counted your chickens before they're hatched. You get in the lobby of the theatre and she finds another mirror (the theatre manager knows his onions, and his women, too). By the time she is satisfied with her appearance, the first show is nearly over, and you have put a handful of nickels in the gum, candy, or cigarette machines.

Mirrors may have been invented to create patience in the character of man, but we can't understand how they benefit the character of the other side of the house by much.

Now, as for us, everytime we gaze into the shining surface of a mirror, we think what a pity it is to darken it with such homely irregularities as we are endowed with. We are always reminded of "Ernest and the Great Stone Face," and say "What if someone should have to gaze on us?" It eases my conscience a lot to know that such isn't the case!

It may be we are intolerant about mirrors and women, but we did say and say it again that once women and mirrors get together that it is enough to try the patience of any "ordinary man." However, we might lay back a few mirrors for relish, but I don't think it safe to bother about the women. They might put up too much opposition anyway, if they stayed with that job as well as they stay with mirrors.

Aw, what's the use! This is a lot of hokey! We like them beautiful and we're for mirrors! After all, we do comb OUR hair ONCE a day.

* Don't Mention It *

Going to college? Don't know where yet? Sir, it's about time you decided, don't you think? A card to the American Schools' Association, 921 Marshall Field Annex, Chicago, will procure for you free information on the college problem. Ask for the free information data card, fill it out, and return it.

An article in "Secrets to Seventeens" seems to have stirred up a bit of interest—the one on trading dances. A faculty member even commented on it.

Bob Storm will head the fall staff, Miss Harvey has announced. To Bob goes the credit for this page. The stars, lines, dots, and typographic oddities on the column heads here were his brain "storm"; and when Franklin Peddie, editor of the Northerner, lifted a few of them to his page—well, Bob's shirt buttons popped off!

And to Millie Foellinger, soon to head the Times' best Senior Issue, felicitations and congratulations.

The end of school is near. Perhaps one good thing about it is that this column will die in infancy—next week or so. Consider yourself lucky. We do!

Put twenty people in a room, and what would you have? An incomplete group of people who have all written for the editorial page of the Times some time or other since last fall! Not to mention about forty authors of "Carrying On," or the thirty-odd who have written "Our Gift From Rome." If you want a variety show, take the Times.

Perhaps it might be fun to find whom Archers consider the best "Carry On-er."

Add personal notes: Beanie Dygert goes for midnight bike rides in a big way—Herbie Cramer, ex-inhabitant of Missouri, tested cigarettes for acid the other day—Helen Anderson, Millie Foellinger, Dot Crabill, Ruth Adler, and Maxine Borchert are all going to Anderson's farm near Bedford—in an Austin!

Teaching Boys—A Man's Job.

"I Knew You When."

MULTIPLES—It seems the storks of different nations are having a race to see the most babies at one time. Canada still holds the prize for the five baby girls born to the Dionnes almost two years ago in Calendar. The United States takes second place for the quadruplets, three boys and one girl, born last week to the Kaspers of Passaic, New Jersey. The Kaspers already had two children and Mr. Kasper receives a salary of only $2 a week.

Word was received from Managua, Nicaragua last week that septuplets were born there, two of which are living. The strangest birth story yet, however, is of twins born two months apart. The European woman gave birth to a perfectly normal baby two months ago. For the last two months she has not been well and has been under the care of a physician. After these treatments, just two months following her first child's birth, she baffled her doctor by giving birth to a second baby, a child normal in every way.

MASCULINITY—At the convention of National Association of Schoolmasters in London last week, it was decided that all boys above infant school age should be taught by men teachers. Mr. F. A. Giblee, who proposed the resolution, said that the teaching of a boy is a man's job. He continued by asking, "Was it right that the education of boys should be left primarily to teachers who were condemned to be young maids, muddling maids, or old maids?" Mr. A. H. Russel added that a little boy of nine wanted at that age to escape from a woman's control and that if the state refused the demand on a boy's soul for the control of a man, the state was definitely injuring the development of the boy. He also asserted that boys were encouraged by female teachers to aim only at clean work and become a clerk or a school teacher. He said, too, that in schools where the headmistress inflicts corporal punishment on small boys that the little boys leave laughing at the punishment because everyone of them knows that a woman could not hurt a boy of nine or, if he acknowledged that a woman could hurt him, he would have lost all dignity and recognition of his own importance.

SUCCESS—It has been revealed by Will Luebon, a toll-taker at the Waunebri Bridge, that joins Iowa and Nebraska, that Dictator Karlis Ulmanis of Latvia, who was born in Riga and spent a good part of his younger life in America, was once his assistant in a Council Bluffs, Iowa, creamery. He also told of how Mr. Ulmanis lived on only 15 cents a day so that he might further his education by attending the University of Nebraska. After graduating from the University of Nebraska, he obtained a financial backing and went to Texas, where he started a dairy of his own. However, this venture failed. About the same time he received word that an amnesty had been declared for all political prisoners, so he went back to Riga and took up his editorial work. It wasn't long until Russia was mixed in several foreign entanglements and Latvia took the opportunity to declare their independence, naming Karlis Ulmanis, president. He is now President Premier, or complete dictator. But a humble toll-taker hopes that someday the dictator will answer one of the many letters he has written to him.

Compacts

Instead of boys with pockets full of trash,
Let us think of girls with compacts that flash.
They glimmer and shine in the sun's warm rays,
As the mirror inside, their face portrays.

First a dab of powder here and then there,
Then the mirror flashes upward to catch their hair.
At last to their satisfaction the lid they close,
After carefully looking at their shiny nose.

Jabbercadabra

A GENIUS, MOST LIKELY

"Yes, yes, this is me. It's me all right. I. B. Knutz is the name. I'm an inventor and a scientist.—What, you haven't heard of me? Alas, fickle fame! But my friend, you shall hear of me. You shall hear of me! Ha-ha-ha. In the future I shall be great, great—a great inventor. Look at me, my friend, look at me. Do you not see a spark of genius in my eyes?—You can't see for the dirt on my glasses, eh! Well, never mind, I'll wash them some day when I have time.

"But now, no time should be spent on such trivial things. This is the hour of a great discovery, the hour of a most wonderful invention, a turning point in the history of science. And it is I, I, who have invented it. Are you not also tense with excitement of this remarkable discovery? You say you are past tense. But why should I worry at you scoffers? You, who scorn my greatest triumph, shall live to see me the greatest man of the day, a veritable Caesar in science.

"The world shall be at my feet.—No, I'm not going to go up in the Empire State Building. My friend, I, I am going to make an invention that will set the world afire.—No, no, I'm not going to invent an incendiary bomb. Alas, how little you know about science and invention. You laugh. You laugh, but the day will come when I will be the greatest inventive genius in all history.

"Man, I'll rule the world with my supreme intellect. Men will fight for the use of my all-powerful inventions. The world, yea, the whole universe shall bow down before me. And I shall rule the world, and I'll be the master of all. What do you think of that my friend?—You wonder what I'm going to do with Mussolini, eh? Well, it doesn't matter, for I shall fall before the power of my brain. I alone shall be triumphant. I, I. B. Knutz.—You agree with me.

Who ever heard of Watt?—What? No, not what, but Watt. What? You don't know what I'm talking about? You are crazy. You are idiotic. You are too stupid to appreciate a smart man. You are too dumb to recognize a genius. You are nuts. Farewell."

Shoes and Ships

CENSORED—Ah! the irony of it all. How can the will of the Fates be so sarcastically directed? Just when our illustrious Mr. R. Nelson Snider seemed destined to have his name among the Hall of Fame's personages, as a receiver of the ivy on Ivy Planting Day, he developed a magnificent case of poison ivy. 'Tis truly a rash condition.

JITTERS—Never have we noted such a large number of pale faces at one speaker's table as there were at the Wranglers' Banquet. It seems that each and every student thought themselves unprepared. However, every speech came out swell.

DIRTY POLITICS—It seems that two little girls in blue have been putting on a holly-contested battle for the pleasure of the Great Lover, Bob Locke. Joan Bonish, realizing the power of advertising, has been using her columnist friend on the Times to further her cause. It now seems that her rival is preparing a mighty powerful antidote. Take Uncle Ezra's advice, Joan, and duck!

SIGHTS TO SEE—Marge Hower's facial expressions immediately before she "dove" for her script at N. H. S. banquet. We all like her smile. . . . Mr. Murphy proudly displaying the place where his tooth isn't anymore. . . . Manuel Rothberg indulging in an extra rich, heavy, double malted milk. . . . Jack Wainwright bemoaning the fact that not one member of his marching band is in step. . . . Little freshman humbly approaching Bernard Ramey and asking for his autograph. . . . The intense facial expressions of Mr. Gould when speakers refer to parts of flowers. . . . Mr. Sterner wearily bending over a pack of "oh-so-lousy" themes. . . . Miss Montgomery smiling "oh so nice" at you all evening and then giving you a "pinkee" on the following morn with the same charming smile.

QUITE PESTY—What is this so-called gag being started now about designating someone as the "pest of the week?" Last week one of our fellow columnists came in for the honor. Whoa! Lookee where we might find ourselves! But if you must call us a pest, don't forget the "power of the press" is behind us. We mean the electricity. It may "shock" you on the rebound.

CHILDISHNESS—That strange quartet of instructorresses, Miss Van Gorder, Miss Oppelt, Miss Patterson, and Miss Perkins rung up the curtains of dignity and "let loose" at the N. H. S. banquet. Pauline starred in the "widdle" telling. Gertrude likes the sign designating the cocoanut between two palms. Alice very carefully guarded her great secret, the mickey problem. Olive pulled the "meanies" of the evening without blinking an eye.

Our Gift From Rome

An auspicious beginning is one on which the birds have put their O. K. Well, what in the world do the birds have to do with it? A lot. In Roman days, there were men called "auspices." Their business was to watch the way in which the birds fed or flew, and from this they could tell just what kind of luck would follow any undertaking. Thus auspicious means having promise of success or good luck. In Latin aus means "bird" and the remainder of the word auspices is from spicere, meaning to observe.

Thru The Wringer

Well, here we are again, and, since this column creates many enemies, the author will be kept a secret. . . . Betty Abbott and Kenny King have been seen quite often of late, and they have taken quite to the fancy of bicycle riding on these spring nights. . . . If you see or hear Beanie Shearer singing "Oh Where, Oh Where Has My Little Lamb Gone," you can understand that she is singing it about her little lamb, who is Bobby Jones.

Johnny Hines has been having quite a bit of trouble of late with Spud Walker, who has been cutting in on his little sweet pea, Helen Payne. Well, maybe we will see some of the feud that will develop with such people. . . . Virginia Moodie and Walter seem to be getting along fine, and it is beginning to look as if it will continue for a long time yet. . . . Della Shaffer thinks that Jack (Clark Gable) Birk-enbuhl is the cutest thing on earth, but she says that she is too timid to tell him so. Well, maybe she is much better off in not doing it anyway.

This news about Fred Eakin is really the truth; he has now forgotten Barbara Noble for the new red-head, Polly Barton. Well, they say that variety is the spice of life. . . . We think that Loretta Rinearson and Don Blecke would make a plenty cute couple, and it looks that this is just what is going to happen. . . . Who is this guy from Elmhurst taking Margaret Baker away. They tell us that he goes by the name of Eugene Akers. It is getting so that we are surprised when two people from the same school begin to go together. . . . Maxine Greiner is trying hard to rate Dale McKinzie in these past few weeks. Well Maxine, if you succeed let us know, but we are afraid that we will have a long wait in front of us in the future.

Waggin' Tongues

Jean Creighton and Brouwer George have finally said goodbye to love and stuff. It seems that last Saturday night, Brouwer forgot, or something, that he had a date—and so ends a very beautiful romance. Maybe—Brouwer will go on carrying the torch, but Jean won't. Neal Ruppert, a former Red-skin, is occupying most of her time and her attention. Nice going, Jean.

We all thought that spring was here, but last week brought us a little cold weather. People are seen running around with blankets to keep warm. I guess that explains the reason that Arney takes along a blanket when on a date with Reeves. My my, this cold weather will soon be getting us all down.

These past few days and nights have inspired people to go riding. I guess spring weather does make us want to get out in the open. Dave Steger, Sally Rea, Jean Bollman, and Clifford Schrom were a few of the many seen enjoying the beauty of Foster Park.

In spite of all the other romances that Sally Wonder is supposed to have had, it seems that Ed Locker is her real romance, because a few nights ago all was forgiven and they were again contemplating a very mild form of married life—going steady.

Cinder Scrapers

Joe Bell, varsity hurdler for the Archers, will be unable to compete in the city meet due to an injured left wrist. Bell fell over a hurdle last week as he was competing with some of his teammates. It was feared his wrist was broken, but an examination proved otherwise.

John Charlton, star Central dashman, was elected honorary captain of the Tigers' track team this spring at a recent meeting of Lettermen.

Ed Leitz, shot-putter, was the only Archer able to break into the point column at the state meet. Leitz heaved the shot 47 feet to place fourth and acquired two points for the Green squad.

Schroff, Central's star high jumper, again starred for the Blue and White when he took first place with a leap of 6 feet, 2 inches at Indianapolis. Ivey, the Redskins' high jumper, was second.

"Red" Stone and Ed Kruse, broad jumper and pole-vaulter respectively, failed to qualify in the state meet at Indianapolis; but they hope to take two firsts in the city meet next Saturday.

Forrest Towns, brilliant Georgia athlete, skimmed over the high hurdles last Saturday to equal the world's record of 14.1 seconds.

Two new marks were posted in the record books and two new marks were made through the changing of the low and high hurdles at Indianapolis Saturday. Horace Mann's mile relay team set one of the records by romping the mile in 3:26.8. Carr, also of Horace Mann, ran the 440-yard dash in 49.3; the old record was 49.6.

McMeen of North Side was the outstanding Redskin star at the state meet last Saturday. He placed second in the 100-yard and 440-yard dashes.

Jesse Owens of Ohio State bettered the world's record in the 100-yard dash last Saturday, running it in 9.3 seconds in a dual meet between Ohio State and the University of Wisconsin.

North Side's mile relay team made a good showing last Saturday at the state meet, when they placed second behind Horace Mann, which set a new state record of 3:26.6.

It is doubtful if any track meet in the country will have more Olympic possibilities on the same cinders at one time than the thirty-sixth annual Western Conference Championships May 22 and 23 at Ohio State University.

John Charlton, Bob Brown, Joe Garvin, Jim Schroff, Morris Owens, Al Russell, Ben Mourning, Jesse Givens, Virgil Riddle, Red Braden, and Tony Stanislawski will receive Central track sweaters or letters this season.

Central Squad Places Fourth At State Meet

Contest Taken By Horace Mann; North Side Wins Fifth; Archers, 2 Points.

Competing against a strong field at the state track and field meet at Butler University, Fort Wayne's thinly clad squad brought home a large share of the bacon, Central tying with Shortridge of Indianapolis for fourth place with twenty-one points, North Side taking fifth with twenty markers, and South Side adding its small share of two points.

The scoring in this meet was divided more evenly than it has been in the state meet for years; Central garnered only seven points less than Horace Mann, the winner. Kokomo, winner for the last two years, placed second with 24 1/2 points; Mishawaka's Maroons took third place with twenty-two points. Elkhart, Froebel of Gary, Marion, and Wiley of Terre Haute, followed with nineteen, seventeen and one-half, thirteen, and eleven points respectively. Thirty-two other schools garnered points.

Schroff, Relay Score
Central's two first places were won by Jim Schroff, in the high jump, and by the half-mile relay quartet composed of Charlton, Russell, Mourning, and Brown. Schroff cleared the bamboo rod at a height of six feet two inches; the relay squad won easily by over twenty-five yards in the good time of 1:32.8. Ben Mourning took a third place in the quarter mile, in which a new record was set. Joe Garvin accounted for a fourth place in the 120-yard high hurdles, and John Charlton took a fifth in the 220-yard dash. Bob Brown won his qualifying heats in both the high and the low hurdles but did not come through in the final races. Charlton also won his qualifying heat in the 100-yard dash but did not place in the final heat.

Redskin Relay Scores
North Side's mile relay combination of Van Wormer, Young, Poorman, and McMeen won second in the race in which a new record was set. Al McMeen was the Redskin star, garnering a second place in the 100-yard dash and a second place in one of the 440-yard dashes, and running anchor on the mile relay team. Bob Ivey placed second in the high jump.

Of South Side's representatives, Ed Kruse went out of the pole vault in the qualifying trials at eleven feet; Chuck Stone was eliminated from the broad jump at twenty feet; however, Ed Leitz took a fourth in the shotput event for the Archers' two points. Horace Mann of Gary, winner of the meet, attributed its victory in the main part to the individual star of the meet, Earl Geiselman, who won first in both the 100-yard and 220-yard dashes. Horace Mann's mile relay combination of Nordquist, Von Berghy, Bayer, and Sponsel hung up a new record in its event. The time was 3:26.6, bettering the old mark of 3:27.7 by a full second.

Skirts and Sports

If anyone has not heard Miss Smith play "Yankee Doodle" on the relay batons, drop in some time and maybe she will perform for you.

How does it happen that it is so quiet around the gym office during the fifth period? If anyone wishes information concerning this matter, be sure to ask Miss Smith or Miss Patterson.

Freshmen were well represented at the track meet last Friday, when Sarah Meily walked 67 times on the balance beam.

As far as Miss Smith is concerned, the knitting season doesn't seem to be over. She has begun a new sweater.

This year's track meet proved to be a record breaker. Marge Hower was very cruel, when she took the honors away from the freshmen at the track meet. By walking the balance beam 68 times, she broke all previous records.

Evidently Edna Disler does not know her own strength. She is always getting hurt at the track meets. She had to be carried in last time.

With the baseball season over, one may be considered unlucky if he did not witness at least one of Marge Hower's home runs. It seemed to be a record-breaking season for her, with approximately seven home runs.

Girls, don't forget the little box that is in the G. A. A. office. Your contributions will be greatly appreciated.

Herman Carr, negro Froebel star, chalked up a new mark of :49.3 in the quarter-mile to better the old record of :49.6, formerly held by Parsons of Plymouth.

New Records were hung up in both hurdle events. Bennett of Emerson of Gary being clocked at :15.5 in the high sticks, and Franklin Kristl of Mishawaka running the 200-yard low hurdles in 23 seconds flat. Kristl also won the broad jump with a distance of twenty-two feet, two and one-half inches.

Blue Expected To Annex City Track Contest

Schroff, Charlton, Mourning, Brown, Garvin Central Hopes In Meet Saturday.

Archers Favored For Field Events

Redskins Expected To Give Battle Defending Title; Ribbons To High Scorers.

With the state high school track and field meet concluded, local track fans have turned their attention to the annual city meet Saturday. North Side's Redskins will attempt to defend their title at their own field. Central's Tigers are favored to add this title to their list of victories.

Central has most of its hopes based upon the good showing it made in the state meet Saturday. Brown, Garvin, Schroff, Charlton, Mourning, and the half-mile relay team will carry the brunt of the burden.

North Side expects to give Central a tight race. McMeen, brilliant Redskin flash in the 440-yard dash, is expected to break the record in that event. The Indians should also take the half-mile relay without too much trouble.

The Archers do not have great hopes of winning, but they will prove plenty troublesome to the other teams. The battle between Shumm of North Side and Leitz of South Side in the shot put is expected to prove one of the most interesting of the whole meet. Stone, the Green's best bet in the broad jump, hopes to cop the honors again in this event. Ed Kruse, pole-vaulter who won second honors behind Williams of Auburn in the sectional meet, hopes to win his event to help the Archer cause.

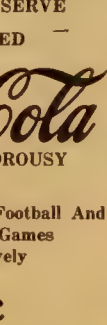

Ribbons will be given to the first, second, and third place winners in individual events and also to the members of the winning relay teams.

Bold Venture, Kentucky Derby winner, repeated last Saturday in the forty-sixth running of the Pimlico Preakness. Only four other Kentucky Derby winners besides Bold Venture have ever won the Preakness. It took all he had to nose out a win over Granville, big son of Gallant Fox. At the start Bold Venture was crowded out by Bow and Arrow, but he came back into good position at the first turns.

It was with the aid of a photograph that Bold Venture's victory was officially confirmed. The crowds were in suspense before the photographs were developed.

There have been several changes in betting odds on the teams in the American and National Leagues. The St. Louis Cardinals have replaced the Chicago Cubs as favorites in the National League; the Boston Red Sox have replaced the Detroit Tigers in the American League. However, it is this writer's opinion that the New York Yankees will be the team to beat for the American League pennant.

The sluggers in the major loops are continuing to blast the pitchers all over the lot. In a recent game with the Yankees, the Chicago White Sox defeated them 9 to 7. In doing this, they collected twenty-four hits; four of them were blasted out of the park. In a game between the Senators and the Browns, twenty-six safeties were collected. In the National loop, the Bees beat the Cards with twenty-five safe bingles.

Seventy-five Lettergirls from North Side, Central, and South Side assembled yesterday at 4 o'clock for the first annual playday sponsored by South Side's Lettergirl's Club. The meeting was held at the Archer institution.

Teams were designated by colors, given to each girl as she arrived. Each high school was represented on every team. The schedule for the affair was as follows:

Baseball—4:30-5:00.
Partner tag—5:00-5:10.
Pom pom pullaway—5:10-5:20.
Dodgeball—5:20-5:30.
Volleyball—5:30-5:50.

All of the games were played out-of-doors.

After the games, a potluck supper was held. The menu consisted of potato salad, baked beans, olives, pickles, cake, fruit salad, potato chips, deviled eggs, and meat loaf. Each school presented stunts, some of which were from its own exhibitions. The lunch ended at 6:45.

Barbara Lee Scheele was chairman of the affair. Assisting her were Enita Snively, Vivian Hickman, and Betty Rison.

Dick Bridges New Head Of Math-Science

Club Chooses Ruth Berning, Rosemary Lehman, Donald Sinish For Other Posts

Dick Bridges was chosen president; Ruth Berning, vice-president; Rosemary Lehman, secretary; and Donald Sinish, treasurer for the fall term at the Friday meeting of Math-Science, held in the Greeley Room.

Following the business meeting, a recognition service was held, led by Mr. Snider. To be recognized at this service, members must have had either three years of mathematics and two years of science, or three years of science and two years of mathematics. Students given this honor were: Ruth Adler, Louis Bonisib, Dorothy Crabbill, Margaret Crankshaw, Ruth Fowler, Selma Liff, and Bryce Minier.

Also included on the evening's program was a talk by Mr. Lawrence Goble, Mr. Goble is light engineer at the Fort Wayne Traction Company. His subject was the "Science of Light and Lighting." Mr. Goble had some equipment along which added to the interest.

Games were played after the recognition service. These were arranged by Ruth Berning, the social chairman. Refreshments were served.

The president announced that the next meeting of the club, which is also the last meeting for this semester, a picnic will be held at Foster Park, June 5. Members are to sign up for the picnic the week of June 1, in room 80.

Hall Of Fame

For four years, the class of 1936 has been together. During this time they had many pleasant experiences; these will remain as precious memories for many years. During this time all of the class members learned many new things, both from instructors and from personal experience; but a few members of this class made the most of every opportunity offered them and for this reason they deserve recognition in our hall of fame.

Our first candidate is Sonia Volkoff, a vivacious, dark haired lass, who literally bubbles over with enthusiasm about the things she is interested in, and she is interested in practically everything.

Art is probably Sonia's first interest, and she is almost continually planning the decorations for some dance or banquet. As proof of her skill as an artist, last year she won the tercentenary poster contest. This, however, is not the only contest she has captured. During the safety campaign, she won the essay contest. Besides this, she has found time to be an active member of Philo and Wranglers. She has also made the Four Year Honor Roll and National Honor Society.

Marjorie Hower, our second candidate, will have to be excused if she should run or jump a bit in the halls, because she is considered the most outstanding sportswoman in South Side.

This second "Babe Didrickson" has participated in every sport South Side offers; and during her senior year the most desired position of every G. A. A. girl—that of president of G. A. A.—has come her way. Marjorie has been vice-president of Lettergirls, and a student leader.

However, Marjorie has not used all of her talents in the field of sports. As proof of this, she has belonged to Student Players Club, Travel, Math-Science, Times, and Totem. On the basis of those attainments, she was made a member of National Honor Society.

The last member of our hall this week, Morgan Harrison, finds it almost impossible to stay out of trouble. First he hurt his finger, then he injured his knee. Not content with these, Morgan ran a pitchfork through his foot and as a final touch broke his nose.

Besides getting out of all these accidents, Morgan has found time to earn a football letter and make the Four Year Honor Roll, proving that he has an unusual combination of brains and brawn.

To assure us of his veracity, Morgan has been very active in the science department and has acted as president of Senior Hi-Y, vice-president of the Junior Hi-Y and Letterman's Club. Morgan was also made a member of National Honor Society.

More seniors will be given a place in the Hall of Fame next week.

UP AND DOWN OUR INCLINES

Doris Williams, Aleda Randal, John Schotler, and Robert Williams made grades of A in a recent Odyssey test in Miss Mary Pocock's 9B English class.

The following pupils made grades of A in Miss Pocock's 10B punctuation test: Donald Alcott, Jack Bohlinger, Dorothy Kiene, Helen McCormick, Loretta Rinearon, and Sarah Smeltzer.

Miss Pocock's 9A English classes are writing three-paragraph themes.

In Miss Mellen's Latin 4 classes, the following people gave reports: John Buck, on Roman houses; Phyllis Culver, on Roman education; Mary Ellen Kilpatrick and June Haeger, on industry and commerce; Helen Meyer, on Roman baths; and Tom Rendolin and Ray Roadcap, on Roman religion.

Each of Mr. Rother's Latin classes spent fifteen to twenty minutes in the Voorhees Room Wednesday, to see moving pictures which illustrated Roman customs, occupations, and history.

Verna Holtman who wrote for ten minutes with a rate of 51.9; Earl Hoy, 38.3; Don Faux, 35.6; and Evelyn Miller, 31 made perfect ten-minute tests in Miss Covalt's typing 2 classes.

In the typing 2 classes of Miss Covalt those who wrote with the highest rate to gain places on the big ten are: Helen Allen, who leads with a rate of 58.5; Elizabeth Stoltz, 57.9; Verna Holtman, 51.9; Carl Mesing, 50.1; Wilma Butler, 49.8; Louise Gerding, 48.7; Betty Jeanne Bond, 48.6; June Haeger, 46.9; Leona Menze, 45.9; and Virginia Fathauer, 45.6.

In a 9A test held in Miss Woodward's classes, Della Rauner made the highest grade with a score of 98½. In a 10B test Julia Anne Smith made the highest grade of 99.

Miss Smeltzley's general history 2 classes are making maps of Europe in 1914 and 1920.

Commercial law classes of Mr. Furst have concluded studying the liabilities of the parties on negotiable papers. They are now studying sufficiency of presentment in order to fix the liabilities of parties who are secondarily responsible.

Miss Fiedler's algebra 1 and 2 classes have been making bar, line, and circle graphs. They are bringing graphs to their classes from magazines and newspapers. A group of students in these classes is making larger graphs.

The English classes in Room 174 celebrated International Good Will Day Monday, May 18. The classes had an exhibit of foreign articles from many countries. Some of the articles brought were: a musical fruit dish from Sweden, calendars and almanacs in Spanish, foreign coins of many kinds, stamps, petrified wood, Mexican and Chinese handwork and weaving, pictures, Swedish, Chinese, and German letters, and many more interesting things.

Because Miss Miller thought that the class was misbehaving and the class thought that Miss Miller misbehaved, complications arose in Miss Hazel Miller's sixth period U. S. History 1 class.

Therefore, this class has just completed a "Bill of Rights" by which they intend to govern themselves. This "Bill of Rights" contains two articles, "Conduct of Pupils in Class," and "Conduct of Teacher in Class."

With Martin Bohn as chairman of the class, Miss Miller says she is well satisfied with the results of this experiment.

Miss Rinehart's 9B English class is making oral reports on some chapters of the Odyssey which cannot be studied so intensely in class.

The pupils in Miss Rinehart's English 6 class have finished their work in the Reader's Digest.

In Mr. McClure's seventh period general history class Betty Pugh was the winner in a spelling bee of important words in history.

Miss Kiefer's English 2 class has started their study of American poetry.

Lois Rae gave an excellent report on Henry Wadsworth Longfellow to her English class.

Mr. Flint's general mathematics 2 class has been studying insurance and investments.

Mr. Flint's sixth period general mathematics 1 class has been making solid figures of paper.

Miss Benner's fourth period English class has been writing themes on "The Experiences of a Class with a Substitute Teacher." They have also had spelling bees.

Miss Perkins' first period French 1 class is handing in special projects. These projects include pictures, scrapbooks, or other things that the pupil desires to make.

The public speaking classes have been giving speeches of farewell, welcome, introduction, presentation, and response.

In a test given by Miss Perkins to her beginning French class, Wilma Butler made above 90, Mary Michaeels made 99, and Aleda Randal made 96.

Puppets Ready For "Chu Chin Chow" Drama

Workers Of Archer Marionettes To Give Story From Arabian Nights Tomorrow

Tickets Will Cost Five Cents Each

Kenneth Scott Heads Plans For Annual Presentation; Will Be In Greeley Room.

By Mary Anne Park
"Chu Chin Chow," an adaptation of the old Arabian Nights tale, "Ali Baba and the Forty Thieves," will be presented by the South Side Marionette Club as its second annual production tomorrow afternoon during the seventh period in the Greeley Room.

Tickets, to act as excuses for seventh period classes, are priced at five cents each. Only two hundred admittances will be offered for sale, since the size of the Greeley Room prohibits comfortable accommodations for more than that number of people. Doreen Russell, chairman of ticket sales, has announced that students may purchase their cardboard seats either in room 140 or in the front halls during the fifth period tomorrow. Tickets may also be secured at any time prior to the seventh hour tomorrow from any member of the club. No tickets will be sold at the door.

Officers In Charge

In general charge of the production are the club officers, who are Kenneth Scott, president; Norman Budde, vice-president; and Doreen Russell, secretary and treasurer. Miss Dorothy A. Magley, club adviser, has also assisted with plans.

The cast of characters for the play follows: Ali Baba, Kenneth Scott; Abdullah, and the robber chief, Tom Sellers; Morgiana, Eliza Bess Lucas; Kasim, Norman Budde; Kasim's wife, Lorraine Meyer; and the spy and the little traitor, Helen Faux. Minor parts will be taken by other club members.

Costumes Are Colorful

Laverne Boyce is chairman of the costume committee which has designed and made an elaborate, colorful wardrobe for the puppets. Assisting the chairman are Janice Dyer, Ruth Eysenberg, and Doreen Russell. Kenneth Scott, assisted by Norman Budde and Tom Sellers, has been in charge of the scenery for the new stage. The construction of the new puppets was directed by Norman Budde and Lillian Sherbondy. Stringing of the marionettes was in charge of Tom Sellers, assisted by Janice Dyer, Ruth Eysenberg, and Violet Garton.

Club members held a potluck supper and work meeting last Thursday evening in the workshop and Greeley Room to complete rehearsals and arrangements for the new stage, which is the fourth contribution of the organization to the entertainment of the South Side student body.

Philo Senior Day Given By Juniors

Ruth Adler Presented Juniors With "Senior Key;" Intelligence Test Given To Seniors.

Philo seniors were guests of the juniors Monday evening at 3:45 at the home of Beatrice Fudge; this has been a long-established custom in Philo. Presentation of the Senior Key by Ruth Adler, president, to Virginia Fathauer, the newly elected president, came first. Virginia followed Ruth's speech with one of acceptance.

The seniors, led by Sybil Knudson and Mildred Hoff, sang songs and then gave a yell led by Mary Martha Hobrock and Ruth Adler.

Betty Muntzinger, general chairman for the entertainment, next announced a novel idea based on the song, "No, No, A Thousand Times No," which was given by the juniors. Louise Gerding played it on the piano; and several girls sang the song while Ina Claire Chappell, Katherine Simminger, and Margie Turner took the parts of the villain, hero, and maiden. All girls joined in on the chorus.

Margie Scheuman next gave an intelligence test to the seniors. Selma Liff won the prize, a bank globe.

Songs to the seniors by the juniors followed.

Joan Kennedy and Betty Davenport gave a senior prophecy. They used the lawn as the world and a wagon as the means of transportation; and as they traveled around the world, they gave the prophecy.

Following this, all seniors were asked to stand; and each was presented a handkerchief, which was arranged in a dolly like a corsage. These were in all colors.

Miss Demaree, faculty adviser, then presented a gift to Ruth Adler, outgoing president.

Refreshments of Dixie cups and cookies were served.

The next meeting of Philo will be held on June 8. This will probably be in the form of a picnic or party at the lake.

Composition Arranged By Richard Hickman

Dick Hickman, '36, who is now attending the Eastman Conservatory of Music at Brooklyn, N. Y., recently became an arranger of music. For a music concert, which was presented recently at the school, he arranged the currently popular "Alone" for flute, clarinet, bass clarinet, alto, tenor, and bass saxophones, cornets, trombones, French horns, basses, baritone, violin, piano, and the entire drum section. Mr. Hickman is taking the arranging course at the conservatory where he is a freshman. He is a former member of the music department where he played solo trombone.

Dorothy Newell Is French Club Head

Margaret Monning Chosen Vice-President; Dorothy Herbst, Virginia Porter Given Posts.

Dorothy Newell was elected last president of French Club at a meeting held last Thursday in the Voorhees Room. Other officers chosen were Margaret Monning, vice-president; Dorothy Herbst, secretary; Virginia Porter, Inter-Club Congress representative; and Mary Lou Monning, point recorder.

This meeting, which featured the life of Joan of Arc, was in charge of Maria Haven, program chairman. The program consisted of a talk on the life of Joan of Arc and four playlets depicting memorable scenes from her life.

A talk given by Vivian Hickman told of Joan being summoned by angels to deliver France, her great bravery and courage as she led her army into battle, and her being taken prisoner and sentenced to burn at the stake for witchery. Twenty-five years later she was found innocent and made a saint of the church.

Characters in the playlets were taken on by Anna Bremer, as Joan of Arc; Dorothy Newell, Joan's mother; Bob Locke, judge and King Charles; Vivian Hickman and Nancy Newell, angels.

Final plans were made for the picnic to be held Thursday, June 4, at Foster Park. Mary Lou Monning is general chairman in charge of arrangements; and is assisted by Elizabeth Simpson, Dorothy Herbst, and Dorothy Newell. All members who are planning to attend the picnic must sign up in room 90 as soon as possible.

Latin Club Purchases Likeness Of Cicero

Again in the Latin rooms, Cicero dominates the classes, in the form of a plaster bust in Mr. Rothert's room.

This bust was bought by the Latin Club through proceeds gained by giving a Latin play at the beginning of the semester in the study hall. The bust was chosen especially for students in third year Latin who read his works.

The statuette, a replica of the original bust of Cicero which is at the Capitoline Museum at Rome, Italy, was purchased through the Service Bureau for Latin Teaching of New York University. The statue will remain in Mr. Rothert's room until his classes finish the study of Cicero. It will then travel to the rooms of other Latin teachers while their classes study his works.

Seniors To Address '36 Class Exercises

Commencement exercises for the graduating class of '36 will be held June 10 at 8 p. m. in the school gym. Mr. Snider has announced.

For the first time, South Side will hold its exercises in the evening; and an entirely different program will be presented. Unlike in previous years, graduates will hear no outside speakers; but senior students will speak to the audience. Miss Dorothy Benner, public speech instructor, will name the student speakers. Music will also be presented by the music department.

To every senior is extended the privilege of inviting six of his relatives or friends to the graduating exercises. Due to the number of seniors and the small place of meeting, it is impossible to increase this number.

Plans of the committee for the occasion will be revealed in the Times next week, when speakers and their subjects will be announced.

Rooms 2 And 4 Chemistry

The fascinating subject of chemistry will be the subject of a detailed show to be in rooms 2 and 4, under the direction of Mr. Herbert S. Voorhees and Mr. Ward O. Gilbert, chemistry instructors. Twelve pupils have been obtained to show parents laboratory demonstrations, such as titration and precipitation. Contrary to precedent, chemistry note books will also be on exhibit.

Room 6 Social Sciences

Graphs, note books, examination papers, special projects, and other social science displays have been combined to be shown in this room. The work done in the classes of Miss Eleanor Smeltz, Miss Hazel Miller, Mr. Wilburn Wilson, and Mr. Maurice E. Murphy will be shown here. Subjects covered will be general history, United States history, civics, and economics.

Room 14 Physical Geography

Mr. Lloyd K. Whelan's classes in physical geography will contribute exhibits on streams, erosion, astronomy, rocks, minerals, mineral resources, and soils in room 14.

The P. G. 2 classes have exhibits covering glaciers, the atmosphere, the earth's climates, land forms, and Indiana physical geography.

Maps made by students and maps used in the course may be seen, along with a showcase of minerals.

Room 16 Mathematics

Class work by each student and graphs and posters by some of the better students will be displayed at the math room displays.

690 Books Purchased By Library This Year

A total of 690 new books has been purchased by the library since last fall, Miss Shoup has announced. The number of books lost this semester will be known when she takes her annual inventory, she said.

An average of 150-175 books leave the library each day. About fifty fine notices are also sent out daily. Eight to ten magazines circulate per day.

About seventy-eight students go to the library to study. Only three or four have been put out for exchanging slips.

Two Archers Are To Speak Before Rotary

Ruth Rose, Manuel Rothberg Fall Extemp Winners, Entered In Speaking Contest.

South Side is sending Ruth Rose and Manuel Rothberg; North Side, James Jackson and Margaret Johnson; and Central, Max Ochstein and Helen Long to the City Extemporaneous Contest to be held at the Chamber of Commerce Monday, June 1.

Contestants will draw their subjects on that day at 10:30 o'clock at the Trinity English Lutheran Church. At 12:15 o'clock the six contestants will have dinner at the Chamber of Commerce as guests of the Rotarians, after which the contest will be held.

Subjects to be debated are: (1) Should character education be a required high school subject? (2) Should classical literature be dropped from the high school course of study? (3) Can the program of extra-curricular activities in the modern high school be justified? There will be five minute constructive speeches and three minute rebuttals.

Both South Side contestants are active in public speaking. Ruth Rose is an excellent public speaking class student and has taken part in two extemp contests, taking first and second places respectively. Manuel Rothberg has been an outstanding public speaker since his freshman year. He represented Chappell, winner of the spring school extemp meet, has not been entered by Miss Benner.

The winner of the extemp contest brings to his high school the city trophy provided by Rotary Club. Last year the winner was Van Perrine, who represented South Side.

Rosemary Chappell, winner of the spring school extemp meet, has not been entered by Miss Benner.

Beddings Furnish Theme For Beach Togs This Summer

For sportswear this summer, girls will use homespun linen, spun rayon that looks and feels like challis, pique in nautical prints, and a casual coat of white wool.

Shirtwaist styles will be prominent for summer. Along with these shirtwaist dresses, scarves are used for contrast.

Some of the old materials are done up in new ways and therefore seem like new. A heavy cotton is done in stripes, like bed ticking and is very smart for beach wear. Also, while going in for bedding, there is pepper sheeting, now coming in smart colors and is also being worn on the beach.

Challis is back but in new and very charming prints. It is being used in bathing suits, spectator sport clothes, and blouses. A spun rayon makes super-smart sport clothes.

This year the shirt-frock takes its fashion points from a man's shirt, having a shirt-band collar and pleats on the sleeves.

The typical beach dress will be a short pair of overalls. Short-sleeved shirts are sometimes used to protect the shoulders from the sun. The back is decollete with crossed straps.

Watches And Bags Are Highly Favored As Graduation Gifts

"What do you want for graduation?" This question, asked of graduating seniors, secured a wide variety of answers:

Maxine Borchert, luggage; Betty Anne Shaff, luggage; Mary Kay Smith, wrist watch and luggage; Marjorie Dancer, stuff; Betty Wolf, oxford glasses; Beanie Dygert, a white bunny cape and things for college.

Ruth Rose, nothing I can think of; Marjorie Cartwright, you couldn't put it all down on paper; Jimmy Sweet, a trip West; Max Mariotte, if I can go to college, that's all I ask; Rosemary Chappell, anything; Dorothy Schweig, go to college; Norma Clauser, wrist watch; Ruth Roadcap, a wrist watch; Rosalyn Gale, a typewriter, an automobile, and a piano; Bob Bacon, a brand new model "T" Ford.

South Side Girl Makes Good

Berneta McIntosh
Miss Berneta McIntosh, a 1935 graduate of South Side High School, has accepted a secretarial position in the Fort Wayne offices of the Penn Mutual Life Insurance Company. Miss McIntosh, while a student at South Side, took a prominent part in the activities of the school and was a member of the National Honor Society.
She continued her education at International College, in Fort Wayne, and graduated this month with a very commendable record from the Private Secretarial department. She is a real credit to South Side High School.

The South Side Times --- A Weekly Exhibit

The South Side Times welcomes with the greatest enthusiasm all the parents and friends of our school to the annual exhibit tonight. We give our strongest support to the fine project which this exhibit has become, the merits and values of which cannot be overestimated.

The efforts made and the work accomplished by student and teacher alike would alone be a complete justification of tonight's program, for a school that teaches its students how to organize and complete any project with success has gone beyond the mere teaching of books and papers. It has exemplified the best spirit of cooperation between the teachers and students of the school and has shown that they must work side by side to attain their aim and that each is indispensable to the other. It has shown above all that actions are better than words and that it is better to do things yourself than to look upon the achievements of others.

One of the greatest values of this exhibit, however, is that it extracts talented work from pupils who perhaps never realized they possessed it and causes others to work harder and more carefully, because they know their work is to be exhibited. It permits each student to exercise his own individual ingenuity. It gives each student a chance to display his own ideas about the projects he works upon. Thus, this annual exhibit is one time in the year when the best talent and originality of all the students of the school are set free to achieve what they will.

So far, the advantages we have pointed out have been for the school's citizens, the students; but what is equally important is the great value of the exhibit to the parents and friends of the school, as well as the public in general. All of us, we hope, realize the prime importance of education; and we can readily see the hopeless plight of a people who do not realize it.

If the wonderful educational system of our country is to survive and prosper, the public must be made to realize and recognize its importance. Because everyone is impressed by things done, this exhibit is of infinite value in demonstrating materially to the public the success of our school system.

A man may be told many times, for example, how well the students are taught in the industrial arts department to do wood turning; but he will be much more convinced when he sees an exquisitely turned lamp. This exhibition shows what can really be done by the pupils of our school with the excellent training they have received.

Another great value of the shows tonight is that they tend to unify the parents and friends of the school with its pupils and teachers. The Parent-Teacher Association has done a great deal to bring them closer together; but not all parents have time or interest enough to attend meetings. This exhibit, being composed of an array of fascinating articles, has such an attraction for everyone that many can find time to see it, who might not had it been less interesting. Persons who come to no other activity of the school often come to these annual exhibits.

In more ways than one, this exhibit serves as the grand finale and the fitting climax to a year of work in school. Grading periods come and go; and although parents see the grades of their children, they do not see the work that has been done to gain the grades and often do not understand the things the grades really stand for. After a school year has been completed, this exposition shows to the parents what their children have been doing, and points out clearly the fact that students in South Side do things. The affair tonight is indeed the culmination of the school year.

The many values of this showing are so outstanding that one begins to think that the only thing amiss with the idea is that they aren't held more often.

An interesting thing to note is that the Times in itself is a weekly exhibit. Each issue displays the splendid teamwork and co-operation of a large staff which has succeeded in publishing the best high school paper in the United States. This is no understatement, though we say it ourselves. A professional newspaper man of the city, fifteen years in the game, did not point out one error when given a copy of the paper to criticize two weeks ago!

The service the Times renders the school by announcing all the club meetings, assemblies, varsity games, and numerous other school activities is inestimable.

Just as great, perhaps, is the aid it gives to the parents of South Side students. By reading one issue of the Times, parents can get a bird's-eye view of the daily life and environment of their children, an environment in which they live most of their time, let us add with emphasis.

Tonight, you will see a great exhibit. You will come from all over for this brief glimpse. Tonight, you also see our school's weekly exhibit. You are now reading it.

May we ask that you read it in the future?

Principal Requests Post Card Shower

"From border to border and coast to coast" flashes a popular weekly radio gossip. Now, South Side has its chance to "flash" from far-spread places. Are you going out of town during vacation? If so, Mr. Snider would be glad to receive a card from you. You don't have to go far; for that matter some boys once went to New Haven and sent him a card from there!

The first year he asked for cards he received about 150, but last year he received only 25. Did less people travel, or did more people forget?

Mr. Snider may, if he gets enough cards from enough different places, use a map and put ribbons to the different cards, showing how far each place from which it is received is from Fort Wayne.

Times Exhibit May Be Seen In Room 18

A display in the Times office, room 18, this evening will show the South Side Times in the making. In this demonstration will be shown how assignments are made, how copy is edited and read, how the paper is made up, how the business staff works, and how advertising is secured.

Times staff members will explain and answer any questions which the observers might ask. The whole procedure of preparing the Times will be shown step by step. A copy of the South Side Times is to be given to every one who attends the exhibit.

The display was arranged by Ann Abbott, past Times head, and Jim Sweet, present incumbent.

Room 18 is near the north entrance to South Side.

Sharps And Flats

Some of the works of Pittsburgh's almost forgotten music composer, Fidelis Zitterbart, will soon be heard by the public for the first time since his death in 1915.

The strange genius refused to allow his works to be played because of his determination that they must be played perfectly. Through notes collected from old programs and yellowed clippings, biography seekers have gathered material for a life story of the composer. Zitterbart was taught violin by his father, a conductor of an outstanding orchestra; and at the age of nine, he played in the organization. Ten years later, he went to Europe to study; and upon his return, played in outstanding orchestras in many large cities, in which he received considerable recognition.

South Side has a fine representation in the Civic Symphony. In music Fort Wayne ranks with the larger cities in the fact that they have an orchestra built by professionals on the basis of higher and educational music. This orchestra is directed by Gaston Baile and recently presented its fourth subscription concert. Concerts are held Sunday afternoons at the Concordia Music Hall.

Scholarships? Yes, many are being offered this year to music students. These offers are based on the ability of the student in his instrument. Instruments for which these scholarships are offered are: bass and alto clarinet, oboe, bassoon, harp, flute, French horn, and tuba. The colleges which offer these scholarships are Miami and Louisiana State Universities. Pupils who wish to look into these offers are requested to see the music department.

The fine concert which the music department displayed Tuesday is one of the outstanding achievements made this year. The music was selected by Mr. Wainwright, with careful choice, to blend with the taste of different personalities. The members of the band and glee club held many extra practices to be able to make their last concert a success.

A new feat recently accomplished by the band is that of the art of marching. This was chosen at this time, for the band has many future engagements where marching is necessary. It was also given to train the mind as well as the body, as to do two things at the same time is difficult for many students. Last Monday the band displayed its marching ability in the Lion Club's convention parade, along with ten other bands of the state. No drum major has yet been chosen; and all those who wish to try for this position should see Mr. Wainwright at once.

A party consisting of violin, Mary Jo Allen; cello, Margaret Rehm; piano, Ruth Bade; viola, Vernon Gregory; and clarinet, Bill Cargile, will journey to Lagrange Saturday night to offer entertainment for the annual banquet of the Lion's Club of that town.

Music letters will again be awarded this year to those students who will be seniors next semester. The letters,

Ramey Likes Law As His Vocation, Music As Hobby

"Music is my hobby, but law will be my vocation," was the statement made by Bernard Ramey, Toledo cornet marvel, who enchanted the school body with his cornet solos at the last music concert. Mr. Ramey is only sixteen years old, but has had much experience in the line of music. He has studied concert for seven years under such famous instructors as Walter Shaffer, assistant director of Pryor's band, A. J. Stephens, and Jack Wainwright. His hobby is as beneficial as it is interesting, and he often spends three hours a day in hard practice. The type of music that he chooses for his favorite are the Tartentellas; and when a concert is given, these are generally included in the program.

As every one of us, he also has a pet peeve; and girls, beware, for it is none other than high-strung women. This young man seemed to be very popular with them for there were many ladies-in-waiting to receive his autograph.

When asked how he liked the Archer school, he replied: "Fine school, but compared to De Vilbiss, well—" He also added, "Comparatively speaking, South Side's band is marvelous."

All who have had the privilege to meet this personality with the crop of short cut hair, freckles, and sense of humor, say he is swell.

which consist of a white "S" holding a gold lyre, the symbol of music, will be awarded on the basis of three years' work in the organization, during which time regular attendance and interest in the work must be shown. At recognition day the out-going seniors will be presented diplomas as an appreciation shown them by the music department.

On Saturday afternoon the small band marched in a parade sponsored by the South Side Loop Dealers Association. The route chosen started from the school and continued down Calhoun Street to Creighton, where they were placed on trucks, continuing to the Pennsylvania Ball Park, where they played for the afternoon baseball game.

Buy Office Equipment

The secretarial department of South Side has added a new course and new equipment during the past semester. A new mimeograph was purchased, and secretarial training was added to the commercial course. This includes fundamentals in calculation, dictaphone, stencil, and mimeograph training, and filing.

Marching, Exercise Show Starts At 9:30

A ten-minute demonstration of calisthenics and marching is scheduled to be given by the fourth period boys' physical education class this evening at 9:30 o'clock. Mr. Briner chose this class because it is the smallest of his six classes.

Gym pupils will march from the north entrance to the gymnasium floor. They will then open ranks and do exercises. These will include the "deep-knee bend," the "liver-squeezer," the "toe-toucher," the "twister," the "semaphore," the "push-up," the "jumper," and the "arm-thrust."

Miss Dorothy Benner, Archer public speaking instructor, has charge of getting the speakers for the commencement exercises June 10.

South Side Grads Become Managers Of 'Archer's Grill'

Two versatile young men, ex-students of South Side, are now in full charge of the grill known in the past few years as Bond's Sweet Shop. One of these young men is now studying to be a lawyer. His name is Wilbur Hire, a graduate of the class of '32. The other proprietor, Orin Simpson, '31, has three and one-half years of a course in forestry at Purdue University.

During the past few years Wilbur Hire has worked on the government projects PWA and CCC. At the present he is employed at the Fort Wayne Tailoring Company. He holds this position along with the co-management of the new grill. Just to show how ambitious this young man is, besides holding down two positions, he finds time to study law with the LaSalle Correspondence School.

Mr. Simpson, who graduated from South Side in 1931, was the head waiter of the cafeteria in the Union Building at Purdue University. Therefore he is well qualified to co-manage the new establishment.

The new name of the place, Archers' Grill, will be put in sign form in a few days. The name was obtained from the results of a contest held the last few days in the week ending May 16.

Sports Queen Selected
John Rogers High School of Spokane, Washington, elects a queen of spring sports each year. The students also elect her court. The new queen will be crowned in the near future.

Think Of A College; Then Find All About It In School Library

The South Side library contains bulletins from a large number of colleges. These are classified into four groups. The first of these, composed of specialized institutions, is represented by new catalogues from Evanston Hospital for Nursing, Michael Reese Hospital School of Nursing, United States Military Academy, Patten Hall, and Art School of Chicago.

In the second group, co-educational and state universities, material has been received from Hillsdale College, Wittenberg, Northwestern, Ball State Teachers, DePaul, Washburn, University of Illinois, Oberlin, Manchester, Franklin, Tri-State, Earlham, University of Mississippi, University of Iowa, University of Chicago, Pennsylvania, and University of Minnesota.

Eleven women's colleges have sent bulletins. They are: Western, Ward Belmont, MacMurray, Bryn Mawr, Rockford, St. Mary's of the Woods, Stevens, Vassar, Goucher, Wellesley, and Radcliffe.

The fourth group, composed of schools for men, is represented by Kenyon, Harvard, Notre Dame, Princeton, Catholic University of America, Yale, and Dartmouth.

These are only a small number of the total in the library. Numerous new catalogues come in each week. The entire collection occupies about three book cases.

Joe Bex Takes Dollar Prize For Store Name

One dollar, or a ticket to the senior dance, the prize for naming the former Bond's Sweet Shop across Calhoun Street, has been given to Joe Bex, a sophomore. His entry, "Archer Grill," was chosen best from several hundred entries.

George Anna Martin placed second, and Miss Rowena Harvey, faculty adviser of the Times, placed third. Second and third prizes were both fifty cents.

The shop is to be fully redecorated in green and white, the school colors; and new equipment is to be added.

The shop is being managed by Orin A. Simpson, '31, and Wilbur Hire, '32.

Butler Offers Award

South Side graduates are offered a chance at a $100 scholarship to Butler University at Indianapolis, which gives to graduates of accredited high schools such valuable student help funds annually.

Applicants must be in the upper fourth of their class scholastically. Mr. Snider has the power to recommend or to discard the application. The principal's recommendation entitles the student to enter Butler with a designated amount slashed from his tuition fees.

"The Art Library" To Be Placed In Administration Building; Miss Dochterman Has Charge.

Fort Wayne public schools have received the gift of a very valuable art library, containing 120 books on all subjects of art, twenty-one cases of mounted pictures, seven portfolios which contain etchings, Japanese prints, line engravings, Mezzotints, all examples of the reproduction processes as well as plates of Mistic art, and ten large reproductions, suitable for framing, of valuable paintings by masters, both classic and modern.

A library system is being worked out by Miss Dochterman; and the material will all be classified and arranged in usable form in the committee room of the administration building. That room will henceforth be known as "The Art Library." All material will be available to teachers and may be drawn out for a limited time. Library cards will be used.

Shelves, ledges, and reading tables are now being placed in the little library which will soon be ready for use. Miss Dochterman stated that the room will contain one picture at a time, and will be arranged so that it will become an attractive, restful place conducive to inspirational reading.

Meterites Honor Mothers At Tea

Dorothy Hall Is General Chairman; Interesting Program Presented In Greeley Room.

Meterite girls entertained their mothers at a tea in the Greeley Room Tuesday. Dorothy Hall acted as general chairman of the arrangement committee. She was assisted by the program, refreshments, entertainment, and reception committees.

A short speech of welcome was given by Ruth Bade, president of the club. Jeannette Warren outlined the history of the Meterite Club; Peggy Bacon explained the purpose of and the requirements for membership. June Hooch spoke on the program that the club is to study during the next semester; and Martha Siebert described the motion picture study. Velda Oppenlander told about the social program. A play was given by Betty Daniels and Janice Dyer. Velma Lehman presented a clever sailor dance. The meeting was closed by the serving of refreshments.

Margaret Null arranged the program. The chairman of the committees were: Decorations, Lois Rea; refreshments, Betty Mead; entertainment, Marjorie Rapp; and reception, Ruth Bade.

The nomination committee consisted of the retiring officers who are: Hazel Noll, president; Jean Hildebrand, vice-president; Dorothy Zaegel, secretary; Eileen Fueling, treasurer; Mary Ellen Kilpatrick, sergeant-at-arms; and Francille Shepler, Inter-Club Congress.

Jean Hildebrand was general chairman of the food, entertainment, and special attention to seniors committees. Her assistants were: Valeria Martin, Claudine Wells, Mary Garton, Joan Gunter, Marcile Passe, Marian Owens, Vera Jane Wells, Fatima Landodio, Mildred Hagans, Bernice Springer, Dorothy Ringenberg, and Constance Haag.

A treasure hunt and games were features of the picnic. All graduating seniors were given honorable awards and souvenirs for their service in the club.

The menu consisted of potato salad, bean salad, potato chips, pickles, sandwiches, cookies, and candy.

Emily Lepper Heads Stamp Club's Picnic

The Philatelic Society held its annual picnic Wednesday at Foster Park, furnishing pies, cakes, and ice cream for hungry members. The committee in charge of the affair was: Emily Lepper, chairman, Alice Shiflet, Homer Miller, and Bruce Bradbury. Games and a treasure hunt were main features of the picnic. Mr. Gilbert supervised.

Election of officers will be held at the next meeting. The nominating committees consists of John Jackson, Dorothy Aldridge, Emily Lepper, and John Thackery.

Seniors May Still Get Their Invitation Cards

Extra commencement invitations may be purchased in the old book store during the fourth, fifth, and eighth periods by seniors who care to have more. The regular price of seven cents will be charged. Nearly four thousand invitations have been ordered and should be called for at the book store.

Miss Erma Dochterman

Miss Erma Dochterman, art teacher, is arranging "The Art Library," a gift sent by the Carnegie Foundation to Mr. Merle J. Abbott, superintendent of schools.

Archers Can Soon Buy Refreshments From Five Stores

Much speculation has arisen as to what manner of business would move into the almost completed building across the street from South Side at Gummer and Calhoun Streets. If you have been fortunate enough to have a class in the southwest corner of the school, you no doubt have spent many a happy fifty-five minutes watching the workmen construct this building. At least, so the teachers have been saying.

But at last the structure is nearing completion. Workmen will be finished in approximately two weeks. This new addition to our little "loop" will be a Miller's Ice Cream Shop, a brother, so to speak, of the Miller's shop at Broadway and Jefferson Street.

This will make it possible for a student of South Side to obtain an ice cream cone at five different places within one block of school. Miller's will be decorated in white and black. Their products will come direct from the Miller dairy farms in Michigan.

Outstanding Art Pupils Display Year's Work

Interesting art displays have been planned in rooms 61 and 77 by Miss Ley and Miss Dochterman. The work that the various pupils have completed throughout the past year will be exhibited. This includes illustrations, posters, lettering, water colors, oil painting, portraits, pastel work, charcoal work, crayon, block prints, clay modeling, and cartoons. The number of pictures and posters that are to be displayed cannot be determined.

A few of the pupils that are outstanding in illustrations are Virginia Greiner, Kenneth Scott, Eleanor Kirkpatrick, and Janice Dyer. Ralph Jones, Bernard Houser, and Charles Lahrman are outstanding in posters and lettering. The outstanding work in oil painting is being done by Anna Bremer, Ann Hull, and Hubert McCowen. Marjorie Dancer, Mary Martha Hobrock, Virginia Shiflet, Eloise Stuart, and Georgianna Jacobs are a few of the art pupils doing outstanding work in water colors.

Wo-Ho-Ma To Elect, Prepare Cake Sale

Election of officers and definite plans for cake sale will be the most important business of the Wo-Ho-Ma Club when it meets this evening in the Greeley Room.

Since the club now has a deficit in its treasury, the girls are asking their mothers to donate cakes for the sale which will be held at the South Side Market on June 6.

Ruth Reitz and Laura Lloyd are the members of the nomination committee. Although this will be the last meeting of this year, plans may be made for a picnic after school is out.

"Singing Arrows" Sells Two Hundred Copies

Nearly two hundred copies were sold of "Singing Arrows," the magazine published by the Writers Club of South Side. It contained "The White Elephant of Cochrane High," a novel written by Elinor White and Laverne Boyce and printed in weekly installments in the Times. Receipts from the sale of the magazine will be turned over to the Times, which sponsored the printing.

All unsold copies will be given out by Mr. Herman Makey, club adviser, to those parent who visit the exhibit in room 72 tonight.

Travelers Meet For Park Picnic

Scavenge Hunt, Flower Pot Race Featured As Entertainment; Activities Of Club Are Ended.

Frankie Park was the scene of the Travel Club picnic held yesterday afternoon after school from 4 until 7 o'clock. The members were taken to the park in cars or were given checks to ride the street car. Ruth Goeglein was in general charge of transportation.

A scavenger hunt was the first thing on the program. The members were sent out to hunt for various things; among them were a fish worm, an insect in a bottle, a piece of limestone, and a gold colored safety pin. The person that found the most things was awarded a box of candy. Next a flower pot race was held. The members slowly advanced to their goal by stepping from one flower pot to another. Andy Bremer was in charge of the games. Much time was spent wading in the creek and walking through the dense grove.

After the games the members gathered around an open fire, where they spent their time roasting wieners. The rest of the menu consisted of bananas, pickles, and ice cream. The committee in charge of refreshments consisted of June Close, chairman; Betty Garton, and Rosemary Lehman. The picnic concluded the activities of Travel Club for this year.

Latin Club Holds Last Meet Today

Final Meeting Is Followed By Potluck In The Cafeteria; Betty Jeanne Bond Is Head.

The final spring meeting of the Latin Club was held in the Voorhees Room at 4:30 today. Mercury, messenger of the Gods, was the subject discussed, followed by a potluck in the cafeteria.

Information on Mercury was presented to the club members in the manner of a class recitation. Betty Jeanne Bond acted as teacher, asking questions of the rest of the committee, acting as the class. An added attraction will be the showing of a film which was purchased by the Latin department. Election of officers for next year's club was held.

A potluck in the cafeteria followed the program. This supper was also under the direction of the program committee. The committee in charge of the program was headed by Betty Jeanne Bond and included Constance Haag, Betty Gross, Henry Velkoff, and Maxine Rippe.

Four Archers To Appear In Dance School Show

Four Archer pupils of Ann Plybon and Charles Allen of the Uptown School of Dancing, will appear in their annual revue, "Stars of Tomorrow," at the Civic Theatre Tuesday evening. Two hundred pupils will take part in displaying types of dancing.

Outstanding group numbers will include, "In a Gypsy Camp" by the advanced junior class, an act by a group of acrobats who were filmed during the past winter for a movie scene, and the finale, a modernistic number. Features in the way of solos claim four South Side students, who will all present novelty numbers. Helen Gray will offer a rhythm tap number, and an acrobatic dance done in gold will be portrayed by Maxine Larimore. Velma Lehman, a sophomore, plays her accordion and does a sailor tap dance; Peggy Kilpatrick will do a toe dance while playing the violin. Music will be presented by Fred Tangeman and his orchestra, and Margaret Hurdles is in charge of costumes.

Miss Miller's Mother Dies Saturday Morning

Mrs. Mary Miller, mother of Miss Hazel Miller, South Side social science teacher, died at her home on East Creighton Avenue last Saturday morning. She had been ill for the past eight years, but her condition was not considered serious until one week before her death.

As a member of the Trinity Episcopal Church, the Church Guild, the Alumni Association of the old Fort Wayne Methodist Episcopal College, and the Fort Wayne Woman's Club, she was very active in club work.

Funeral services were held in the Trinity Episcopal Church with the Rev. James McNeal Wheatley officiating. Burial was in Lindenwood Cemetery.

Language Activities Vary Widely Here

Activities of the Latin students during the past year have been many and varied. All of the pupils have followed their outlines closely; many have also done much extra work. First and second semester Latin students have put much time in on collateral reading. Caesar students have produced a remarkably clear map of Gaul, the country in which Caesar's story takes place.

Language clubs, supported by the three language departments, have functioned regularly and effectively all year. They have emphasized the conversation side of the languages.

Last fall the Latin department gave a play, a large increase in funds being the result of the venture. This extra money was spent for three film slides and a plaster cast of Cicero.

Burl Friddle To Head Coaching School August 24 To 29

Bo McMillen, Ward Lambert Are To Assist

School Will Be Open Mainly For High School Coaches, But Anybody May Enroll.

Grid, Basketball Sport Included

Mr. Everett Case Will Bring Championship Frankfort Hot Dogs To Play Game.

Burl Friddle, South Side basketball coach, has announced the inauguration of a coaching school to be held from August 24 to 29, inclusive. Mr. Friddle is to be director of this school. He has signed Bo McMillen, Indiana football coach, to have complete charge of football, and Ward "Piggy" Lambert, basketball coach at Purdue, will have charge of the basketball division. This is the first of its kind ever to be in this city.

Although the school will be open mainly to high school coaches of football and basketball, it will of course, be open to anybody who desires to enroll. It is expected that coaches from all over the state will be attracted; and coaches from other states will also be attracted, because of the prominence of the head instructor.

Good Staff Secured
The first three days of the school will be devoted to football and will be held at North Side. Mr. McMillen will give several lectures and will probably emphasize the "five-man backfield" which he introduced at Indiana. He will be assisted by other famous football mentors.

The last three days will be devoted exclusively to basketball. Mr. Everett Case will bring his championship Frankfort Hot Dogs to play a team made up of nearby county schools. This game will be played at North Side's gymnasium; and after that the sessions will be held at Central's gym, due to the central location.

Mr. Friddle believes he has secured a splendid staff for the school, in securing the two head coaches. McMillen is on his third year at Indiana and has brought Indiana's football teams into prominence since he started there. He was successful at Kansas State where he coached for six years. He also played quarterback for the "Praying Colonels" of Centre College. Mr. McMillen has a reputation for making weak teams into powerful contenders within their conferences. Mr. Friddle secured McMillen because of his ability as an offensive coach.

Mr. Lambert is one of the best known basketball coaches in the nation. He has been at Purdue for eighteen years; and in that time, he has produced teams that have won or tied for the Big Ten championship nine times, has been second four times, and has a percentage of .725 for his entire Big Ten career. He is a good coach for the "fast break," but can meet any condition that confronts him.

Mr. Friddle is not a piker himself in the coaching school line, as he conducted a similar school at Vincennes; and it was very successful. Before coming to South Side, he coached at Washington and had them in the finals almost every year, also winning the state tournament in 1930. When at South Side, he brought a mediocre team up to the finals in the sectional.

Post-Grad Athletes Get Industrial Jobs And Tote Golf Bags

Several of South Side's athletes who graduated in January are busily engaged at jobs they have acquired since that time. Two are working at the International Harvester, one at the steel mills, one at the Truck Engineering Co., and one is working as a caddy at a Fort Wayne golf course.

Joe Close, who is working in the office of the steel mills in this city, says he likes his work very well but that he would rather be back in South Side playing basketball for alma mater. Gordon Parmalee and Jim Ellenwood are employed at the International Harvester. Both are hoping to play on the International basketball team. Jim works on a steel lathe. Gordon acts as an inspector.

Wayne Bennett is employed in the office of the Truck Engineering Company, and Herman Makey is caddy at Brookwood golf course.

Takes King Trophy

Bud Lee

Bud Lee, senior, appears to be headed for college athletic fame, having been awarded Dr. E. A. King's Sportsmanship Trophy, awarded the senior who shows the best mental attitude, the best aid to his teammates, and the best improvement. This was the first year on the varsity basketball squad for Bud; and in this time, he proved to be one of the main spark plugs in the Archer offense and defense. He was also named All-Sectional guard this year. In addition to the King Trophy, he was one of the nominees from this school for the Lion Cubs' scholarship. Bud has played varsity football for three years and has been out for it four years. He was on the varsity track squad this season. At the beginning of the basketball season, he was the object of much criticism; but he did not let this discourage him and he rocketed high in the esteem of sport fans.

South Side Supplies Players For Local Baseball Diamonds

The Federation League in Fort Wayne is well supplied with players that either go or have gone to South Side. These boys are widely divided in the teams in the circuit.

Playing with the Superior Malt-Berghoffs is Carl Hall, who plays right field and specializes in pitching. Carl is a sophomore in South Side. Gaylord Stalter, a post-graduate, is playing at third base, and is doing very well at this position. Richard Brown, a senior, is playing in left field and is one of the best sluggers on the team. Charles "Red" Baumgartner, who graduated in 1935, is playing center field. Bud "Mickey" Cochran is the backstop and is a valuable member to the team. Bud is a senior.

South Side is also well represented on the South Side Loop team. Bob Woehr, a post-graduate, is playing second base and is an important cog in the Loop's defense. Dorwin Kessler, '35, is playing shortstop and is important because of his speed. One of the star pitchers on the Loop's team is "Hoity" Hall. He has speed and good control of the ball.

Bill Russell, '35, is playing second base with the Smith Coal Company, and Paul Doehrmann is the star pitcher for St. Joe A. C.

Horse Shoe Tourney Is In Quarter Finals

The intramural horse shoe tournament has progressed to the quarter finals. However, entries will be accepted yet today until 3:15. There are three weight divisions among the participants: light, 110 pounds and under; middle weights, 110 to 130 pounds; and heavy weights, over 130 pounds.

Redskins Take City Field Title By Small Edge

Makes Seventh Consecutive Season That Braves Have Held On City Track Crown

Green Marks Up Total Of 24 Points

Central Garner Eight First Places, North Side Four, South Side Captures One.

By Luther Prociase

Conquering Central's Bengal Tigers by the narrow margin of three points, North Side's Redskins captured the city track and field meet at North Side athletic field Saturday afternoon, thereby hanging another trophy to their war belt. This makes the seventh consecutive year that the Braves have held the city track crown. The score of the closely contested meet, the outcome of which was in doubt until the tape was broken in the last event, was as follows: North Side, 58½ points; Central 55½ points; and South Side 21 points.

Break Many Records

Perfect weather prevailed, with the exception of a strong cross wind; and, with quite a few of the boys performing the last time for their alma maters, five new records were written into the books. Central's star hurdler, Bob Brown, accounted for two of them in the 220-yard low hurdles and the 120-yard high hurdles, with times of 24.4 and 15.4 seconds, respectively. Ben Mourning of Central outspurred Rog Poorman in the 440-yard dash, to set a new mark of 50.3 seconds, bettering the old record of 50.9 formerly held by Chet Enslay of South Side. North Side's mile relay quartet of Van Woermer, Christlieb, Lee, and Young hung up a new mark of 3:30.4 in their event, and Shilts of North Side pole vaulted to a new height of 11 feet 6 inches to nose out Ed Kruse of South Side, who failed to clear the bar at that height.

Central garnered eight first places, North Side captured four, and South Side took one.

The summaries follow:
100-yard dash—Charlton (C), first; McMeen (N), second; Frazell (S), third. Time—10.2.

High hurdles—Brown (C), first; Garvin (C), second; Morris (N), third. Time—15.4 (new city record). Broad jump—Ivey (N), first; Stone (S), second; Givens (C), third. Distance—12 feet, 7½ inches.

Mile run—Erman (N), first; Thomas (N), second; Hinton (S), third. Time—4:38.

440-yard dash—Mourning (C), first; Poorman (N), second; Van Woermer (N) third. Time—50.3 (new city record).

220-yard dash—Charlton (C), first; McMeen (N), second; Lee (N), third. Time—23 seconds flat.

880-yard run—Stanski (C), first; Blake (N), second; Mahurin (S), third. Time—2:08.1.

Low hurdles—Brown (C), first; Fahling (N), second; Morris (N), third. Time—24.4 (new city record). Shot put—Leitz (S), first; Miller (S), second; Shumm (N), third. Distance—46 feet, 7½ inches.

High jump—Schroff (C), first; Ivey (N), second; Kilty (N) and Given (C) tied for third. Height—5 feet 11 inches.

Pole vault—Shilts (N), first; Kruse (S), second; Poffenberger (N), third. Height—11 feet 6 inches (new city record).

Mile relay—North Side (Van Woermer, Christlieb, Lee, Young), first; Time—3:30.4.

DePauw won the fourteenth annual little state track and field meet Saturday by edging out Butler, defending champion, 56 1-5 to 54 1-10. The victory gave DePauw its ninth championship.

Bob Brown, Central's ace hurdler, set new marks in both the high and the low sticks, running the events in 15.4 and 24.4 seconds respectively.

Ed Leitz, Chuck Stone, and Ed Kruse wound up their scholastic athletic careers Saturday by acquiring eleven of the Archers' twenty-one points. Leitz won in the shot put; Kruse and Stone placed second, in the pole vault and in the broad jump respectively.

Wabash high school won the Central Indiana Conference track and field championship Saturday with a total of 52.7 points.

Frazell, Hinton, and Mahurin, Green track men who will be back next year, each capped a third place in his event.

Don Lash, leader of the great array of distance talent that carried Indiana to its first Western Conference track and field championship, shattered the conference one-mile record for the second consecutive year by beating Charles Fenske of Wisconsin after a stirring duel in the brilliant time of 4 minutes, 10.8 seconds.

Jack Fleming, former Archer, followed Beethan of Ohio State to the tape in the half-mile run last Saturday as Beethan ran the distance in one minute, 52.4 seconds.

An exhibition by members of the Notre Dame track squad of 1936, the most successful team in Irish history, will feature the third annual Notre Dame National Catholic interscholastic track and field meet at South Bend June 5 and 6.

Don Shilts, North Side's star vaulter, cleared the crossbar at 11 feet, 6 inches to set a new record in the pole vault, breaking his own former mark of 10 feet, 10 inches.

Jesse Owens, in running the 220-yard dash at Columbus Saturday, was timed at 21.1 seconds around a curve. This is one-tenth of a second faster than the American record accredited to Ralph Metcalf of Marquette.

With a favoring wind, Osgood, Michigan hurdler, equaled Percy Beard's accepted world mark of 11.2 seconds for the 120-yard high hurdles.

North Side's crack mile relay team wrote another record into the books by covering four laps of the track in 3:30.4, bettering the old mark, also held by a North Side team, by one-third of a second.

Jesse Owens stands head and shoulders above the rest of the Olympic possibilities in the broad jump on the strength of his world record performance last spring at Ann Arbor.

Mourning, Blue and White star middle distance man, showed some brilliant running when he placed third behind Carr and Gray. Carr set a new record of 49.3 for the 440 dash.

Central, second; South Side, third. Time—3:30.4 (new city record). Half-mile relay—Central (Charlton, Russell, Collias, Garvin), first; North Side, second; South Side, third. Time—1:34.2.

Star Pole Vaulter Goes For Delicious Butterscotch Pie

By Luther Prociase

"Yep, my favorite dish is butterscotch pie." This statement was made by Edward Herman Kruse, South Side's star pole vaulter, epicure, and connoisseur of the female species which sport abnormally beauteous countenances. So take heed, girls.

Ed, whose 5 feet 10 inches of masterful brawn and handsome profile is the object of admiration of South Side females, has been an invaluable member of the Archers' track squad for the last three years, not to mention playing varsity halfback all last season on the football team.

Wants To Be Doctor

A seasoned campaigner, Ed consistently gains his share of points in his specialty, the pole vault. Ed gained a second place at the sectional track meet to win a trip to the state meet at Indianapolis.

When interrogated as to what profession he intends to enter upon his graduation this June, Ed imparted that he wishes to be a doctor and plans to enroll in a pre-medicine course at Notre Dame University this fall. He also divulged that Cliff Schrom, Dick Busch, and he have a few hazy plans toward a trip in the Southwest during the summer, before undertaking the heavy educational diet next fall.

Girls His Weakness

Speaking again of Edward's favorite dishes, we find that the bit of femininity that appeals to this handsome athlete's palate lately is personified in the demulcent charms of Rosalie O'Connor of North Side. When approached on this subject, however, Ed's masculine poise faded and turning a vermilion hue as he shyly quavered this intelligent reply, "Aw, shucks, gosh darn."

So we find that even this mighty athlete has his weaknesses; gals and butterscotch pie. But don't let this bother you too much, Ed, for we also know that beside dishing it up, you also do a fair job of dishing it out when it comes to football and track.

Archers And Dushers Are Softball Finalists

The Archers and Dushers, the two final contestants in the heavyweight softball tournament, will compete for the crown in the stadium Tuesday noon.

In deciding the two finalists, eleven other teams formed two brackets. In the upper brackets, the S. O. M. O. H. A. G.'s were defeated by the Whirlwinds, 11 to 12. Next, the Dushers defeated the Whirlwinds, 16 to 2. In the lower brackets, the Sluggers nosed out the Hawkers, 7 to 6 in a well-played game. The Sluggers were whitewashed by the Archers 21 to 2.

The Spartans and the Fruits will play for the middleweight softball crown Tuesday in the stadium. These two teams have each defeated each other in the two games they have played. In the first game the Fruits defeated the Spartans, 10 to 6. Jack Bollinger, Spartan shortstop, hit a home run with bases loaded. In the second game, the Spartans battered Lefty Bannet for six runs while Eugene Heckman pitched a no-hit game for the Spartans.

Marion Matches End Golf Season

Five Golfing Tournaments Have Been Played From Schedule Of Seven This School Year.

By Ray Ballweg Jr.

The Archer golf team has two more matches left this season, two matches with Marion. Tomorrow, the Archers will go to Marion, and on June 1, Marion will come to South Side's home course to wind up the season for the 1936 golf team. These two matches will complete the schedule of seven meets this year.

Against Auburn Team

South Side's 1936 golf team started the season against a strong Auburn team at the Red Devil's home course and went down to a 12 to 0 defeat. The Auburn team is one of the strongest teams that that school has ever had, and proved it against the Archers in the recent match.

On May 9, the Archers were host to three schools at the Brookwood course. Entries were Auburn, Bluffton, Hartford City, and South Side. The Bluffton team, which was slated to appear, failed to do so, and thus only three teams were left. The Auburn Red Devils again showed their superior power in winning by nine strokes. The Archers followed in second place, and then came Hartford City. The Auburn first man, Tom Mason, came through with a score of 37-37-74, a full twelve strokes over the leading South Side.

Then Elmhurst came to the Archer home course. At this match the Archers emerged victorious with a score of 5½ to 6½.

Meet Trojans Again

No more matches were played until the Archers again met the Elmhurst Trojans at the Orchard Ridge course; and there the tables were turned and the Trojans won by the score of 6½ to 6½. Harold Schmidt, Archer first man, had a score of 78, but his opponent Dale McKinzie, also had a score of 78.

On May 21, South Side met the Auburn Red Devils again at their home course. The Archers came out on the short end of the score, 7 to 5 for Auburn.

Play in this match was much better, however, than it had been in the previous matches. This is the first year the team has been made up entirely of underclassmen. Thus, the team for next season looks very favorable.

Since this is a senior home room, it was suggested that they show what the nature of the leading activities throughout the home room's existence has been.

In connection with her exhibit, Miss Kiefer says, "Since English, teaching and study, does not lend itself particularly well to visual demonstration, we do not hope that the exhibition in this room may make an aesthetic appeal or even show a decided immediate practical gain. We hope only to show what our classes have tried to do, as one year's contribution toward an ultimate goal, in use and appreciation of English material. Therefore the work that is shown may include a booklet of each pupil's theme work, showing typical examples of the year's work; literature and grammar test papers; any illustrative work that individual pupils may contribute as special projects; material used in various courses such as texts, reading lists, outlines, and supplementary books and magazines."

Social Science Tour

Mr. Wilson's a jolly good teacher, For I'm sure there's no other creature, Large or small, Thin or tall, Who'd do a deed more preacher.

A Social Science tour it was, To see the things the government does To aid the residents, To keep more pheasants, To guard idiots' blankets for fuzz.

In Decatur, forty-eight little houses we saw

There's six different kinds, Some with Venetian blinds.

Near Bluffton, we saw a game reserve That is like the making of preserves—

Bang! Down Went A Moose And Up Went Head Here

By Millie Hoff

Well, well, well! Perhaps through all these years you have wondered how in the world the big, gorgeous moose-head down in the front hall ever came to our beloved school. It's quite an eye-filler, and this is how it happened: Long, long ago, Dr. Victor Hilgeman and Dr. Duemling went on one of their long hunting trips to the Canadian north woods. It was their custom at that time to make up a hunting party about twice a year, as a result of which, Dr. Duemling's home is furnished with some very beautiful skins and trophies.

Well, Dr. Hilgeman had shot his deer, but Dr. Duemling had not sighted one yet. Suddenly, a magnificent moose stepped out from behind a tree right in Dr. Hilgeman's path. He did not wish to shoot it; he could not call his friend, lest it frighten the deer, nor could he bear the thoughts of letting it go. He shot and wounded it in the upper right foreleg. The animal charged upon him, but just then Dr. Duemling appeared on the scene. Together they shot, and the result was that two of the prongs were nicked. The moose belted something fierce; but Dr. Hilgeman's first shot had mortally wounded it, and it dropped in the midst of a charge.

Dr. Hilgeman had its head stuffed and mounted, and it was put in the clinic on Fairfield Avenue. He gave a head to North Side and one to Central. Central's measures 52 inches from tip to tip, which is almost a record width. When the clinic was remodeled, the moose head seemed to be in the way, so Dr. Hilgeman donated it to South Side. It has 21 prongs and measures 48 inches from tip to tip. This is unusually large.

7. Biographies.
8. Special projects: A Swiss lake settlement, catapults, and cardboard dolls in costumes.

Cleaning Is Not All Which Haunts The Janitorial Dreams

Janitors of South Side have been kept busy during the past year building things as well as doing general cleaning. Last fall a book room was built under the west incline. Partitions have been removed from the offices of Miss Pittenger and Mr. Snider. Cabinets were also built for Miss Pittenger.

Bleachers were built from which to take Totem group pictures. A shelf was put up in Mr. Rothert's room and also one in Mrs. Welty's room to hold a bust of Cicero purchased by the Lat-in department.

A bookcase for history texts was placed in Mr. Wilson's room. New wall plugs have also been put in the Greeley and Voorhees rooms.

The janitors are now building a new equipment room in the basement for football and track equipment. This will not, however, be in use before fall. Besides all this, much cleaning and general work has been done. The whole building was cleaned last fall.

Grass cutting, window washing, and floor waxing, which have all been done several times this year, also take much janitorial attention. Ventilators on the roof are now being painted.

UP AND DOWN OUR INCLINES

Miss Thorne's solid geometry classes are planning a very interesting exhibit for her room. They are making a variety of figures having the same total area as a sphere.

Miss Kiefer's home room and English classes are preparing exhibit material in connection with the term's activities.

Miss Oppelt's classes are making posters of derivative work and other Latin projects. Each pupil will also be represented by a piece of class room work.

In Mr. Makey's English classes, the following students have turned in all their written work: Fay Bechtold, Verna Holtman, Catherine Allendorph, Martha Morgan, Emma Yentes, Charlotte Bell, Helen Walbert, Gergetta McInire, Vincent Cook, Mildred Rudig, and Frank Andrews.

Pupils of Miss Demaree's English 5 class have finished their themes on the development of drama and "The Rivals" and are now reading the "School for Scandal."

In Miss Demaree's English 7 class, students have made Shakespeare projects.

Mr. McClure's general history classes are starting their study of the World War.

Students in Mr. McClure's room have been studying American relations with Latin America.

In Miss Fiedler's recent algebra 1 test over the last six weeks' work, Robert Williams received the highest grade.

In a series of review tests in Miss Fiedler's trigonometry classes, David Sherman ranked first and Dorothy Crabbil second.

On a test over the fourth chapter of Cicero's oration for Archias in Miss Woodward's Latin 6 class, Elinor White, Vera Hilgeman, and Constance Haag made the highest grades.

James Craig had made painted sketch illustrating the Harpies and King Phineas for the exhibition. He is in a Latin class of Miss Woodward's.

Miss Suter's fourth period Monday drama classes have been studying poems. "Little Park That I Pass Through" and "Flanders Field" are among the poems studied.

An exceptional First Big Ten, composed of those typing 2 pupils who have written ten minutes with the highest rate among a class of 98 pupils, was named this week. Those whose names appear on the first big ten have qualified for a grade of A+ as far as speed and accuracy are concerned. Helen Allen's name appears on the first star, with a rate of 59.9 words per minute; Verna Holtman, 57.6; Elizabeth Stoltz, 55.6; Louise Gerding, 53.8; Wilma Butler, 52.2; Virginia Fathauer, 51; Carl Mesing, 50.6; Katherine Simminger, 49.9; Leona Menze, 48.6 and Frances Rygowski, 48.1.

Girls on the first two stars, Helen Allen and Verna Holtman, both wrote for ten minutes with only one error.

The second Big Ten has the same qualifications as the first big ten, only it is composed of the next ten pupils in speed and accuracy. June Haeger wrote ten minutes at a rate of 48, and so heads the second big ten. Those who follow her are: Anna Bremer, 46.8; Betty Jeanne Bond, 46.7; Ruth Rose, 46; Margaret Smith, 46; Lauretta Krauss, 45.7; Clarice Rudy, 44.1; Barbara Von Gunten, 43.9; Louise Owens, 42.8; and Ruth Bormuth, 42.2.

For the first time the third Big Ten is composed of pupils in the typing 2 classes who have all written at a rate of 40 words per minute. It is composed of the following students: Phyllis Barrows, 42.3; Annabelle Haines, 42.3; Earl J. Hoy, 42.1; Norma Clauser, 41.8; Edith Pawlisch, 1.7; Conny Schultz, 41.4; Eleanor Paetz, 40.8; Inez Thompson, 40.7; Marjorie Hower, 40.4; and Dorothy Volz, 40.1.

Several pupils in the typing 2 classes have steadily maintained their places on the first Big Ten. Helen Allen, Elizabeth Stoltz, Wilma Butler, Verna Holtman, and Carl Mesing, besides unflinchingly keeping on the first Big Ten, have often made the first star.

Miss Hodgson's classes are preparing for their final tests.

Miss Mott's girls have just finished studying cakes in the laboratory.

In a recent test in German 4, Harriet Basford and Eric Beyer received the highest grades. Each made 99 percent.

Mr. Wilson's two civics classes to both of his economics classes. In the first period class, Margaret Dickmeyer, Fred Brubaker, and Helen Potter received the best grades. Norman Buck and Richard Strasser turned in the best papers in the fourth period.

Mr. Wilson's two civics classes and several students from his economics and history classes went on a tour last week to the Federal Subsistence Homestead Project at Decatur, to the government game preserve near Bluffton, and to the Fort Wayne State School.

Verna Holtman has written a poem about the social science tour taken by Mr. Wilson's classes.

Home room 85 has appointed two groups to work on safety and traffic projects. Robert Porter, Evelyn Potts, and Richard Powers are working on information regarding a driver's license. Robert Peters, Ruth Phillips, and Virginia Scherer are studying traffic regulations. These subjects will be discussed next week.

Miss Mellen's classes have been making a study of the choice of household furnishings, such as silver, china, glassware, and general furnishings. Mary Wright brought in a white plate of German china, which was handed down to the fourth generation; making it about 100 years old. Margaret Marahens brought in a spoon and napkin ring set of silver and gold; and Dorothy Young brought in a card tray stand of antique pewter.

Students in the public speaking classes are giving humorous speeches. Also one person from each class will give a serious talk on court procedure, to prepare for a "trial" to be called in each class. These pupils are Tom Jaenicke, Victor Nussbaum, Jim Sweet, and Robert Henzel.

Shop Department Has Boom Year

New Teacher, Extra Projects, Additional Tools, And Repairs Make For Successful Term.

Additional equipment, a new teacher, repairs on old equipment, more students than ever before, extra class projects, and more regular projects than ever since the period change from two hours to one hour have combined to make the past year the most successful in the history of the industrial arts department.

The extra projects, begun last fall, are the combined work of all the students of the industrial arts classes. They include: a cabinet for that art room made up of individual lock drawers and constructed of maple wood, three cabinets for the mathematics department to hold the drawing boards used by the general math classes, and twenty-five other smaller pieces.

The new teacher, Mr. Stout, was hired because of the unusually crowded conditions of the classes. He teaches four morning classes daily.

The additions to the machinery are: a new lathe and a new routing machine for the woodworking department and two new metal lathes.

One woodturning lathe was re-wound and reconditioned.

190 Attend Meterites, Lettermen Joint Skate

The Meterite-Lettermen skating party, held Friday at Bell's rink, was attended by 190 students. Morgan Harrison, of the Lettermen's Club, and Velda Oppenlander, of the Meterites, were in general charge. Mary Virginia Fisher, Joan Bonsib, Ruth Bade, and Peggy Bacon won the attendance prizes, donated by Martha Washington Candies, Neumode Hosiery, Wayne Candies, Coca Cola, Morrow Nut House, Harrison Hill Drug Store, and Meyer Brothers Drug Company.

Although the crowd was not as large as had been expected, the party was quite successful. Each club made about ten dollars on the affair.

Marjorie Wehmeyer of Miss Miller's general history 2 class, period 3, gave a report on English government.

A report was given in Miss Miller's third period class on Alabama claims by Pat Russ.

Miss Miller's United States history 1 class, period 6, drew up a Bill of Rights for class use.

1935 Exhibit Depicted Three Hundredth Year Of Schools

"Tercentenary of the Secondary Schools" was the theme of last year's annual exhibit, held May 24, 1935. In case some of you may have forgotten, here's a little material on the subject that may freshen your memory.

The departmental exhibition and a series of episodes were the two divisions of the exhibit, which was under the general direction of Mr. A. Verne Flint.

Pageant Given

Miss Pauline Van Gorder was chairman of the pageant, which was given on a specially erected stage in the gymnasium. This was in four episodes. The first episode was "A Little Grammar School"—17th Century. It included eight boys from Miss Oppelt's Cicero class and had Mr. J. H. Chappell as an old-time teacher. It portrayed the methods used in teaching Latin at that time. Episode two represented the Benjamin Franklin Educational Academy. The cast for this included boys and girls from two English classes and featured Mr. Earl Serner as teacher of the academy.

Episode three, "A Friday Afternoon Recital" in the 19th Century pictured the days when manners were manners and oratory was oratory. The closing episode showed a day at South Side High School.

Miss Dorothy Benner acted as narrator for the whole pageant.

Because of the stage set up in the gym, departmental exhibits were displayed in the classrooms.

Latin display was in Room 30 and consisted of posters showing the contrast between the schools of ancient Rome and those of the present day, translations of Latin into English, and miscellaneous items.

Clubs, Times Office Lead Popularity Poll Of Archer Activities

Clubs, the Times office, and athletic teams were the leading answers given to an inquiring reporter who recently roamed the halls of our fair school and asked the students what they liked best about it.

As clubs came out on top when the votes were counted, he went further and asked the students why they liked the clubs best. The following is the "gist" of the answers given. Clubs are educational, without being boring or tiresome. They also afford enjoyable recreation. The Times Room is the next most popular thing in South Side. Coming in third place are the athletic teams. All are popular, but basketball and baseball lead.

Some of the students who weren't feeling very serious, as it was Friday afternoon when they were questioned, gave the following humorous answers. One timid little girl finally confessed that the thing she liked best was the lunch hour. Another serious-minded boy of whom we wouldn't have thought it, said that he liked the inclines best because he could run down them.

Pupils To Get Grades In New Way This Year

Will Report To Home Room Teachers 1:30 June 10 To Obtain Filled-In Cards.

By Norman Buck To enable home room teachers to have an accurate and a sure check on the grades of their students for the office files, a new system of teacher's grade records has been devised.

Senior and post graduate students, however, will receive their marks in the usual manner. They will take their U and S cards to their teachers during full-length classes next Friday.

On Tuesday, June 9, the last regular school day of the term, all non-graduating students will receive cards of a new type, one for each subject, from their home room teacher. These they will present to their instructors during the regular periods after filling out all the blanks except those for the teachers' signatures and grades.

Instructors will retain these cards, will enter the grades, and, instead of returning them to the students, will place them in the mail-boxes of the home room teachers by ten o'clock Wednesday morning. The home room instructors will then transfer the grades onto the regular cards and will keep these of the new type.

No classes will be held Wednesday. At 1:30, the students will assemble in home rooms to receive their usual cards, which, however, will already possess the grades.

Although the new system will entail a great amount of work on the part of instructors by necessitating the transfer of all the grades from one type of card to the other, it is hoped that this extra effort will be repaid by giving home room instructors accurate, permanent records of the students' work.

Job At Bowser Co. Is Given To Martha Baumgartner, Grad

Martha Baumgartner, a prominent graduate of the class of 1935, now holds a position in the sales promotion department of the S. F. Bowser company, as a result of her commercial training received in South Side. Hours are from 8:30 to 12:00 and 1:15 to 5:00. She says she enjoys her work and that her only desire is to become a bigger and better stenographer.

A day's duties may include several hours of dictation, followed by typing this material out in letter form, some work on the comptometer, and perhaps a little on the dictaphone. The general purpose of her department is to encourage better receipts from the salesmen and to promote good will among the customers. Martha comes into the picture by fulfilling every desire and carrying out every idea of her boss.

Wants Secretarial Job She believes that she has some chance for promotion by adapting herself to her work and constantly trying to improve herself. This might place her in a secretarial position under some higher executive in the company. She has some college ambitions, but they remain rather indefinite at the present time.

At South Side, she took the college preparatory course, with commercial electives. Her favorite, though hardest subject was shorthand. The easiest she considered to be health. Business English also holds a high place in her esteem. She believes every one should take this course while at South Side. Possibly the most helpful part of the course when adapted to actual office work, is practice with the comptometer, the dictaphone and study of the methods used by Mr. Murch in building up speed in typing and shorthand.

Martha believes that, if she were to take the course in South Side again, she would bear down a little harder on numbers on the typewriter, try to increase her typing speed, and make fewer spelling mistakes. To those still studying to be stenographers she gives timely advice in saying, "Get in all the outside work that you can, such as typing and dictaphone practice. Also try especially to take notice of every new rule learned in shorthand."

Eighteen Here Take Part In Play Given At Emmaus Church

Eighteen South Side students, members of the Avon Players of the Emmaus Lutheran Church, took part in a play, "Follow Thou Me," presented before an audience of 2,500 in the Concordia Concert Hall last Sunday night.

Two former South Siders, the Misses Helen Schaffer and Lorraine Myers, portrayed two important characters, the former, Elizabeth, Claudia's maid; the latter, Claudia herself, wife of Pontius Pilate.

Among South Siders who took part in the drama, Grace Collins portrayed a lame girl. Other students from here who had parts in the play are: Margaret Schuster as Beatrice, niece of Claudia; Betty Schultz as Miriam, a maid; Dorothy Franke, as the seeress; Beulah Horstmeier, as Princess Anna, a friend of Claudia; Oscar Eggers, a priest; and Eugene Berg, a roister.

Marcella Tieman, Paula Gerding, June Haeger, Geneva Scherrer, Marian Roehrs, Lois Wyneken, Mary Louise Lankenau, Elvira Coop, Gerry Dush, Helen Meyer, and Betty Hayden all were maids in waiting and added to the color of the presentation by their filmy white tunics draped with varied colors.

German Club Meets For Foster Park Picnic

The annual German Club picnic, the last meeting of the semester, was held Wednesday, May 20, at Foster Park. Short hikes were taken by some members before the picnic supper, which consisted of sandwiches, potato chips, pickles, olives, cookies, fudge, candy, ice cream bars, and coca cola.

The committee responsible for the picnic was composed of the club officers: Don Sparkman, president; Harriett Basford, vice-president; Elizabeth A. Neff, secretary; Betty Rison, treasurer; and Verma Holman, Inter-Club Congress representative.

Need Of Mathematics Is Seen Everywhere By Miss Fiedler

The following comment was written by Miss Adelaide Fiedler, head of the South Side mathematics department, to acquaint students and parents with the accomplishments of the department during the past school year:

"The department of mathematics aims to bring to its students the realization of the necessity for mathematics in their daily living by presenting such material and such conditions as will satisfy the interest, as well as the need and ability of the individual student.

"Not only are the students made conscious of the necessity for mathematics in the business world, but they are brought to the realization of the growing need for mathematics in all the sciences and of its existence in every profession.

Changes In Math Department

"Changes have been made in the department during the past eight years. For students who are not expecting to go on to college, 'Mathematics for Everyday Use' has been substituted for algebra 1 and 2. Necessary changes in the course of study in advanced mathematics have also been made to meet requirements in regard to a new ruling of the College Entrance Examination Board. According to the new plan, the board aims to examine candidates more comprehensively and efficiently; and the fitness of the candidate for college will thereby be measured more specifically.

"Many mathematics students have made enviable records in their college

Parents Welcomed By Miss Pittenger

Miss Martha Pittenger

"Again South Side teachers and pupils are happy to welcome parents and friends to our annual exhibit of work. The work on display has not been especially selected for this occasion, but is typical of our regular work. We hope that you have as much pleasure in looking at our work as we have had in preparing it.

"Many of the things that we do and activities that we take part in cannot be put on display, and we should like to take this opportunity to urge you to visit us at some time when we are doing regular work."

MARTHA M. PITTENGER.

work. Mr. Flint has said that, "The department of mathematics has a right to be proud of the success of its students who have accomplished fine records in colleges and universities.

"Among the institutions which have found our mathematics majors highly successful are Purdue, West Point, Annapolis, Yale, and the Massachusetts Institute of Technology.

"Many scholarships obtained by special examinations depend upon a thorough grounding in mathematics. South Side has its share of winners in these scholarship competitions."

For the past two years, Purdue tests have been given as final examinations in some of the classes in the department of mathematics. The final selections of candidates are now made on the basis of the results in these Purdue tests. Every year, the department has a small number of students who have unusual ability in this field; and it is to these that the department gives public recognition at the close of the year.

Hall Of Fame

This is the second in a series of articles about outstanding seniors.

Among our graduates is a certain gay, darkhaired vivacious lass known to the world as Miss Bernadette Dygert, but known by her friends as just "Beanie." After her arrival at South Side, she saw fit to enter the freshman speaking contest and was eloquent enough to win second place. When a sophomore, she placed second in the sophomore speech contest. "Beanie's" great interest in forensics gained for her a place on the Speakers' Bureau.

While still a sophomore, she was elected to the sophomore social council, which leads us to discuss her social accomplishments. She has been on the tea dance committee of the booster club. Besides these she has been a member of the Wranglers Club, rho, So-Si-Y, U. S. A., Lettergirls, Student Players, and the Times and Totem staffs. Because of her work on the last two, she has been appointed a member of the Quill and Scroll. She is a member of National Honor Society, and as a culmination of her high school career, was awarded a $200 scholarship to Western University.

A five-jeweled gold "S," the highest given at the recent Wranglers banquet, was given to a senior for outstanding work done in public speaking during his high school career. Manuel Rothberg was the little boy who received this award, and his ability in this line of work makes him outstanding among other students. This ability has led him to the finish in many speaking contests. In a recent extemp contest he placed first and will be one of the representatives to the city-wide extemp. He also placed second in an oratorical contest given by the Woman's Club, and third place was given him in a state oratorical contest. He

South Side's Upperclassmen Favor Ivy Planting Tradition

The ivy planting ceremonies of the junior and senior classes started this year a tradition in our school which, in the opinion of most South Siders, is something to be remembered for many years.

Giving their opinion of this idea, students expressed the following views:

Marjorie Hower—It is really emblematic of the progress which juniors and seniors wish to make through life. Harold Reinking—It is a good idea to appoint a queen each year. Dorothy Scheele—My great-great-grandchildren will appreciate it very much. Maria Haven—I think it is a grand idea.

Miss Shoup—The students' school life will be more interesting, that is if they take a real interest in it. Maxine Roth—It was very solemn and worth-while, especially for seniors who are leaving some memories behind them.

Homer Miller—It's all right if the darn stuff grows.

Louise Owens—It was swell; I hope they have it every year.

Miss Paxton—I think it was lovely,

In Mr. Hull's room, students demonstrated experiments required in the course.

Miss Dochterman's room was a main attraction of the evening. Approximately 2,030 people passed through the art room. Individual work such as free brush lettering, water color, heads, and costume design was on display. Students demonstrated during the exhibit.

"Time Marches On," School's First White Totem Is Published

The first white Totem ever to be published appeared last Monday afternoon, when the first books were distributed to students.

"Times Marches On," the theme of the book, is carried out in its seven sections.

Among features in the first section are brown-tinted pictures of the school, most of which were taken by Sheldon Hine, local amateur photographer.

Faculty and individual senior pictures compose parts two and three. Group and individual pictures of underclassmen and stories on their activities are to be found in part four.

The fifth division consists of club pictures and stories and snapshots of high spots in the past school year's calendar.

Athletic groups, such as football, track, and basketball teams, are treated in the sixth division.

The seventh and last section is composed of humorous snapshots, and the last page is reserved for autographs.

Election of officers for next semester will be the feature of the Wo-Ho-Ma business meeting this afternoon in the Greeley Room. In the social meeting, Miss Pearl Rehorst, club adviser, will demonstrate her work in Italian hem-stitching.

Eric Beyer: International.
Bon Silene Craig: Lutheran Hospital.
Dorothy Durbin: De Pauw.
Marian Patterson: I hope to go to Purdue.
Myron Jones: Miami College.

Final Exercises For Seniors To Take Place Wednesday At 8 P. M. In Gymnasium.

Merle J. Abbott To Give Awards

Sybil Knudson, Ann Abbott, And Manuel Rothberg Are To Speak At Ceremonies.

Leading their class, Bryce Minier, valedictorian, and Eric Beyer, salutatorian, will begin the annual commencement exercises in the gymnasium next Wednesday at 8 p. m. by heading the procession of seniors.

The program was announced Wednesday by R. Nelson Snider, principal.

At the exercises the graduates will receive their diplomas and outstanding members will be honored.

Graduating Seniors Speak

Jim Ellenwood, prominent senior athlete and public speaker, will give the invocation to the class.

Graduating seniors, who will also present a part of the program, are Sybil Knudson, Ann Abbott, and Manuel Rothberg. They will speak on "The Seven Cardinal Principles of Education." Miss Dorothy Benner, public speaking instructor, has charge of this part of the program.

Sybil, who will give the introduction and the statement of primary principles, is a member of the honor debate team of 1936. She was toastmistress of the annual Wranglers' Banquet, speaker at the weekly meeting of the Exchange Club on the subject, "Humane Society Week," and a finalist in two extemporaneous contests. Sybil is also a member of many clubs and is credit manager of the Times.

Ann Abbott is a prominent speaker and a member of the 1935 honor debate team. She served as general manager of the South Side Times and is a member of the National Honor Society.

Rothberg To Conclude

A five-jeweled gold "S" was recently presented to the third speaker, Manuel Rothberg, who will conclude the discussion of the seven principles. Manuel has also won extemporaneous contests, represented the school in the city-wide extemporaneous contest, won second place in the Woman's Club oratorical contest, and took third in a state contest. He has also served as president of Social Science Club and once worked on the Times as business manager.

Mr. Merle J. Abbott, superintendent of Fort Wayne public schools, will address the graduating seniors and will present two awards: the Kiwanis medal, presented by the Kiwanis Club, to the boy most outstanding in good citizenship, character, conduct, initiative, and moral standing; and the $50 scholarship of the Business and Professional Woman's Club to an outstanding girl. John Bremer and Ursula Morton were the winners of these awards in 1935. Another speaker will be named later.

The music department orchestra, directed by Mr. Jack Wainwright, will offer "Jeanne d'Arc" from the opera of that name. Senior members will take their seats at the close of the overture.

Last year graduation exercises were held at North Side with the seniors of all the public high schools participating.

Did you tote home a Totem?

Advice to freshmen: the sophomore is just a freshman one year ahead of you.
To sophomores: we were only fooling.

As a post-humorous clean-up week project for Recognition Day tomorrow it has been suggested that a lot of the faculty members wash their glasses, so that recognition of the students will be possible.

Self-Confidence Is A Blessing—When Not Carried To Extremes

Self-confidence is one of the characteristics most essential to a person's success and yet one of the most rare qualities of human nature. Those who succeed must always have it; those who fail very often are the ones that lack confidence in themselves. You cannot accomplish anything if you are in constant fear of failing to do anything; you must go at it with the idea that there is no chance of failure.

However, there is a great difference between self-confidence and conceit; for one helps you, and the other hinders you. Conceit is exhibiting your self-confidence to others to such a degree as to make you unpleasant company or form enemies for yourself. A person's ego is a very difficult thing to control; but its proper adjustment is what makes you a likeable person or an unpleasant person, a person with friends or with enemies, a success or a failure!

How About Higher Education For Auto Drivers?

Should safety and safe driving be taught in high school? Should instructions in the principles of driving safely be taught in a high school class? Should a unit of instruction in safety be required for graduation? Why not?

The beginning driver is usually a person of high school age and should be taught a few principles in safety and responsibility along with his first driving lessons. Therefore, it is in high school that safety training should begin.

Elementary schools have done their part in safety by teaching safe pedestrianism through the institution of the safety patrol.

The plausibility of the idea is by no means out of reach. The National Safety Council would gladly contribute any sort of literature pertaining to safety, such as facts and statistics on safety and the prevention of accidents and cars would not be hard to procure. The cost of a few hours' instruction to every high school pupil would be well worth while if it cut by any small percent the large yearly toll of injuries and loss of life caused by ignorance of safety rules and precautions and lack of safety instruction.

When You Go Away This Summer, Don't Forget To Send A Post Card

Summer is here and our look-forward-to vacation is nearing. The parting of the ways of the students and faculty will soon come; and the next meeting will not occur until three months of vacation have slipped by. Some of us will spend our summers near our homes, while others may have opportunities to go on trips. The lakes, beaches, and parks offer us an attractive way of spending our vacations. Textbooks and notebooks will be closed, pencils and pens put away; and all things concerned with school and school affairs will probably be forgotten by all of us.

Although such things will be forgotten, we should by all means remember our teachers and friends during the months of vacation. It will be an easy matter for those of us who go away on trips to send a postcard to the rest back home.

Mr. Snider has a map of the United States, which he uses to record the places people are when they mail their postcard to him. Last summer he received cards from places all over the country, and he wishes to have an even bigger list than last year's. Incidentally, the long distance record may be broken this summer. So, don't forget your teachers and friends, but send them cards from the places you go.

Carrying On

With Lou Closs

Dear Aunt Esmeralda:

Ain't it bin a long time since I writ to you? Is Uncle Zeke still batching in the "hen house," or has he moved back to Grandpappy's?

School has sure bin exciting this past week. We had quite a surprise whin we was told that Ginny Gross gave Dick Mobson the air. Now she has bin keepin' company with that there Mace feller from North Side. Sally Rea and Steger hain't bin keeping regular company here o' late. Most nigh everybody's talkin'. Seems if Art Scott are already in the waiting line.

That there little Jimmie Sweet had better wash his ears oftener—his teachers is thinkin' that he is gettin' hard of hearin'. That young Korte upstart and that black haired gal of hisin' sure have a system; if she's mad of him she puts his pin in the mail-box and he doesn't be acomin' in, if the mail-box is empty why he knows all's well. By crackie, Esmeralda, why don't you try that with Ezra sometime?

Nobody in these parts knows what to make of this McAlister-Foster affair. That boy sure has got a mind of his own, so I suppose they will be sittin' hitched up some of these days...I tell you, one never knows what these youngones is a gonner do....That their proxide blond Durbin girl thinks she is going to be another one of them Walter Winchell people...flash...she tried to find out about the private love life of Norman Buck; after putting a post card together she found it was from Bryce Minier...and did she feel like throwin' orchids around?

Johnny Dolan and Janet Fisher have bin doing right well every since that their kid dance...they make a right smart couple. We had one of them runnin' meets out there on those cinders at North Side; and when that Kruse kid, Bill I mean, saw Dorothy Crabill at the finish line, he just picked up his feet and started runnin' faster tha never. He's pretty sweet on her.

We had a verse contest down here t'other nite and Bill Schafer up and walks off with the first prize. These is the poems he writ:

"Have you seen my dog, Rover?"

"No, what's his name?"

"Who?"

"Your dog, Rover."

"Say, I ain't got no dog Rover."

"I drove past your house last nite."

"Why didn't you come in?"

"Why, I didn't know you lived there."

"I saw you go by."

"How come you didn't ask me in?"

"I didn't know it was you."

Well Esmeralda, they's things I got to be attending to, so I'll see you at the Sunday-school picnic.

Love, Lou.

On Giving Advice

Advice is very plentiful. It can be obtained from almost any of our own species. The giver only needs a sprinkling of gray matter if he has plenty of free air, buoyed up with an overdose of vanity. Very seldom is advice costly to obtain, but you may lose a fortune if you take too much stock in it.

Advice comes in packages of all shapes and sizes. Some of it may come in the smallest of quantities, but every word will be worth a pot of gold. Again, it may be the bulky, watery kind, which, by the time your mental distillery has finished working on it, doesn't have enough spirits remaining to stimulate your little finger.

I don't know who first started giving advice, but it just runs through my mind that it was some of Adam's close relation. As for Adam himself, I've always felt rather disappointed that I wasn't there to warn him against the wiles of the fairer sex. Yes—and there was Old King Sol, too. They say he was a wise old fellow; but I'm not so sure but what, if I could have had a brief interview with him, I could have soon convinced him that monogamous marriage was the better kind.

I admit that I'm slightly infected with this habit of trying to impart bits of my precious wisdom on my unfortunate fellow creatures. The field which seems to interest me most is that concerning the problems of the heart. I can't give any plausible explanation of it either, for I have had very little personal experience in that line. Nevertheless, I have seldom found my brain lacking of some effective remedy for every case that has come to my attention. In fact, I'm not so sure that my lack of experience isn't a big asset to me. Otherwise, maybe I wouldn't be just quite so optimistic concerning the consistency and the genuine working-power of my marvelous plans.

However, just recently I've been wondering if I wasn't just a second John Alden and if it wouldn't pay me better to try out some of these plans myself. The only reason that keeps me from committing myself is the thought that maybe one of them might work. Then I'm afraid I might have to take a little advice myself.

Now, strange to say, there isn't anything much more distasteful to me than taking a little advice, so I imagine I would do well to avoid anything that might lead to such complications. However, I am always ready to give a boost to anyone else, when the opportunity presents itself.

I guess I'm just a typical adviser.

STATEMENT FOR THE PRESS

"Oh, you guys are reporters eh? Well, come right in, boys! all reporters are my friends. You've got the right fella, okay. I'm the manager of One-Blow Brown, the fighter that—Now, he's able to swing more; but that's all he needs to knock out his opponent, see?"

"And listen, boys; he's a sensation; he will have the world at his feet; he will knock 'em cold...No, I don't mean that he will knock the world cold. He will just have the spectators all hot and bothered about the way he can swing them mitts...You guys is disgustin'. Sure, I said that he'd have 'em all hot and bothered! That's the same as knockin' 'em cold, ain't it? Er, that is, it means the same. Er—to the heck with you guys! you don't know the difference anyway."

"And, as I was sayin', Brown is really a he-man, he's a two-fisted fighter of...Yeh, yeh, I know all fighters are two-fisted."

"Well, for a little bit of news about Brown's training, you can say that he's been chasin' his sparrin' partners all around the ring lately and...Sure, I know he was knocked out three times yesterday; but that don't make no difference in what I state for the press, does it? Well, anyway you won't be lying when you say that Brown has spent a quiet day in bed restin' for the fight. He was knocked out this morning, and he's been layin' there ever since. I fooled you reporters that time! Pretty smart, ain't I?"

(Note: At this point the writer was knocked out.—Ed.)

* Don't Mention It *

Nothing, in our opinion, could be less calculated to help the poor fellow with pimples than the advertisements of the Fleishman Yeast Company.

The yeast people call themselves our friends, yet the yeast trust sells its goods on the worst possible advertising appeal: fear, fear of inferiority. The paternalistic trust has but one motive: to sell a product that, chemistry tells us, ferments to make grain alcohol and carbon dioxide.

You can get these two ingredients in any Scotch and soda.

High school youth, in its effort to appear grown-up, often makes itself absurd. Most any company with something for sale can make a killing if it can persuade poor innocents that others are "doing it."

Some of the most pernicious pests who walk this earth smudge the names of their companies by trying to high-pressure young people. It is no credit to a company to shove something in its customers' faces. It is simply rotten salesmanship.

Parting advice to a departing lad: "Now remember, Jerry, to always scramble the eggs in your egg sandwiches."

Catch? Think awhile and it may burst upon you.

Parting advice from a departing senior, garnered from four years' education: Don't call up people while they are taking baths. If you would sleep well, shave—so you won't scratch your chest. If you would have curly hair, gals, go with Warren Zelt and listen to his torrid colloquialisms. Don't take anyone's advice. Be a good girl—like Rosemary Chappell. If you would be popular, never drop gum on the dance floor or unscrew salt shaker lids. Also, never dance together, gals, on double dates! No matter what they say, lads, never make a threesome in which the ratio is: boys, 2; girls, 1. Don't go stag to anything but kid affairs. If you would go steady, be sure to argue once in a while. To test your guy's bravery, see if he or she will be the first one on the dance floor. Do unto others as others do unto you is a swell comeback for dirty cracks. Don't yawn; sophisticated people don't. They go to sleep.

Goodbye forever.

• Our Gift From Rome •

The name of the month of June is derived from the name of the goddess, Juno, who was not only Jupiter's sister, but his wife as well. Juno was the goddess who watched over the welfare of women and of wives in particular. Could this be why there are so many weddings in June?

CURRENT COMMENT

By Margaret Gross

Roller Skates—Yes; Telephone—No.
Fort Wayne's Iren Men
How To Get Religion

QUIETUDE—Paul Sullivan, well-known news commentator of the Crosley Radio Corporation, WLW to you, despises telephones and will not have one of the "nuisances" in his Cincinnati home. As a result, when the office wants to call him, word must be sent by telegram.

After receiving one of these frequent telegrams, he straps on his roller skates and starts toward his office. Roller skating is Mr. Sullivan's usual way of getting to his office, when the weather permits. The news commentator says that the reason for his unusual mode of transportation is his need for exercise; but no one has ever seen him skate home. He lives at the top of a hill.

BONNETS—Germany may have her Stahlhelm (or Steel Helmets), one of the organizations which have had prominence in news from Germany in recent years; but Fort Wayne has in her official family a Steel Hat and an Iron Hat. The former, in the person of John C. Stahlhut, is chief of the Fire Department. The latter, George Eisenhut, is Chief of Police. Fortunately neither of our local officials have shown an inclination to be so warlike as the actual wearers of metallic millinery beyond the Rhine; but both are known to show some steel-like qualities in their professional capacities—Chief Stahlhut is fighting fires, Chief Eisenhut is going after criminals.

TORTURE—An annual ceremonial, the Feast of Thipusum, was recently held in Singapore. A group of Hindoos came slowly down the street with one of their own people in the midst, carrying on a form of penance. He wore only white trousers and a string of large wooden beads around his neck. A huge wooden structure adorned the upper part of his body.

This structure supported spears, whose sharp ends were thrust into the body of the man. Small needles were stuck in his shoulders and upper arms. A peculiar device also held his tongue half-way out of his mouth while sharp-pointed instruments penetrated both sides of his face at the root of his tongue. While parading, the man gave no visible sign of bodily pain; and, after the ceremony, the worshipper was given a mouthful of lime juice and he seemed none the worse for his experience.

Waggin' Tongues

Good news! This is the last dirt column that we will ever write for the good old South Side Times. Good news, perhaps, for you; but a very sad occasion for us.

It is interesting to look back at all the romances that have taken place during the last four years. Perhaps one of the best known romances was Vera Ellinger and Jim Menefee. Gwen Horn and Bob Willson had another one of the first romances. Stoner and North have something to be proud of. Their romance has withstood the test of four years.

Sally Rea and Dave Seger's little romance was certainly little. Sally is too young to go steady, Dave. You ought to know that.

We have been informed that Doris Hire is being kept awake nights because of a certain Melvin Bates. If you would admit this to everyone, Doris, maybe you could get some sleep. Confession is good for the soul, so we are told, anyway.

The next couple we expect to see get hooked up is Bob Locke and Mary Louise Helms. He has been trying to get up enough nerve to ask her, but he is such a bashful lad. What about Joan, Bob?

Roy Orr intends to go out for track next year, and so, in order to keep in practice, he is beating a new path to 452 Eckart Street to see Marjorie Bowser. It is certainly a good thing that track is the only thing that he has in mind, because his trips over there for any other purpose would certainly be in vain. Too bad, too bad.

Vera Ellinger is in love all over again with Dick Larimore. This little romance was burning brightly a year ago, and then the flame died to the dismay of us all. But maybe a gust of wind or more likely a gust of spring came along and now the flame is all aglow.

"The Mail Man Passes My Door" ought to be the theme of Bernie Springer, because she is still watching the mail man pass her door.

We hear that Anita Catlett is planning some form of revenge for us for giving her a little publicity. Now Anita, you know that we printed the truth, and a little publicity is good for anyone. What's more, it brought results, didn't it?

Many people seem to be worried about Bernadine Mitchel. A certain person wishes that she would make up her mind between Bert, Carl, or Jerry. My, it must be great to have such a wide variety to choose from.

We have been requested to ask you readers whose watch is adorning the dilly white wrist of Dolores Miller. My, oh my!

Hall Of Fame

In a few days the seniors will be leaving our portals, but the memory of their work will linger for many years. A most lasting way of preserving these memories is through the Totem. When we think of yearbooks we automatically think of Louis Bonish. For one whole year, Louie has spent most of his time preparing the 1936 Totem. Journalism figured prominently in this senior's high school career; he is a former Times general manager; a member of 1500 Club, winner of a national advertising contest, and a member of Quill and Scroll.

However, his activities were by no means confined to journalism. Louie placed third in an extemp contest, received a Math-Science honor award, and was a member of the band, orchestra, Wranglers, and National Honor Society.

Our next candidate is a tall, blond girl who is called "Marty" by her associates and who deserves the title of one of Fort Wayne's talented young women. Mary Martha Hobrock is not only talented but has used this talent to an advantage. She has been a faithful Totem worker, president of Meterites, German treasurer, secretary of U. S. A., and a member of Art and Marionette clubs, and the Times, and a member of Junior Math and Math-Science.

"Marty" won a letter for participation in girls sports; and as a member of Student Players Club, she took a part in the senior play.

Lovely To Look At

By Dorothy Douglas

What are you going to take up this summer in the way of sports—tennis, swimming, golfing, horseback riding, bicycling, or cruising? At any rate, whichever ones you do choose to indulge in, dress comfortably and appropriately for that particular sport.

If you aspire to be a second Helen Willis Moody, you'd be much more likely to succeed if you would wear a smart pair of shorts with a matching bandana. Mervyn Bohne really does things on a tennis court in her blue pleated shorts and white bandana with a large blue anchor cleverly attached on the front. Betty Meigs also likes shorts for tennis attire. Hers are brown with white stripes and large white buttons on either side. She wears brown and white sweaters with her shorts. If you are the more conservative type and feel just a little risqué in shorts, perhaps a pair of soft brown slacks worn with a yellow jersey, an outfit similar to Max Borchert's, would appeal to you.

Perhaps you think shorts and slacks are too "tom-boyish." If so, why not try the new Culottes? They combine the best features of skirts, or sport dresses, and shorts without arousing the disapproval of your elders and making you feel just a little "exposed." Mildred Foellinger wears a red culotte which closely resembles a smart tailored sport dress with a flared skirt. The waist has lapels forming a V-shaped neckline, with buttons from the lapels to the waist. Joan Bonish also prefers culottes, hers being dark blue with white rick-rack pockets and a red jersey sweater. Culottes are "quite the thing" for golf, as well as for tennis. However, skirts and sweaters, and sports dresses with sun-tan backs are more commonly worn on the courses. Dorothy Durbin and Peppy Wermuth, who are ardent golf fans, play in backless sport clothes.

Those planning on learning to ride horseback will lessen the misery of their first few lessons by wearing jodphurs, as they are the coolest and most comfortable attire for this sport. Slacks, too, can be worn; but one is apt to come home with sorely bruised ankles from the stirrup without the protection jodphur boots afford. Regular riding boots and trousers are giving way more and more to jodphurs because they are much cooler for summer wear.

When you make your initial dive into the cool blue waters this summer, what could be more pleasing than to make it in one of the new shimmering, seashell suits? The person who said "There'll be a lot of girl worn on the beach this summer," was quite correct; there will be.

Shoes and Ships

EXHIBITING REMARKS—The Scotch dance: knee action....a definite need at all times: hot dog stands in the halls....park plan dancing: park your foot on someone else's.

STRAIGHT LINES—We've heard of bars in a jail. We've watched these "he-men" athletes strut their stuff with bars on their arms. We've watched gymnasts perform on the bars. Even lawyers are on a bar. Now musicians demand that they be permitted to eat bars (candy) between bars. Oh heavens, when shall we cross the last bar?

EYE GLASSES—Spectacles always come in pairs. Among those pairing off for the Senior Dance are: Louise Closs and Norman Buck, Dorothy Crabill and Bill Wilson, Jean Bollman (who do you think), and Joan Bonish and Ben Woodhull.

RECUPERATION—South Side is once more recovering from the annual exhibit. The Times room is beginning to look natural again. The janitors are resting after their strenuous efforts to keep the school clean at least until after the exhibit. Students are gradually losing that shadowed and harassed look gained by staying up until the wee hours of the morning making note books, so Mom and Pop would see what they have been doing all term.

OBITUARY—We wish to express our sincere sympathies to the relatives of Dick Helm, who has departed to the land where columnists forget how to pun. Ye olde scribe succumbed after swallowing the orchid thrown to him by "Don't Mention It" in last week's issue.

DREAMS AND NIGHTMARES—Maxine Rippe and Bob Robinson doing their famous swan dive on the dance floor....Bill Bonish modestly accepting congratulations and praise on the fine Totem....the first two exhibit skaters "losing their bearing"...teachers praising Willie in front of Mom and Pop and giving him an eighth the next day....Max Mariotte sitting on the library floor playing "hotcha" rhythm on the portable phonograph.

Two Hundred See Marionette's Play

"Chu Chin Chow," Arabian Night's Tale, Given In Greeley Room Seventh Period Friday.

Two hundred students attended the performance of "Chu Chin Chow," an adaptation of the Arabian Nights tale, "Ali Baba and the Forty Thieves," given Friday afternoon during the seventh period in the Greeley Room.

Officers of the club, who had charge of the production, are president, Kenneth Scott; vice-president, Norman Budde; and secretary-treasurer, Dorcen Russell. Miss Dorothy A. Magley, club adviser, aided in the coaching of the players and in the making of the puppets for the production.

Members who took parts in the play are: Kenneth Scott, who played the role of Ali Baba and the spy; Eliza Bess Lucas, who manipulated the puppet Margiana, heroine of the story; Tom Sellers, who played Abdullah and the robber chief; Norman Budde, Kasim; Lorraine Meyer, Kasim's wife; and Helen Faux, the little tailor.

There were three separate changes of scenery on the newly-constructed stage, each designed and constructed by Kenneth Scott, Norman Budde, and Tom Sellers. Colorful backdrops and lighting effects completed the scenery. Marionettes used in this production showed a remarkable improvement over the ones used in last year's show, "The Christmas Carol," Miss Magley said. Construction of the puppets was under the direction of Lillian Sherbondy and Norman Budde.

Laverne Boyce, assisted by Janice Dyer, Dorcen Russell, and Ruth Eyleneberg, had charge of the designing and making of the elaborate costumes used in the play. Tom Sellers directed the stringing of the marionettes. He was assisted in his work by Violet Garton, Janice Dyer, and Ruth Eyleneberg.

The presentation of "Chu Chin Chow" marks the completion of the third year of Marionette Club's existence.

Cello Soloist Finds South Side Students Are Most Attentive

"Mr. Wainwright's band and orchestra are very excellent, and I especially noticed the attentiveness of the South Side students. I think the school is a very fine one and it gives the pupils many opportunities that other schools cannot afford." These were the statements given by Wynn von Cronk, concert cellist, the last assembly, when he was asked what he thought of our school.

Mr. von Cronk's first study was made of the violin; but desiring an instrument with a deeper and mellower tone, he chose the cello with which to make his debut. He has spent the past eight years of study on the instrument and in this time has done much to perfect his technique. He has studied under such famous artists as Paul Beebe of Berlin, Hans Hess of Chicago, Philipp Abbas of Detroit, and Alexander Shuster of Michigan State University. He has been much influenced and encouraged by his mother, who is also a musician and his accompanist on his concert tours.

Mr. von Cronk is now studying at the Western State University at Kalamazoo, where he is taking a public music course. When he finishes, he will accept a position as a music teacher in the public schools and continue his musical career from that standpoint. Although going to school and carrying a difficult schedule, he manages to teach a limited number of pupils, practice two hours a day, and participate in the Kalamazoo Symphony orchestra.

Seven International College Graduates Are Archer Alumni

Seven students in the monthly class graduated Friday from International College of Fort Wayne represented South Side. Former Archers are: Arthur Maxham, Mildred Hoerner, Berneta McIntosh, Doris Kridel, Marguerite Blue, Eleanor Cupp, and Virginia Ahern.

The class, consisting of ninety-four graduates, is one of the largest in the history of the school. Commencement exercises were held in the assembly room of the college, with the Rev. Benjamin Cain of Rochester, Indiana, superintendent of the St. Joseph Conference of the United Brethren Church, giving the address. Professor J. C. Tritch, principal, awarded the diplomas.

UP AND DOWN OUR INCLINES

Mr. Parks' bookkeeping 3 classes are spending the last three weeks of school studying corporation bookkeeping. His bookkeeping 2 classes are spending the remainder of the term studying partnership.

Miss Magley's English 6 classes are planning to give a contemporary play June 8. Committees were chosen to select the plays, and the casts will be composed of members of the classes.

Marvin Schlegler made a colored poster of "The Piper" for Miss Hemmer's English exhibit. Some interesting material about clocks has also been made.

Mr. Flint's sixth period general math 1 class is studying indirect measurements by means of scale drawings and tangent ratios.

Pupils in Miss Rinehart's English 6 class have been writing short poems and essays.

Betty Pugh made the highest grade, 98 percent, on the last 10A Latin test given in Miss Woodward's class.

Robert Tapping, home room chairman, gave a talk on Memorial Day in room 90, Friday. Graduating seniors of that room also told what they had received from high school or what they would do differently if they were freshmen again this week.

Best grades were made by the following in a recent test given on atmosphere, weather, and climate by Mr. Whelan to his physical geography students—first period: Harry Ertel, 96; Oscar Milton, 94; third period, Robert Fry, 98; Virginia Zeig, 94; Chris Cruckley, 94; Ruth Kimball, 96; fourth period, Sylvester Jones, 98; sixth period, Ruth Fowler, 100; Jane Wornington, 94; seventh period, Don Wharten, 98.

Miss Perkins' first period French class has finished its study of "Le Voyage de M. Perrichon" and has taken a brief test on it.

In a commercial law test given to one hundred pupils in Mr. Furst's classes, Ned Alexander made 92; John Allen, 92; Phyllis Barrows, 94; Virginia Fathauer, 96; Rowena Bevington, 96; Eric Beyer, 96; John Brown, 93; Dick Morten, 95; Ruth Reitz, 99; Roger Seemeyer, 94; Virginia Zeig, 96; Donald Rinker, 96; and Jeanette Braun, 91.

Miss Smeltz is returning maps, charts, and notebooks to her general history 1 and 2 classes.

Members of Mr. Flint's seventh period general math 2 class have been studying a special chapter on algebra in their text books.

Parties, Picnics, Wienies Lead Archers A Jolly Life Since Fall

By June Haeger

New clubs, parties, picnics, dances, wiener bakes, skating parties, and other social affairs in quick succession have added variety to Archers' enjoyment over the past school year. Some clubs have sponsored some very new and very outstanding projects.

Others have merely continued their club traditions in a lovelier manner.

R. Nelson Snider, principal, was the main speaker at the general session of the second Indiana District Sunshine Convention Saturday, October 5, at South Side. The invocation was given by the Rev. Reno Tacoma, pastor of the Emmanuel Baptist Church. Mr. Paul White, principal of New Haven High School, Miss Martha Pittenger, Mr. Snider, and Mayor Harry Baals extended greetings to delegates. Luncheon for delegates was served in the cafeteria after the morning sessions. Afternoon entertainment was a skit by the New Haven Club and the South Side Peru football game. A convention at South Side was a very new project introduced by a club.

Lettermen's Banquet

For the first time in the history of South Side, December 5, 1935, a banquet to which the lettermen and outstanding athletes of Central, North Side, Central Catholic, and South Side were invited was sponsored by the Lettermen's Club of South Side. Noble Kizer, famed coach of football at Purdue, was present at the banquet.

The Social Science Club of South Side opened a magazine subscription campaign Friday, March 27. In this campaign, club members obtained enough money for the down payment on a talking picture machine for the school. Teams in the campaign were the Army and the Navy. Miss Dorothy Benner was "Admiral" of the Navy, and Mr. Wilburn Wilson, adviser of the Social Science Club, acted as "General" of the Army. This talking machine is the first one ever had at South Side.

Gym Exhibit Held
Travel Club, the Red Cross chapter of South Side, answered to the Red Cross distress call from the eastern flooded area by sending out girls, dressed as Red Cross nurses, to collect contributions from the South Side students.

Delivan Parks Gives Bells To Music Unit

Mr. Delivan Parks, commercial teacher, has donated a set of musical bells to the music department. They are an octave and a half in length with the natural keys on the same level as the flats. The facts that they are table size, and that they are ideal for band and orchestra purposes, increases their value to the department. "The gift is greatly appreciated," Mr. Wainwright says, "because it will add much color to the concerts."

Students May Eat In School Cafe At Rock-Bottom Cost

By Lois Wyneken

Perhaps there is no part of South Side High School other than its cafeteria that should be one of the school's friendly and serviceable "home spots." And that just is what the cafeteria staff strives to make it. The cafeteria is the school's dining room and it is run on a non-profit basis. Its purpose is to accommodate those pupils and teachers who cannot go home for lunch, and second, to help carry out social entertainment for school organizations and clubs.

However, the staff is glad to welcome any school patrons at any time they may care to visit the cafeteria.

The members of the staff this year are: Miss Lucy Mellen, director; Mrs. Nettie Mercer, Mrs. H. Bitner, and Mrs. Lucy Stucky, kitchen staff; and the following students' service staff: Jeanette James, Virginia Walling, Betty Jean Calkins, Eileen Byer, Wilson Byer, Irma O'Brien, Mattie Lou Coats, Virginia Funderburg, Maxine Ormiston, Neta Davis, Ava Ewing, Evelyn Klingenberg, Harold Sanders, Ralph Ahlersmeyers, and Gordon Emerich.

This term there have been approximately 184,000 counter customers served; and in addition, 144 to 150 customers were served each day at the sandwich stand.

Social events which the cafeteria have aided this year are: faculty picnic, junior class banquet, boys' athletic dinner, Rotary Club Luncheon, and the sophomore class party.

The dining room is open period 4 to those students who bring lunches from home; of these, some are accommodated who like to have a hot dish to accompany their home lunch. During period 5, all who wish may come to the cafeteria for lunch.

Food prices in our cafeteria are kept the lowest possible to meet current market prices. Prices are as low, or lower in some cases, than in high school cafeterias in cities the same size as Fort Wayne. These average prices are: soup, 5 cents; vegetables, 5 to 6 cents; sandwiches, 3 to 5 cents; salads, 5 to 7 cents; desserts, 5 to 6 cents; butter, 2 cents; bread, 1 cent; and meats, 7 to 12 cents.

Menus are scientifically balanced and offer all variety possible. Our dining room is a pleasant place in which to eat, as it is clean, offers wholesome food, and pupils generally conduct themselves mannerly.

Latin Club Gives Lead To Rosemary Lehman

Rosemary Lehman was elected president of Latin Club at the semester's final meeting Friday; and Betty Gross was elected vice-president; Betty Jeanne Bond, secretary-treasurer; and Mae Persing, Inter-Club Congress representative.

A potluck was held in the cafeteria after the business meeting. The committee in charge of preparations contained Betty Jeanne Bond, chairman; Constance Haag, Betty Gross, Maxine Rippe, and Henry Velkoff.

Mrs. Null Submits Low Down On English Instructor Husband

"He is rather impatient to wait for people; when he wants to go, he wants to go," thus speaks Mrs. Benjamin Null of her husband, Benjamin Null, head of South Side's English department.

"My husband is very easy to cook for; and, although he eats moderately, he is ready, yes, eager for mealtime."

Mr. Null was born in Sommerville, Gibson County, Indiana, and Tipton, Indiana, was the scene of Mrs. Null's childhood. Mr. and Mrs. Null attended Indiana University, although Mrs. Null quit school one year before graduation. Mr. Null attended DePauw one year before he went to Indiana University.

Both Like English

Mr. and Mrs. Null both like the subject of English. Mrs. Null started to major in English before her marriage; Mr. Null, though majoring in English, had seriously thought of majoring in Latin.

Mr. Null's favorite pastime is to repair antique furniture of the Early American type. A room at the Null cottage at Lake Oliver has been made over into a repair room, where he collects and repairs the antiques. Also, Mr. Null works at the Wainwright Camps in the summer, helping out with the office work in the enrolling.

Three children comprise the Null family. Katherine married Omer Wright, a South Side graduate, and they now reside at Chicago. Robert, who is majoring in chemical engineering, will graduate this year from Purdue University. Margaret is a freshman here at South Side.

Mr. Null is not inclined to argue about any subject with his children or his wife, she says.

Interested In Music

Mr. Null plays musical instruments quite a bit. He was interested in music in his childhood, but never had an opportunity to study music. After his marriage, he took up flute playing, and cultivated this musical talent. He

The final meeting of the Math-Science Club, a picnic, will be held at Foster Park Friday. Club members are to meet at the large pavilion at the park at half past four. Miss Hodgson, Miss Fiedler, Mr. Gould, and Mr. Whelan will attend the affair.

Games will include volleyball, tennis, and a treasure hunt, all in charge of Margaret Crankshaw.

The picnic menu, which is in charge of Margaret Ruhl, Marjorie Ruhl, and Dorothy Newell, will consist of olives, pickles, potato chips, potato salad, fruit salad, meat loaf, baked beans, cake, cookies, ice cream, and iced lemonade. Each person is asked to bring four sandwiches. The entire picnic will be carried on by the club officers and advisers.

Emily Gardner, '35, Receives Job From Insurance Company

Emily Gardner, '35, former commercial student, has been rewarded for her commercial interests and study in South Side with a position in the office of the re-insurance department of the Lincoln Life Insurance company.

She reports that her business duties are varied but finds them all very interesting and to her liking. Her hours at the office are from 7:45 a. m. to 4:30 p. m., with one hour and forty-five minutes for lunch.

Emily took the regular course of shorthand and typing, but majored in the College Preparatory Course. Among all her subjects, she considered chemistry most difficult. Her inclinations were apparent in English. To aid commercial students, she offers the suggestion and opinion that the hardest part in the whole course was the ability to control the numerical part of the typewriter keyboard. She also adds that it is very important in practical usage.

Hurdles Keep Luther Precise Star In Track, Hopping About

By Earle Paxton "What is my favorite hobby? Why, it's sleeping, when I haven't any school work to do," replied Luther Precise, South Side's star hurdler, when asked this question by your rapidly-tiring writer.

Luther runs the 220-yard low hurdles and the 120-yard high hurdles for South Side. He has been instrumental in collecting points for the Archer thin clads. In case you dear readers don't know what the work is to be a hurdler, the writer will attempt to show you what Luther had to go through during his extensive weeks of practice. He takes ten minutes of strenuous work-out exercises, then goes to the bulletin board to find out what his workout is for the evening. He then is supposed to take two moderate warm-up laps, take 3 high hurdles five times at full speed, take seven low hurdles five times at full speed, a lap of striding, another lap of alternate striding, practice high jumping, and then take a quarter-mile at full speed.

When asked about furthering his education, Luther replied that he was uncertain, but if he could, he would go to Virginia Poly-Technic Institute. He said his favorite subject in high school was journalism. For your benefit, Luther is the illustrious writer that has been writing these track star features, but when he was assigned himself to write up, he rebelled and would not write it.

Luther is a senior and is graduating this June. His familiar and amiable face will be missed around school next fall.

Audrey Jefferies Gets Wo-Ho-Ma Club Lead

Wo-Ho-Ma Club chose Audrey Jefferies as fall president at last Thursday's meeting in the Greeley Room. Helen McCormick, vice-president; Mary Jane Allerton, secretary-treasurer; Helen Clark, Inter-Club Congress representative; and Kathryn Boerger, pianist, will also lead the club next term, the girls decided.

Kathryn Boerger won first prize and Laura Lloyd second in a point contest held by the club. Ruth Reitz was also given a prize as an outstanding senior. The club plans to hold a picnic Thursday, June 11, at Foster Park, plans for which were made Thursday. Ruth King and Pauline Oetting have general charge of arrangements. Members planning to attend must sign in room 36. Final plans were also made for a cake bake Saturday, June 6 at the South Side Market. Cakes and cookies donated by the mothers will be sold there. Proceeds from the sale will be used to pay off the club's deficit.

Ten Senior Students Have Passed Eight Semesters Of Latin

Ten ambitious South Side students have successfully passed four years of Latin and are now taking Latin 8. These ten most noble students, whose advanced knowledge and superior learning set them apart from the common rabble are: Fay Bechtold, Billy Bichacoff, Justine Crum, Helen Potter, LaVerne Boyce, Jane Loomis, Harriett Yapp, Bob Harruff, Walter Weaver, and Margaret Smith. They have successfully passed through the trials of the Argonauts, the campaign of Caesar in Gaul, the orations of Cicero, and the Aeneid of Vergil. The two boys, Bob Harruff and Walter Weaver seem to hold their own against the many girls and do very well. The class is taught by Mr. Rothert, who seems to enjoy it. It is quite an honor to arrive at Latin 8, since few people get that far. Ten is a rather large number for a Latin 8 class, as the usual number is from three to eight.

Plan Dancing Class Any girl who would like to try out for the Dance Club must do so at the beginning of next semester. Any girl is eligible, whether she has ever taken gym or not. Tryouts will be for tap dancing, folk, ballet, and natural. Regular meetings are to be held each Thursday at 8:30.

Skirts and Sports

Helen Banks isn't a freshman any more; she's a 9A. Tsh, tsh.

Ruth Berning, Leona Menze, Anna Marie Baumgartner, Edna Disler, and Barbara Scheele were among the high scorers who helped the juniors win the track meet.

Eleanor Rarick broke the record for the 100-yard walk in the track meet, when she went the distance in twenty-three seconds. Nice going, Eleanor.

When it comes to the potato race, Anna Marie Baumgartner is right here. She made it in nineteen seconds, hus taking first place.

Edna Disler is our best broad jumper this year. She went thirteen feet, eight inches to gain first place.

When it comes to making baskets under time, Helen Forker really has a system. She scored first place by making fourteen in one minute.

Several acts from the G. A. A. exhibition will be presented again tonight at the school exhibit. These include the roller skating, the tumbling, and the dancing.

If you've been in the gym office during the past few days, you have noticed the attractive pink sweater that Miss Smith is knitting. She has it nearly finished now.

During roller skating practice the other day, Gwen Roberts, Hazel Perry, and Eleanor Rarick seemed to be sitting down practically all of the time, especially when they tried their new ideas, such as the airplane and the wagon. P. S.: We didn't know it was supposed to be a wagon; they had to tell us.

We feel sorry for the outgoing seniors, as they will never have an opportunity to take part in sports at South Side again. Be sure and come back to see us as often as possible next year. Miss Patterson and Miss Smith will be glad to see you.

Letters and numerals will be awarded on Recognition Day to all girls who have attained a sufficient number of points. It really will be more of an honor to get a letter this year, as the required number of points is 1500 instead of the former 1200.

Congratulations go to Marjorie Hower for attaining the highest award a senior girl can receive in sports. Her name will appear on the plaque as high point girl. Marjorie's total for the four years is 2,839.

What did Miss Smith have to eat last week? When we came in the gym office we noticed her desk was turned around.

Miss Smith says she only had a gun in hand two times; but we think she is only kidding us, because she is pretty good.

Ruth Berning, Mary Lampton, Marge Hower, and Gwendolyn Roberts seem to be our only G. A. A. girls who were courageous enough to explore haunted houses recently.

Archers Answer Fifty Questions On Safety

A test consisting of two pages containing fifty questions was given to Archers last Wednesday. Questions asked were of the true and false variety and ranged from hitching a sled to a car in winter to how much a driver's license costs. The home room period was lengthened fifteen minutes for the test, but only the first period was shortened. Winners will be announced at an assembly soon.

College Graduations Are Soon To Claim '32 Class Members

South Side graduates of four years ago are well represented among the graduates of mid-western and eastern colleges of this year.

The following is a partial list of the graduates and the day upon which they will receive their diplomas:

From Northwestern on June 13, Marian McKay, Mary Angela Berkey, Jack Fleming, and Maurice Rieke, all ex-Archers, will graduate.

Robert Null and Raymon Bowman will represent South Side in the graduation at Purdue on June 9.

On June 15 Mary Elizabeth Sieber and John Slick, Jr., will receive their diplomas from Indiana University.

Enid Sykes will graduate from Ohio State, Elizabeth Barrett from Wheaton College, and Ellen Yaple from Antioch College on June 5; and Loretta Foellinger will receive her diploma June 8 from Illinois University.

Botany Scholars To Drink Lemonade If Citrus Plant Grows

In the spring a young man's fancy—no, that isn't what we meant to say—in the spring Mr. Gould's fancy lightly turns to thoughts of flowers.

He has plenty of them, too, and they're all interesting. Take, for instance, the plant that came from darkest Africa. Now, here it is right in Fort Wayne, growing as if it were planted in the soil of its native land. Then there is the plant which is of the same family as the African plant. One needs only to plant a leaf of this unusual plant and a new one will grow.

But these marvels of nature are completely topped by a huge plant in the corner. Upon being questioned, Mr. Gould revealed that this mammoth creation was a lemon plant. Already tiny lemons are blossoming forth. Mr. Gould claims that he is going to make lemonade next year and give it to his classes. Is that an inducement for more people to take botany?

gum around the G. A. A. office recently?

Leona Menze and Margaret Ruhl are running a close race among the juniors for high point girl. Leona has 2,025 points and Margaret has 2,017.

Sophomores should be proud of the two girls who, in spite of the fact that the number of points required for a letter were raised, will receive letters this year. Betty Eisenacher and Eleanor Rarick have 1,576 and 1,503 points respectively.

Attention, all G. A. A. members! Don't forget the G. A. A. breakfast June 11! Members who wish to attend should sign up immediately.

Two outstanding freshman girls who lead in points are Gwendolyn Roberts, who has 1,016 points, and Frieda Schubert, who has 1,039 points.

Cinder Scrapers

Wayne University, Detroit, Michigan's state intercollegiate co-champion track team, was honored at a dinner last week at Hotel Webster. Tartar tracksters who won points that brought Wayne their first state track title in the history of the school were presented with gold track shoes.

William Gattumelata, of McMillan School in Detroit, Michigan, proved himself superior to boys two or three years his senior, to gain top honors in the two-day decathlon test that ended last week on three playfields in the city of Detroit. Gattumelata scored a total of 9,555 points for the arduous ten-event test.

Cornell won the sixteenth C. A. A. A. track and field championship last Saturday in a dismal meet at Franklin Field, which failed to produce a single record and almost failed to yield even one thrill.

Gene Venzke, closing his collegiate career for Pennsylvania, at Franklin Field in Philadelphia, failed in his efforts at two records but easily won the 1,500-meter run by a 20-yard margin in 3 minutes, 58.8 seconds.

Charlie Hornbostel, former Indiana star, won the special 1,000-yard run from Harry Williamson, formerly of North Carolina, by a step, in 2 minutes, 14.9 seconds in the intercollegiate 4-A track meet last week.

Notre Dame will lose seven major track monogram athletic runners at the ninety-second annual commencement June 7. The track squad loses Don Elser, John Michuta, Bob Bernard, Joe McGrath, Capt. George Meagher, Leo McFarlane, and Paul Rubby.

William (Bill) McMahon, who has been knocking at the door of marathons championships for four years, finally changed his way inside with a record-breaking National A. U. victory that is likely to earn him a post on America's Olympic team.

Notre Dame will lose forty-nine major and minor monogram athletic winners at the ninety-second annual commencement exercises June 7, including some of the greatest stars in Fighting Irish history, a group which did much to make 1935-36 the greatest athletic year Notre Dame has ever experienced.

The fencing and track teams were undefeated. The basketball team dropped but two games in 25 starts, tying one. The golf team won nine out of ten and the state championship. The football team won seven out of nine, tying one. The baseball team is headed for one of the greatest seasons in Notre Dame history. The cross-country team broke even in four races.

Besides Co-Captain Marty Peters, who doubled in football, the Indiana University took the Big Ten track title last Saturday by defeating Michigan and Ohio State, who tied for second place, with a total of 47 points. Michigan and Ohio State scored 39 points apiece. The Wolverines were favored to take the meet, but spectacular running by the Crimson overshadowed the other squads' performances.

A one-man show was that of Jesse Owens, Ohio State star, who won four events. He broke the record in the 220-yard dash by running it one-tenth of a second faster than Ralph Metcalfe of Marquette in 21.1 seconds. It is believed that Owens did not try to break the records in the 100 and 220-yard dashes and in the broad jump, because he conserved his energy for the Olympics at Berlin this summer.

Don Lash was the other star to put on a one-man show. He broke the conference mile record by finishing in the remarkable time of 4 minutes, 10.8 seconds. An hour later he came back to win the gruelling two-mile grind in 9:19.9.

In the two-mile run, Lash was followed by two of his teammates to give the Hoosiers twelve of their 47 points.

Buck Newsom, pitcher for the Washington Senators, who also claims to be somewhat of a hitter, was not a little "gripped" the other day, when he won his sixth straight game of the season. While he fanned eleven of the St. Louis Browns, his teammates pounded four pitchers for seventeen hits; and yet Buck did not get a single hit.

The majority of the prizes for the Irish Sweepstakes went to residents of the United States; approximately forty-four percent of the tickets came here; Europe, mostly Britain, received only a little more than 30 percent.

City "Y.W." Heads Plan Camp Yarnelle Meeting

Ten girls from South Side are expected to attend the general Girl Reserve Conference to be held at Camp Yarnelle at Lake Winona under the direction of Miss Zela Heinbaugh during the week from June 27 to July 4.

At this conference, officers of So-Si-Y and U. S. A. from South Side; Polar-Y from North Side; Friendship and Central Triangle from Central; and the Pathfinders from Wheatly Center will make plans for next year. They will exchange ideas and try to improve their fall term programs.

Besides the meetings, the girls will enjoy tennis, swimming, boating and a water pageant.

basketball squad loses Co-Captain Johnny Ford, George Ireland, Frank Wade, Johnny Hopkins, and Joe O'Kane.

Elser and Michuta doubled in track, with Elser winning a monogram in basketball in his junior year. Other track losses will be Bob Bernard, Joe McGrath, Capt. George Meagher, Leo McFarlane, and Paul Rubby.

Practically the entire baseball and tennis teams will be wiped out. The baseball team will lose nine of their players, while the tennis team loses five of its members.

Helen Hickman, '35, Works For Church, Says Its Enjoyable

Helen Hickman, '35, is another alumni of the school's commercial department who has succeeded in obtaining a secretarial position.

Helen's job is a little more unusual than those which others of her class have obtained, for she is employed as secretary of the West Creighton Avenue Christian Church, of which she is a member. She was chosen last fall to fill the unexpired term of the former secretary who had resigned. During the winter, the board of directors of the church, at the annual meeting, elected her to fill a full term. Previous to becoming secretary at the church, she was employed for part-time work at the Richardville branch library formerly on Broadway.

Duties and Experience As secretary to the pastor of the church and recorder of all business transacted, Helen's duties are to take letters dictated by the pastor, transcribe them, keep records and accounts of transactions and collections, and print the official bulletins and pamphlets on a duplicating machine. In addition to these tasks, Helen has made use of the library training she received as a member of the Library Club here by cataloging all the church literature and by starting a small library of reference and reading material within the church.

While she was a student at South Side, Helen was a member of So-Si-Y, Philo, Math Science, Art, and Travel clubs, besides serving as vice-president of Library Club. She was also a member of G. A.

Helen's hours of work, she thinks, have always been very pleasant and convenient. She has been working from 8 o'clock in the morning to 11:30 and from 1 o'clock in the afternoon to 4:30. She considers shorthand to be her hardest subject in high school and ranked art and English as the least difficult of her subjects.

Shorthand, Helen says, is the most helpful of all the commercial subjects she took in high school. She says that if she had the privilege of going through high school again, she would devote more time to her shorthand practice and to numbers and signs on the typewriter.

During her career in the commercial department, she did a large amount of work with stencils and with the mimeographing machine; however, in her present position, she has had to learn to operate a multigraph machine.

Camp Stunt Opens 1936 Girl Reserve Y.W.C.A. Banquet

The annual banquet of the city's Girl Reserves was held last Thursday at the Y. W. C. A. Virginia Greiner, of South Side, chairman of the Inter-Club Council, presided. The theme was "Stars."

The program was opened with a camp stunt, of which Bonnie BenDure, North Side, had charge. A style show, which Wolf and Dessauer sponsored, was given. Miss Rose Joseph, of Wolf and Dessauer, had charge; and nine Girl Reserves modeled. Mrs. Seibt, the former Miss Holtsapple, who was secretary of the Y. W. C. A. and director of Camp Yarnelle before her recent marriage, gave a talk on the music training course. Miss Heinbaugh, executive secretary of the Y. W. C. A., told about the "Y" camp and the repairs being made on it. She announced that the Girl Reserve Conference will be held from June 27 to July 4 at Camp Yarnelle.

During the banquet, one hostess had charge of each table, and girls that were interested in her type of work sat at her table. Hostesses included Miss Jean Hayden, interior decorator at Wolf and Dessauer; Miss Betty Ray, a graduate nurse; Dr. Ruth Hoetzer, the Y. W. C. A. doctor; Miss Dorothy Moeller, connected with the Old Fort Players and WOWO; Miss Rose Joseph, of Wolf and Dessauer; Miss Emma Adams, a gymnasium teacher at Central; Miss Virginia Kinaird, a teacher at Central; Miss Kathryn Rothenberger, a teacher at North Side; Miss Sinclair, head of social service work at the FERA office; Miss Alderdice, Mr. Snider's secretary; and Phyllis Toothill, society editor of the News-Sentinel.

Miss Margaret Jones, the present secretary of the Y. W. C. A., who is to leave soon, was given a farewell peech and also a gift.

Band, Orchestra, Glee Clubs Have Many Varied Jobs

"When I get a chance to hit it, I will hit it hard," stated Abraham Lincoln in a speech pertaining to the main issue of that day, slavery. It seems that the music department has taken the same attitude toward playing engagements and have in the past been "hitting them hard."

Although there are many sections to the department, the band, orchestra, and the glee club are the largest and the most rushed with calls for entertainment. They have been dated far into the future for miscellaneous gatherings, and the close of school is the only remedy for the cease of work.

Band Hardest Worked
South Side's band, directed by Mr. Jack Wainwright, is especially well-known; and its engagements outnumber those of other organizations. The band year began with the football season and at all the games they were present to offer their aid. Basketball games next claimed their attention, followed with pep sessions, assemblies, and monthly concerts. Continuing with school affairs, the student body next heard them in programs dedicated to George Washington on his birthday, and at the first ivy planting to be held at the school. Although many more school concerts took up their time, a great part of their work lies in entertaining outside the school body. At monthly Parent-Teacher meetings they contributed music, and his bit helped the parents to become better acquainted with the art of music in a high school. To commemorate the birth of Abraham Lincoln, February 12, the band was heard by three hundred Boy Scouts and their officials in a Lincoln pilgrimage held at the Lincoln Life Insurance Company. After dinner music was furnished by the band at banquets given by the Elex Club of the General Electric and the Rotary Club, a business men's organization. Since South Side's band is known as a concert band, little attention has been given to its marching ability, but this thought did not phase them when they led ten bands in a parade held recently for the convention of the Indiana Lion's Clubs.

Organize German Band
From the large band comes two smaller bands, a German organization and a transferable band. At German gatherings such as the German dance at the G. E. Travel Club's trip to Germany, and hard times parties, the German band is likely to be found. This group is in charge of Glenn Gregory and Jean Meyer.

The smaller band, which consists of only one instrument from each group, is headed by Dick Rastetter. This band, because of its size, can be transported to different localities to present concerts. They recently marched in a parade held by the South Side Loop Dealers.

Orchestra In Demonstration
Orchestral numbers are requested by many persons who prefer the quality that the string instruments give. During the Yuletide season, they accompanied the glee club on a caroling tour of the shopping district. The day was completed by the broadcasting of their numbers over WOWO. In the fall they combined with the orchestras of other high schools in upper Indiana and formed the All-District North-eastern High School Orchestra which played for the annual teachers' convention which was held at the Shrine auditorium. School activities at which the orchestra played were the G. A. A. Exhibit, senior Fun Fest, and the Senior Play. In the future they will be heard at all the activities bidding the seniors farewell. A minstrel show or vaudeville is given annually by the music department of the school and through this the orchestra found another engagement.

Condensed from this department is founded the Little Ensemble, under the leadership of Mary Jo Allen. This has proved to be one of the busiest groups of the smaller divisions and its good performances have brought many requests.

Sharps And Flats

By P. Kay
Did you ever hear of invisible playing? It was invented in 1821 by Charles Wheatstone and called the "enchanted lyre." It consisted of a musical instrument which was thrown into vibrations when connected with a music box through a long, light rod. As the rod and music box were unseen, the "enchanted lyre" seemed to give forth the music. The effect of an instrument apparently playing by itself seemed most uncanny to the people of that day.

For commencement exercises, the orchestra has chosen to play, "Joan d' Arc," a descriptive overture. Outstanding in the number are to be the lament, an oboe solo, and the "melodies with echoes," begun with the flutes, carried on by the clarinet, and oboe, and concluded with the violins.

Perhaps one of the most interesting exhibits displayed last Thursday evening was that held by the music department. Room 40 was the center of attraction. All types of instruments connected with the art of music were on display. Outstanding in the exhibit were a viola, made by Thomas Riddle when he was four years old, and a keyless clarinet owned by the grandfather of Tom Berry. The 780 visitors were entertained during their stay by the Little Ensemble. Mary Ann Mayland, Martine Bohn, Bernita Gregory, and Miss Morton assisted Mr. Wainwright in explaining the uses and types of instruments.

At the annual field day held last Wednesday by the grade schools, the band accompanied the drills and exercises. Dick Rastetter was the director, and the band was given free refreshments as a reward.

Miss Betty Wainwright, a '35 graduate and the daughter of the music director, will leave soon for a summer tour of Europe and the Mediterranean region. She is now a student at the University of Louisiana, where she is studying and teaching harp.

Next semester, harmony will be taught to all those pupils desiring it. No credit has been arranged yet; but it is hoped that by next year it will be granted full credit as any regular subject. Mr. Wainwright will conduct the classes, which will be held two eighths each week.

Public Speaking Holds Place Of High Esteem With School

By Betty Garton

One of the most active parts of South Side High School is the public speaking department. During the year it has excelled in many lines of speaking. Among these are the extemp contests which it has sponsored. In the first extemp contest held last semester, Manuel Rothberg and Ruth Rose tied for first place. Rosemary Chappell won second, and Dalton McAlister placed third. In this semester's extemp contest, Rosemary Chappell won first, Ruth Rose won second, and Leona Menze, third.

In the declamation contest, a new event this year, Manuel Rothberg represented South Side at the Kiwanis contest and at the state declamation contest. At both contests, he gave a declamation entitled, "The Worth of a Jew." Dalton McAlister won first place and Bob Adams second in the Rotary contest. Dalton won both the district and state contests.

Another important event at South Side is the Freshman-Sophomore Speech Contest. In the freshman meet, Joe Bex took first, and Carl Goebel second, Frieda Schubert and Janice Cross were other entrants. In the sophomore division, Dalton McAlister won first, and Allen Garrison second. Oscar Eggers, Leslie Johnson, and Kathleen Witmer also entered.

During Humane Week, three Archers spoke in Fort Wayne. Helen Flaig spoke over the radio. Sybil Knudson spoke at the Exchange Club, and Ruth Garrison spoke to the Rotary Club and at an assembly meeting at the Court House. All these speakers talked on "Be Kind to Animals."

At the Fort Wayne Debating Tournament, South Side public speaking students acted as chairmen and timekeepers for some sixty debaters.

Wranglers Club, a speaking club, carries on speech contests of its own and awards prizes to the winners. In the Wranglers Declamation Contest, Joe Bex won; and in the club extemp contest, Dick Helm placed first. The Honor Debate Team of Wranglers is composed of Charles Hart and Vernon Miller, who defeated Dick Helm and Sybil Knudson.

At the Wranglers banquet held this spring, the above speakers were given honor awards. Awards were also given to Manuel Rothberg, Ruth Rose, Rosemary Chappell, and Leona Menze, who placed in the final extemp contest. Wranglers Club also presented certificates to the speakers who placed in the preliminary extemp contest.

Sciences Head List Of Elective Courses

"Again science leads in the number of students enrolled for elective classes," Mr. Herbert Voorhees says. "The only science that is compulsory is one semester of health. In view of this fact, the large number of students in science is gratifying."

"The science department has no spectacular contests as many other lines of study do, but they try to make it interesting and valuable to the student. It is possible to take four years of science. On Recognition Day a medal will be presented to an outstanding student who has taken three years of science. Richard Shannon, now a student at Indiana University, won the award in 1935."

"There are eight instructors in our science department. They all rate A1 in their respective jobs."

Wife Of Mr. Heine Denies Great Knowledge Of Biology

By Leona Menze

Mrs. Heine, wife of South Side's well-known teacher, Mr. A. W. Heine, avers a total lack of knowledge on her husband's favorite subjects, biology, commercial geography, and physical geography. Yes, she is interested in them; but still she is content to let any study in regard to them entirely up to her husband. Mrs. Heine herself was a former teacher in South Side High School and is now more than eager to glean any information about our activities.

She attended Ball State Teachers College and followed her graduation with teaching in Central High School for one-half year. Next she came to South Side and taught Spanish here. This subject was dropped; however, the year Mrs. Heine quit. Now she attempts to keep up with the school by trying to pry it out of her husband. This still remains one of her major interests.

They have one child, a two year old boy. As yet, they consider it too early to plan any definite future for their son; but Mr. Heine seems to think that their child is going to know enough about his subjects to satisfy the parents' ambitions.

Names Pet Peeve
Mealtime discussion is comprised mainly of Mrs. Heine's questions, in which she vainly endeavors to pry some information about school life from him. It seems to be her favored peeve when answers do not come too readily. Mr. Heine's pet peeve is unique, inasmuch as it is seeing the same face over and over again in the eighth periods. He tries to work off some of this dislike in his favorite game, golf, which is correctly referred to as his hobby.

Mr. Heine's reading matter is composed of scientific magazines and literature on his subjects. Such magazines as Science News, Nature Magazine, and Readers Digest are also favored. His wife likes fiction and magazines, such as Good Housekeeping, and Cosmopolitan. She can stand science books, if they are written in popular style and are not too technical.

Happy As Teacher's Wife

Mrs. Heine has been too busy for the past two years, she says, even to make any ambitions, so perhaps that should be one of them. Her husband desires to study more in science and work himself up to a higher position in this field.

The family circle is completed with their pet, Toughy, a Boston terrier. This dog's favorite seems to be the youngest member of the family. Her final statement was, "I'm happy as the wife of a school teacher, and don't think that I could be any happier if my husband's interests were elsewhere. That was my profession before, and naturally I can appreciate all of its points."

Cross-Word Puzzles Weakness Of Mr. Voorhees, Says Wife

The most emphatic statement of Mrs. Voorhees, wife of South Side's chemistry instructor, concerning her husband is as follows: "He works crossword puzzles by the hundreds. He works every one in the newspapers and even receives some from a friend to work." Mr. Voorhees likes to read a deep scientific book, and then, for light reading, to scan some detective stories. Mr. Voorhees also likes to listen to the radio.

Mr. Voorhees received his master's degree at Belmont College, Cincinnati, and then taught there two years. Belmont College is now a military college. He had a very full college career, and as a result is now qualified to teach nearly every high school subject. He has taught, or is qualified to teach Latin, mathematics, physics, chemistry, English, history, and literature. He can read and speak French, German, Spanish, Latin, and Greek; and he has tutored in French and Spanish.

Teaches Self French

Mr. Voorhees' progress in French is similar to that in a majority of his accomplishments. He has taught himself a great deal of that which he knows. After studying French by himself before he entered high school, he tried to enroll in one of the upper French classes. The officials paid no attention whatever to his plea that he had studied French and put him in a first year class. After three days in this class, he was advanced to the senior division.

Mrs. Voorhees was a sophomore at Brookville when Mr. Voorhees came there as principal. Mr. Voorhees came to Port Wayne in 1901 to teach botany in the Port Wayne High School then on Wayne Street. This was a required first year subject, so that Mr. Voorhees came in contact with every freshman.

When the Port Wayne High and Manual Training School on Barr Street was built, Mr. Voorhees taught various subjects there, including algebra, physical geography, botany, and chemistry. When a teacher was needed for any or every subject, Mr. Voorhees, because of his wide field of accomplishments, was substituted.

Enjoys Playing Piano

Mrs. Voorhees likes to play the piano for her own entertainment and includes classical numbers in her music. Mr. Voorhees used to play the flute; but when the two got together, the difficulties began. Because Mr. Voorhees had taught himself all he knew about flute playing, he became accustomed to blowing as long as he could and then taking a breath. When the two tried to harmonize with their instruments, such difficulties in timing would arise that, after a few years, Mr. Voorhees made the statement, "You play your instrument, and I'll play mine; but, we'll not play together."

Because he thought that the Italian language was so musical, he would go to his wife in the kitchen and read to her. He would also translate the reading for her.

He will eat all kinds of food, but prefers pie to ice cream. These are just a few things about which he is peculiar (Mrs. Voorhees' expression).

Mrs. Voorhees found the subject of chemistry very interesting. She got all the knowledge of the subject from her husband, but that was so long ago that she barely remembers any of it now. Both Mr. and Mrs. Voorhees like green, with the result that the Voorhees home has a number of fixtures in that hue.

Have One Daughter

The Voorhees family includes one daughter, Mary Louise, who has been ill in recent years. She received her education at Bloomington, and, before her illness, taught art at Central High School. Being a nurse to her daughter takes up a great deal of Mrs. Voorhees' time, so that little traveling is done by her or her husband. She has traveled out West and to Florida, but does not consider this "real" traveling.

Mrs. Voorhees closed a very interesting telephone conversation, which disclosed her to be a very witty and clever wife, well able to match her husband, with the statement, "Mr. Voorhees is a real fine man. We're just an ordinary family, having no unusual habits or eccentricities."

Suits For Dinner, Fluffy Wear For Evening Are Fashionable

By Dorothy Reese

The pulse of fashion in formal wear for the summer season is extremely new and different. For dinner, a girl dines in a suit and outshines the black-tie sleekness of her escort. An outstanding dinner suit is tailored in navy wool. The edges and belt of the jacket are of a starched-white pique.

A simple summer evening dress is a printed crepe with a jacket that makes it as useful for all fresco dining as it is for stargazing. To look new, the print should be bold and colorful, and the jacket should have short sleeves, a slender waist, and a flared peplum. And, of course, there should be a flower, huge and exotic, to match your sandals and evening bag. One's evening dress will be white, white and black, bluish purple, or splashed with multicolored flowers in all the sun-shot colors of modern art.

You will want to wear plain sheer fabrics, nets, meshes, silk and rayon jerseys, and an enormous amount of crepe satin, especially in white. You'll wear satin evening coats, made like Napoleon's dressing-gown—and transparent evening coats that show the dress beneath. At coming dances, we shall see the fairer sex footing it here and there (and everywhere else for summer) in clouds of transparent color girdled with long romantic sashes. Why not find out the type of gown you are best suited for and try to garb yourself accordingly?

Teachers Desire Norway, Back Yards For Vacation

Our honorable faculty has at last revealed their fondest hopes and dreams for the coming summer vacation. A few refused to have them known, but a snoopily Times reporter managed to "squeeze" the coveted desires. Here are a few:

Miss Miller: Stay at home right here in Port Wayne.
Mr. Windmiller: Going to school at Bloomington to finish my master's degree.

Miss Edith Crowe: I guess I'll go to the University of Washington at Seattle, Washington. Then I hope to see some of the mountains and the ocean.

Mr. Chappell: Well, I shall study a little, paint the house, work in the garden, work on programs; and if I have any time left, I'll take a little vacation.

Miss Paxton: I have not decided just yet, but I would like to attend the International Mathematical Conference in Norway.

Miss Pocock: I have great hopes of attending the University of Chicago the first part of the summer.

Mr. Flint: As yet we are undecided. I may go fishing in Canada.

Mr. Snider: I'll make out programs and stay out on the farm.

Miss Van Gorder: I am going to New York City. The rest of the time I can't account for.

Mr. Gould: I will work on my garden and lawn; and then maybe I shall go to Indianapolis and visit the state parks.

Miss Oppelt: I plan to go to the University of Michigan this summer, and I hope to take a short trip in between.

"Gentleman From South" Show Is Given Before S.P.C. Group

"Lijah," a one-act play by Edgar Valentine, telling the story of a southern judge from whom two northern gentlemen were trying to buy personal property, was presented at the Student Players' meeting Friday in the Greeley Room.

Vernon Miller portrayed Judge Homestead, a southern gentleman who was master of Home Acres. Dorothy Herbst was Bamma, a colored servant; Don Sparkman, the first stranger, and Jack Hargan, the second stranger, were the northern gentlemen.

Jim Dern, Mildred Hoff, and Dorothy Herbst comprise the committee. Louise Closs was announcer and prompter.

Miss Suter explained the point system and the means of gaining a gold "D." She said that to obtain a gold "D," a member had to be active in all activities of the club, to be prompt at all meetings, and to do good class work.

Miss Suter also reminded initiates and members of the serious initiation to be held June 12 at 10 o'clock in the Central auditorium. Stunts will be given by prospective members at Frank Park June 12. After these stunts, members will dance, music to be provided by Dick Schack's orchestra.

Senior Dance Is Attended By Many Couples

Dale Lockwood Played Before Crowd Of Two Hundred Fifty Couples At Hop

Lighting Of Purple Further Theme

Spotlights, Orchid Ceiling, White Imitation Cottage Illustrate Blossom Time.

Approximately two-hundred and fifty couples attended the senior dance of the 1936 graduating class last night, for which Dale Lockwood and his Barons of the Blues from Auburn, played from 8:30 till 11:30 o'clock. The ceiling of the gymnasium was decorated in varied shades ranging from a very light orchid to a very dark purple. With purple spotlights flashing among the dancing couples. A white imitation cottage further carried out the theme of the dance which was "Blossom Time." Dance programs which were carried out in the theme of the dance were given to the girls. The class officers were Fred Nye, president; Dorothy Crabill, vice-president; Ruth Adler, secretary; Bob Adams, Virginia Greiner, and Dick Helm, members of the social council. The tickets were in charge of these people.

Committee Are Listed

Dick Helm, who was in charge of procuring the orchestra for the dance, obtained Dale Lockwood and his Barons of the Blues.

Members of the lighting and mechanics committee, who were under the supervision of Mr. J. H. Chappell, were Fred Prange, Fred Meyers, Vincent Cook, Thomas Benning, Paul Boyer, Joe Clymer, Melvin Gronauer, and William Nickerson. This committee had charge of the lighting effects which were planned to accentuate the pastel flower decorations.

Programs for the dance were planned by Virginia Greiner and her committee, Maxine Hoyer, Maxine Hoyer, Vivian Hickman, Joan Lohman, Ruth Stoner, Sonia Velkoff, Janet Fisher, Virginia Gardner, and Marjorie Dancer.

The publicity committee, which had charge of posters for the schools and stories in the schools and local newspapers, was headed by Bob Adams. His assistants were Mary Anne Rank, Helen Flaig, Elsie Beyer, Louis Bonsib, and Ralph Jones.

Decorations Aids Named

Included on the decorations committee, which was headed by Myron Jones, were Ruth Adler, Dorothy Crabill, Betty Rayl, Margaret Crankshaw, Mary Martha Hobrock, Dorothy Douglas, Margaret Dickmeyer, Maxine Roth, Dorothy Reese, Betty Meigs, Harriett Basford, Mary K. Smith, Dick Dochterman, Bill Hoblet, Helen Anderson, Morgan Harrison, Millie Foellinger, Harriett Yapp, Ruth Rose, June Haeger, Eliza Bess Lucas, Bob Cook, Marcel Rothberg, Rosemary Chappell, Mary Michaels, Miriam McIntire, Ruth Roadcap, Luther Proise, Lillian Hitzeman, Warren Zell, Gwen Horn, Louis Bonsib, Catherine Allendorph, Virginia Baker, Fay Bechtold, Elizabeth Emley, Martha Franz, Marjorie Hower, Vera Louise Kruege, Betty Rose Lehman, Selma Liff, Ruth Wolfsohn, Mildred Rudig, Virginia Gardner, Beatrice Schieber, Theo Schurenberg, David Sherman, Jo-Anne Smith, Ann Abbett, Richard Strasser, Jim Sweet, Maxine Borchert, Maxine Mariotte, and Virginia Woods.

The class advisers were Miss Adelaide Fiedler and Mr. J. H. Chappell. The chaperones were the parents of the officers.

Seniors Regret Two Things-NotStudying And Joining Clubs

Why didn't I study harder? Why didn't I join some of those swell clubs? Those are questions too many of our graduating seniors are asking themselves. They not only regret it as they are leaving our school, but they will regret it all through their lives if they do not study hard. Some of the seniors are not even leaving the school this year, but must stay on for another ten months or more. All because we did not study hard! It is a sad thing for a would-be graduate to stand by and watch his fellow classmates receive diplomas and honors. That person is without a doubt the loneliest and most unhappy person in school. Let us hope that there are fewer persons in that plight as the future classes leave South Side High School!

The seniors who took advantage of the many club activities offered at South Side certainly do not regret it. Rather they are giving themselves a "pat on the back" for having participated in the extra-curricular activities. Many seniors have received much from South Side and the clubs have given them a chance to study side of their obligations. When a senior graduates and realizes that he has joined no clubs and rendered no service to the school, he feels that he has not quite done his part. One of the requirements for eligibility in the National Honor Society is service to the school. Every senior would so very much like to receive appointment to the National Honor Society, but many have not received because they have done nothing towards paying their obligation.

The clubs not only gave the seniors a chance to serve the school but every senior spent many happy hours in club work as recreation.

Here we have given the two most popular regrets of seniors. If we were freshmen again there are two resolutions we would certainly try to avoid. First, we would study harder. Second, we would join more clubs. To the underclassmen we need only say, a hint to the wise is sufficient!

Two Totem Bosses Are Voted Generous Members Of Class

Flash! The results of the senior questionnaire have been tabulated. Flash! Here they are. Can you guess the most generous South Siders?

First place has been awarded to a very charming and attractive blonde. She held an important position on the Totem of 1936, and has played an important part in the various club activities of South Side. You've guessed it! She is Dorothy Crabill, the most generous girl in South Side High.

Close behind Dorothy comes the girl who took second place. This girl is also a blonde, rather tall, and very friendly. She also has taken an active part in school affairs. She belongs to U. S. A., G. A. A., German Club, Philo and Glee Club. A. W. shucks! why did you have to guess? It's Margaret Dickmeyer.

Do you know the most generous of the male South Siders? He too held an important position on the Totem of 1936—in fact, a very important position—we might even go so far as to say the most important position. He's popularly known as "Bill." He is a member of the Times staff, orchestra, band, Wranglers, 1500, and Math-Science. You probably know now, so we might as well tell you. He's Louis Bonsib.

It was a close race for second place—as a matter of fact it was so close that it was a tie. Both of these boys are prominent in athletics. One was senior class president; the other a member of the National Athletic Honor Society. Give up? They're Fred Nye and Morgan Harrison, respectively.

By the way, had you noticed that they are all members of National Honor Society?

Those members who came from 7:30 to 8:30 were Eric Beyer, Allen Faux, Robert Adams, Anna Bremer, Robert Haruff, Fay Bechtold, Ruth Fowler, Dick Helm, Margaret Dickmeyer, Lillian Hitzeman, Martha Franz, Catherine Allendorph, Maxine Borchert, Helen Doenges, Virginia Baumgartner, Norman Burk, Bernadette Dygert, Vernon Holtman, Irene Becker, Mary Ann Fark, June Haeger, Frederick Meyers, Betty Rison, Verne Meyer, Ruth Roadcap, Richard Strasser, Kathryn Magley, Ruth Rose, Mary Michaels, Jim Sweet, Miller Makey, Bryce Minier, Eliza Bess Lucas, Manuel Rothberg, Maxine Mariotte, Fred Nye, Mildred Rudig, Beatrice Schieber, Virginia Woods, Lorraine Meyer, Ruth Reitz, Kenneth Scott, and Harriett Yapp.

Those who were received from 8:30 to 9:30 were Ann Abbett, Rosemary Chappell, Morgan Harrison, Dorothy Crabill, Mildred Foellinger, Ruth Adler, Margaret Crankshaw, Louis Bonsib, Virginia Gardner, Mary Martha Hobrock, Virginia Greiner, Marjorie Gargett, Maxine Hoyer, Jane Loomis, Joan Smith, Sonia Velkoff, Georgianna Martin, Betty Wolf, Betty Rayl, and Helen Anderson.

The scene of the lawn party was the back yard of Mr. and Mrs. Snider. It was beautifully laid out with garden chairs and tables. In the background was a rose garden with a stone walk running up the slope.

'Let's Dance,' Honors Go To Bob Gargett, Gwen Horn, Steppers

1-2, 1-2-3, 1-2, we are little nymphs, we are elves, 1-2-3—that's the way Horn and Gargett, the best dancers in school learned to dance. Bonslene Craig and Ed Letz, the winners of second place as dancing whizzes, used to good old "da da dum" system. You know how that one goes, "da" on the right foot, and "dum" on the left. Of course the professionals, Horn and Gargett, have a lot of variations; that's what made them so good.

Gwen Horn, besides being a very excellent ballroom dancer can dance plenty in a pair of toe slippers or tap shoes. You all can remember when she danced, she completed the outfit. Dick Busch looked very cool and neat in white trousers, brown coat, white shirt, brown tie, and white shoes.

Gargett really has the swing and rhythm and swing to his dancing. He also has a "tongue clicking" accompaniment of his own which helps his partner keep up with him. Bob is an accomplished pianist, which helps explain his grand sense of rhythm.

Dancing, however, isn't the only claim to fame these people have. Gwen has appeared in several plays presented by the Drama class and is active in several clubs. Gargett is known to many by his providing music for many programs.

Senior Pictures Taken

Following the recognition assembly last Friday, the seniors of the class of 1936 assembled in the stadium to have their class picture taken. Mr. Ozaki took two pictures.

Louis Bonsib and Ruth Adler were chosen by the faculty as being the best citizens of the school. Bryce Minier and Ruth Adler received the D. A. R. medals for good citizenship.

Class Of 1936 Is Largest In School History

Sixty-three Received Highest Honor Given At South Side; 69 on Four-Year Roll

Play, Dance, Funfest Are All Successful

Art, Public Speaking, Music, Journalism Among Fields Entered By Many Seniors.

The class of 1936 with its 412 members is the largest class in the history of South Side. Besides being the largest class, it has marked itself as being a very outstanding one in almost every line of endeavor. It is very ably advised by two members of the faculty, Miss Fiedler and Mr. Chappell. Assisting the advisers are a staff of class officers. Fred Nye is president; Dorothy Crabill, vice-president; Ruth Adler, secretary; Bob Adams, Virginia Greiner, and Dick Helm, members of the social council.

Direct Many Projects

This group of people has directed the seniors in putting over many successful projects during the year. The funfest and senior dance were planned and worked out by them in grand fashion. They also helped make the senior play a big success.

The seniors are very well represented in scholarship. Sixty-three of them were given the highest honor bestowed upon any senior, that is, election to the National Honor Society. The four-year honor roll claimed sixty-nine out of the class.

Active In Work

However, it was not only scholarship which attracted the attention of these seniors. Journalism also took up a good portion of their time. There were twenty-six seniors who received the Quill and Scroll award for their excellent work on the Times or Totem. Many others, although they did not receive the highest honor for journalism, received minor awards.

Other lines of work such as dramatics, public speaking, art, music, and commercial work also claimed their share of the seniors upon which to bestow many honors.

A class represented so well in many fields of work is not apt to be forgotten very soon. It is a class such as that of 1936 that can be looked on by underclassmen as a goal to attain and try to better.

Virginia Gardner, Kruse Best Dressed Boy, Girl Of Seniors

When it comes to picking out the best-dressed girl and boy of the senior class, that is a problem. That's what all of the seniors were trying to do a few weeks ago when we began our poll to find out the best dressed persons of the senior class. Of course, no one agrees upon the same thing, but the majority of us selected Virginia Gardner as the best dressed girl of our class and Ed Kruse as the best dressed boy. These two seniors will deserve this honor, as they always look "just so."

Close behind Virginia and Ed come Helen Anderson and Dick Busch. When it comes to wearing the "latest thing in clothes", that's just what these four seniors do.

At the senior dance, Virginia looked lovely in white chiffon formal of the Grecian style. It was draped with rose-buds around the neck, and the sash was of rose-buds and was tied in a knot. The skirt was extremely full.

Ed Kruse chose a brown coat, light brown trousers, white shirt, brown tie, and white shoes for his outfit.

Helen Anderson was very attractive in a gown of white embroidered lace, with a soft blue velvet sash. There was a ruffle around the neck which extended down the back. The lace was gathered over the shoulders and draped a trifle over the arms. The skirt was gored and a taffeta slip was worn under the lace. Blue sandals, to match the sash, completed the outfit.

Dick Busch looked very cool and neat in white trousers, brown coat, white shirt, brown tie, and white shoes.

Picnic Is Postponed

Due to the numerous activities of the seniors who are prominent members of the Social Science Club, there will be no annual picnic of that club this year.

Chemistry, English Hold First, Second In Seniors Favor

Has anyone ever wondered just what subjects were liked best by students in high school? Well, now is the time to discover this great mystery. Prepare yourselves for the event.

From the senior questionnaire we find that chemistry has run away with first place honors. This subject in spite of the sometimes awful smells and odors and the great uncertainty of a possible explosion at any time is most of the seniors' favorite lesson.

Second place in this favorite parade goes to English, the oldest of old subjects. Even with the terrible grind which students complain the English teachers subject them to, even with the long, long themes in the senior year,

Louis Bonsib, Ruth Adler Are Best Citizens

Each Year Faculty Chooses Boy, Girl On Scholarship And Citizenship Activities

As has been the custom in South Side, again one girl and one boy have been selected as the best citizens of the senior class. These students are selected by the faculty of the school. All the points of a good citizen and a good scholar are taken into consideration when the choice is made.

This June a very outstanding girl has been chosen as the best girl citizen. She is Ruth Adler who has been active in all her high school years. She was a member of National Honor Society, four-year honor roll, Philo, Math Science, So-Si-Y, Student Play-ers, G. A. A., X. Y. Z, Safety Council, and Times and Totem staffs. In all these activities she proved herself to be a leader.

The best boy citizen is also an outstanding student. Louis Bonsib, editor of the 1936 Totem carries these honors. Besides being editor of the yearbook, Louis was a member of Math-Science, Times staff, Wranglers, and was a member of the National Honor Society and the four-year honor roll.

These students with the honor of being the best citizens in their graduating class will surely continue being an example of good citizenship after they have left school. The deserve a large share of congratulations for their outstanding characters, and their leadership and cooperation.

Date of First Times Is Probably September 9

Bob Storm, the general manager for next fall, presided at the Times meeting last Thursday. He said, "Since school will begin either on September 8 or 9, the paper will be published on one of those dates. Another issue will be printed September 11. The first general staff meeting will be held August 18 or 19. The major staff members will have charge of these issues. Any suggestions or complaints will be welcome." Attention was called to the diagram of the room for next year which will make for more efficient work. Miss Harvey urged the members of the fall staff to fill out the necessary card if they had not already done so.

Officers Have Guided Seniors Successfully

As the closing of our Senior year comes to a sad, tearful ending, and we think back over the year, we remember those few people who have led us during our time as seniors, the class officers. We remember the excellent leadership of Fred Nye as president, Dorothy Crabill as vice-president, Ruth Adler as secretary, and Virginia Greiner, Robert Adams, and Dick Helm as the social council.

These persons have been at the head of all the senior class functions, planning and guiding their co-workers. The senior funfest was planned and presented by committees under the direction of these leaders, the senior play was guided by them, and the senior dance was capably supervised by these students. They worked long and hard to make our senior year a complete success and we will always remember that they were responsible for our fun in our senior year.

"Highways And Law" Topic Of Baccalaureate

Dr. Paul H. Krauss Delivers Address To Graduating Class Sunday At Shrine.

Two Songs Given By Trinity Choir

R. Nelson Snider, Merle J. Abbett Help Pastor By Giving Evening Lessons.

"Highways and Law" was the title of the baccalaureate sermon given by Dr. Paul H. Krauss Sunday evening at the Shrine Auditorium, which was filled to capacity by parents and friends of the 1936 graduating class. Music was furnished by the South Side orchestra under the direction of Jack W. Wainwright and by the Trinity Church Senior Choir.

The seniors met at the Trinity Church and marched in a body to the Shrine Auditorium. Junior mothers pinned roses on all the girls. The four hundred thirteen seniors then formed into lines of four, led by the senior class officers, and went to the Shrine auditorium. The officers were Fred Nye, Dorothy Crabill, Ruth Adler, Virginia Greiner, Dick Helm, and Bob Adams.

"Enter ye in at the strait gate; for wide is the gate, and broad is the way that leadeth to destruction, and many there be which go in thereat; because strait is the gate and narrow is the way which leadeth into life; and few there be that find it," quoted Rev. Krauss, counseling the graduates to choose, not the path of pleasure and ease, but the road which leads upward to genuine happiness, hard and long and narrow as it may appear.

Following the responsive reading, Mr. R. Nelson Snider and Mr. Merle J. Abbett assisted Rev. Krauss in the reading of the evening lesson. The senior choir of the Trinity church sang "Hark, the Vesper Hymn Is Stealing" and "The Heavens Are Telling" from the "Creation."

Mrs. Trygve Storm was in charge of the committee for the roses. She was assisted by Mrs. Roy Rippe, Mrs. Charles O. Hoff, Mrs. Frank J. Carto, Mrs. Hugh Edwards, Mrs. Hollis Logg, Mrs. Victor Rea, and Mrs. Fred Ream.

Decorations for the stage consisted of beautiful colored peonies. They were placed on huge baskets on each side of the stage.

The 1936 graduating class is one of the largest in the history of South Side.

Dot Crabill, E. Lietz Have All Attributes Of Personality Plus

According to the dictionary personality means that which constitutes a person. Therefore, it seems logical to assume that the seniors who are voted as having the best personalities of all the students in the class must be made of the finest attributes that can be found in people. The traits of their personalities surely must include understanding, happiness, willingness, respectfulness, and loads of friendliness.

Again this year the graduating seniors have selected five members of the class who have just such traits of character. Topping the list of girls is everyone's friend, Dorothy Crabill. Even with her many activities to keep her busy, Dorothy has always managed to share her pleasing personality with everyone. Two other well-liked people carry off the second-place honors for the girls. These are Ruth Adler and Millie Foellinger. It is necessary to meet these girls only once to get the spirit of their personalities.

However, it is not only girls who have pleasing personalities. The seniors have also selected two boys for these honors. The first choice is Ed Letz and the second is the senior class president, Fred Nye. These boys have also been very active in school and have made all who associated with them feel that they fulfill all the requirements for a good personality.

It is students such as these who in the recollections of years to come will be remembered as the members of the class of '36 who always had hosts of friends.

Ginny Gardner, Ed Kruse Are Chosen As Class Beauties

Most of the seniors have united to name Virginia Gardner and Sophia Bojinoff as the fairest damsels of the present graduating class. These same seniors have named Ed Kruse and Myron Jones as our best looking young men for the 1936 class.

Virginia Gardner, known far and wide as "Ginny," has been quite a celebrity in South Side Latin circles as she has held at various times the positions of president, treasurer, and secretary. And then again she was quite conspicuous at any of the Philo meetings as she was the pianist of that organization.

A few of "Ginny's" other activities include Times work, the Junior Math Club, G. A. A., and Art. At the present "Ginny" works at her brother's hamburger stand, taking orders for hamburgers. She looks right smart in the uniform of the occasion.

Sophia Bojinoff who came to South Side from the northern school of this city left at that school a brother of football fame. Now at South Side.

Jim Ellenwood of South Side football fame has been her favorite. She is the possessor of beautiful dark hair and those deep brown eyes that you read about.

Besides being a handsome sort of gentlemen, Ed Kruse was very valuable to the school as an athlete, having garnered many a point for South Side soaring over a horizontal stick with the aid of a pole and then Ed has scammed across the goal line of many of our football opponents to win the acclaim of all as a football star.

Inside the school Ed was active in the Torch and Wranglers clubs.

Myron Jones was so active in the many South Side extra-curricular activities that we can do naught but list them: intramural honors, letterman's vice-president, Times, Totem, Social Science, Rifle, Torch, Junior Hi-Y treasurer, Senior Hi-Y, Marchette, Band, Orchestra, and a few speaking contests.

Classes Of Dancing Accomplish Much

Alice Patterson, Gretchen Smith Teach Dancers Many Routines, Technique Of High Stepping.

A review of the work done in the dancing classes this year will well show how South Side's dancing activities cover an unusually large field. Miss Alice J. Patterson and Miss Gretchen Smith have introduced practically every type of dancing in their classes.

This semester Miss Smith's dancers have studied a pony ballet, a musical comedy number, an Egyptian ensemble, and a waltz clog. A tap routine and the rules of technique. Miss Alice J. Patterson and Miss Gretchen Smith have introduced practically every type of dancing in their classes.

The notebooks handed in by the girls are of very great value to them, especially if they take dancing more than one semester, because these books are accumulative. The various dance routines are copied into this book, and the rules of technique, and if the student is really interested, she can consult these books and pictures. Both instructors agreed that typed notebooks, with hand artistic work, are considered of a very high type.

List Term Grades

The following are students in Miss Patterson's classes who have done "A" or "A—" work during this semester: Eva Allison, Katherine Cook, Marjorie Hower, Lubadel Jungmans, Rehaldo Laudadio, Mary Althouse, Barbara Arney, Teddy Confer, Imogene Felian, Joan Roy, Elsie Letz, Marian, Betty Jane Griffith, Dorothy Tarney, Marjorie Quackenbush, and Betty Lee Wilson.

"A" plus students in Miss Smith's classes include Janet Hartman, Ruth Bade, and Barbara Scheele. Those who have done "A" or "A—" work include Marjorie Clapp, Betty Shideler, Helen D. Gregory, Beverly Bond, Peggy Kilpatrick, Elizabeth Neff, Dorothy Pifer, Marjorie Mitten, Ellen Addington, Grace Collins, Ann Hull, Marian, Mary, Margaret, Stalter, Mary Nicolai, Marjorie Ruckel, Bernadette Shearer, Peggy Woodhull, Vivian Woods, A. M. Baumgartner, Julia Crabill, Mary Moffat, Doris Siebold, Mildred Thayer, and Olive Zahn.

Dot Crabill, F. Nye Win Popularity Poll Of Graduate Seniors

Dorothy Crabill and Fred Nye were chosen the most popular girl and the most popular boy, respectively of the senior class. Their popularity has been carried throughout the senior year, because last fall Fred Nye was elected president and Dorothy vice-president of the senior class.

Dorothy gained some of her popularity by being active as U. S. A. president, Philo secretary, Wrangler, treasurer, a G. A. A. lettergirl, and a member of the So-Si-Y, 1500, Math-Science, Meterites, and Student Play-ers clubs. She has worked on the Times and Totem staffs.

Fred has also been useful as well as popular. He served as president of Letterman's Club and was a member of Junior and Senior H-Y. His main interest has been in sports in which he excelled in football and track.

Intramural basketball, volleyball, and baseball are some of his extra hobbies. He has been elected into the National Athletic Honor Society.

South Side's National Honor Society claims both Dorothy and Fred and the ballots proclaim them the most popular girl and boy of the class of 1936.

Second place winners are Bonslene Craig and Ed Kruse, both of whom have been outstanding in various activities.

Teachers And Friends, We Bid

1936 Diplomas Are Presented To 413 Seniors

Bryce Minier, Eric Beyer Lead Graduates In Process- ion In Picture Frame.

James Ellenwood Gives Invocation

Sybil Knudson, Ann Abbett, Manuel Rothberg Talk On Principles Of Education.

Leading their class, Bryce Minier, valedictorian, and Eric Beyer, salutatorian, began the annual commencement exercises in the gymnasium to-night at 8:30 p. m. by heading the procession of seniors.

At the exercises the graduates were given their diplomas, and outstanding members were honored. This year the giving out of diplomas was handled differently than in previous years. A large picture frame about eight feet tall was placed in front; when the rest of the gymnasium was darkened, this picture frame was lit up and one by one the graduates passed through and received their diplomas. Literally, for one moment, each graduate will have been "in the spotlight" during their lives.

Seniors Take Part

Jim Ellenwood, prominent senior athlete and public speaker, gave the invocation to the class.

Graduating seniors who also presented a part of the program are Sybil Knudson, Ann Abbett, and Manuel Rothberg. They spoke on "The Seven Cardinal Principles of Education." Miss Dorothy Benner, public speaking instructor, had charge of this part of the program.

Ann Abbett spoke first, taking the first two principles. Manuel followed with the third, fourth, and fifth principles; and Sybil finished with the last two and the conclusion.

Abbett Presents Awards

Mr. Merle J. Abbett, superintendent of Fort Wayne public schools, addressed the graduating seniors and presented the awards; the Kiwanis medal to the boy most outstanding in good citizenship, character, conduct, initiative, and moral standing; and the $50 scholarship of the Business and Professional Women's Club to an outstanding girl. John Bremer and Ursula Morton were the winners of these awards in 1935.

Voorhees Is Honored

During this year's graduation exercises, South Side honored one of her outstanding faculty members, Mr. Voorhees, for his long service in education. The graduating class sincerely wished to pay tribute where tribute is due.

Mr. Null, a veteran faculty member of South Side High School and head of the English Department of the Fort Wayne Public Schools, concluded the commencement speeches.

The music department orchestra, directed by Mr. Melvin Wright, offered "Jeanne d'Arc" from his collection of that name. Senior members took their seats at the close of the overture.

"Curly" Rudy, Jim Sweet Are Selected As Modest Seniors

True greatness lies in modesty, that quality of character denoting commonplaceness, humility and reserve of manner. It is a quality which cannot be purchased at any price and cannot be falsely played. You have all commended a certain person for his accomplishments. Did you realize that the virtue of his work lay in the fact that he did not boast about himself, but rather his work was so outstanding that you did the boasting? It doesn't pay to play a boastful part by bragging and pretending you are handsome or that you know it all. You are only fooling yourself for as the old saying goes "pride goes before a fall."

"Time Marches On." Soon you must qualify for your position in life. Whatever your attainment, shun show and applause.

The senior class of 1936 wishes to exult the four seniors who have been chosen by their fellow-students as being the most modest. The girl qualifying for first place in this vote was larcie Rudy, known to everyone as "Curly." She has a delightful personality, and a winning smile. She has participated in many school activities, belonging to Travel, G. A. A., U. S. A., Meterites, Junior Math, So-Si-Y, Philo, Social Science, Wranglers, Times, Girls' Rifle secretary, and an active worker in the office. Mary Michaels was chosen as the second most modest girl. She has been a leader, having been vice-president of Travel, publicity chairman of So-Si-Y, publicity chairman of U. S. A., and belonging to the German Club, Meterites, Philo, Extemp, National Honor Society. She also worked in the office. The boy qualified as the most modest was James Sweet. Jim is quiet, saying much in few words and is well liked. He has taken part in many extra-curricular activities. He was Library representative, treasurer of 1500, Philo president and belonged to Social Science, Math Science, Quill and Scroll, Times, Totem, and National Honor Society. He won honors in National Scholastic Current events contest and third in Quill and Scroll headlines and current events contest. Eric Beyer, salutatorian, was chosen as the second most modest boy. Eric is a diligent worker, and specialized in commercial subjects. He was president of German club and a member of the band, four year honor roll, and National Honor Society.

More Than Arms, Legs, And Torsos Make Men Great

"A great man," they say. "Humph," you may remark. "He had a head, two arms, two legs, and a torso. I have all those, and I am not great. What did he have that I haven't?"

HE very probably had a will for perfection. HE never let a job go half-done. HE discarded work and started all over if it did not satisfy him. Perfection, and perfection alone, satisfied him. HE gave HIS job every ounce of his ability. HE did not stop when he had one more iota of energy.

Did Shakespeare stop when he had written his first successful play? Did Edison get a full night's sleep when work lay ahead? Did Theodore Roosevelt choose to spend his life enjoying inherited wealth? Did Descartes, a bed-ridden invalid, fill eight-and-a-half pages in the Britannica by sleeping? Did Napoleon stop while victory lay ahead?

Someone has said a successful man is never too busy to do one more task, but that an unsuccessful man has always too much to do.

Perfection breeds a class of its own.

Carrying On

With Jo-Anne Smith

Note: Since Jo-Anne Smith wrote the first "Carrying On" column, the Times thought it a nice bit of sentiment to let her finish the series. With this column, "Carrying On" is definitely dead.—Ed.

It's all over—the tumult and the shouting are finished. And, since the receding thunder of acclaim for us, the class of '36, foretells a beautiful day, let's (of all things) do a washing. We've been through the Wringer every week and have come out more or less spotless, so—on to the wash.

In and out of the wash with the Lettermen, or what athletes do while their sweaters are being Luxed:

It's a love-set between Ed Leitz and Max Roth and the odds are five to ten—the real thing....Chalk up some ten strikes for these "champs" and their partners at the senior dance: Dick Dochterman and Harriet Yapp, Al Faux and Max Borchert, Bill Hoblet and Millie Foellinger, (Little Caesar) Meyers and Max Mariotte, and, of course, Morgan Harrison and the ne plus ultra Ruth Adler.

Up and down the line with other illustrious seniors, or pinning them down to the straight and narrow:

Street scene: Suave Janet Fisher and Fordless Dochterman collaborating on art and the juicy possibilities of popticles.... Help love out! Pick up Helen Potter if you chance to see her hitch-hiking towards Michigan this summer.... As delicious and entertaining as ever, Two-point-perspective Grandy longs for the days when he composed horse-operas for the piano.... We wish we remembered: How to say; forget it, you're welcome, or shucks, twasn't nothing in French.... half the things we had to look up in Miss Demaree's dictionary.... what Bob Storm has on Jim Sweet that makes Sweet pay and pay every week.... the position Mr. Null affects while thinking.... something interesting.

Putting them all in one basket, or (We fold.)

A simple test for those who think they have a superior sense of values. Do you appreciate:

1. Betty Meig's charm?
2. Mr. Wilson's pessimism?
3. Sybil Knudson's humour?
4. Ruth Adler's energy?
5. Miss Magley's giggle?
6. Your diplomas?
7. Rosie Chappell's bangs?
8. The end of this?

If you can answer "Yes" to the preceding questions, your best friend won't have to tell you—you'll know you're deserving of a pass-out from South Side.

Who's Who In Archerland

Once upon a time there was a little boy named Eric who decided he was going to be the "tops." He kept his aspiration a deep dark secret. No one paid much attention to this "pug-nosed pusher," but he soon attracted their attention. Not wishing to be disturbed in his so-called struggle, he sort of got in a corner by himself, put his nose in a book and left it there. Once in a while he would tear himself away to get other than "book larnin'."

The old saying, "All work and no play makes Jack a dull boy" may be contradicted in this case, for Eric's studiousness is only exceeded by his extremely fine personality and good humor. Never let it be said that he is dull!

As a public speaker, Eric did himself proud. Although rather bashful, the unequaled Miss Benner made him a confident speaker, at ease and sure of himself.

Not only a speaker is Eric, but also a musician. He has been quite active in the band since he has been in South Side.

How about his "gibberish"? He has a German vocabulary, as well as an English—and when we say an English vocabulary, we mean vocabulary! He not only talks German but was the president of the German Club.

Now, that we have saved the best till last—we can't keep it to ourselves any longer.

Eric has three great accomplishments, that of being a four-year honor roll student; another accomplishment, the National Honor Society; and lastly, Eric Beyer is the Salutatorian of the Senior Class of 1936!

Now is the time
For all good men
To come to aid
Their party's head.

We've made a rhyme
You do not ken?
Nine lines are laid
Among the dead.

We're filling holes
In make-up, dear;
If we did not,
There'd be naught here!

Ann Abbett wants her name in this;
But though we're filling space,
To really make the ending rhyme,
Her first name should be Grace.

We'll never earn a poet's place
As long as we are.....filling space.

Shoes and Ships

HELLO — And now the time has come to part. We've had a swell time while in the old school and we depart rather sorrowfully. True, a few weeks ago we looked forward to graduation with no little joy. Now we wonder. Some of us will be successes, others—We feel that this column would be incomplete without a pun. Therefore, remember that your life should be like a door. One side will be marked "Pull." You need that. The other side will be marked "Push." Don't forget that you need that also.

—D. H.

PALMY—The cruel hands of Fate have once again swooped down upon the South Side faculty or at least upon one member of that noble institution. Not many months ago while browsing through a commencement program issued from the Decatur High School, our eyes fell unconsciously upon a beautiful name. Could anything be more attractive than "Olive Blossom"? The answer is definitely, "No." Then we looked at the last name. Ah, could it be true? No. But, yes it was. Olive Blossom Perkins—the moniker of our charming French instructor. We are really dreadfully sorry, Miss Perkins, that Fate has so willed. In this moment of deep heartfelt sympathy we promise never to disclose the year that commencement was held.

MEMORIES — This column would not be complete without mention of some of the memories we will always have of our days at South Side. Among them are getting our shoes dumped out on the gym floor—serving our one-and-only ninth period—how we used to be so careful about having clean gym suits—John Grandy sitting on a water fountain while it was operating—Mr. Heine's disgust when we used a blue indelible pencil in pointing out the parts of a frog and got his froggy all blue—our first dance and the way we stepped on the fair damsel's feet—Mr. Gilbert burning his right hand with a lighted match while explaining that the gunpowder in his left hand would not burn—Miss Hodgson combining some darned good philosophy with algebra—Among the most touching moments of our school career, we would include the spirited pep talk given by Mr. Vorhees and the small voice of the little old man who had never missed a South Side athletic contest—wondering how those big seniors skipped classes (We are now acquainted with the technique).

Mademoiselle Modiste

By Rosemary Chappell

From the time the first mention is made of the approaching graduation until the "big day," a senior girl is thinking continually of clothes for graduation.

It is hard for some girls to decide upon their graduation dresses; others find their problem easily solved.

Many types of dresses may be chosen to wear during the time of graduation. A sweet and simple frock of peach-color washable material is chosen by Millie Foellinger. The dress has a collar which is fashioned of a band of the material. Sleeves formed of narrow bands match the collar. A wide belt with a brown buckle accentuates the waistline. This buckle matches the row of brown buttons which extend from the belt to the hem of the dress. The skirt is simple and contains no slits or pleats.

Linen is the popular material chosen by many girls because it is cool. Martha Morgan finds comfort in a dress of aquamarine linen. It is the "jacket and skirt" type frock. The jacket buttons down the front with brown cone-shaped buttons. It has a plain round collar. The back of the jacket is tucked. It has sleeves with pleats in them. The skirt is simply fashioned with a pleat in the front.

Roseanne Certia also likes linen. Her frock is of dusty pink. It is trimmed in white chocking. The trimming is found on the collar and cuffs. White crocheted buttons form a row down the front of the blouse. The sleeves are puffed and have small cuffs which match the collar. A pleat adds a tailored touch to the back of the blouse. In the front, the blouse is ornamented by two pockets. Two half-pleats in the skirt and a wide belt add the finishing touch to this dainty frock.

Flowered crepes are also "tops" in the eyes of the young girl graduates. A crepe of var-colored flowers with a lavender predominating strikes the fancy of Theo Schurenborg. It features a new fashion—the stitched collar and cuffs. The sleeves are short and full, and the collar is fashioned along the shirtwaist type. A bow of navy blue taffeta trims the neck of the frock. The square yoke is trimmed with small blue taffeta buttons in the front. There are two pleats in the skirt. Navy blue taffeta also trims the wide belt.

Bon Silene Craig has chosen a flowered washable crepe with a white background. The design contains flowers of dune red, lavender, and light green. A lavender scarf forms a collar around the neckline. The sleeves are plain, being ornamented only with cuffs. Shirtwaist style is featured in the blouse, which has a square yoke. Small blue glass buttons are in a row down the front. There is a pleat in the back of the blouse. Another new spring feature is the peplum, which is shown in this frock. The skirt has one pleat in the front.

A dress of pink crepe is worn by Harriett Yapp. It has a vestee of violet crepe. This vestee has a double pleat down the front. Over this, a "butter-boy" jacket of pink with three-quarter length puffed sleeves is worn. It is fastened by a pink tie and is trimmed with violet corded buttons.

Old Columns Revived

Today, we revive some of the old columns which used to run on this page, just as a sort of memory. The old authors have been obtained for all of them, so they are the real thing. Hope you like them.—Ed.

Second Table

BACK AGAIN—After two whole semesters, we're back again. Loads of things have happened in the meantime—new teachers, several of them, have come; other teachers, long here and beloved, have left; new faces have been added to the graduating list, new friends acquired. Yes, even old "romances" gone—new ones taking their place. (Aha, a dirt column!)

WHO DOESN'T?—Who doesn't like dirt? Why, everyone, senior or freshman, loves to see his name in a column. For this reason, columns like this break into print. For the benefit of those who have conveniently short memories (and we don't blame you) this was once a column. Now, just because we're seniors and privileged characters (?) we're back to haunt you-all. This will be an attempt to follow somewhat the original plan of the old Second Table.

THE SENTIMENTALIST — Yes, South Side and all the fun we've had.... Our lovely luscious green-and-white Totem.... Blondes with dark blue shirts.... The smell of rain on a warm evening.... and leaves burning in fall. No, the thought of leaving.... people who write across the faces of Totem pictures.... even if they don't look like Ross Alexander.

HASHED OVER—Once we ran a series of thumb-nail descriptions of faculty members by giving their favorite quotations. Here for old time's sake, are some of our favorites: Mr. Murphy—"Go to sleep if you like, but for heaven's sake, don't snore!" Miss Hemmer—"What if we all did it?" Mr. Heine—"He never says a word (apologies to Tish-Tash)." Mr. Steiner—"Pass your papers to the right, placing your names on top as they come to you."

AND HERE—After a whole year of careful observation, are a few more: Mr. Murch—"I forgot; I can call it anything but 'absurd.'" Miss Rinehart—"Let's get ready for our individual conferences." Mr. Friddle—"And that's how they began calling me 'cowboy'."

REMEMBER WHEN?—These people were inseparable: Beanie Dygert and Risher Hall.... Laverne Boyce and Dick Russell.... Betty Kiene and Chuck Koopman.... Catherine Allen-dorph and Midshipman Bloemer.... Don't these names recall others? Our memory, we admit, is more than a little rusty.

DITTO—Remember these person-ages and things we had around? Miss Bickhart, who taught some of us citizenship.... Miss Smith, who taught us to boil water without burning it.... And Mr. Schaefer, who loved to hear freshies warble? Remember when the Times was distributed during the first period—there were no home rooms then.... How we looked up to Herb Merrill, president of the then senior class.... How scared a lot of us were of the Times room.... How we pondered over the advisability of joining a club.

REMINISCING — These were some of the things we used to get

Candid Camera

Comes once more a long line of periods broken by scattered letters; and our defunct column may truly be laid among the dust of expired ages.... with King Tut, perhaps.... yes, he's pretty dry, too.

But before cobwebs clutter our memory, we sneak back to the days of 1932-1936.

Memories: "And then came dawn, the rosy-fingered.... How we gathered in the gym as freshies.... Ruth Adler and Helen Anderson, the eternal duo.... Ann Abbett's first appearance.... Gerry Platt, torch singer.... Social Science pancake supper.... Un-assigned days.... Patty Patchet and Times Ticklers.... First date.... Trying to keep the student leaders' locker room private.... Sitting down on a ukelele.... Watching John Box walk on the end of the Paramount Theatre fire escape.... Time when the usher unattended to take on all seven of us.... Minier's first time on skates, at Bell's.... Polly Burton inquiring as to the time.... When they put tubs under leaks in the roof.... Bonnie Craig playing baseball with the corner lads.... Dorothy Durbin's nonpareil (cf. Jodi Smith's "ne plus ultra." See "Carrying On," dirt column, Waggin' Tongues.... Gouging unexpected nunks from wood-turning exercises.... Theo Schurenborg's smile.... also her name.... The Egyptian campaign as related to Miss Smeltzly.

The other columns seem to be making prophecies, but we aren't. Four years ago, the Times asked grade teachers what they thought the present, beg pardon, past 12A's would do in high school.

Score: prophecies, 38; correct, 2!

Biography: South Side Times, May 12, 1932.

Fort Wayne.... we've lived here a goodly time. It's not a hick town and not a dirty metropolis. We don't consist entirely of factory buildings, billboards, smoke, and surly, regimented people who think they're civilized; nor do we consist of country hayseeds. Why not keep it thus? To heck with the Chamber of Commerce.

We've been wondering.... How long will the school remember us.... And what difference it makes.... About a way to make a million dollars quick.... What Miss Harvey's golf score is.... About Warren Zelt, who didn't get quite enough credits to graduate.... He went to Concordia and their course is different than ours.... If Fort Wayne will ever get a decent place to go swimming.... Why anyone should get gushy about leaving high school.... It can't be helped.... If our ivy will ever grow.

Well, g'bye, now.... They're going to.... make us get.... out and.... work.

As We Gaze Into The Future

According to Mr. Snider, our dear old Alma "Mammy" is in need of an auditorium, more class rooms, wider halls, more office space, more teachers, the gym should be moved from the center of the building, and the plastering and painting should be touched up. All of these improvements are worthy enough to be recognized, and since the class of '36 will not be here to see the changes, we'll try to

G.A.A. Members Plan Breakfast For Tomorrow

Letter Girls Plan Initiation; Berning And Hower Head Plans For The Initiation.

Witty Phrophecy Written By Menze

Freshman To Get Numerals; Seniors Receive Letters, M. Hower High Point Girl.

"Yippee! Wheel! Watch out! Come on kid!" What's all the noise about? Oh, it is just some of the anticipated cries that will be heard at the G. A. A. breakfast tomorrow morning at 6 a. m. In the cool morning shade of Foster Park's gigantic oaks, elms, etc., all G. A. A.ers are promised a very good time.

First G. A. A. Breakfast

This is the first time that the organization has ever had such an event, but from now on it will take place annually. It is planned simply to make a great end of a great school year by having a general get-together and by awarding letters and numerals to all who have earned them.

It is being taken for granted that it will be pretty cool so early in the morning, so there will be hot dogs present to warm up each and every girl. These will be devoured before any part of the program is presented.

The actual program will take only a short time. The first thing will be a prophecy for the seniors given by Leona Menze in her own witty style. Following that, Miss Smith will present the freshmen with their numerals and Miss Patterson will present the upperclassmen with their letters and numerals. To end the program in an impressive (?) way, the Lettergirls will stage a public initiation of all new members.

Freshmen Winners

Honor Sophomores, Juniors

The sophomores receiving numerals are: Martha Bacon, Mervyn Bohne, Elsie Campbell, Evelyn Heine, Marjorie Macke, Maxine Ormiston, Margaret Stalter, and Viola Yanney. The juniors receiving numerals are: Evelyn Chandler, Jeanette Crum, and Marjorie Gould.

Two sophomores, Betty Eisenacher, and Eleanor Rarick; one junior, Marjorie Meyer; and four seniors, Helen Allen, Jane Bligh, Jane Loomis, and Eleanor Schremser, will receive their letters.

Prettiest Smiles Are Owned By Ed Kruse, Vera Venie Ellinger

Vera Ellinger, Virginia Gardner, Theo Schurenberg, Edward Kruse, Louis Bonish, and Fred Nye have been chosen by the members of the senior class as the six persons having the prettiest smiles.

The girl who possesses the prettiest smile is Vera Ellinger, the girl with the dimples. "Venie" has been active in extra-curricular activities here in school, having been a member of the Art, S. P. C., Wranglers, 1500, Times and Library clubs.

The two persons who tied for second place, "Ginny" Gardner and Theo Schurenberg, have also been active while in school. Theo has been president of French club, and a member of Philo, S. P. C., Travel, and active in extemp. "Ginny" has been a member of the G. A. A.; Philo, pianist; Latin president, treasurer, and secretary; Times, Junior Math, and Art. She was a member of the senior social council, four-year honor roll, and National Honor Society. She was chosen as the best looking girl and best dressed.

Edward Kruse won first place in the boy's division for the prettiest smile. "Ed" went in for sports, taking part in varsity basketball, football and track, besides belonging to Lettermen's, Torch, and Wranglers.

Fred Nye and Louis Bonish tied for second place. "Bill" Bonish has taken an active part in 1500, Math Science, band, orchestra, and Wranglers. He was editor of the 1936 Totem, Quill and Scroll national winner, placed third in extemp, and was member of National Honor Society, Quill and Scroll, and four-year honor roll. "Bill" Nye has been junior and senior class president. He was a member of Junior and Senior Hi-Y, National Athletic Honor Society, and has taken active part in varsity football, track, intramural basketball, volleyball, and baseball.

High Point Man

Jim Ellenwood

Jim Ellenwood, high point man in athletic department, was voted the best all-around athlete.

Marge Hower, Jim Ellenwood Can Take "Bumps" Says Vote

Marjorie Hower was found to be the best sport of the girls in the senior questionnaire recently. She is the G. A. A. president, lettergirl, on the executive board, member of Student Leaders Club, was active in speedball, baseball, track, tennis, swimming, S. P. C., Math-Science, and on the Times staff. She was also a member of the National Honor Society.

Helen Flaig was close behind Marjorie taking second place. She was the president of the Meterites Club, director of music for Philo Club, an active member of Travel Club, S. P. C., Wranglers, Math-Science, Totem, and Times staffs. She has earned a music letter and belongs to the Harp Ensemble and Glee Club. She has taken an active part in the minstrel shows, operettas, and extemp contests.

The best sports of the boys, as you might guess, are also prominent in athletics.

The boy taking first place was Jim Ellenwood. He is a varsity basketball and football man, belongs to the Lettermen's Club, Senior Hi-Y, and belongs to the track team. The second was Fred Nye, the president of the senior class. He belonged to the Junior and Senior Hi-Y, Lettermen, varsity football, track, National Honor Society, intramural basketball, volleyball, and baseball.

Remember When

Before the 1932 annual Central-South Side grid class we had a pep meeting at the Paramount Theatre?

South Side's track squad took a third place at the State Outdoor Track meet?

The Archers golf team won fifth place at the State Golf meet?

South Side's football squad brought home first honors in the Field Day held at Camp Crosey?

When our football boys scampered around and fell on the hard cruel bare ground in the stadium until someone got a brainstorm and planted grass?

The Archers football squad doped to be beaten badly by Central turned the tables and walloped the Tigers badly?

Attendance was greatly diminished in school classes due to the fact that Freddy Lenz, popular South Side halfback was in the Lutheran Hospital and everyone skipped to visit him?

Hooty Hall's faded basketball drawers brought the squad good luck until he got a new pair and the time Hooty lost two of his foremost incisors in a practice scrimmage?

The Wimpy Wiggle Dance under the auspices of the Letterman's Club? The football squad went for an outing to Wainwright's Camp?

G.A.A. Finish Their Voyage With Success

Numerals And Letters Will Be Given At Their Breakfast; Seniors Leave Fate.

At the end of another thrilling and successful voyage, the good ship G. A. A., with a membership of 300, with its admirals, its captains, its mates, and the crew, thumb back the pages of the logbook.

Tennis reigned supreme the first few weeks in the form of a tourney, singles crown being taken by Margaret Ruhl and doubles by Leona Menze and Margaret Ruhl. Queen "tennis" and golden autumn days were succeeded by hockey and speedball and frosty weather.

G. A. A. girls are socially inclined, however, so one night, All-Hallows Eve, was given for the enjoyment of the crew. Games, entertainment, dancing, and good eats featured this event. Prizes were awarded Martha Franz for the prettiest costume, Doris Duffy and Velma Connett for the funniest, and Gwen Roberts for the most original.

Honor Service Held

Volleyball season, all too short for most of the members, gave way to basketball and the honor tourney. Congratulations went to the junior team, led by Leona Menze, and composed of Margaret Ruhl, Margery Ruhl, Anna Marie Baumgartner, Edna Disler, Betty Beyrau, Ada Schuelke, Helen Humcke, Winnie Locker, Bette Harnish, Barbara Lee Scheele, and Dorothy Scheele.

Outstanding members were given honors at the annual Recognition Service, which was held in January. Ruth Adler, Virginia Busse, Martha Franz, Delores Miller, Edith Pawlisch, Dorothy Roubush, Mary Shaffer, Mildred Closs, Edna Disler, Ruth Eysen, Betty Harnish, Evelyn Kruse, Hazel Noll, Ada Schuelke, Betty Schultz, and Jeanette Brown received their letters.

"The Duke Ranch" was the theme of the vaudeville which was given by the music and girls' physical education departments. A colorful setting enhanced the dancing and singing.

Have Track Meet

After basketball, the members of the crew kept in trim by tumbling, baseball, and track. The track meet was also won by the juniors; Betty Eisenacher, a sophomore, was high-point girl.

Four hundred girls participated in the annual exhibition and made it, as usual, a huge success. Tumbling, dancing, games, roller-skating, and musical stars, all added their bit to the spectacle. The grand march was probably the most spectacular and colorful sight.

Toward the end of the voyage, the crew gathered at a banquet, the theme of which was "A Day at the Beach." Captain Margie Hower led in songs; Miss Pittenger, Admiral; Frieda Schubert, Raft, representing the freshmen; Betty Eisenacher, Leona Menze, Sailboat, representing the juniors; Marge Cartwright, Yacht, representing the seniors; Mr. Friddle, Life Guard; Miss Smith, Second Mate; and Miss Patterson, First Mate, were speakers.

For the first time a breakfast is going to be given by the G. A. A. It will take place at 6 o'clock Thursday, June 11, at Foster Park. Numerals and letters will then be awarded.

Voyage Is Pleasant

It has been a pleasant voyage and, for many, it will be the last one on the G. A. A. Miss Patterson and Miss Smith, advisers; Marjorie Hower, president; Marjorie Cartwright, vice-president; Leona Menze, secretary; Enita Snavelly, manager of sports; Virginia Menze, freshman representative; and Barbara Raymond, Inter-Club Congress representative, were responsible for the smooth sailing during the last year.

Seniors are sorry to leave such pleasant surroundings and companions; but there are larger ships to be guided somewhere else, and they will leave the fate of the G. A. A. in the hands of the remaining members without a misgiving.

Graduating Tracksters Have Ambitions To Work Or Study

Among the 413 graduates of the class of 1936 from South Side High School eight of these graduates were formerly varsity track stars. Six out of eight of these cinder-pounders intend to continue their education in college and participate in various sports.

Edward Kruse, varsity pole-vaulter for the past three years, hopes to follow the profession of his father. He intends to enter Notre Dame and study to be a doctor. While attending Notre Dame, Ed hopes to earn a letter in track and football.

While we are on the subject of medicine, another one of our varsity men hopes to be a successful doctor. Miller Makey, middle distance runner and one of the members of the mile-relays team, intends to enter the University of Northwestern in September and study medicine. Miller does not know if he will have time to participate in sports but he hopes to run the 440-yard run for Northwestern.

Ed Leitz, that prominent curly-headed senior who developed into the best shot putter who ever competed for the Archers, intends to enter Indiana University and take a chemical engineering course. While he is attempting to blow-up the University he says that he might go out for track and throw the shot.

Chuck Stone, the red-headed boy who made the track team in his freshman year but who has only had one date during four years of school, hopes to enter Butler next fall and take a coaching course. "Chuck" hopes to carry the colors for Butler in the sprints and broad jump.

Max Goddard, middle distance runner, has ambitions to enter Purdue and become a mechanical engineer. While attending the Boilermakers' university, Goddard hopes to run the middle-distance for them.

A. Schoenfeld and F. Sutter, both middle-distance runners, seem to have the same ambition, both do not intend to enter college but hope to seek employment at the International Harvester Co.

Music, Wittenberg, Assembles Highest In Grads Estimation

"Which assembly did you like best?" "That's hard to choose, but I think I liked the music assemblies best, but I liked the Wittenberg assembly too."

This is what the seniors were saying when they started making out the questionnaires. The music assemblies which consisted of popular, classical, and opera music, were chosen as the assemblies liked best. The Wittenberg assembly was second in popularity. The last music assembly, the one liked best of all, had two guest artists who were W. V. Cronk, well-known violinist and Bernard Raney, cornetist.

The Wittenberg assembly consisted of the students of that college demonstrating jiu-jitsu and fencing. The leader of that assembly was an Olympic star. He demonstrated the different types of fencing. He also showed much skill in the art of jiu-jitsu. Professor Blough of Wittenberg's School of Education explained the work as it was demonstrated.

Skirts and Sports

The first and yet the last. Yes, the first annual G. A. A. breakfast will be held at Foster Park tomorrow; but alas, it is the last one for the seniors.

What is this about Helen Forker and her horse shoe pitching? Just ask her about it and you will hear some amazing stories.

Associating with one with whom dancing is supreme nearly always produces the same results, even in dogs. Heather Adaire has now taken up creative dancing.

Well, vacation has come, girls are free, and the tennis courts are ready for use. Every girl should get out her trusty racket and practice for the fall tournament.

Ruth Berning's ability to handle a little air rifle is really astonishing. Her ability to hit the target is even more amazing. Ask her to tell how she does it.

At last the seniors must bid the G. A. A. farewell; but, although they shall leave it, they will always have a soft spot for it in their hearts.

Well, the Hindu craze is over at last. No more shall nice respectable people be called upon to get down on their knees and touch the floor with their heads three times. No, it is all quiet on the western front.

Can anybody imagine Leona Menze taking dancing? Well, neither can we. However, miracles are bound to happen. Who knows, she may take it into her head to fit around on the gym floors next fall. This is a scoop!

Well, seniors, let's have a big turnout at the breakfast tomorrow. This is your last time to participate in any of the dear old G. A. A. activities. Make the most of your opportunity.

Congratulations, freshmen, sophomores, juniors and seniors, for receiving your awards. Special congratulations to Marge Hower!

So Virginia (Ginger) Menze makes it a point to smile in her sleep. You don't believe it? Then look at her Totem executive board picture.

Cinder Pounders Earn Many Points

Several Senior Boys Get Letters; Others Just Fall Short Of Required Two Hundred Points.

The Archer cinder pounders of 1936 were comparatively weak, but many points were scored toward varsity letters by eight graduating seniors. Over forty per cent of the points won by the green track squad during the season were scored by two pals "Red" Stone and Ed Leitz.

"Red" Stone who has been on the varsity track squad for the past four years participated in three events, 100-yard dash, broad jump and one-half mile relay. In these three events Stone scored over one hundred and fifty points to earn his second letter.

Ed Leitz, Archer shot putter from the gas house gang, who learned how to heave the shot by throwing brake-arms on the railroad tracks was next highest scorer. Leitz scored 140 points in his two events, the broad jump and shot put. Ed was the only Archer to place in the state meet at Butler field, where he won fourth place in the shot put.

Edward Kruse also was a consistent point winner for the Archers. Kruse scored a total of 90 points toward his second letter.

Aaron Schoenfeld the middle-distance runner, learned how to run his event serving eighth periods for Mr. Briner by running around the top of the gym. Aaron earned 85 points — enough to complete his 200 required points and receive his first letter.

Miller Makey, the boy who spent many hours training in track but never quite succeeded in earning a letter but did make the National Honor Society, scored 75 points toward a letter.

F. Sutter and Max Goddard, two boys who were pals through their four years in high school, worked hard to earn a letter but fell short of 200 points. In their senior year on the squad they both ran middle-distance events for the Archers. Sutter scored 70 points toward a letter and Goddard earned 55 points.

Two Indiana Universities Draw Majority Of This Year's Grads

As commencement approaches the seniors think more and more about what they are going to do next fall. Perhaps a lump forms in the throats of many of the graduates. The thought that they will not be returning to this school leaves seniors with a rather empty feeling. But then there is a feeling that after all next fall will bring the experience of going away to college. The school years of the seniors are not over when there is the thought of college before them.

The most popular college among this year's seniors is our own state university, Indiana. Among the four hundred graduating students the majority selected Indiana as the college that they would attend next fall. The second most popular college was another one here in Indiana, Purdue.

From the above selections it seems as though the most of the seniors are planning on staying right here in Indiana.

Besides finding out the most popular colleges by balloting, several students were asked where they intended going to school. Their replies are as follows:

Norman Buck—DePauw.
Helen Doenges—Indiana — here I come!
Ann Abbett—Indiana.
Jo Anne Smith—Western.
Dick Helm—Butler.
Manuel Rothberg—Indiana.
Dale Shupe—Indiana, maybe.
Maxine Mariotte—Wittenberg.
Maxine Borchert—Wittenberg.
Ginny Gardner—Purdue.
Dorothy Durbin—DePauw.
Bryce Minier—Northwestern.
Myrtle Jones—Florida, probably.
Burton Hardendorf—Purdue, if I go.
Earl Paxton—Purdue.
Jim Sweet—DePauw, probably. I don't know.

Graduation Claims Dependable Football, Basketball, Tracksters

Next year's athletic teams will suffer when some of our foremost and most dependable athletes graduate this week. Some of these fellows have played in three sports and some have specialized in only one but they have all worked hard and given their best and have won many honors.

Several of the boys are now working and others intend to go to college while others have jobs waiting for them when they get their sheepskins.

First of all we have Jim Ellenwood, who is probably one of the best athletes South Side has ever had. Jim has won seven letters in football and basketball and has been on the All-City eleven twice and won honorable mention for all-state twice. Jim gave up his tackle post last year at which he inevitably would have been named All-State to play at end where his services were needed most. Jim hopes to go to Northwestern this fall.

Close, Leitz Leave

Joe Close is another graduating senior who will be missed next year particularly by the basketball squad. Joe played center and guard positions on the varsity for two years and was named to various honorary positions on the All-City and All-Sectional tourney squads. Joe works at the Joseph Mills now and hopes to attend college this fall.

The track team will be at a loss for a shot putter to take the place of Ed Leitz who has garnered many points for South Side in his event. Ed now holds the field record for the shotput here at South Side, not to mention other places where he holds the field record.

Other Graduates Named

One athlete who has been outstanding in football and basketball is Bud Lee, called Floyd Elmer for short, who, by the way, won the King Trophy for sportsmanship and most valuable player to his team. Bud has played in

Vanity Conspicuous In Make-Up Of Four South Side Seniors

Orchids to some! Onions to others! Which shall it be? Let the winners take their choices. Anyhow—courtesy Cracie Allen—here's some more results of that famous senior questionnaire of 1936.

Vanity may be defined in the following ways—(1) Compact used for powdering one's nose; (2) Excessive pride of self accomplishments, appearance, and possessions; (3) Egoism; (4) Conceit. Use your own judgment as to which is applicable.

This not-so-commendable characteristic is conspicuous in the make-up of Ann Abbett and Louis Bonsib, according to the opinions of the majority of seniors. Ann and Louis are both members of the publications, Quill and Scroll, Student Players, National Honor Society, and four year honor roll; so perhaps they have sufficient reason to be somewhat vain.

Gwen Horn and Dick Busch, two other very prominent graduates came in second in this vote.

In spite of this, these people have charming personalities and enough other commendable characteristics to make up for this one.

He was elected to National Honor Society.

These seven Junior Rotarians, representatives from South Side to the Rotary noon luncheons for one month each, during the last school year, were South Side's representatives this year too.

H. Anderson, Ruth Adler Are Tied For Most Perfect Ladies

The class of 1936 is very fortunate to have within its number at least four perfect ladies. According to the ballots, Ruth Adler and Helen Anderson tie for first and Dorothy Crabbill and Mary Michaels tie for second as perfect ladies in the senior class.

It is very difficult to enumerate the qualities and characteristics of a perfect lady. However, a few of the characteristics which these four perfect ladies possess are very outstanding. Among them we find poise, grace, friendliness and dignity. All four of these girls excel in all of these characteristics.

All of our four perfect ladies have been especially active in extra-curricular activities. They are all members of the National Honor Society. Ruth has been active in Philo and on the Totem staff. Dorothy has been especially outstanding in fulfilling her duties as circulation manager of the Totem. Helen has been active in So-Si-Y and was also a major Totem staff member. Mary's activities include Travel Club, Philo, and So-Si-Y.

Bryce Minier, Dick Helm Share Honor For Perfect "Gent"

They tell us in history class that a gentleman by the name of Sir Walter Raleigh spread his coat in the mud when Queen Elizabeth started to cross it. Maybe these South Side boys don't go that far, but they really are 1936 style gentlemen to the nth degree, at least, in the opinion of the students of our dear Alma Mater. Bryce Minier and Dick Helm share the honor of being the most perfect in South Side with Ed Kruse, running a close second.

Maybe intelligence goes hand in hand with gentlemanly conduct, for Bryce Minier is the valedictorian of the graduating class, and Dick Helm was elected to the National Honor Society, and Ed Kruse shows his brainy cleverness by his wonderful athletic record.

Bryce, who has headed the Social Science, Booster, 1500, and Torch clubs and the Inter-Club Congress, was a member of the Math Science, Junior Math, National Honor Society, Quill and Scroll, the Safety Council; was the general manager of Times and was business manager of the Totem.

Dick Helm has used his mighty strength in being sergeant-at-arms of the Wranglers Club. He has been S. P. C. president, belonged to Math-Science, Social Science, Junior Hi-Y, president, 1500, Times, and has taken places in many journalistic contests.

Ed Kruse has two letters in varsity football and track, has belonged to Torch, Wranglers, and was elected best looking boy in the Totem.

Thus these three "tops" in the gentlemen of South Side have spent four glorious years within these portals.

Mr. Murphy Cites 19 Best Notebooks

Books Give Evidence Of Hard Work; Mr. Murphy Is Pleased With Quality And Quantity.

Each student of the second period Economics class of Mr. Murphy submitted his notebook on the final day designated to give the class a perfect record for turning in their work.

Of all his economics classes, totaling ninety-two students, eighty-six are graduating seniors. Eighty-eight of these pupils handed in their notebooks on time; the other four were only one day late.

Nineteen of the notebooks submitted were cited for their excellent quality although it was very difficult to select these books. Four of these books were noted for their quantity as well as their quality.

The people submitting the notebooks cited for their fine quality are as follows: Fay Bechtold, John Brown, Rosemary Chappell, Virginia Gardner, Mary Martha Hobrock, Georgianna Jacobs, Hadig, Ruth Stoner, Virginia Zeig, Dorothy Douglas, Allen Faux, Virginia Greiner, Maxine Mariotte, Helen Basford, Anna Bremer, Sybil Knudson, and Eliza Bess Lucas.

Mr. Murphy is very well pleased with the note books as a whole. He says, "There are other books rated just as high for credit as the above mentioned books. Judging such work is difficult, so I shall not try to say which one is the best among so many. With a very few exceptions, I can honestly say that the entire group of economics students have made excellent note books. And who is able to say who has worked the hardest. As your teacher, I do not even care to try and guess. Your books give evidence that you have worked hard and tried to understand a difficult subject."

Eyes-A-Mugging, Is Game Won By Louis Bonsib, Selma Liff

Uh one, Selma; uh two, Sophie; uh three, Bob; uh four, Louis. "Eyes-a-mugging—wa dee ah de ah!" It seems that a truly great honor has been bestowed upon several of our seniors. A quartette has been selected by its fellow seniors (and senioritis) for having the most beautiful orbs of any other people in the universe. Yes, they rank thus highly even among the oldest and most beautiful members of South Side High School! Selma Liff, Sophie Bojinoff, Bob Adams and Louis Bonsib will be, we are certain, keep up the good work; it is hoped they will always cheerfully "carry on" and keep their eyes toward the sun (being meanwhile careful not to stumble over a chair or run into a door).

It is not often that such an honor is bestowed, but it is altogether fitting and proper that we should do this. Sophia has always kept her eyes toward the sun; she has thrown caution to the four winds, flaunting with the sun's beaming smiles. Result—a golden pair of orbs which appear to the person who prefers chocolate to be a luscious chocolate brown.

Selma owes all her orbicular beauty to the surroundings which she has given her eyes. They gazed steadily upon the contents of the Totem, the Philo Girls, the Student Players, the Mathematics, the many worthwhile books reclining on the South Side library shelves, various athletics for girls, and the artistic touches which fall from her pencil and brush. "Nuff said!"

Bob Adams brought about a sudden change for the better of his orbs when he "saw light" (footlight?) in "Skidding." At one other time, Bob led the "Torch" parade by consent of his fellow Torchers.

Eyes fixed into space—
A day dreamers stroll;
Then what a disgrace—
"I'm in a manhole."

"A" may be for Adams, but "B" is for Busy-bee Bill Bonsib. It does seem that there is not a thing that he misses, including the company of our fairer sex. Dame Rumor has it that he is one mighty fine guy—who shall deny it?—not I!

Favorite Indoor Sport Of Seniors Tripping The Light Fantastic

Tripping the light fantastic seems to be the best liked "indoor sport" of the 1936 senior class. Of all the social activities during the four years of this class at South Side High School, of club meetings, parties, and skating parties, dances seem to rate the best. Leading the list of best liked social events is the dance which is the top in the estimation of the seniors and of course in the estimation of the juniors it is "the dance." This of course is the Junior Prom which everyone knows is held every spring.

The social event liked second best by the graduating seniors is their senior dance. Of course, this seems only natural that the seniors would like their dance best of all. But setting aside all facts this year's senior dance was colossal, gigantic and stupendous. The nicest part of these events is that even if the students are very interested in dancing, they still find time to attend to their lessons satisfactorily.

Fred Nye, D. Crabill, Ruth Adler Are Best Leaders Of Grads

Dorothy Crabill, Ruth Adler, and Fred Nye, all prominent graduating seniors, were chosen by vote of their fellow classmates as the best leaders of the class of 1936.

The two girls, who tied for first place, have each served as class officers, publications members, and club leaders. Dorothy, chosen in the first senior poll conducted last fall by the class as the most popular girl, has been vice-president of the senior class, vice-president of her junior class, secretary of the sophomore class, secretary of U. S. A., and editor of the yearbook; president of U. S. A., member of G. A. A., Lettergirls, Math Science, 1936, Times, So-Si-Y, and Asterisks. She concluded her career at South Side as circulation manager of the Totem, a member of the four-year honor roll, National Honor Society, and Quill and Scroll.

Ruth Adler was chosen in the Totem vote as the most perfect lady, the most versatile, the busiest girl, and the girl having the best personality. She has been secretary of the senior class, president of U. S. A., vice-president of U. S. A., Lettergirls, Math Science, 1936, Times, So-Si-Y, and Asterisks. She has been a member of G. A. A., Lettergirls, So-Si-Y, Student Players, Senior play cast, Times, 1936. This year she has been especially honored by being chosen chairman of the Safety Council, co-activities editor of the Totem, a member of the four-year honor roll, National Honor Society, and Quill and Scroll.

Fred Nye's leadership has been proven by the fact that he was chosen president of So-Si-Y, vice-president of U. S. A., and member of the four-year honor roll, National Honor Society, and Quill and Scroll.

As runners-up for the honor of best leaders, Helen Anderson and Bryce Minier played. Helen was vice-president of U. S. A., secretary of U. S. A., Lettergirls, Times, Girls' Rifle, Math Science, Student Players, 1936, XYZ, and Times. During her senior year, she has been co-activities manager of the Totem, a member of National Honor Society, Quill and Scroll, and the four-year honor roll.

Bryce has been president of Social Science, 1936, Torch, Inter-Club Congress, and Booster Clubs. In addition to holding all of these offices, he has been a member of Junior Math, Library, Math Science, and in intramural sports. He has been a general manager and student adviser for the Times, a member of National Honor Society, Quill and Scroll, and business manager of the Totem. As a climax for four years of activity, he was named valedictorian of his class.

Seniors Rank Clubs Of Brain, Brawn In First, Second Places

Prowess is a wonderful thing—either in brain or brawn. This statement is carried out by the votes of the learned seniors, for they voted the G. A. A. and Wranglers the best-like clubs at South Side.

G. A. A. under the capable guidance of Miss Alice J. Patterson and Miss Gretchen Smith affords the opportunity for girl athletes to prove their prowess in sports and is popular for the good sportsmanship and friendly competition it promotes. This year, G. A. A. boasted over 300 members. Marjorie Cartwright, Marjorie Hower, Virginia Baumgartner, Virginia Greiner, Aldena Disler, Ruth Reitz, Lorraine Meyer, and Barbara Ulan are among the prominent senior girl athletes who are numbered among G. A. A. members.

Wranglers is an organization of an entirely different type. Here mental agility and forensic prowess are necessary. Its brilliant and comely director is Miss Dorothy Benner and through her excellent supervision and through the superior speech talents of its members Wranglers has always been noted for its activity and popularity. This is the club that is always doing things. And no wonder! Such famous seniors as Dick Strasser, Cliff Schrom, Gwen Horn, Dick Helm, Sybil Knudson, Manuel Rothberg, Ruth Rose, Rosie Chappell, Helen Flaig and Bernadette Dyck are members of the Wranglers. Second to none in importance and achievement, it's not strange that this club should take secondary honors in the affections of the 1936 graduating class.

Fred Nye

Fred Nye completed his work of leading the senior class with the major event of the year, the Senior Dance, which was held Tuesday night.

Shysters Are Funny, Queer, Not Funny, Ha! Ha! Says Writer

A lion's roar, or a hoot-owl's cry
Do not appeal to you and I;
But of all the animals, mild or meek,
Who can deride a shy mouse's squeak?

This time, ignoring our mere conspicuous senior members, we wish to acknowledge the presence of some "shy mousies" in our midst. Wilma Butler, one of our better students, has been named one of the shy creatures, along with Laverne Boyce, Fred Nye and Herman Makey. Perhaps this is due to the fact that Wilma has never once been known to jump up from her seat, and running around the classroom, yell "Whoopie, whoopie." 'Tis indeed a shame that people have to be so conservatively shy!

How well I remember the time that Laverne Boyce did not during the music assembly, dash madly from the bleachers, take a nose dive into the gymnasium floor (pretending it was Lake Michigan), set fire to Rubinoff's violin, which was temporarily loaned to Jack Wainwright, and stand on her head as a grand finale! Yes, very queer creatures are our female "shysters."

Herman Makey and Fred Nye, given the "retiring" brands (by popular vote) are not, oddly enough "retiring shy-star lawyers." Fred, as the "Shy Senior Prexy," did some exceedingly queer things at the Senior banquet that our class of 1936 did not ever have. In fact, Fred and Herman sat side by side, but the trouble was that when Fred turned to talk to Herman, Herman was engaged in conversation with his other neighbor and vice-versa. This dire situation caused each considerable embarrassment. It got so that Fred resorted to balancing his knife on his nose while Herman was engaged in conversation and Herman crawled under the table each time he found himself unoccupied by Fred or his other banquet-partner. The senior class, therefore, unanimously cast their vote—where, I do not know, but the die is cast and four people still remain pretty darn good "shysters!"

Wo-Ho-Ma Plans Picnic To Honor Ruth Reitz

At the last meeting of the Wo-Ho-Ma Club, the officers for the coming year were elected. These elected are:

Andrew Jeffries, president; Helen McCormick, vice-president; Mary Jane Allerton, secretary; Helen Clark, Inter-Club congress member; and Kathryn Boerger, pianist.

It was decided that the club should have a bake sale Saturday, June 6 at the South Side Market to make up a deficit in the treasury. The cakes were donated by the mothers of the club members.

It was also decided that the next meeting on Thursday, June 11, should be a picnic at Foster Park. Pauline Oetting and Ruth King are in charge of the menu. The present officers are in charge of the games. Ruth Reitz, a graduating senior, is to be the honor guest.

Those girls who had the highest number of points were awarded prizes at the last meeting. Those to whom prizes were awarded are Laura Lloyd, and Kathryn Boerger.

Miss Emma Shoup To Spend Summer In School Library

Most all the students and all teachers, but one, of South Side will enjoy a two months vacation this year. Miss Shoup is one who has to work hard all winter and most of the summer with only a few weeks off.

Her summer work began in May when she ordered 493 new books which will arrive the last of August or the first of September. As soon as school is out Miss Shoup will select all books that will go to the bindery and for each a separate slip must be made. There will probably be about 300 or more books. Before they can be sent the pages will be mended and all pencil marks erased. Along with these books will go two dozen magazines to be bound. Each one will be carefully looked over to see if pictures have been cut out or pages torn. If they are mutilated in any way new ones must be bought. At the same time the shelves are looked over for books that will be sent to the bindery, books that need repairing are taken off. Torn and loose pages and markings are a few things which are looked after. The point or home reading books always need the most care and remarking on the outside. To complete the job they are sometimes cleaned with alcohol and re-shelocked.

Miss Shoup then takes inventory. All desks, drawers and cupboards are cleaned out. New cards have to be typed for some short story books that were bought last year. At least two cards must be made for each short story in a book for the catalogue.

If she can find time, Miss Shoup will revise the clipping and picture file, as it is becoming over crowded and a considerable amount of old material could be thrown out. She will also try to revise the pamphlet collection as some of them are out of date and cannot be used again.

After all this is completed Miss Shoup will plan a little for the Library club next year. If she gets this done and a few weeks vacation it will be a miracle.

Ann Abbott, Clifford Schrom Win Fame For Clever Remarks

A poll was recently conducted by the Times to find out who the student body thought were the wittiest members of the 1936 graduating class. From among the girls, Ann Abbott was chosen first, with Dorothy Douglas and Maxine Mariotte tying for second place. Clifford Schrom and Kenneth Scott won first and second place respectively among the senior boys.

Ann Abbott, besides finding time to amuse her friends with witty remarks, is a member of Philo, Art, Meterites, Wranglers, Booster, S. P. C., Social Science, Math Science, and Junior Math. Ann also held the very responsible position of general Manager of the Times and is a member of Quill and Scroll and the National Honorary Society.

Maxine Mariotte has also been very outstanding in school activities. She is a member of Junior Math, Booster, Art, U. S. A., Philo, 1500, Meterites, and G. A. A. She was elected vice-president of the Library Club and was also a member of Quill and Scroll and National Honor Society.

Clifford Schrom, one of the most prominent seniors in the school, belonged to Torch Club, Junior Math, Glee Club, Junior Hi-Y, and president of Wranglers. He was also the Yell Leader captain. Clifford carried important parts in the minstrel, operetta, and senior play.

Kenneth Scott, better known as "Kenny" is a member of Wranglers S. P. C., Times staff, and the Art Club. He intends to study art after leaving South Side.

THANKING—The splendid faculty and administration staff...our stars for the grades that were half decent...heaven for a signed diploma...you, for your perseverance...

Juniors Hear Recital By R. Gerig, K. Witmer

Reginald Gerig and Kathleen Witmer, two of South Side's most talented Juniors, presented a delightful piano recital for the Junior class in the Study Hall Friday morning.

Miss Smith read the bulletin and then introduced Kathleen, who played first "Juba Dance" by Dett. Reginald Gerig was then presented and he played "Squiddle" by Albenz. Next marvelous piano technique was displayed when the two hands of Reginald and Kathleen combined to present "Allegro Brilliant" by Mendelssohn.

As encores Reginald played "Pell Street" by Whithorne and Kathleen played "The Hurdy Gurdy Man" by Goossens, short numbers imitating the bells and the hurdy gurdy man respectively.

Michaels, Minier, Garner The Honors For Most Earnest

"Never shall we shirk our duty," is the slogan of Mary Michaels and Bryce Minier, the most ambitious girl and boy of the class of 1936. Helen Anderson and Eric Beyer were recognized as second place winners in this contest.

Mary faithfully performed her duties as vice-president of Travel, publicity chairman of So-Si-Y and U. S. A. and as a member of German, Meterites, Philo, and the National Honor Society. Bryce has served as president of Social Science, 1500, Torch, Inter Club Congress, and of Booster Club. He has also been general manager of the Times and a member of various other clubs.

Helen Anderson and Eric Beyer, two more of our illustrious seniors well deserve to be classed among South Side's most conscientious seniors.

Ear-Burners

Stuart Trulock, one of our enterprising seniors, is very seriously ill with double pneumonia, and so wasn't here to receive his diploma at graduation. We all hope for a rapid and complete recovery.

How many of us will forget: Maxine Borchert's constant hand-waving?

Earle Paxton's curly black hair and cheery smile?

Fred Nye's ability for attracting girls outside economics class?

Warren Zelt in dark glasses?

Jo-Anne Smith's wisecracks on elevators?

Helen Anderson paddling a canoe?

Vernon Gregory trying to get a bass drum into a taxi?

Selma Liff acting sophisticated in the library?

Bob Brazy's fantastic explanations?

Bernadette Dygert cracking test tubes in chemistry lab?

Dorothy Crabill with a terrible sunburn?

How Louis Bonsib and Ruth Adler look when they're stranded on an island?

Curly Rudy's nonchalant walk?

Fred Nye was wandering down the hall the other night and looked so forlorn. It seemed he had seen that there were several seniors who had been appointed to work on the Senior Dance, and so far none of them had done any work. And he was trying so hard to get all the decorations up and committees really started.

It seems Dave Steger and Dick Strasser are really gentlemen. One night they were driving around and saw a new Buick stranded—they tinkered around with the motor and finally decided that the whole gas line was broken and clogged and it would have to be all taken apart to find out just how to fix it. They pushed the car about four blocks and found out later that all it needed was a little gas! All that wasted effort, too!

Now that high school is over—the question is "What to do?" Several in our senior class have already decided what colleges they plan to attend. Ruth Adler and Manuel Rothberg are going to Indiana; Bernadette Dygert is going to Western; Maxine Mariotte and Maxine Borchert are bound for Wittenberg; Helen Anderson is going to Stephens; Helen Flaig is going to Indianapolis to music school; and Norman Buck and Jim Sweet plan to grace the portals of Depauw.

—A. A.

EXPECTATIONS—Twenty years from today we expect to see Manuel Rothberg rapidly rising in the law profession—Bill Bonsib taking care of the biggest advertising contracts in the nation—George Craw managing a string of hotels—Marge Crankshaw leading in civic affairs of our fair city—Sophia Bojinoff capably directing the affairs of a household headed by a football hero—Joe Close seeing that the steel goes out—Marjorie Dancer listening to band music directed by Guess Who—Velma Yoder, an ace bookkeeper in a large concern—Sonia Velkoff as an outstanding costume designer—Jim Sweet turning out a daily column for a press syndicate—Max Roth making a success of everything she attempts, because of her swell personality—Al Kelso as an outstanding swimming coach—R. Nelson Snider gazing over them their two acres of corn out on his farm—Miss Pittenger watering the corn on her farm with a sprinkling can to make it better than what they grow on Route 427.

REGRETTING—That we must graduate...our typing grade...our lack of knowledge of foreign languages...the fit of our cap and gown...that we didn't study Sam Johnson a little harder...ditto, Robert Browning...in other words...the English grade...

AND FINALLY—We're sorry...maybe it's lack of practice...Buck paid ten cents...too bad we couldn't charge him interest...good luck...don't you wish you were a freshman again?
